THE STATESMAN'S YEARBOOK

2000

Nations are fast losing their nationality. The great and increasing intercourse, the exchange of fashions and uniformity of opinions by the diffusion of literature are fast destroying those peculiarities that formerly prevailed. We shall in time grow to be very much one people, unless a return to barbarism throws us again into chaos.

CHRONOLOGY

March 1998–March 1999

Week beginning 29 March, 1998

A national emergency in Guyana was declared after a prolonged drought had destroyed crops and caused forest fires.

Radu Vasile became prime minister of Romania.

Ukraine's Communist Party triumphed in the general election.

Robert Kocharian was elected president of Armenia.

Week beginning 5 April, 1998

In the week in which France and Britain ratified a treaty banning the testing of nuclear weapons, Pakistan tested a surface-to-surface missile with a range of 1,500 km.

Yugoslavia announced a referendum to decide the future of Kosovo with its largely Albanian population. Separatist leaders rejected the proposal and demanded international mediation.

The OECD forecast for growth in member countries in 1998 and 1999 was cut to 2·5% while the IMF looked to worldwide growth of 3·1% for 1998.

Week beginning 12 April, 1998

A breakthrough in peace talks on the future of Northern Ireland opened the way for an elected assembly for the Province and for closer relations between northern and southern Ireland. A referendum on the proposals was announced for 22 May.

Direct talks between North and South Korea, the first since 1994, broke up without agreement on humanitarian aid to citizens of the north threatened with starvation.

A 'prison cleansing' campaign in Iraq had added up to 1,500 executions according to a UN Human Rights Commission report.

Romania's parliament backed plans for faster economic reform.

A Summit of the Americas, involving 34 countries, met in Santiago to negotiate pan-American free trade.

Week beginning 19 April, 1998

After a year's stalemate in the Middle East peace effort, Binyamin Netanyahu and Yasser Arafat agreed to talks in London with Madeleine Albright, US secretary of state.

The new government in Armenia promised to speed up economic reforms.

In France, a parliamentary vote on joining the single European currency was won by 334 to 49.

Relations between Iraq and the UN on the question of weapons inspectors deteriorated to the point of breakdown as Iraq demanded the lifting of sanctions.

The situation in Yugoslavia worsened as Albania was accused of supporting separatists in Kosovo with armed infiltrators.

Week beginning 26 April, 1998

New sanctions were threatened against Yugoslavia as violence mounted in Kosovo.

Sergei Kiriyenko was confirmed as prime minister by the Russian Duma.

Belgium's government survived a vote of no confidence but two ministers resigned after an alleged child killer escaped from custody.

Violence accelerated in Algeria after the army had launched an offensive against Islamist rebels in the west of the country. The death toll for April was over 200.

In Guatemala, a human rights report listed 55,000 atrocities committed, mostly by the army, in 36 years of civil war. Bishop Juan José Geradi, chief architect of the report, was murdered two days after completing the investigation.

Week beginning 3 May, 1998

The official inauguration of the European Single Currency, with 11 of the 15 EU members agreeing to adopt the EURO from the beginning of 1999, was overshadowed by a row over who was to run the European Central Bank. It was suggested by France that Wim Duisenberg, its first president, should stand down halfway through his eight-year term to make way for the head of France's central bank, Jean-Claude Trichet. Whether or not a deal had been struck remained unclear.

The London session of Middle East peace talks failed to persuade Israel to agree to a partial withdrawal from the West Bank.

In the Netherlands general election, the outgoing coalition government led by Wim Kok, was returned to office.

Week beginning 10 May, 1998

Fears of a nuclear arms race in Asia were prompted by India's decision to carry out five nuclear tests. The US response was to cut off economic and military aid.

Social unrest in Indonesia persuaded President Suharto to cut short his visit to Egypt.

Week beginning 17 May, 1998

Guido di Tella, Argentina's foreign minister, ordered the expulsion of 7 Iranians, including 3 diplomats, amid growing suspicions of Iranian involvement in the 1994 bombing of a Buenos Aires Jewish cultural centre in which 86 people died.

Congressional and municipal elections in the Dominican Republic were won by the main opposition left centre Democratic Revolutionary Party which promised to curtail drug trafficking and to modernize the economy. The Democratic Revolutionary Party won 23 of the 30 Senate seats that were at stake and achieved a comfortable margin in the lower house of congress. The party also won the most important mayoral race, in the capital, where the singer Johnny Ventura swept to victory.

Indonesia was on the verge of civil war after several days of rioting and looting had left large areas of the capital, Jakarta, in ruins. By the time President Suharto arrived home, more than 1,000 buildings and shops had been destroyed. The speaker of the parliament announced that the leaders of the 5 factions in the assembly would ask Mr Suharto to step down. On 20 May, President Suharto announced his resignation. His proclamation followed a further day of protest demonstrations under tight army control and growing criticism from abroad at his failure to deliver reforms required under the multi-billion dollar rescue package led by the International Monetary Fund. Vice president B.J. Habibie was sworn in as Mr Suharto's successor, promising to push through political and economic reforms, including those agreed with the IMF as part of its $43bn. rescue package.

Alexander Lebed, the tough-talking paratroop general, shocked the Russian political establishment by winning the regional election for governor of the Siberian province of Krasnoyarsk. General Lebed, a veteran of the Afghan war who campaigned for the restoration of 'order' in Russia, had 57% of the vote, against 38% for the Kremlin-backed incumbent, Valery Zubov.

A bomb exploded in a packed market in an Algiers suburb, killing at least 16 people and wounding more than 60.

The people of Northern Ireland voted for the Good Friday peace agreement with 71% in favour. In the Irish Republic there was an overwhelming 94·4% in support. The result paved the way for the creation of an administration based on cross-community consensus and power sharing. The result suggested that a majority of Unionists had endorsed the agreement, together with almost all nationalist voters. The referendum result cleared the way for the first power-sharing administration since the collapse of the Sunningdale government of 1974. A fundamental overhaul of Northern Ireland's justice and policing systems, together with the early release of prisoners whose paramilitary groups maintain ceasefires, was expected to follow.

Week beginning 24 May, 1998

In response to India's nuclear tests, Pakistan carried out 6 nuclear tests of its own. The response from the US was the same; sanctions were imposed.

NEPAL. In parliamentary elections held on 3 and 17 May the Nepali Congress Party won an absolute majority, winning 107 of the 205 seats and bringing an end to a succession of weak coalition governments.

NEW ZEALAND. Tourism Minister Murray McCully resigned on 28 April.

NIGER. President Daouda Mallam Wanké announced a new cabinet on 16 April, including Aïchatou Mindaoudou as Foreign Minister, Col. Moussa Moumouni Djermakoye as Defence Minister and Lt. Col. Moumouni Bouraima as Interior Minister. Elections intended to return the country to civilian rule were to take place in Nov.

PANAMA. Mireya Moscoso de Gruber of the conservative Arnulfist Party won the presidential election on 2 May, obtaining 44·9% of votes cast against 2 other candidates. She was set to take office in Sept. In the Legislative Assembly elections on the same day the Revolutionary Democratic party won 33 seats, the Arnulfist Party 11, the Papá Egoró Movement 6 and the Liberal Republican Nationalist Movement also 6, with other parties winning 4 seats or fewer.

PERU. President Alberto Fujimori dismissed several ministers on 14 April, including Defence Minister Gen. Julio Salazar. The next day Gen. Carlos Bergamino was named Defence Minister.

RUSSIA. President Boris Yeltsin dismissed Prime Minister Yevgeniy Primakov and the government on 12 May and appointed Sergey Stepashin as acting Prime Minister. An attempt to impeach President Yeltsin failed on 15 May.

SPAIN. Jésus Posada was appointed Agriculture Minister on 3 May as replacement for Loyola de Palacio del Valle-Lersundi, who had been chosen to head the ruling Popular party's campaign for the European Parliament elections in June.

SWEDEN. Finance Minister Erik Åsbrink resigned on 12 April, and was replaced by Bosse Ringholm.

TUNISIA. In a cabinet reshuffle announced on 22 April, Taoufik Baccar moved from the post of Economic Development Minister to replace Mohamed Jeri as Finance Minister, Abdellatif Saddam became Economic Development Minister, and Faiza Kefi replaced Mohamed Mehdi Mlika as Environment and Land Use Management Minister.

TURKEY. In parliamentary elections on 18 April, Prime Minister Bülent Ecevit's Democratic Left Party won 136 of the 550 seats with 22·3% of the votes cast, the Nationalist Movement Party 129 with 18·1%, the Virtue Party 111 with 15·5%, the Motherland Party 86 with 13·3% and the True Path Party 85 with 12·1%. 3 seats went to non-partisans.

TUVALU. Ionatana Ionatana was elected Prime Minister on 27 April after Bikenibeu Paeniu had lost a no-confidence vote.

UGANDA. Apolo Nsibambi became Prime Minister on 5 April, replacing Kintu Musoke.

UNITED KINGDOM. In elections to the new Scottish Parliament on 6 May, Labour won 56 of 129 seats, against 35 for the Scottish National Party, 18 for the Conservatives, 17 for the Liberal Democrats and 2 for others. Turn-out was 59%. Donald Dewar was elected as First Minister on 13 May. In the elections to the Welsh Assembly, also on 6 May, Labour won 28 of 60 seats, followed by Plaid Cymru with 17, the Conservatives with 9, and the Liberal Democrats with 6. Turn-out was 46%. Local government elections for 362 councils on 6 May resulted in Labour having control of 137 councils, the Conservatives 61, the Liberal Democrats 20, Ind 20, Plaid Cymru 3 and the Scottish National Party 1, with no overall control in 122. The Conservatives gained 1,391 seats and Labour lost 1,239, but with Labour having 4,802 councillors against 3,766 Conservatives, it was the first time in the 20th century that the party in government had been ahead after mid-term local elections. On 17 May Minister for Transport John Reid was appointed Secretary of State for Scotland.

UNITED KINGDOM—BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS. In parliamentary elections on 17 May the Virgin Islands Party won 7 of the 13 seats, ahead of the National Democratic Party with 5.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. Secretary of the Treasury Robert Rubin resigned on 12 May and was to be replaced by Lawrence Summers.

VENEZUELA. 90% of votes cast in a referendum on 25 April were in favour of the plan to rewrite the constitution proposed by President Chávez. As a result, on 25 July the public was to elect a constituent assembly to write a new constitution, which in turn was to be voted on in a national referendum in early 2000.

NERVOUS BREAKDOWN: AMERICA AND UN REFORM

Rosemary Righter

On February 26, 1999 in San Francisco, Bill Clinton delivered an address on 'America's role in the century to come'. It was a high profile occasion. Beside him on the podium sat Madeleine Albright, his Secretary of State, and Sandy Berger, his National Security Adviser; the audience consisted of such concerned and knowledgeable groups as the World Affairs Council. The President's theme was the need for post-Cold War America to resist the perennial temptation of isolationism, its tendency to 'rise to great causes, [yet] to believe that we can go back to minding our business when we're done'.

Americans, he argued, must instead 'embrace the inexorable logic of globalisation—that everything, from the strength of our economy to the safety of our cities, to the health of our people, depends on events not only within our borders, but half a world away'. It was easy 'to say that we really have no interests in who lives in this or that valley in Bosnia, or who owns a strip of brushland in the Horn of Africa, or some piece of parched earth by the Jordan River'; but Americans should understand the consequences for their security of letting conflicts fester, and remember that 'the real challenge of foreign policy is to deal with problems before they harm our national interests'. And he recalled how, after World War II, Harry Truman had come to San Francisco to pledge the US to work for a world in which 'right has might', and that 'he and his allies and their successors built a network of security alliances to preserve the peace, and a global financial system to preserve prosperity'

But what brought Truman to San Francisco in 1945 was the landmark conference which created an organization that Clinton did not list: the United Nations. Too much should never be read into one political speech; yet it is remarkable that in what was a grand survey of American foreign policy goals in the new century, and one which robustly confronted the unilateralist as well as the isolationist camps in American politics with a firm insistence on the need to work with America's friends and allies, the only reference to the UN was buried at the end in a half sentence. Clinton expressed the 'hope' that Congress would 'finally pay both our dues and our debts to the United Nations'. But about why an effective UN mattered to the US, he had not a word to say.

The uncomfortable truth is that to leave the UN virtually out of the picture has become politically prudent for an American president making the case for global engagement. Ordinary Americans tell pollsters that they support the goals of the United Nations, and like most people are ready to give it the benefit of the doubt; but they do not give it much thought. Those who do, in Congress and thinktanks, are at best critical of its slipshod management, inflated agendas, bureaucratic sprawl and ritual sparring between the 'North' and a 'South' that no longer exists, outside the UN General Assembly, as a unified bloc. At worst, they view it either as an irrelevance or, even, as an impediment to US interests. The critics are not confined to the Republican right; and many who do not share the Right's more preposterous allegations that the UN undermines US sovereignty share what Sir John Weston, the UK's permanent representative until 1998, describes as 'a deeper unease that the whole institutional and organizational approach at the international level is obsolete'.

For Kofi Annan, who started as UN Secretary-General in 1997 with strong American backing and a pledge to make the UN better managed, more open and accountable and focussed on the areas where it is indispensable, this is hugely frustrating. Sensibly, he has put more effort both into management reforms and into courting American public opinion than any of his predecessors. For the UN, American disaffection is potentially disastrous—and not only because of the impact on its finances.

The huge backlog of unpaid US dues to the UN dates back to 1985, when Congress decided to use the power of the purse to obtain much needed UN reform—as in fact it did for some years. By the end of the 1990s, the law of diminishing returns had set in. Non-payment was hobbling American influence at the UN and exasperating even its closest allies, while the hitherto patient Mr Annan grumbled, unwisely, about 'the constant harassment of reform, reform, reform'. But, to the embarrassment of both the Bush and Clinton Administrations—and Mrs Albright worked the Hill pretty persistently—the US dues remained mostly unpaid for a more ominous reason: indifference among all but a handful of Congressmen, which the Right was able to exploit.

Determined to avoid the fate of the League of Nations, the UN's founders sited the UN headquarters in the US so as to be sure of keeping the US in the UN. That paid off. Down the decades, while the US was often fiercely critical of the UN, particularly and understandably in the 1970s and 1980s when Third World ideologues in the General Assembly made America their whipping boy, it took the battles there more seriously than many worldly-wise West Europeans. The UN's future depends on the organization's capacity to regain the attention and support of the world's only remaining superpower. Any discussion of the UN's patchy attempts to drag itself into the 21st century has to consider that dimension.

Most governments know this; but it is not a Realpolitik that appeals to the General Assembly. The most basic changes—such as 'sunset' rules to free the Secretariat to drop pointless or outdated activities or 'results-based' budgeting, which is the bedrock of any strategy of securing value for money in UN spending—meet resistance because they are seen as American-driven and thus part of an assault on the sovereign equality enshrined in the UN Charter. As always, there is a gulf between the real world and the politics of rhetoric practised in UN forums.

Kofi Annan claims to be effecting 'a quiet revolution'. He has streamlined the management structures in New York—the only bit of the sprawling UN empire over which he has direct executive control—devolving responsibilities, creating a more collegial cabinet system at the top and planning systems of incentives and penalties for staff performance which truly would constitute a revolution in this sleepiest of bureaucratic cultures.

He is also trying to get the UN's specialized agencies to work together better under his overall leadership: but this is ground that has been trod many times before, always to a dead end. The UN is not a centralized system, but a polycentric cluster of legally autonomous agencies; the barons who head these fiefdoms have no intention of being co-ordinated; and, however appalling the record of some of these agencies may be, they have a point when they argue that New York should first clean its own stables of the great accretion of overlapping bodies.

There is also a cogent argument to be made that co-ordination is a red herring, when what the UN needs is a healthy blast of competition. Agency-by-agency reform is much more likely to succeed; their chief executives should be encouraged to innovate, in the knowledge that governments intend to shift funding, as some of them are already doing, to the agencies that work best and provide services which they indisputably need. Finally, any attempt to fold the Bretton Woods financial institutions under New York's umbrella deserves to fail; controversial the IMF and the World Bank may sometimes be, but they are relatively well managed, unpoliticized organizations of undoubted consequence. Governments would never consent to risk exposing them to the 'UN disease'. The UN will never conform to a 'system-wide' master plan; and anyway, the best reforms are not always top down.

But in another sense, if Mr Annan is to rescue the UN from its midlife slough of despond, he has to be much bolder. Tactically, he must work round, not through the member states. With 185 of them, it is no wonder that they have never agreed to scrap a single pointless programme or agency: each will be some nation's pet pork barrel. Trying to obtain consensus for reform is self-cancelling; as Mr Annan has already discovered, the most innocuous reforms get watered down or sabotaged. But the very unwieldiness of the membership is an opportunity for a Secretary-General prepared to exercise his managerial responsibilities to the hilt; many changes, including results-based budgeting, do not formally even have to be laid before the UN's inter-governmental committees and should not be. Like most of his predecessors, Mr Annan, a long-serving UN career officer, was picked partly because he was seen more as a 'Secretary' than a 'General'; but the task before him requires generalship. Putting the broader global interest ahead of keeping sweet the often unruly delegates governments send to New York, he will need to use his moral authority to push through changes without waiting for universal assent.

Strategically, he must go beyond moving the office furniture around, to work out where, in a world where the UN no longer has a monopoly on intergovernmental co-operation, its comparative advantages lie. Mr Annan started by promising 'to achieve more with less'; but the UN's real need is to do less altogether. He may be unable to close down the least worthwhile of the hundreds of UN funds, programmes and organizations that have multiplied, since 1945, like a galactic accident. But some will quietly wither on the vine because governments are reluctant to waste money supporting them. He should be relaxed about that; it will help him to concentrate the UN's moral authority and slender resources on those areas where it has a distinctive, irreplaceable contribution to make, and where the extra margin of effort at global level can make all the difference.

That means focusing on the UN's core political and humanitarian mandates. For most people, that begins with collective security. But the experience of the past decade suggests that, although the UN will not be able to turn its back on ethnic and civil conflicts, it will have to be rigorous about where and how it acts, and to distinguish more clearly between the UN as legitimator and guardian of international law, and the UN as enforcer. Collective security does not necessarily imply, and may not even be compatible with, collectively organized security. International bureaucracies cannot run modern wars.

But security has dimensions beyond enforcement or even peacekeeping. These include the effective defence of basic human rights, workable judicial procedures to deal with crimes against humanity and civilian humanitarian interventions, and the indispensable work of the overburdened Office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees. There are also holes to be plugged in the global machinery. Post-chaos assistance is one example. The task lies somewhere between emergency relief and standard development aid. Stabilization and reconstruction need to be made a priority, and seen as central to peace-building. For the UN, this is a difficult area, not just because it requires speed and flexibility, but because it can run up against the taboo against intervening in a state's internal affairs. But tackled it will have to be—inside or outside the UN.

Conversely, and controversially, the UN's sprawling development activities, which consume 60 per cent of its spending, are largely redundant. Most of its programmes are so tiny and scattershot as to make no impact. The World Bank is the only really serious intergovernmental actor, mainly because its expertise, even in 'specialized' areas such as education, now exceeds that of the UN and its agencies. The Secretary-General's plans for an 'integrated development assistance framework' are, conceptually as well as organizationally, a blast from the past. With more than 90 per cent of investment in the developing world now flowing through corporations and non-governmental agencies, rather than directly from the public purse, the UN needs instead to concentrate on its original functions as a talking shop.

This is an aspect of global organization that has often been derided. Properly run, it should not be. Consciousness-raising is an area where universal membership is a precious asset. The UN has an important role as a clearing house for ideas, helping governments and specialists to learn from best practice on a range of problems, from environmental management to population and drug-trafficking and providing a negotiating space for specific agreements on tackling frontier-spanning threats. The convention on the ozone layer was a model for this kind of global diplomacy. The more the UN can draw not just NGOs, but the business world into these deliberations—as Mr Annan wishes to do—the better.

Would such rethinking at the UN bring the US back into the multilateral arena as a committed player? The answer is yes, although there will continue to be arguments about funding until the American share is reduced from the current 25 per cent of the regular budget and 31 per cent of peacekeeping—which is fiercely resisted but would politically be no bad thing. Congress has ended its long stand-off with the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund; and the US is the largest user of the World Trade Organisation's trade disputes mechanisms. The lesson may be that the future lies with rule-based organization where the lines of management are clear and the objectives focussed. But a transformation of the institutional culture at the UN, accompanied by greater modesty about what it can attempt and a clearer sense of purpose, could turn the political climate in the US. One lesson of the crisis in US-UN relations is, however, that the UN will need to justify public affection and respect for what it does in the new century, because for many purposes, governments are free, far freer than they were in 1945, to look elsewhere. And that applies not only to the great powers. Multilateral co-operation is in fact a growth industry; but the UN is no longer a monopoly global provider. Mr Annan's challenge is to adapt it to a crowded and competitive multilateral world.

THE UNITED NATIONS (UN)

Origin and Aims. The United Nations is an association of states which have pledged themselves to maintain international peace and security and co-operate in solving international political, economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems towards achieving this end. The name 'United Nations' was devised by United States President Franklin D. Roosevelt and was first used in the Declaration by United Nations of 1 Jan. 1942, during the Second World War, when representatives of 26 nations pledged their Governments to continue fighting together against the Axis Powers.

The United Nations Charter, the constituting instrument of the UN, was drawn up by the representatives of 50 countries at the United Nations Conference on International Organization, which met in San Francisco from 25 April to 26 June 1945. Those delegates deliberated on the basis of proposals worked out by the representatives of China, the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom and the United States at Dumbarton Oaks (Washington, D.C.) from 21 Aug. to 28 Sept. 1944. The Charter was signed on 26 June 1945 by the representatives of the 50 countries. Poland, which was not represented at the Conference, signed it later and became one of the original 51 Member States. Nothing contained in the Charter authorizes the organization to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state.

The United Nations officially came into existence on 24 Oct. 1945, with the deposit of the requisite number of ratifications of the Charter with the US Department of State. United Nations Day is celebrated on 24 Oct. each year.

Over the past five decades, international co-operation has brought advances in every area of the United Nations Charter but the post-cold war era brings new challenges to the UN. Peacekeeping operations, for which demand has increased sharply, now operate under greatly expanded mandates in response to the bitter conflicts which menace societies from within. Today, 80% of the UN's work is devoted to helping developing countries build the capacity to help themselves. This includes promoting the creation of independent and democratic societies, which it is hoped will offer vital support for the Charter's goals in the 21st century; the protection of human rights; saving children from starvation and disease; providing relief assistance to refugees and disaster victims; countering global crime, drugs and disease; and assisting countries devastated by war and the long-term threat of landmines.

Members. Membership is open to all peace-loving nations which accept the obligations of the Charter and, in the judgement of the Organization, are willing and able to carry them out. New Member States are admitted by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Security Council. The Charter provides for the suspension or expulsion of a Member for violation of its principles, but no such action has ever been taken. It has 185 member states. (For a list of these, see below.)

Finance. Assessments on member states constitute the main source of funds. These are in accordance with a scale specified by the Assembly, and determined primarily by the country's share of the world economy and ability to pay, in the range 25%–0·01%. The Organization is prohibited by law from borrowing from commercial institutions.

A Working Group on the Financial Situation of the United Nations was established in 1994 to address the long-standing financial crisis which has come about because of the non-payment of assessed dues by many Member States, severely threatening the Organization's ability to fulfil its mandates. Member States owed the UN a total of US$2,300m. in 1997.

Official languages. Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish.

Structure. The UN has six principal organs established by the founding Charter. All have their headquarters in New York except the International Court of Justice, which has its seat in The Hague. These core bodies work through dozens of related agencies, operational programmes and funds, and through special agreements with separate, autonomous, intergovernmental agencies, known as Specialized Agencies, in order to provide an increasingly cohesive programme of action in the fields of peace and security, justice and human rights, humanitarian assistance, and social and economic development. The six principal UN organs are as follows:

1. The General Assembly, composed of all members, is the main deliberative body; each member has 1 vote. It meets once a year, commencing on the first Tuesday following 1 Sept., and the general debate is organized over a period of 2 weeks, beginning the 3rd week of Sept. (The 53rd Session opened on 9 Sept. 1998.)

At the start of each session, the Assembly elects a new President, 21 vice-presidents and the chairmen of its seven main committees, listed below. To ensure equitable geographical representation, the presidency of the Assembly rotates each year among the five geographical groups of states: African, Asian, Eastern European, Latin American, and Western European and other States. Special sessions may be convoked by the Secretary-General if requested by the Security Council, by a majority of members, or by 1 member if the majority of the members concur. Emergency sessions may be called within 24 hours at the request of the Security Council on the vote of any 9 Council members, or a majority of United Nations members, or 1 member if the majority of members concur. Decisions on important questions, such as peace and security, new membership and budgetary matters, require a two-thirds majority; other questions require a simple majority of members present and voting.

The work of the General Assembly is divided between 6 Main Committees, on which every member state is represented. These are: Disarmament and International Security Committee (First Committee); Economic and Financial Committee (Second Committee); Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee (Third Committee); Special Political and Decolonization Committee (Fourth Committee); Administrative and Budgetary Committee (Fifth Committee); Legal Committee (Sixth Committee).

There is also a General Committee charged with the task of co-ordinating the proceedings of the Assembly and its Committees; and a Credentials Committee. The General Committee consists of 29 members: the president and 21 vice-presidents of the General Assembly and the chairmen of the 6 main committees. The Credentials Committee consists of 9 members appointed by the Assembly on the proposal of the President at each session. In addition, the Assembly has 2 standing committees—an Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and a Committee on Contributions; and may establish subsidiary and ad hoc bodies when necessary to deal with specific matters. These include: Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations (34 members), Human Rights Committee (18 members), Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (61 members), Conciliation Commission for Palestine (3 members), Conference on Disarmament (38 members), International Law Commission (34 members), Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation (21 members), Special Committee on the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (25 members), and Commission on International Trade Law (36 members).

The General Assembly has the right to discuss any matters within the scope of the Charter and, with the exception of any situation or dispute on the agenda of the Security Council, may make recommendations on any such questions or matters. While it has no power to compel action by any Government, its recommendations are seen to carry the weight of world opinion. Occupying a central position in the UN, the Assembly receives reports from other organs, admits new members, directs activities for development, sets policies and determines programmes for the Secretariat, appoints the Secretary-General, who reports annually to it on the work of the Organization, and approves the UN budget.

Under the "Uniting For Peace" resolution adopted by the General Assembly in Nov. 1950, the Assembly is also empowered to take action if the Security Council, because of a lack of unanimity of its permanent members, fails to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in any case where there appears to be a threat to the peace, breach of the peace or act of aggression. In this event, the General Assembly may consider the matter immediately with a view to making appropriate recommendations to members for collective measures, including, in the case of a breach of the peace or act of aggression, the use of armed force when necessary, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

2. The Security Council has primary responsibility, under the Charter, for the maintenance of international peace and security. It is so organized as to be able to function continuously. A representative of each of its members must be present at all times at UN Headquarters, but it may meet elsewhere as best facilitates its work.

The Presidency of the Council rotates monthly, according to the English alphabetical order of members' names. The Council consists of 15 members: 5 permanent and 10 non-permanent elected for a 2-year term by a two-thirds majority of the General Assembly. Each member has 1 vote. Retiring members are not eligible for immediate re-election. Any other member of the United Nations may participate without a vote in the discussion of questions specially affecting its interests.

Decisions on procedural questions are made by an affirmative vote of at least 9 members. On all other matters, the affirmative vote of 9 members must include the concurring votes of all permanent members (subject to the provision that when the Council is considering methods for the peaceful settlement of a dispute, parties to the dispute abstain from voting). Consequently, a negative vote from a permanent member has the power of veto, and all five permanent members have exercised this right at one time or other. If a permanent member does not support a decision but does not wish to veto it, it may abstain. Under the Charter, the Security Council alone has the power to take decisions which member states are obligated to carry out.

The Council has 2 standing committees at present—the Committee of Experts on Rules of Procedure and the Committee on the Admission of New Members. In addition, as needed, it may establish ad hoc committees and commissions, such as the Committee on Council Meetings away from Headquarters.

When a threat to peace is brought before the Council, its first action is usually to recommend to the parties agreement by peaceful means. It may undertake mediation and set forth principles for a settlement, and may take measures to enforce its decisions by ceasefire directives, economic sanctions, peacekeeping missions, or in some cases, by collective military action. For the maintenance of international peace and security, the Council can, in accordance with special agreements to be concluded, call on the armed forces, assistance and facilities of the member states. It is assisted by a Military Staff Committee consisting of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Council or their representatives.

The Council also makes recommendations to the Assembly on the appointment of the Secretary-General and, with the Assembly, elects the judges of the International Court.

Permanent Members. China, France, Russian Federation, UK, USA (Russian Federation took over the seat of the former USSR in Dec. 1991).

Non-Permanent Members. Bahrain, Brazil, Gabon, Gambia, Slovenia (until 31 Dec. 1999), Argentina, Canada, Malaysia, Namibia, Netherlands (until 31 Dec. 2000).

Finance. The total cost of all UN peacekeeping operations in 1997 was US$1·3bn. Assessments for 1998 were expected to total US$900m. All Member States are obligated to pay their share of peacekeeping costs, but at 15 Sept. 1998, Member States owed the UN US$1·75bn. in current and back peacekeeping dues.

3. The Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) is responsible under the General Assembly for co-ordinating the functions of the UN with regard to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health and related matters. The year-round work of the Council is carried out by related organizations, specialized agencies, and subsidiary bodies, commissions and committees, which meet regularly and report back to it.

It consists of 54 member states elected by a two-thirds majority of the General Assembly for a 3-year term. Members are elected according to the following geographic distribution: Africa, 14 members; Asia, 11; Eastern Europe, 6; Latin America and Caribbean, 10; Western Europe and other States, 13. A third of the members retire each year. Retiring members are eligible for immediate re-election. Each member has 1 vote. Decisions are made by a majority of the members present and voting.

The Council holds one 5-week substantive session a year, alternating between New York and Geneva, and one organizational session in New York. The substantive session includes a high-level special meeting attended by Ministers, to discuss major economic and social issues. Special sessions may be held if required. The President is elected for 1 year and is eligible for immediate re-election.

The subsidiary machinery of ECOSOC is as follows.

Nine Functional Commissions. Statistical Commission; Commission on Population and Development; Commission for Social Development; Commission on Human Rights (and Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities); Commission on the Status of Women; Commission on Narcotic Drugs (and Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East); Commission on Science and Technology for Development; Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice; Commission on Sustainable Development.

Five Regional Economic Commissions. ECA (Economic Commission for Africa, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia); ESCAP (Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, Bangkok); ECE (Economic Commission for Europe, Geneva); ECLAC (Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, Santiago, Chile); ESCWA (Economic Commission for Western Asia, Amman, Jordan).

Nine Standing Committees and Subsidiary Expert Bodies. Committee for Programme and Co-ordination; Commission on Human Settlements; Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations; Committee on Natural Resources; Committee for Development Planning; Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights; Committee on New and Renewable Sources of Energy and on Energy for Development; Ad Hoc Group of Experts on International Co-operation in Tax Matters; Committee of Experts on the Transport of Dangerous Goods.

Other related operational programmes, funds and special bodies, which report to ECOSOC (and/or the General Assembly) include: The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF); Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR); United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD); United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and Population Fund (UNFPA); United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP); World Food Programme (WFP); International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW); United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP).

In addition, the Council may make arrangements for consultation with international non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and, after consultation with the member concerned, with national organizations. There are over 1,500 non-governmental organizations which have consultative status with the Council. Non-governmental organizations may send observers to the Council's public meetings and those of its subsidiary bodies, and may submit written statements relevant to its work. They may also consult with the UN Secretariat on matters of mutual concern.

Members. (1998): Algeria, Argentina, Bangladesh, Belarus, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Cuba, Czech Republic, Djibouti, El Salvador, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Guyana, Iceland, India, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Korea (Republic of), Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Mauritius, Mexico, Mozambique, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Oman, Pakistan, Poland, Romania, Russia, St Lucia, Sierra Leone, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Togo, Tunisia, Turkey, United Kingdom, USA, Vietnam, Zambia.

Finance. The UN has US$6,300m. a year to spend on economic and social development.

4. The Trusteeship Council was established to ensure that Governments responsible for administering Trust Territories take adequate steps to prepare them for self-government or independence. It consists of five permanent members of the Security Council. The task of decolonization was completed in 1994, when the Security Council terminated the Trusteeship Agreement for the last of the original UN Trusteeships (Palau), administered by the USA. All Trust Territories attained self-government or independence either as separate States or by joining neighbouring independent countries. Since 1994 the Council's role has been under review.

The proposal from UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan, in the second part of his reform programme, in July 1997, is that it should be used as a forum to exercise their "trusteeship" for the global commons, environment and resource systems.

Members. China, France, Russia, UK, USA.

5. The International Court of Justice is the principal judicial organ of the UN. It has a dual role: to settle in accordance with international law the legal disputes submitted to it by States; and to give advisory opinion on legal questions referred to it by duly authorized international organs and agencies.

It operates under a Statute, which is an integral part of the United Nations Charter. All UN members are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the Court. Parties to the Statute who are not members of the UN are Switzerland and Nauru. The Court is composed of 15 judges, each of a different nationality elected with an absolute majority to 9-year terms of office by both the General Assembly and the Security Council. The composition of the Court must also reflect the main forms of civilization and principal legal systems of the world. Elections are held every 3 years for one-third of the seats, and retiring judges may be re-elected. Members do not represent their respective governments but sit as independent magistrates in the Court, and must possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or be jurists of recognized competence in international law.

Candidates are nominated by the national panels of jurists in the Permanent Court of Arbitration established by the Hague Conventions of 1899 and 1907. The Court elects its own President and Vice-President for a 3-year term, and is permanently in session.

Decisions are taken by a majority of judges present, subject to a quorum of 9 members, with the President having a casting vote. Judgement is final and without appeal, but a revision may be applied for within 10 years from the date of the judgement on the ground of a new decisive factor. When the Court does not include a judge possessing the nationality of a State party to a case, that State has the right to appoint a person to sit as judge ad hoc for that case, on equal terms with Members.

While the Court normally sits in plenary session, it can form chambers of 3 or more judges to deal with specific matters. Judgements by chambers are considered as rendered by the full Court. In 1993, in view of the global expansion of environmental law and protection, the Court formed a 7-member Chamber for Environmental Matters.

Judges. The present composition of the Court, which holds office until 5 Feb. 2000, is as follows: Stephen M. Schwebel, President (USA), Christopher G. Weeramantry, Vice-President (Sri Lanka), Rosalyn Higgins (UK), Gilbert Guillaume (France), Gonzalo Parra-Aranguren (Venezuela), Raymond Ranjeva (Madagascar), Shigeru Oda (Japan), Géza Herczegh (Hungary), Shi Jiuyong (China), Carl-August Fleischhauer (Germany), Abdul G. Koroma (Sierra Leonè), Mohammed Bedjaoui (Algeria), Pieter H. Kooijmans (Netherlands), José F. Rezek (Brazil), Vladlen S. Vereshchetin (Russian Federation), Eduardo Valencia-Ospina, Registrar (Colombia).

Competence and Jurisdiction. In contentious cases, only States may apply to or appear before the Court, which is open only to parties to its Statute, which automatically includes all Members of the UN. The conditions under which the Court will be open to other states are laid down by the Security Council. The jurisdiction of the Court covers all matters which parties refer to it, and all matters provided for in the Charter or in treaties and conventions in force. Disputes concerning the jurisdiction of the Court are settled by the Court's own decision. The Court may apply in its decision:

(a) international conventions;

(b) international custom;

(c) the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;

(d) as subsidiary means for the determination of the rules of law, judicial decisions and the teachings of highly qualified publicists. If the parties agree, the Court may decide a case ex aequo et bono.

Since 1946, the Court has delivered 67 judgements on disputes concerning inter alia land frontiers and maritime boundaries, territorial sovereignty, the non-use of force, non-interference in the internal affairs of States, diplomatic relations, hostage-taking, the right of asylum, nationality, guardianship, rights of passage and economic rights.

The Court may also give advisory opinions on legal questions to the General Assembly, the Security Council, certain other organs of the UN and 16 specialized agencies of the UN family.

Since 1946, the Court has given 23 advisory opinions, concerning inter alia admission to United Nations membership, reparation for injuries suffered in the service of the United Nations, territorial status of South-West Africa (Namibia) and Western Sahara, judgements rendered by international administrative tribunals, expenses of certain United Nations operations, the applicability of the United Nations Headquarters Agreement, the status of human rights informers and the threat or use of nuclear weapons.

Finance. The expenses of the Court are borne by the UN. No court fees are paid by parties to the Statute.

6. The Secretariat services the other 5 organs of the UN, administering their programmes and carrying out the Organization's day-to-day work with its increasingly streamlined staff of some 8,900 at the UN Headquarters in New York and all over the world.

At its head is the Secretary-General, appointed by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Security Council for a 5-year, renewable term. The Secretary-General acts as chief administrative officer in all meetings of the General Assembly, Security Council, Economic and Social Council and Trusteeship Council. An Office of Internal Oversight, established in 1994 under the tenure of former Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali (Egypt), pursues a cost-saving mandate to investigate and eliminate waste, fraud and mismanagement within the system. The Secretary-General is assisted by Under-Secretaries-General and Assistant Secretaries-General. A new appointment of Deputy Secretary-General was agreed in principle by the General Assembly in 1997 and was announced in Jan. 1998.

A Quiet Revolution. The agenda of the UN's 52nd General Assembly (1997) was dominated by the Secretary-General's reform plans to make the UN leaner, more efficient and more effective, cutting administrative costs by as much as a third by the year 2000. Initiatives included the rationalization and consolidation of the UN's bureaucratic machinery by merging overlapping programmes and departments, and streamlining management, in an attempt to shift resources from administration to development work for the poorest nations. The proposals included the establishment of a new, less-personal, cabinet-style administration; the appointment of a Deputy Secretary-General; and a Millennium Assembly in 2000 with a companion People's Assembly to focus on defining the UN's role for the 21st century.

Finance. The Secretariat had a zero-growth budget of US$2,600m. for the 2-year period 1996–97. This represented over US$250m. in savings achieved through efficiency gains and a 25 % cut in staff (from a 1984 high of more than 12,000 to 8,900 by 1998). The budget proposed for 1998–99 cuts a further US$120m., bringing it to US$2,480m.

UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

On 10 Dec. 1948 the General Assembly of the United Nations adopted and proclaimed the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Preamble

Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world,

Whereas disregard and contempt for human rights have resulted in barbarous acts which have outraged the conscience of mankind, and the advent of a world in which human beings shall enjoy freedom of speech and belief and freedom from fear and want has been proclaimed as the highest aspiration of the common people,

Whereas it is essential, if man is not to be compelled to have recourse, as a last resort, to rebellion against tyranny and oppression, that human rights should be protected by the rule of law,

Whereas it is essential to promote the development of friendly relations between nations,

Whereas the peoples of the United Nations have in the Charter reaffirmed their faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women and have determined to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Whereas Member States have pledged themselves to achieve, in co-operation with the United Nations, the promotion of universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Whereas a common understanding of these rights and freedoms is of the greatest importance for the full realization of this pledge,

Now, Therefore THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY proclaims THIS UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS as a common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations, to the end that every individual and every organ of society, keeping this Declaration constantly in mind, shall strive by teaching and education to promote respect for these rights and freedoms and by progressive measures, national and international, to secure their universal and effective recognition and observance, both among the peoples of Member States themselves and among the peoples of territories under their jurisdiction.

Article 1. All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights. They are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another in a spirit of brotherhood.

Article 2. Everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status. Furthermore, no distinction shall be made on the basis of the political, jurisdictional or international status of the country or territory to which a person belongs, whether it be independent, trust, non-self-governing or under any other limitation of sovereignty.

Article 3. Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person.

Article 4. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude; slavery and the slave trade shall be prohibited in all their forms.

Article 5. No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 6. Everyone has the right to recognition everywhere as a person before the law.

Article 7. All are equal before the law and are entitled without any discrimination to equal protection of the law. All are entitled to equal protection against any discrimination in violation of this Declaration and against any incitement to such discrimination.

Article 8. Everyone has the right to an effective remedy by the competent national tribunals for acts violating the fundamental rights granted him by the constitution or by law.

Article 9. No one shall be subjected to arbitrary arrest, detention or exile.

Article 10. Everyone is entitled in full equality to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal, in the determination of his rights and obligations and of any criminal charge against him.

Article 11. (1) Everyone charged with a penal offence has the right to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law in a public trial at which he has had all the guarantees necessary for his defence.

(2) No one shall be held guilty of any penal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a penal offence, under national or international law, at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the penal offence was committed.

Article 12. No one shall be subjected to arbitrary interference with his privacy, family, home or correspondence, nor to attacks upon his honour and reputation. Everyone has the right to the protection of the law against such interference or attacks.

Article 13. (1) Everyone has the right to freedom of movement and residence within the borders of each state.

(2) Everyone has the right to leave any country, including his own, and to return to his country.

Article 14. (1) Everyone has the right to seek and enjoy in other countries asylum from persecution.

(2) This right may not be invoked in the case of prosecutions genuinely arising from non-political crimes or from acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

Article 15. (1) Everyone has the right to a nationality.

(2) No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality nor denied the right to change his nationality.

Article 16. (1) Men and women of full age, without any limitation due to race, nationality or religion, have the right to marry and to found a family. They are entitled to equal rights as to marriage, during marriage and at its dissolution.

(2) Marriage shall be entered into only with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.

(3) The family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and is entitled to protection by society and the State.

Article 17. (1) Everyone has the right to own property alone as well as in association with others.

(2) No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property.

Article 18. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief, and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief in teaching, practice, worship and observance.

Article 19. Everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression; this right includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers.

Article 20. (1) Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association.

(2) No one may be compelled to belong to an association.

Article 21. (1) Everyone has the right to take part in the government of his country, directly or through freely chosen representatives.

(2) Everyone has the right of equal access to public service in his country.

(3) The will of the people shall be the basis of the authority of government; this will shall be expressed in periodic and genuine elections which shall be by universal and equal suffrage and shall be held by secret vote or by equivalent free voting procedures.

Article 22. Everyone, as a member of society, has the right to social security and is entitled to realization, through national effort and international co-operation and in accordance with the organization and resources of the State, of the economic, social and cultural rights indispensable for his dignity and the free development of his personality.

Article 23. (1) Everyone has the right to work, to free choice of employment, to just and favourable conditions of and to protection against unemployment.

(2) Everyone, without any discrimination, has the right to equal pay for equal work.

(3) Everyone who works has the right to just and favourable remuneration ensuring for himself and his family an existence worthy of human dignity, and supplemented, if necessary, by other means of social protection.

(4) Everyone has the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.

Article 24. Everyone has the right to rest and leisure, including reasonable limitation of working hours and periodic holidays with pay.

Article 25. (1) Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and his family, including food, clothing, housing and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control.

(2) Motherhood and childhood are entitled to special care and assistance. All children, whether born in or out of wedlock, shall enjoy the same social protection.

Article 26. (1) Everyone has the right to education. Education shall be free, at least in the elementary and fundamental stages. Elementary education shall be compulsory. Technical and professional education shall be made generally available and higher education shall be equally accessible to all on the basis of merit.

(2) Education shall be directed to the full development of the human personality and to the strengthening of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. It shall promote understanding, tolerance and friendship among all nations, racial or religious groups, and shall further the activities of the United Nations for the maintenance of peace.

(3) Parents have a prior right to choose the kind of education that shall be given to their children.

Article 27. (1) Everyone has the right freely to participate in the cultural life of the community, to enjoy the arts and to share in scientific advancement and its benefits.

(2) Everyone has the right to the protection of the moral and material interests resulting from any scientific, literary or artistic production of which he is the author.

Article 28. Everyone is entitled to a social and international order in which the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration can be fully realized.

Article 29. (1) Everyone has duties to the community in which alone the free and full development of his personality is possible.

(2) In the exercise of his rights and freedoms, everyone shall be subject only to such limitations as are determined by law solely for the purpose of securing due recognition and respect for the rights and freedoms of others and of meeting the just requirements of morality, public order and the general welfare in a democratic society.

(3) These rights and freedoms may in no case be exercised contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

Article 30. Nothing in this Declaration may be interpreted as implying for any State, group or person any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein.

UNITED NATIONS SYSTEM

Operational Programmes and Funds. The total operating expenses for the entire UN system, including the World Bank, IMF and all the UN funds, programmes and specialized agencies, come to US$18,200m. a year. Some 53,300 people work in the UN system, which includes the Secretariat and 28 other organizations.

Social and economic development, aimed at achieving a better life for people everywhere, is a major part of the UN system of organizations. In the forefront of efforts to bring about such progress is the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the world's largest agency for multilateral technical and pre-investment co-operation. It is the funding source for most of the technical assistance provided for sustainable human development by the UN system, and in 1997 helped people in 174 countries and territories, supporting some 6,000 projects, which focus on poverty elimination, environmental regeneration, job creation and the advancement of women.

UNDP assistance is provided only at the request of governments and in response to their priority needs, integrated into overall national and regional plans. Its activities are funded mainly by voluntary contributions outside the regular UN budget. 87% of the UNDP's core programme funds go to countries with an annual per capita GNP of US$750 or less, which are home to 90% of the world's poorest peoples. Headquartered in New York, the UNDP is governed by a 36-member Executive Board, representing both developing and developed countries.

Administrator: James Gustave Speth (USA).

UN development programmes include the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). Established in 1946 to deliver post-war relief to children, UNICEF now concentrates its assistance on development activities aimed at improving the quality of life for children and mothers in developing countries. Working in some 150 countries, its programmes focus on immunization, primary healthcare, nutrition and basic education. The State of the World's Children Report, published annually by UNICEF, has helped to spread acceptance by local and national leaders of a strategy for child health and nutrition which UNICEF estimates could save the lives of 7m. children. UNICEF has focused on popularizing 4 primary healthcare techniques which are low in cost and produce results in a relatively short time. These include: oral rehydration therapy to fight the effects of diarrhoeal infections, which kill some 4m. children each year; expanded immunization against the 6 most common childhood diseases; child growth monitoring; and promotion of breastfeeding. UNICEF works closely with the World Health Organization (WHO), providing training, equipment and the services of healthcare professionals. It is the world's largest supplier of oral rehydration salts and vaccines, and of the 'cold chain' equipment needed to deliver them.

Executive Director: Carol Bellamy (USA).

The UN Population Fund (UNFPA), established in 1969, carries out development programmes in over 130 countries and territories, and is the largest international provider of population assistance to developing countries. In 1996, it provided support to 168 countries. The Fund's aims are to build up capacity to respond to needs in population and family planning; to promote awareness of population problems in both developed and developing countries and possible strategies to deal with them; to assist developing countries at their request in dealing with population problems.

The Fund provides assistance for sustainable reproductive healthcare and family planning; for population data collection, analysis and demographic research; and for population policy formulation, as well as for special programme interests, such as gender issues, ageing and HIV/AIDS. In addition, it provides most of the funding for the United Nations Population Information Network (POPIN), a decentralized community of population institutions, whose objectives are to identify, establish, strengthen and co-ordinate information activities at international, national and regional levels; and to facilitate the availability and exchange of population information and related issues. UNFPA's State of the World Population Report is published annually.

Executive Director: Dr Nafis Sadik (Pakistan).

The UN Environment Programme (UNEP), established in 1972, works to encourage sustainable development through sound environmental practices everywhere. Its activities cover a wide range of issues, from atmosphere and terrestrial ecosystems to the promotion of environmental science and information, which is central to its role. It seeks to establish an early warning mechanism and emergency response capacity to deal with environmental disasters and emergencies. Information networks and monitoring systems established by the UNEP include: the Global Environment Monitoring System (GEMS); Global Resource Information Database (GRID); INFOTERRA, with focal points in 170 countries; and the International Register of Potentially Toxic Chemicals (IRPTC). Its research and synthesis of environmental information has generated a number of State-of-the-Environment Reports, the latest of which was the Global Environment Outlook or GEO-1 published in 1997. GEO-2000 was due for publication mid-1999.

Its 1992 Conference (the Earth Summit) in Rio de Janeiro broke new ground in reversing environmental deterioration, with a comprehensive blueprint for action on global sustainable development in the adoption of Agenda 21 by the then largest-ever gathering of world leaders, with more than 100 Heads of State or Government in attendance. At the request of the Earth Summit, a Commission on Sustainable Development was established by the General Assembly to oversee activities to combat problems such as desertification, the global depletion of fish, and issues affecting small islands. The most important funding mechanism towards this end is the Global Environment Facility (GEF) which is managed jointly by UNDP, UNEP and the World Bank.

Executive Director: Klaus Toepfer (Germany).

Other UN programmes working for development include: the UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), which promotes international trade, particularly by developing countries, in an attempt to increase their participation in the global economy; and the World Food Programme (WFP), the world's largest international food aid organization, which is dedicated to both emergency relief and development programmes.

The UN Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), which assists over 600m. people living in health-threatening housing conditions, was established in 1978. The 58-member UN Commission on Human Settlements (UNCHS), Habitat's governing body, meets every 2 years. The Centre serves as the focal point for human settlements action and the co-ordination of activities within the UN system.

In addition to its regular programmes, the UNDP administers various special-purpose funds, such as the UN Capital Development Fund (UNCDP), a multilateral donor agency working to develop new solutions for poverty reduction in the least developed countries; the United Nations Volunteers (UNV) and the UN Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), whose mission is the empowerment of women and gender equality in all levels of development planning and practice. Its 3 areas of immediate concern are: strengthening women's economic capacity; engendering governance and leadership; and promoting women's rights. Together with the World Bank and UNEP, the UNDP is one of the managing partners of the Global Environment Facility (GEF), a US$2,000m. fund to help countries translate global concerns into national action so as to help fight ozone depletion, global warming, loss of biodiversity and pollution of international waters. The UNDP is also one of 6 UN sponsors of a global programme on HIV/AIDS.

The United Nations Development Programme has a network of 134 country offices. At country level, it is responsible for all UN development activity. The head of each country office acts as Resident Co-ordinator for UNDP.

The United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP), established 1991 and headquartered in Vienna, has 22 field offices around the world. UNDCP spearheads international efforts at fighting drug abuse and trafficking. Its annual budget is in the region of US$70m. At the core of its activities are 3 internationally agreed conventions (treaties) on policy. The Commission on Narcotic Drugs, the body which oversees UNDCP, meets once a year. UNDCP is now an integral part of the UN Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention (ODCCP), together with the Centre for International Crime Prevention (CICP).

Executive Director: Pino Arlacchi (Italy).

The UN work in crime prevention and criminal justice aims to lessen the human and material costs of crime and its impact on socio-economic development. The UN Congress on the Prevention of Crime and Treatment of Offenders has convened every 5 years since 1950 and provides a forum for the presentation of policies and progress. The Ninth Congress (Cairo, 1995) also reviewed practical measures aimed at combating corruption among public officials. The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, a functional body of ECOSOC, established 1992, seeks to strengthen UN activities in the field, and meets annually in Vienna. The interregional research and training arm of the UN crime and criminal justice programme is the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI) in Rome. An autonomous body, it seeks through action-oriented research to contribute to the formulation of improved policies in crime prevention and control.

Humanitarian assistance to refugees and victims of natural and man-made disasters is also an important function of the UN system. The main refugee organizations within the system are the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA).

UNHCR, created in 1951, was charged primarily with resettling 1·2m. European refugees left homeless in the aftermath of the Second World War, and was envisioned as a temporary office with a projected lifespan of 3 years. Today, with more than 27m. people in over 140 countries under its concern, it has become one of the world's principal humanitarian agencies. Headquartered in Geneva, its Executive Committee comprises 53 member states. It has offices in 115 countries, with a 5,000 member staff, and has twice been awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. The High Commissioner is elected by and reports annually to the UN General Assembly through ECOSOC.

The work of UNHCR is humanitarian and non-political. International protection is its primary function. Its main objective is to promote and safeguard the rights and interests of refugees. In so doing UNHCR devotes special attention to promoting a generous policy of asylum on the part of Governments and seeks to improve the legal status of refugees in their country of residence. Crucial to this status is the principle of non-refoulement, which prohibits the expulsion from or forcible return of refugees to a country where they may have reason to fear persecution. UNHCR pursues its objectives in the field of protection by encouraging the conclusion of intergovernmental legal instruments in favour of refugees, by supervising the implementation of their provisions and by encouraging Governments to adopt legislation and administrative procedures for the benefit of refugees. UNHCR is often called upon to provide material assistance (i.e. the provision of food, shelter, medical care and essential supplies) while durable solutions are being sought. Durable solutions generally take one of 3 forms: voluntary repatriation, local integration or resettlement in another country..

UNHCR works in tandem with governmental and non-governmental organizations, and within the UN framework its closest partnership is with the World Food Programme. Other partners include UNICEF, WHO, UNDP and the Department of Humanitarian Affairs. The Red Cross (ICRC and IFRC) and the International Organization for Migration (IOM) are also close allies. Financial institutions such as the World Bank are also likely to increase their involvement with UNHCR in addressing the social and economic conditions underlying many refugee movements. At present, UNHCR is funded almost entirely by voluntary contributions. UNHCR expenditure amounted to over US$1,000m. in 1997.

High Commissioner: Sadako Ogata (Japan).

UNRWA was created by the General Assembly in 1949 as a temporary, non-political agency to provide relief to the nearly 750,000 people who became refugees as a result of the disturbances during and after the creation of the State of Israel in the former British Mandate territory of Palestine. 'Palestine refugees', as defined by UNRWA's mandate, are persons or descendants of persons whose normal residence was Palestine for at least 2 years prior to the 1948 conflict and who, as a result of the conflict, lost their homes and means of livelihood. UNRWA has also been called upon to help persons displaced by renewed hostilities in the Middle East in 1967. The situation of Palestine refugees in south Lebanon, affected in the aftermath of the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon, was of special concern to the Agency in 1984. Over 2m. refugees are registered with UNRWA. Education and basic healthcare account for over 80% of the Agency's budget, financed by voluntary contributions from Governments. Its mandate is renewed at intervals by the UN General Assembly.

The UN's activities in the field of human rights are the primary responsibility of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, a post established in 1993 under the direction and authority of the Secretary-General and held, currently, by Mary Robinson (Ireland). The High Commissioner is nominated by the Secretary-General for a 4-year term, renewable once. The principal co-ordinating human rights organ of the UN is the Commission on Human Rights, set up by ECOSOC in 1946. It has 53 members elected for 3-year terms, meets for 6 weeks in Geneva each year, and is aided in its task by a Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, composed of 26 experts from all over the world. The implementation of international human rights treaties is monitored by 6 committees (also called treaty bodies): the Human Rights Committee; the Committee against Torture; Committee on the Rights of the Child; Committee on Economic, Cultural and Social Rights; Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination; Committee on Elimination of Discrimination against Women.

Training and Research Institutes. There are 6 training and research institutes within the UN, all of them autonomous.

United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR). Established in 1963 to enhance the effectiveness of the UN in achieving its major objectives. Recently, its focus has shifted to training, with basic research being conducted only if extra-budgetary funds can be made available. Training is provided at various levels for personnel on assignments under the UN, its specialized agencies or related organizations. By 1996, more than 24,000 participants from 180 countries had attended UNITAR courses, seminars or workshops.

Address: Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland.

United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR). Established by the General Assembly in 1980 to undertake research on disarmament and related problems, particularly international security issues, its programme is reviewed annually subject to approval by its Board of Trustees, and its Director reports to the General Assembly.

Address: Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland.

United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD). Established in 1963 to conduct multidisciplinary research into the social dimensions of contemporary problems affecting development, it aims to provide governments, development agencies, grassroots organizations and scholars with a better understanding of how development policies and processes of economic, social and environmental change affect different social groups.

Address: Palais des Nations, 1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland.

United Nations International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW). Established by ECOSOC and endorsed by the General Assembly in 1976, INSTRAW provides training, conducts research, and collects and disseminates information to stimulate and assist women's advancement and integration into the development progress. Its 11-member Board of Trustees, which reports to ECOSOC, meets annually to review its programme and to formulate the principles and guidelines for INSTRAW's activities.

Address: POB 21747, Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic.

United Nations University (UNU). Sponsored jointly by the UN and UNESCO, UNU is guaranteed academic freedom by a charter approved by the General Assembly in 1973. It is governed by a 28-member Council of scholars and scientists, of whom 24 are appointed by the Secretary-General of the UN and the Director-General of UNESCO. Not traditional in the sense of having students and awarding degrees, it works through networks of collaborating institutions and individuals to undertake multidisciplinary research on problems of human survival, development and welfare; and to strengthen research and training capabilities in developing countries. It also provides postgraduate fellowships to scholars and scientists from developing countries.

Address: 53-70 Jingumae 5-chome, Shibuya-ku, Tokyo 150, Japan.

University for Peace. Founded in 1980 to conduct research on, inter alia, disarmament, mediation, the resolution of conflicts, preservation of the environment, international relations, peace education and human rights. The University has a European centre in Belgrade.

Address: POB 138, Ciudad Colon, Costa Rica.

Information. The UN Statistics Division in New York provides a wide range of statistical outputs and services for producers and users of statistics worldwide, facilitating national and international policy formulation, implementation and monitoring. It produces printed publications of statistics and statistical methods in the fields of international merchandise trade, national accounts, demography and population, gender, industry, energy, environment, human settlements and disability, as well as general statistics compendiums including the Statistical Yearbook and World Statistics Pocketbook. Many of its databases are available on CD-ROM, diskette, magnetic tape and the Internet.

CHEMICAL AND BIOLOGICAL WEAPON PROLIFERATION

Dr Jean Pascal Zanders

The use of chemical weapons (CW) in the war between Iraq and Iran in 1980-88 revealed that several countries outside the East-West confrontation had acquired chemical and possibly biological weapons (BW). At the same time, the likelihood of outside military intervention into regional conflicts, such as the 1990-91 Gulf War, increased after the end of the cold war. The realization that expeditionary forces could face an army with chemical or biological weapons heightened international awareness of the dangers of proliferation. The dimension of sub-state proliferation was added to after the first large-scale indiscriminate terrorist attack with CW in the Tokyo underground system in March 1995.

Although the issue may appear to be of relatively recent origin, the spread of chemical weapons actually started in World War I and has continued ever since. The Allies, whose chemical industry was generally less developed than that in Imperial Germany, soon began sharing knowledge and expertise on offensive and defensive aspects of chemical warfare and exchanging production capabilities for certain chemicals. In addition, France and Great Britain supplied other Allies whose territory was occupied, such as Belgium, or who had an insufficiently developed CW production base, such as the United States, with chemical warfare munitions.

After World War I most major belligerents scaled back their offensive CW programmes. But it was not the number of states with a chemical capacity, but the size of the CW arsenals that was the chief security concern. A significant imbalance offered the CW possessor the prospect of a swift, decisive victory and therefore contributed to the likelihood of war. For this reason some major powers viewed the sale of chemicals, technology and factories to smaller or less-advanced states as beneficial to their own national security. The transactions involved direct government-to-government dealings. On the eve of World War II many European second-tier powers maintained limited offensive CW programmes and, in doing so, contributed to the continent-wide patchwork of overlapping balances of power. In addition, Italy's use of CW in Abyssinia (1935-36) and the worsening political climate in Europe gave a major impetus to offensive and defensive CW programmes. At no other point in history have so many countries been known to possess chemical weapons.

Biological weapons took a little longer to gain credibility. The only experience from the Great War was German sabotage with pathogens against livestock in the United States destined for Europe and the Middle East. Thereafter, a better understanding of disease transmission in the 1920s and 1930s combined with the dramatic experiences of the Spanish Flu epidemic at the end of World War I increased concerns about biological warfare. Based on essentially faulty intelligence and fears of vulnerability, several countries began to look seriously at the feasibility of biological warfare and the suitability of certain pathogens for weaponization. Germany's research and development remained splintered throughout World War II and did not lead to a useful weapon. More concerted efforts in Canada, Great Britain and the United States led to the three countries pooling their resources. However, apart from a limited British capability to retaliate with anthrax against German cattle, the Allies failed to produce an operational offensive biological weapon. The only country with a dedicated long-term offensive BW programme was Japan. Its research and development of agents and dissemination devices began in the early 1930s and lasted until the end of the war. The programme was also based on human experimentation in occupied China. On several occasions Japanese troops released biological warfare agents against Chinese villages and soldiers.

Post-war research and production of offensive CBW was continued in the Soviet Union and the USA. The new nerve agents, which the Germans had discovered in the late 1930s while researching pesticides, rekindled their interest in chemical warfare. Most secondary powers, however, gradually abandoned their offensive CBW programmes to concentrate on chemical and biological defence, protection and prophylaxis. The number of countries with offensive CW capabilities thus dropped considerably from the pre-World War II high and few countries other than those which had begun BW-related investigations during the inter-war years were known to have started up new biological warfare programmes.

It therefore came as something of a shock to the major powers when, in the 1980-88 Gulf War, Iraq breached the only international legal norm against chemical warfare then in force, the 1925 Geneva Protocol, by attacking Iranian forces and Kurdish guerrillas and civilians in Iraq with CW. It soon emerged that Western companies had been or were supplying Iraq with the technology and know-how to manufacture these weapons. Active CW programmes were reported in several other countries and in many instances Western companies were found to be heavily involved. Most of these programmes were located in politically volatile regions and led to fears of rapid escalation of violence as military leaders contemplated preemptive strikes against production and storage facilities.

While there is always a degree of uncertainty as to the number of countries engaging in chemical or biological warfare programmes, we are even less confident in assessing the level of development and whether the programmes are offensive or defensive. At what point should a country enter the league of chemical or biological weaponry? Should it be when it has the scientific, technological and industrial base to support a CBW programme, when it has a research and development programme, when it produces chemical or biological weapons, when it stockpiles them, when it deploys them with troops, or when there is clear evidence that they have been assimilated into military doctrine? An important factor here is that whatever country is making the assessment is liable to use different criteria depending on whether a state is hostile or friendly. Perceived intent is a major subjective component in threat assessment.

Recent US analyses have tended to converge on a figure of at least 20 to 25 countries that have or may have been developing nuclear, biological or chemical weapons, or their missile delivery systems. As the figures now usually comprise four categories of weapons, it has become more difficult to isolate the CBW threat assessment. The 1997 edition of Proliferation: Threat and Response by the US Department of Defense listed nine countries as having a CW programme in various stages of development: China, India, Iran, Iraq, North Korea, Libya, Pakistan, Russia and Syria. It also named seven countries as have a BW programme: China, India, Iran, Iraq, North Korea, Pakistan and Russia. Some countries, however, are conspicuously absent from these lists. Egypt, Israel, South Korea and Taiwan, for instance, were named in the August 1993 Office of Technology Assessment report, Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction: Assessing the Risks.

Under the 1993 Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) signatories are required to declare CW programmes initiated after 1 January 1946. These declarations are subject to verification and inspections by personnel of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) in The Hague. In case of doubt, any party to the convention may request a challenge inspection to ascertain the veracity of submissions. The United States and Russia, as successor state to the Soviet Union, have declared large CW stockpiles (30,000 and 40,000 agent tonnes respectively), which are in the process of being destroyed. They have also declared production facilities, which are either being destroyed or converted. China, France, India, South Korean and the United Kingdom are known to have made declarations of CW production facilities. Japan has declared and destroyed the Aum Shinrikyo sarin factory. Following the hearings of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission in June 1998 and the publication of the report in October, South Africa is now also known to have had a major CW armament programme in the 1980s.

The 1972 Biological and Toxic Weapons Convention (BTWC) does not require states parties to declare past programmes but they are encouraged to volunteer information. Few countries have submitted details of offensive biological warfare activities. International inspections in Iraq, conducted as part of the cease-fire agreement ending the 1990-91 Gulf War, have uncovered a vast and advanced biological warfare programme although its full scope has not yet been determined. There is still some doubt as to whether Russia has totally abandoned its offensive BW research and development despite decrees by President Boris Yeltsin ordering its termination. Negotiators in Geneva are currently considering a protocol to the BTWC with verification measures, but until the conclusion of these talks no formal procedures to verify compliance with the convention are available.

Addressing the CBW proliferation threat: export controls and disarmament

Most of the technologies and materials necessary for the manufacture of chemical or biological weapons are dual-use in nature. They have important civilian applications, but can easily be diverted for CBW programmes. One way of controlling the way they are used is to impose export controls. Few countries, whether industrialized or industrializing, object to the principle of export controls. Export controls are embedded in the CWC and will become part of the BTWC treaty regime once the negotiations on an additional protocol to that convention have been concluded. In each case they allow the right of access to the controlled technologies and goods for purposes not prohibited by either convention. Far more controversial in North-South relations is the existence of an export control regime outside both conventions, namely the Australia Group. Several developing countries see it as an attempt to undercut their right of access to certain commodities under the disarmament treaties.

Specific CBW-related export controls emerged in the mid-1980s, when it became clear that Western companies were aiding Iraq's CW programmes. Previously, trade regulations to prevent the diversion of dual-use goods were either non-existent or easily circumvented. The need to co-ordinate national export controls led to the formation of the Australia Group as an informal consultative forum in 1985. Its original objective was to prevent CW proliferation while the negotiations to complete the CWC were being undertaken. Subsequently, it has also acted to prevent BW proliferation while improved measures to ensure compliance with the BTWC are introduced. Today, the control lists of the Australia Group comprise chemical precursors, equipment used in the production of CBW, and biological warfare agents and organisms. The participants - 30 states plus the European Commission, which attends as an observer - have agreed to apply decisions taken collectively through their national export control systems. In 1992 the Missile Technology Control Regime (MTCR) extended its scope to include missiles capable of delivering chemical and biological warheads. The Australia Group list of controlled goods is incorporated into other export control regimes, such as the Wassenaar Arrangement and the European Union regulations on exports of dual-use goods.

So far, we have dealt with strategies to control the supply of biological and chemical weapons. But what of controlling demand? A disarmament treaty is the ultimate demand-side non-proliferation policy, because it involves a conscious decision to renounce these weapons under all circumstances. The BTWC and the CWC contain an absolute prohibition to develop or otherwise acquire chemical or biological weapons and the obligation never to assist anybody under any circumstances to acquire such weapons. In addition, parties also have a disarmament obligation: they must reduce existing stockpiles of chemical or biological weapons to zero.

At present, the CWC generates a far higher degree of confidence, because it contains elaborate verification and inspection mechanisms as well as procedures to restore compliance in case of a breach. The BTWC does not have similar provisions simply because in the early 1970s there was widespread consensus that BW had little military utility. In view of the rapid progress in biotechnology and genetic engineering, concerns about designer biological warfare agents and their antidotes have risen sharply. Hopefully, the states parties to the BTWC will reach agreement on verification and compliance measures in additional protocol to the convention before the 5th Review Conference of States Parties to the BTWC in 2001.

SPECIALIZED AGENCIES OF THE UN

The intergovernmental agencies related to the UN by special agreements are separate autonomous organizations which work with the UN and each other through the co-ordinating machinery of the Economic and Social Council. 16 of them are 'Specialized Agencies' within the terms of the UN Charter, and report annually to ECOSOC.

FOOD AND AGRICULTURE ORGANIZATION OF THE UNITED NATIONS (FAO)

Origin. In 1943, the International Conference on Food and Agriculture, at Hot Springs, Virginia, set up an Interim Commission, based in Washington, with a remit to establish an organization. Its Constitution was signed on 16 Oct. 1945 in Quebec City. Today, membership totals 175 countries. The European Union was made a member as a 'regional economic integration organization' in 1991.

Aims and Activities. The aims of FAO are to raise levels of nutrition and standards of living; to improve the production and distribution of all food and agricultural products from farms, forests and fisheries; to improve the living conditions of rural populations; and, by these means, to eliminate hunger. Its priority objectives are to encourage sustainable agriculture and rural development as part of a long-term strategy for the conservation and management of natural resources; and to ensure the availability of adequate food supplies, by maximizing stability in the flow of supplies and securing access to food by the poor.

In carrying out these aims, FAO promotes investment in agriculture, better soil and water management, improved yields of crops and livestock, agricultural research and the transfer of technology to developing countries; and encourages the conservation of natural resources and rational use of fertilizers and pesticides; the development and sustainable utilization of marine and inland fisheries; the sustainable management of forest resources and the combating of animal disease. Technical assistance is provided in all of these fields, and in nutrition, agricultural engineering, agrarian reform, development communications, remote sensing for climate and vegetation, and the prevention of post-harvest food losses. In addition, FAO works to maintain global biodiversity with the emphasis on the genetic diversity of crop plants and domesticated animals; and plays a major role in the collection, analysis and dissemination of information on agricultural production and commodities. Finally, FAO acts as a neutral forum for the discussion of issues, and advises governments on policy, through the convention of international conferences like the 1996 World Food Summit in Rome.

Special FAO programmes help countries prepare for, and provide relief in the event of, emergency food situations, in particular through the setting up of food reserves. The Special Programme for Food Security through Food Production in Low-Income Food-Deficit Countries, launched in 1994, is designed to assist target countries to increase food production and productivity as rapidly as possible, primarily through the widespread adoption by farmers of available improved production technologies, with the emphasis on high-potential areas. FAO provides support for the global co-ordination of the programme and helps attract funds. The Emergency Prevention System for Transboundary Animal and Plant Pests and Diseases (EMPRES), established in 1994, strengthens FAO's existing contribution to the prevention, control and eradication of diseases and pests, with locusts and rinderpest among its priorities. The Global Information and Early Warning System provides current information on the world food situation and identifies countries threatened by shortages to guide potential donors. The People's Participation Programme promotes the involvement of rural people in decision-making, and the policy-making and activities affecting their lives. Together with the UN, FAO sponsors the World Food Programme (WFP).

Finance. The budget for the 1998–99 biennium is US$650m. FAO's Regular Programme budget, financed by contributions from member governments, covers the cost of its secretariat and Technical Co-operation Programme (TCP), and part of the costs of several special programmes.

The technical assistance programme is funded by extra-budgetary sources. Its single largest contributor is the UN Development Programme (UNDP), which in 1997 accounted for US$46·4m., or 18% of field project expenditures. Increasingly important are the trust funds that come from donor countries and international financing institutions, totalling some US$165·9m., or 64% of technical assistance funds. In 1997 FAO's contribution under its TCP and Special Programme for Food Security was US$47·8m., or 18%. Its total field programme expenditure for 1997 was an estimated US$260·2m. In 1997, there were 2,320 field projects in operation: 33% in Africa, 22% in Asia and the Pacific, 10% in Latin America and the Caribbean, 12% in the Near East, 4% in Europe, and 19% interregional or global.

Organization. The FAO Conference, composed of all members, meets every other year to determine policy and approve the FAO's budget and programme. The 49-member Council, elected by the Conference, serves as FAO's governing body between conference sessions. Much of its work is carried out by dozens of regional or specialist commissions, such as the Asia-Pacific Fishery Commission, the European Commission on Agriculture and the Commission on Plant Genetic Resources. The Director-General is elected for a renewable 6-year term.

INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT (IBRD) — THE WORLD BANK

Origin. Conceived at the UN Monetary and Financial Conference at Bretton Woods (New Hampshire, USA) in July 1944, the IBRD, frequently called the World Bank, began operations in June 1946, its purpose being to provide funds, policy guidance and technical assistance to facilitate economic development in its poorer member countries. The Group comprises 4 other organizations (see below).

Activities. The Bank obtains its funds from the following sources: capital paid in by member countries; sales of its own securities; sales of parts of its loans; repayments; and net earnings. A resolution of the Board of Governors of 27 April 1988 provides that the paid-in portion of the shares authorized to be subscribed under it will be 3%.

The Bank is self-supporting, raising most of its money on the world's financial markets. In the fiscal year ending 30 June 1997, it achieved a net income of US$1,285m.; medium- and long-term borrowing equivalent of US$15,100m. in 18 currencies; average medium- to long-term borrowing costs, after swaps, of 5·01%; financial returns on its investment folio of 5%; a reserves-to-loan ratio of 14%; and decline in its net administrative expenditure in real terms to a figure set at $1,177m.

The Bank lends in the region of US$22,000m. a year. At 30 June 1997, it had lent a total of US$106,000m. to member countries. 89% of borrowers took advantage of the new single-currency loans which became available in June 1996 to provide borrowers with the flexibility to select IBRD loan terms that are consistent with their debt-managing strategy and suited to their debt-servicing capacity. In order to eliminate wasteful overlapping of development assistance and to ensure that the funds available are used to the best possible effect, the Bank has organized consortia or consultative groups of aid-giving nations for many countries. These include Bangladesh, Belarus, Bolivia, Bulgaria, Egypt, Ethiopia, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kyrgyzstan, Macedonia, Malawi, Mauritania, Moldova, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Peru, Romania, Sierra Leone, Tanzania, the [Palestinian] West Bank and Gaza Strip, Zambia, Zimbabwe and the Caribbean Group for Co-operation in Economic Development.

For the purposes of its analytical and operational work, in 1996 the IBRD characterized economies as follows: low-income (average annual per capita GNP of $785 or less); middle-income (between $786 and $9,635); and high-income ($9,636 or more).

A wide variety of technical assistance is at the core of IBRD's activities. It acts as executing agency for a number of pre-investment surveys financed by the UN Development Programme. Resident missions have been established in 64 developing member countries and there are regional offices for East and West Africa, the Baltic States and South-East Asia which assist in the preparation and implementation of projects. The Bank maintains a staff college, the Economic Development Institute in Washington, D.C., for senior officials of member countries. In 1997, the institute held training workshops on anti-corruption strategies and public integrity in more than 10 countries as part of IBRD's initiative to combat corruption.

The Strategic Compact. Unanimously approved by the Executive Board in March 1997, the Strategic Compact set out a plan for fundamental reform to make the Bank more effective in delivering its regional programme and in achieving its basic mission of reducing poverty. Decentralizing the Bank's relationships with borrower countries is central to the reforms. The effectiveness of devolved country management and the bank's promotion of good governance and anti-corruption measures to developing countries are likely to be key policies of the new strategy.

Organization. As of July 1997, the Bank had 180 members, each with voting power in the institution, based on shareholding which in turn is based on a country's economic growth. The president is selected by the Bank's Board of Executive Directors. The Articles of Agreement do not specify the nationality of the president but by custom the US Executive Director makes a nomination, and by a long-standing, informal agreement, the president is a US national (while the managing director of the IMF is European). The initial term is 5 years, with a second of 5 years or less.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION (IDA)

A lending agency established in 1960 and administered by the IBRD to provide assistance on concessional terms to the poorest developing countries. Its resources consist of subscriptions and general replenishments from its more industrialized and developed members, special contributions, and transfers from the net earnings of IBRD.

In 1997 the IDA lent a total of US$101,600m. for 2,780 development projects in around 100 countries. The same year, however, saw overall loan commitments for the poorest countries fall by almost a third, to US$4,600m., with commitments 15% down on the lower end of its US$5,300-6,600m. planning range for that year. The biggest shortfall has been in lending to Africa.

Officers and staff of the IBRD serve concurrently as officers and staff of the IDA at the World Bank headquarters.

INTERNATIONAL FINANCE CORPORATION (IFC)

Established in July 1956 to help strengthen the private sector in developing countries, through the provision of long-term loans, equity investments, guarantees, standby financing, risk management and quasi-equity instruments such as subordinated loans, preferred stock and income notes. It helps to finance new ventures and assist established enterprises to expand, improve or diversify, and provides a variety of advisory services to public and private sector clients. To be eligible for financing, projects must be profitable for investors, must benefit the economy of the country concerned, and must comply with IFC's environmental guidelines.

About 80% of its funds are borrowed from the international financial markets through public bond issues or private placements, 20% from the IBRD. Its authorized capital is US$2,450m.; paid-in capital at 30 June 1996 was US$2,076m. The IFC invested US$6,700m. in project financing in 1997 and approved 276 private-sector projects in around 80 countries. It has 172 members.

MULTILATERAL INVESTMENT GUARANTEE AGENCY (MIGA)

Established in 1988 to encourage the flow of foreign direct investment to, and among, developing member countries, MIGA is the insurance arm of the World Bank. It provides investors with investment guarantees against non-commercial risk, such as expropriation and war, and gives advice to governments on improving climate for foreign investment. It may insure up to 90% of an investment, with a current limit of US$50m. per project. In 1997 it issued 293 guarantees for US$3,400m. in coverage. By 1999 it had 149 member countries and a further 16 countries in the process of fulfilling membership requirements. Located at the World Bank headquarters (see above).

INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR SETTLEMENT OF INVESTMENT DISPUTES (ICSID)

Founded in 1966 to promote increased flows of international investment by providing facilities for the conciliation and arbitration of disputes between governments and foreign investors. It does not engage in such conciliation or arbitration. This is the task of conciliators and arbitrators appointed by the contracting parties, or as otherwise provided for in the Convention. Recourse to conciliation and arbitration by members is entirely voluntary.

At 31 Oct. 1997, its Convention had been signed by 143 countries. 47 cases had been registered by it (3, conciliation; 44, arbitration) and 12 arbitrations were pending. Disputes involved a variety of investment sectors: agriculture, banking, construction, energy, health, industrial, mining and tourism.

ICSID also undertakes research, publishing and advisory activities in the field of foreign investment law. Like the IDA and MIGA, it is located at the World Bank headquarters in Washington (see above).

Secretary-General: Ibrahim F. I Shihata (Egypt).

INTERNATIONAL CIVIL AVIATION ORGANIZATION (ICAO)

Origin. The Convention providing for the establishment of the ICAO was drawn up by the International Civil Aviation Conference held in Chicago in 1944. A Provisional International Civil Aviation Organization (PICAO) operated for 20 months until the formal establishment of ICAO on 4 April 1947. The Convention on International Civil Aviation superseded the provisions of the Paris Convention of 1919 and the Pan American Convention on Air Navigation of 1928.

Functions. It assists international civil aviation by establishing technical standards for safety and efficiency of air navigation and promoting simpler procedures at borders; develops regional plans for ground facilities and services needed for international flying; disseminates air-transport statistics and prepares studies on aviation economics; and fosters the development of air law conventions. As an administrative arm of the UN Development Programme, it provides technical assistance to states in developing civil aviation programmes.

Organization. The principal organs of ICAO are an Assembly, consisting of all members of the Organization, and a Council, which is composed of 33 states elected by the Assembly for 3 years, which meets in virtually continuous session. In electing these states, the Assembly must give adequate representation to: (1) states of major importance in air transport; (2) states which make the largest contribution to the provision of facilities for the international civil air navigation; and (3) those states not otherwise included whose election would ensure that all major geographical areas of the world were represented. The ICAO's main subsidiary bodies are: 15-member Air Navigation Commission appointed by the Council; Committee on Joint Support of Air Navigation Services; Personnel Committee; the Finance Committee; Committee on Unlawful Interference; Technical Co-operation Committee; Air Transport Committee (all open to Council members); and the Legal Committee, on which all 185 of the Organization's members may be represented. The budget approved for 1998 was US$54·6m.

Headquarters: 999 University St., Montreal, PQ, Canada H3C 5H7.
Secretary-General: Renato Claudio Costa Pereira (Brazil).

INTERNATIONAL FUND FOR AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT (IFAD)

The idea for an International Fund for Agricultural Development arose at the 1974 World Food Conference. An agreement to establish IFAD entered into force on 30 Nov. 1977, and the agency began its operations the following month. IFAD's purpose is to mobilize additional funds for improved food production and better nutrition among low-income groups in developing countries through projects and programmes directly benefiting the poorest rural populations while preserving their natural resource base. In line with the Fund's focus on the rural poor, its resources are made available in highly concessional loans and grants. By 1999 the Fund had invested US$5,670m. in financing 489 projects in 111 developing countries.

Organization. The highest body is the Governing Council, on which all 160 member countries are represented. Operations are overseen by an 18-member Executive Board (with 17 alternate members), which is responsible to the Governing Council. The Fund works with many co-operating institutions, including the World Bank, regional development banks and financial agencies, and other UN agencies; many of these co-finance IFAD projects.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATION (ILO)

Origin. The ILO was established in 1919 under the Treaty of Versailles as an autonomous institution associated with the League of Nations. An agreement establishing its relationship with the UN was approved in 1946, making the ILO the first Specialized Agency to be associated with the UN. An intergovernmental agency with a tripartite structure, in which representatives of governments, employers and workers participate, it seeks through international action to improve labour and living conditions, to promote productive employment and social justice for working people everywhere. On its fiftieth anniversary in 1969, it was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. In June 1998, it numbered 174 members.

Functions. One of the ILO's principal functions is the formulation of international standards in the form of International Labour Conventions and Recommendations. Member countries are required to submit Conventions to their competent national authorities with a view to ratification. If a country ratifies a Convention it agrees to bring its laws into line with its terms and to report periodically how these regulations are being applied. More than 6,544 ratifications of 181 Conventions had been deposited by 30 Oct. 1998. Procedures are in place to ascertain whether Conventions thus ratified are effectively applied. Recommendations do not require ratification, but Member States are obliged to consider them with a view to giving effect to their provisions by legislation or other action. By 2 Dec. 1998, the International Labour Conference had adopted 189 Recommendations.

Activities. In addition to its research and advisory activities, the ILO extends technical co-operation to governments under its regular budget and under the UN Development Programme and Funds-in-Trust in the fields of employment promotion, human resources development (including vocational and management training), development of social institutions, small-scale industries, rural development, social security, industrial safety and hygiene, productivity, etc. Technical co-operation also includes expert missions and a fellowship programme.

In 1994 the technical services offered by the ILO to its tripartite constituents came under scrutiny leading to a re-affirmation of technical co-operation as one of the principal means of ILO action. Since 1994 the process of implementing the new Active Partnership Policy made significant progress and today 16 multidisciplinary advisory teams are engaged in a dialogue with ILO constituents centred on the identification of Country Objectives to form the basis of the ILO's contribution.

In June 1998 delegates to the 86th International Labour Conference adopted a solemn ILO Declaration in Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work, committing the Organization's 174 member States to respect the principles inherent in 7 core labour standards: the right of workers and employers to freedom of association and the effective right to collective bargaining, and to work toward the elimination of all forms of forced or compulsory labour, the effective abolition of child labour and the elimination of discrimination in respect of employment and occupation.

The Conference also adopted a Resolution on Youth Employment, which calls on member States to take specific measures to increase employment opportunities for young persons, while ensuring employment protection for them. These measures include investment and education, vocational training, counselling, flexible work arrangements, and the creation of small and medium-sized enterprises.

Finance. In 1997, expenditure on operational activities, under all sources of funding, totalled US$108·4m. The 3 leading programmes (representing 64% of total expenditure) were in employment and training (US$24·6m.), enterprise and co-operative development (US$23·4m.) and development policies (US$21·2m.). Other programmes dealt with working conditions and environment (US$13·1m.), including an International Programme for the Elimination of Child Labour (US$8·6m.).

Interregional and global activities accounted for some US$18·6m. In terms of regional distribution, Africa accounted for 39% of total expenditure (US$42m.), Asia and the Pacific for 22% (US$23·5m.), and Latin America and the Caribbean for 12% (more than US$13·3m.). Expenditure in Europe was US$6·8m. in 1997; in the Arab States programmes rose from US$2·6m in 1996 to US$4m. in 1997.

The ILO's International Institute for Labour Studies promotes the study and discussion of policy issues. The core theme of its activities is the interaction between labour institutions, development and civil society in a global economy. It identifies emerging social and labour issues by opening up new areas for research and action; and encourages systematic dialogue on social policy between the tripartite constituency of the ILO and the international academic community, and other public opinion-makers. It achieves its mandate through research networks; courses and seminars; social policy forums; internships; visiting scholar and internship programmes; and publications.

The International Training Centre of the ILO, in Turin, was set up in 1965 to lead the training programmes implemented by the ILO as part of its technical co-operation activities. Member States and the UN system also call on its resources and experience, and a UN Staff College was established on the Turin Campus in 1996.

Organization. The International Labour Conference is the supreme deliberative organ of the ILO; it meets annually in Geneva. National delegations are composed of 2 government delegates, 1 employers' delegate and 1 workers' delegate. The Governing Body, elected by the Conference, is the Executive Council. It is composed of 28 government members, 14 workers' members and 14 employers' members. 10 governments of countries of industrial importance hold permanent seats on the Governing Body. These are: Brazil, China, Germany, France, India, Italy, Japan, Russia, UK and USA. The remaining 18 government members are elected every 3 years. Workers' and employers' representatives are elected as individuals, not as national candidates. The International Labour Office serves as secretariat, operational headquarters, research centre and publishing house. The ILO has a branch office in London (for UK and Republic of Ireland), and regional offices in Abidjan (for Africa), Bangkok (for Asia and the Pacific), Lima (for Latin America and the Caribbean) and Beirut (for Arab States). The ILO budget for 1998–99 was US$481m.

INTERNATIONAL MARITIME ORGANIZATION (IMO)

Origin. The International Maritime Organization (formerly the InterGovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization) was established as a specialized agency of the UN by a convention drafted in 1948 at a UN maritime conference in Geneva. The Convention became effective on 17 March 1958 when it had been ratified by 21 countries, including 7 with at least 1m. gross tons of shipping each. The IMCO started operations in 1959 and changed its name to the IMO in 1982.

Functions. To facilitate co-operation among governments on technical matters affecting merchant shipping, especially concerning safety at sea; to prevent and control marine pollution caused by ships; to facilitate international maritime traffic. The IMO is responsible for convening international maritime conferences and for drafting international maritime conventions. It also provides technical assistance to countries wishing to develop their maritime activities, and acts as a depositary authority for international conventions regulating maritime affairs. The World Maritime University (WMU), at Malmö, Sweden, was established in 1983; the IMO International Maritime Law Institute (IMLI), at Valletta, Malta and the IMO International Maritime Academy, at Trieste, Italy, both in 1989.

Organization. The IMO has 156 members (and 2 associate members). The Assembly, composed of all member states, normally meets every 2 years. The 32-member Council acts as governing body between sessions. There are 4 principal committees (on maritime safety, legal matters, marine environment protection and technical co-operation), which submit reports or recommendations to the Assembly through the Council, and a Secretariat. The budget for 1996–97 amounted to £36·6m.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND (IMF)

The International Monetary Fund was established on 27 Dec. 1945 as an independent international organization and began financial operations on 1 March 1947; its relationship with the UN is defined in an agreement of mutual co-operation which came into force on 15 Nov. 1947. The first amendment to the IMF's Articles creating the special drawing right (SDR) took effect on 28 July 1969. The second amendment took effect on 1 April 1978. The third amendment came into force on 11 Nov. 1992; it allows for the suspension of voting and related rights of a member which persists in its failure to settle its outstanding obligations to the IMF.

Aims. To promote international monetary co-operation, the expansion of international trade and exchange rate stability; to assist in the removal of exchange restrictions and the establishment of a multilateral system of payments; and to alleviate any serious disequilibrium in members' international balance of payments by making the financial resources of the IMF available to them, usually subject to economic policy conditions to ensure the revolving nature of IMF resources.

Activities. Each member of the IMF undertakes a broad obligation to collaborate with the IMF and other members to ensure orderly exchange arrangements and to promote a system of stable exchange rates. In addition, members are subject to certain obligations relating to domestic and external policies that can affect the balance of payments and the exchange rate. The IMF makes its resources available, under proper safeguards, to its members to meet short-term or medium-term payment difficulties. The first allocation of SDRs was made on 1 Jan. 1970 with 5 SDR allocations since then. SDRs totalled SDR 21,400m. in March 1998.

To enhance its balance of payments assistance to its members, the IMF established a compensatory Financing Facility on 27 Feb. 1963; temporary oil facilities in 1974 and 1975; a Trust Fund in 1976; and an Extended Fund Facility (EFF) for medium-term assistance to members with special balance of payments problems on 13 Sept. 1974. In March 1986, it established the Structural Adjustment Facility (SAF) to provide assistance to low-income countries. In Dec. 1987, it established the Enhanced Structural Adjustment Facility (ESAF) to provide further assistance to low-income countries facing high levels of indebtedness. In Aug. 1988, the Compensatory and Contingency Financing Facility was established, succeeding the Compensatory Financing Facility. The new facility provides broader protection to members pursuing IMF-supported adjustment programmes. Because of the importance of continuing concessional ESAF support, the IMF in 1996 endorsed proposals for a continuation of ESAF operations beyond the year 2000, when current ESAF resources are expected to be fully committed. There is to be an interim period of operations from 2001–04 for which new financing would be mobilized. This would be followed in 2005, or earlier, by a self-sustained ESAF. In Dec. 1997, the Supplemental Reserve Facility (SRF) was established to provide short-term assistance to countries experiencing exceptional balance of payments problems owing to a large short-term financing need resulting from a sudden disruptive loss of market confidence, reflected in pressure on the capital account and the member's reserves.

Capital Resources. In April 1997, the Interim Committee of the Fund's Board of Governors endorsed the concept of an amendment that would make the promotion of capital account liberalization one of the Fund's purposes and would give the Fund the appropriate jurisdiction over capital movements. The capital resources of the IMF comprise SDRs and currencies that the members pay under quotas calculated for them when they join the IMF. A member's quota is largely determined by its economic position relative to other members; it is also linked to their drawing rights on the IMF under both regular and special facilities, their voting power, and their share of SDR allocations. Every IMF member is required to subscribe to the IMF an amount equal to its quota. An amount not exceeding 25% of the quota has to be paid in reserve assets, the balance in the member's own currency. The members with the largest quotas are: 1st, the USA; joint 2nd, Germany and Japan; joint 4th, France and the UK.

An increase of almost 60% in IMF quotas became effective in Nov. 1992 as a result of the 9th General Review of Quotas. Quotas were not increased under the 10th General Review. In the 11th General Review, the IMF's Executive Board adopted a resolution at its 1997 annual meeting, approving a one-time equity allocation of SDRs of SDR 21,400m., which would equalize all members' ratio of SDRs to quota at 29·3%. The Board also agreed to recommend a 45% increase in IMF quotas, which would raise total quotas from SDR145,300, in Sept. 1997, to SDR 209,500m. As of Sept. 1998, 21 member countries (representing 19·53% of total current quotas) had consented to their quota increase; an 85% majority of member countries is required for the quota increase to take effect.

Borrowing Resources. The IMF is authorized under its Articles of Agreement to supplement its resources by borrowing. In Jan. 1962, a 4-year agreement was concluded with 10 industrial members (Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Sweden, UK, USA) who undertook to lend the IMF up to US$6,000m. in their own currencies, if this should be needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. Switzerland subsequently joined the group. These arrangements, known as the General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB), have been extended several times. In early 1983, agreement was reached to increase the credit arrangements under the GAB to SDR 17,000m.; to permit use of GAB resources in transactions with IMF members that are not GAB participants; to authorize Swiss participation; and to permit borrowing arrangements with non-participating members to be associated with the GAB. Saudi Arabia and the IMF have entered into such an arrangement under which the IMF will be able to borrow up to SDR 1,500m. to assist in financing purchases by any member for the same purpose and under the same circumstances as in the GAB. The changes became effective by 26 Dec. 1983. In view of the expected continuing high demand for IMF's resources, a doubling of borrowed resources under the GAB to SDR 34,000m. was endorsed through the development of New Arrangements to Borrow in Jan. 1997, with 25 member countries agreeing to make loans to the IMF when supplementary resources are needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of or threat to the international monetary system.

In order to oversee the compliance of members with their obligations under the Articles of Agreement, the IMF is required to exercise firm surveillance over members' exchange rate policies. In conjunction with the need for up-to-date reliable data to support its surveillance activities, it encourages member countries to make available to the public and to financial markets core financial and economic data. In April 1996, the IMF established the Special Data Dissemination Standard (SDDS) to improve access to reliable economic statistical information for member countries that have, or are seeking, access to international capital markets. In Dec. 1997, it established the General Data Dissemination Standard (GDDS), which applies to all member countries and focuses on improved production and dissemination of core economic data. Information on both are available on the IMF's website.

The IMF works with the IBRD (World Bank) to address the problems of the 41 most heavily indebted poor countries (33 in Sub-Saharan Africa) through their Initiative for the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPCs). It is designed to ensure that HIPCs with a sound track record of economic adjustment receive debt relief sufficient to help them attain a sustainable debt situation over the medium term.

Organization. The highest authority is the Board of Governors, on which each member government is represented. Normally the Governors meet once a year, and may take votes by mail or other means between meetings. The Board of Governors has delegated many of its powers to the 24 executive directors in Washington, who are appointed or elected by individual member countries or groups of countries. Each appointed director has voting power proportionate to the quota of the government he or she represents, while each elected director casts all the votes of the countries represented. The managing director is selected by the executive directors and serves as chairman of the Executive Board, but may not vote except in case of a tie. The term of office is for 5 years, but may be extended or terminated at the discretion of the executive directors. The managing director is responsible for the ordinary business of the IMF, under the direction of the executive directors, and supervises a staff of about 2,200. Under a long-standing, informal agreement, the managing director is European (while the President of the World Bank is a US national). There are 3 deputy managing directors. In Dec. 1998, the IMF had 182 members.

The IMF Institute is a specialized department of the IMF providing training in macroeconomic analysis and policy, and related subjects for officials of member countries, at the Fund's headquarters in Washington and at the Joint Vienna Institute (JVI). Since its establishment in 1964, the Institute has trained more than 10,900 officials from 181 countries. Courses in Washington are in Arabic, English, French and Spanish; at the JVI, in English, with Russian interpretation.

INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATION UNION (ITU)

Origin. Formed from the merger, in 1932, of the Telegraph Convention (1865) and the Radiotelegraph Convention (1906) under the new name of the International Telecommunication Union, the ITU became a Specialized Agency of the UN in 1947 and is governed by a new Constitution and Convention which came into force on 1 July 1994.

Functions. To maintain and extend international co-operation for the improvement and rational use of telecommunications of all kinds, and promote and offer technical assistance to developing countries in the field of telecommunications; to promote the development of technical facilities and their most efficient operation to improve the efficiency of telecommunication services, increasing their usefulness and making them, so far as possible, generally available to the public; to harmonize the actions of nations in the attainment of these ends.

Organization. The supreme organ of the ITU is the Plenipotentiary Conference, which normally meets every 4 years. A 46-member Council, elected by the Conference, meets annually in Geneva and is responsible for ensuring the co-ordination of the 4 permanent organs at ITU headquarters: the General Secretariat; Radiocommunication Sector; Telecommunication Standardization Sector; and Telecommunication Development Sector. The Secretary-General is also elected by the Conference. ITU has 187 member countries; a further 363 scientific and technical companies, public and private operators, broadcasters and other organizations are also ITU members.

UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION (UNESCO)

Origin. UNESCO's Constitution was signed in London on 16 Nov. 1945 by 37 countries and the Organization came into being in Nov. 1946 on the premise that: "Since wars begin in the minds of men, it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed". In Jan. 1998, UNESCO had 187 members including the UK, which rejoined in 1997. They include 4 Associate Members with no single member status in the UN (Aruba; British Virgin Islands; Macau; Netherlands Antilles). The USA is not a member.

Aims and Activities. UNESCO's primary objective is to contribute to peace and security in the world by promoting collaboration among the nations through education, science, communication and culture in order to further universal respect for justice, the rule of the law, human rights and fundamental freedoms, affirmed for all peoples of the world by the UN Charter.

Education. Various activities support and foster national projects to renovate education systems and develop alternative educational strategies towards a goal of lifelong education for all. The 4 main areas of focus, today, are: to provide basic education for all; expand access to basic education; improve the quality of basic education; and education for the 21st century. There are regional and sub-regional offices for education in 53 countries.

Science. UNESCO seeks to promote international scientific co-operation and encourages scientific research designed to improve living conditions. Science co-operation offices have been set up in Cairo, Jakarta, Nairobi, New Delhi, Montevideo and Venice. A Sciences in the Service of Development programme aims to provide support to member states in the fields of higher education, advanced training and research in natural and social sciences, and in the application of these sciences to development. It focuses on questions concerning issues such as peace, human rights, youth, the management of social transformations, the human genome, and man and the biosphere.

Communication. Here, activities are geared to promoting the free flow of information, freedom of expression, press freedom, media independence and pluralism. In this way, UNESCO endeavours, by disseminating information, carrying out research and providing advice to increase the scope and quality of press, film and radio services throughout the world.

Culture. In the cultural field, UNESCO's focus areas are research on the link between culture and development, and action to conserve and protect the world's cultural inheritance, by assisting member states in studying and preserving both the physical and the non-physical heritage of their societies.

Organization. The General Conference, composed of representatives from each member state, meets biennially to decide policy, programme and budget. A 58-member Executive Board elected by the Conference meets twice a year and there is a Secretariat. In addition, national commissions act as liaison groups between UNESCO and the educational, scientific and cultural life of their own countries. The budget for 1996–97 was over US$455m.

INTERNATIONAL BUREAU OF EDUCATION (IBE)

The International Bureau of Education is a centre for information and research in the field of comparative education. It focuses on the renewal of education curricula, contents, methods and materials, with particular emphasis on human and civic values. Founded in 1925, it became an intergovernmental organization in 1929 and since 1969 has been an integral part of UNESCO.

The IBE has three main activities: (i) Educational information and documentation; (ii) Comparative research in education; (iii) Policy dialogue among ministers of education.

Since 1934, the IBE has organized the International Conference on Education (ICE), which provides a forum for debate on common concerns, to define policy agreements, strategic approaches and normative instruments to the ministers of education in all countries.

UNITED NATIONS INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT ORGANIZATION (UNIDO)

Origin. UNIDO was established by the UN General Assembly in 1966 and became the 16th UN specialized agency in 1985.

Aims. UNIDO is dedicated to promoting sustainable industrial development in countries with developing and transition economies. It harnesses the joint forces of government and the private sector to foster competitive industrial production and raise capacity; to develop international industrial partnerships and provide technical co-operation services; and to promote socially equitable and environmentally friendly industrial development. UNIDO's ultimate goal is to create a better life for people by laying the industrial foundations for long-term prosperity and economic strength.

Activities. The 1993 General Conference approved a recommendation for the reform and revitalization of the Organization. The reform process concentrated on the re-orientation of UNIDO's activities to adjust to the economic environment of the 1990s, and was completed in Dec. 1995.

In Dec. 1997, the 7th session of the General Conference endorsed the Business Plan on the Future Role and Functions of UNIDO, which defines future programmes and activities of the Organization. The Conference also approved the regular budget for the biennium 1998–99, reflecting the new programme priorities.

Organization. The General Conference meets every 2 years to determine policy and approve the budget. It consists of representatives of all member states. The 53-member governing body (33 members from developing countries) is the Industrial Development Board, elected for 4 years by the General Conference. The General Conference also elects a 27-member Programme and Budget Committee for 2-year terms of office, and appoints a Director-General for 4 years.

In March 1999, UNIDO had 168 members. The USA withdrew from the Organization at the end of 1996 and Australia on 1 Jan. 1997.

Finance. UNIDO's financial resources come from regular and operational budgets, as well as contributions for technical co-operation activities. Derived from Member States' assessed contributions, the regular budget of UNIDO for 1998-99 amounts to US$129·5m. The operational budget of US$27·4m. is earned from overheads on projects implemented by UNIDO. Administrative costs represent less than 15% of the regular budget.

Technical co-operation, which in 1997 amounted to US$97·3m., is funded from various sources. These include voluntary contributions from donor countries and institutions; allocations by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP); the Multilateral Fund for the Implementation of the Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer; the regular programme of technical co-operation financed from UNIDO's regular budget; and the Common Fund for Commodities.

UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION (UPU)

Origin. The UPU was established in 1875, when the Universal Postal Convention adopted by the Postal Congress of Berne on 9 Oct. 1874 came into force. It has 189 member countries.

Functions. The aim of the UPU is to assure the organization and perfection of the various postal services, and to promote the development of international collaboration in the field. To this end, UPU members are united in a single postal territory for the reciprocal exchange of correspondence. A Specialized Agency of the UN since 1948, the UPU is governed by its Constitution, adopted in 1964 (Vienna), and subsequent protocol amendments: (1969, Tokyo; 1974, Lausanne; 1984, Hamburg; 1989, Washington; 1994, Seoul).

Organization. It is composed of a Universal Postal Congress which meets every 5 years; a 41-member Council of Administration, which meets annually and is responsible for supervising the affairs of the UPU between Congresses; a 40-member Postal Operations Council; and an International Bureau which functions as the permanent secretariat, responsible for strategic planning and programme budgeting. The budget for 1999 is 35·7m. Swiss francs.

Headquarters: Weltpoststrasse 4, 3000 Berne 15, Switzerland.

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION (WHO)

Origin. An International Conference convened by the UN Economic and Social Council to consider a single health organization resulted in the adoption on 22 July 1946 of the Constitution of the World Health Organization, which came into force on 7 April 1948.

Functions. WHO's objective, as stated in the first article of the Constitution, is 'the attainment by all peoples of the highest possible level of health'. As the directing and co-ordinating authority on international health, it establishes and maintains collaboration with the UN, specialized agencies, government health administrations, professional and other groups concerned with health. The Constitution also directs WHO to assist governments to strengthen their health services; to stimulate and advance work to eradicate diseases; to promote maternal and child health, mental health, medical research and the prevention of accidents; to improve standards of teaching and training in the health professions, and of nutrition, housing, sanitation, working conditions and other aspects of environmental health. The Organization is also empowered to propose conventions, agreements and regulations, and make recommendations about international health matters; to revise the international nomenclature of diseases, causes of death and public health practices; to develop, establish and promote international standards concerning foods, biological, pharmaceutical and similar substances.

Methods of work. Co-operation in country projects is undertaken only on the request of the government concerned, through the 6 regional offices of the Organization. Worldwide technical services are made available by headquarters. Expert committees, chosen from the 55 advisory panels of experts, meet to advise the Director-General on a given subject. Scientific groups and consultative meetings are called for similar purposes. To further the education of health personnel of all categories, seminars, technical conferences and training courses are organized, and advisors, consultants and lecturers are provided. WHO awards fellowships for study to nationals of member countries.

Activities. The main thrust of WHO's activities in recent years has been towards promoting national, regional and global strategies for the attainment of the main social target of the Member States for the coming years: 'Health for All by the Year 2000', or the attainment by all citizens of the world of a level of health that will permit them to lead a socially and economically productive life. Almost all countries indicated a high level of political commitment to this goal; and guiding principles for formulating corresponding strategies and plans of action were subsequently prepared.

The 50th World Health Assembly which met in 1997 adopted numerous resolutions on public health issues. The World Health Report, 1997: Conquering suffering, enriching humanity focused on 'non-communicable diseases'. It warned that the human and social costs of cancer, heart disease and other chronic diseases will rise unless confronted now.

The number of cancer cases is expected to double in most countries over the next 25 years. There will be a 33% increase in lung cancers in women and a 40% increase in prostate cancers in men in European Union countries alone by 2005. The incidence of other cancers is also rising rapidly, especially in developing countries. Heart disease and stroke, the leading causes of death in richer nations, will become more common in poorer countries. Globally, diabetes will more than double by 2025, with the number of people affected rising from about 135m. to 300m., and there is likely to be a huge rise in some mental disorders, especially dementias and particularly Alzheimer's disease. Already an estimated 29m. people suffer from dementia, and at least 400m. suffer from other mental disorders ranging from mood and personality disorders to neurological conditions like epilepsy, which affects some 40m. worldwide.

These projected increases are reported to be due to a combination of factors, not least population ageing and the rising prevalence of unhealthy lifestyles. Average life expectancy at birth globally reached 65 years in 1996. It is now well over 70 years in many countries and is approaching 80 years in some. There are today an estimated 380m. people over 65 years or more. By 2020 that number is expected to rise to more than 690m.

The report warns that many countries will increasingly come under the double burden of both infectious (the focus of the 1996 World Health Report) and noncommunicable diseases, and recommends that the 2 should be fought simultaneously on a global scale.

The 10 leading killer diseases in the world are: coronary heart disease, 7·2m. deaths annually; cancer (all sites), 6·2m.; cerebrovascular disease, 4·6m.; acute lower respiratory infection, 3·7m.; perinatal conditions, 3·6m.; tuberculosis, 2·9m.; chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, 2·9m.; diarrhoea and dysentery, 2·5m.; HIV/AIDS, 2·3m.; malaria, 2·1m. Tobacco-related deaths, primarily from lung cancer and circulatory disease, amount to 3m. a year. Smoking accounts for 1 in 7 cancer cases worldwide, and if the trend of increasing consumption in many countries continues, the epidemic has many more decades to run.

In response, WHO has called for an intensified and sustained global campaign to encourage healthy lifestyles and attack the main risk factors responsible for many of these diseases: unhealthy diet, inadequate physical activity, smoking and obesity.

Priorities for Action. These were summarized by the Report as follows:

1. Integration of disease-specific interventions in both physical and mental health into a comprehensive chronic disease control package that incorporates prevention, diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation, and improved training of health professionals.
2. Fuller application of existing cost-effective methods of disease detection and management, including improved screening, taking into account the genetic diversity of individuals.
3. A major intensified but sustained global campaign to encourage healthy lifestyles, with an emphasis on the health development of children and adolescents in relation to risk factors such as diet, exercise and smoking.
4. Healthy public policies, including sustainable funding, and legislation on pricing and taxation, in support of disease prevention programmes.
5. Acceleration of research into new drugs and vaccines, and into the genetic determinants of chronic diseases.
6. Alleviation of pain, reduction of suffering and provision of palliative care for those who cannot be cured.

Other issues reported on to the Assembly included tropical diseases, violence, the sale of medical products through the Internet, persistent organic pollutants and cloning in human reproduction.

Cloning in human reproduction. The 1997 Assembly adopted a resolution affirming that the use of cloning for the replication of human individuals is ethically unacceptable and contrary to human integrity and morality. In accepting the resolution delegates recognized the need to respect the freedom of ethically acceptable scientific activity and to ensure access to the benefits of its applications.

Joint UN Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS). In 1996 the Assembly reviewed implementation of the global strategy for the prevention and control of AIDS, and progress of the Joint UN Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), which became operational in 1996. The impact of the HIV/AIDS epidemic is seen to be expanding and intensifying, particularly in developing countries, and new resource mobilization mechanisms were called for to support countries in combating HIV/AIDS. The Assembly requested WHO to facilitate the incorporation of UNAIDS-specific policies, norms and strategies into the activities of WHO at global, regional and country levels, and to collaborate in all aspects of resource mobilization for HIV/AIDS activities.

World Health Day is observed on 7 April every year. The 1999 theme for World Health Day was Active Aging Makes the Difference; the theme for 1998 was Safe Motherhood. World No-Tobacco Day is held on 31 May each year; International Day Against Drug Abuse on 26 June; World AIDS Day on 1 Dec.

Organization. The principal organs of WHO are the World Health Assembly, the Executive Board and the Secretariat. Each of the 192 member states has the right to be represented at the Assembly, which meets annually in Geneva. The 32-member Executive Board is composed of technically qualified health experts designated by as many member states as elected by the Assembly. The Secretariat consists of technical and administrative staff headed by a Director-General, who is appointed for not more than two 5-year terms. Health activities in member countries are carried out through regional organizations which have been established in Africa (Brazzaville), South-East Asia (New Delhi), Europe (Copenhagen), Eastern Mediterranean (Alexandria) and Western Pacific (Manila). The Pan American Sanitary Bureau in Washington serves as the regional office of WHO for the Americas.

Finance. The global programme budget for 1998-99 adopted by the World Health Assembly in May 1997 was US$842·7m.

WORLD INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY ORGANIZATION (WIPO)

Origin. The roots of the World Intellectual Property Organization go back to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, adopted in 1883, and the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works (adopted 1886). The Convention establishing WIPO was signed at Stockholm in 1967 by 51 countries, and entered into force in April 1970. WIPO became a UN specialized agency in 1974.

Aims. To promote the protection of intellectual property throughout the world through co-operation among Member states; and to ensure administrative co-operation among the intellectual property Unions created by the Paris and Berne Conventions.

Intellectual property comprises two main branches: industrial property (inventions, trademarks and industrial designs) and copyright and neighbouring rights (literary, musical, artistic, photographic and audiovisual works).

Activities. There are three principal areas of activity: the progressive development of international intellectual property law; global protection systems and services; and co-operation for development. WIPO seeks to harmonize national intellectual property legislation and procedures; provide services for international applications for industrial property rights; exchange intellectual property information; provide training and legal and technical assistance to developing and other countries; facilitate the resolution of private intellectual property disputes; and marshal information technology as a tool for storing, accessing and using valuable intellectual property information.

New approaches to the progressive development of international intellectual property law. The development and application of international norms and standards is a fundamental part of WIPO's activities. It administers 21 treaties (15 on industrial property, 6 on copyright). With a view to making the system more responsive to change in the intellectual property domain, The Standing Committee of Member States has been formed to examine questions of substantive law or harmonization in WIPO's main fields of activity.

Global protection systems and services. The most successful and widely used treaty is the Patent Co-operation Treaty (PCT), which implements the concept of a single international patent application that is valid in many countries. Once such application is filed, an applicant has time to decide in which countries to pursue the application, thereby streamlining procedures and reducing costs. In 1997 the PCT system recorded 54,422 applications (the equivalent of nearly 3·5m. national applications for inventions). In March 1999, there were 98 countries party to the PCT.

The treaties dealing with the international registration of marks and industrial designs are, respectively, the Madrid Agreement (and its Protocol) and the Hague Agreement. In 1997, there were 19,070 registrations of marks under the Madrid System (equivalent to 220,000 national applications) and 6,223 deposits, renewals and prolongations of industrial designs under the Hague System.

Co-operation for development. On 1 Jan. 2000, many developing and other countries are due, as members of the World Trade Organization, to bring their national legislative and administrative structures into conformity with the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS). WIPO and WTO agreed on a joint technical co-operation initiative to provide assistance to developing countries to meet their obligations to comply with the TRIPS Agreement. This represents a major step in the international harmonization of the scope, standards and enforcement of Intellectual Property rights, and will require WIPO to provide the necessary technical assistance to the countries concerned.

The newly created WIPO Worldwide Academy co-ordinates training activities, originates new approaches and methods to expand the scope, impact and accessibility of WIPO programmes, and creates more effective training tailored for diverse-user groups.

Impact of digital technology on intellectual property law. WIPO takes a range of initiatives to tackle the implications of modern digital and communications technology for copyright and industrial property law, and in electronic commerce transcending national jurisdictions. The WIPO Arbitration and Mediation Centre was established in 1994 to provide online dispute-resolution services.

Organization. WIPO has 3 governing bodies: the General Assembly, the Conference and the Co-ordination Committee. Each treaty administered by WIPO has one or more Governing Bodies of its own, composed of representatives of the respective member states. In addition, the Paris and Berne Unions have Assemblies and Executive Committees. There are also a number of Permanent Committees, such as the Permanent Committee on Industrial Property Information. The executive head of WIPO is the Director-General, who is elected by the General Assembly. In Jan. 1999, WIPO had 171 member states, with an international staff of around 650 in 67 countries. The budget for 1998-99 was 383m. Swiss Francs, 85% of which is covered by revenue earned by the Organization's international registration and publication activities, with the other 15% coming primarily from contributions made by member states.

WORLD METEOROLOGICAL ORGANIZATION (WMO)

Origin. A 1947 (Washington) Conference of Directors of the International Meteorological Organization (est. 1873) adopted a Convention creating the World Meteorological Organization. The WMO Convention became effective on 23 March 1950 and WMO was formally established on 19 March 1951, when the first session of its Congress was convened in Paris. It was recognized as a Specialized Agency of the UN in 1951.

Functions. (1) To facilitate worldwide co-operation in the establishment of networks of stations for the making of meteorological observations as well as hydrological or other geophysical observations related to meteorology, and to promote the establishment and maintenance of meteorological centres charged with the provision of meteorological and related services; (2) to promote the establishment and maintenance of systems for the rapid exchange of meteorological and related information; (3) to promote standardization of meteorological and related observations and ensure the uniform publication of observations and statistics; (4) to further the application of meteorology to aviation, shipping, water problems, agriculture and other human activities; (5) to promote activities in operational hydrology and to further close co-operation between meteorological and hydrological services; and (6) to encourage research and training in meteorology and, as appropriate, to assist in co-ordinating the international aspects of such research and training.

Organization. WMO has 179 member states and 6 member territories responsible for the operation of their own meteorological services. Congress, which is its supreme body, meets every 4 years to approve policy, programme and budget, and adopt regulations. The Executive Council meets at least once a year to prepare studies and recommendations for Congress, and supervises the implementation of Congress resolutions and regulations. It has 36 members, comprising the President and 3 Vice-Presidents, as well as the Presidents of the 6 Regional Associations (Africa, Asia, South America, North and Central America, South-West Pacific, Europe), whose task is to co-ordinate meteorological activity within their regions, and 26 members elected in their personal capacity. There are 8 Technical Commissions composed of experts nominated by members of WMO, whose remit includes the following areas: basic systems, climatology, instruments and methods of observation, atmospheric sciences, aeronautical meteorology, agricultural meteorology, hydrology, marine meteorology. A permanent Secretariat is maintained in Geneva, and there are 3 regional offices for Africa, Asia and the Pacific, and the Americas. The budget for 1996-99 was 255m. Swiss francs.

OTHER ORGANS RELATED TO THE UN

INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY (IAEA)

Origin. An intergovernmental agency, the IAEA was established in 1957 under the aegis of the UN and reports annually to the General Assembly. Its Statute was approved on 26 Oct. 1956 at a conference at UN Headquarters.

Functions. To accelerate and enlarge the contribution of atomic energy to peace, health and prosperity throughout the world; and to ensure that assistance provided by it or at its request or under its supervision or control is not used in such a way as to further any military purpose. In addition, under the terms of the Non-Proliferation Treaty, the Treaty of Tlatelolco, the Treaty of Rarotonga, the Pelindaba Treaty and the Bangkok Treaty: to verify states' obligation to prevent diversion of nuclear fissionable material from peaceful uses to nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices.

Activities. The IAEA gives advice and technical assistance to developing countries on nuclear power development, nuclear safety, radioactive waste management, legal aspects of atomic energy use, and prospecting for and exploiting nuclear raw materials. In addition, it promotes the use of radiation and isotopes in agriculture, industry, medicine and hydrology through expert services, training courses and fellowships, grants of equipment and supplies, research contracts, scientific meetings and publications. During 1998 there were over 1,000 operational projects for technical co-operation. These activities involved 3,610 expert assignments while 1,718 persons received training abroad.

Safeguards are the technical means applied by the IAEA to verify that nuclear equipment or materials are used exclusively for peaceful purposes. IAEA safeguards cover more than 95% of civilian nuclear installations outside the 5 nuclear-weapon states (China, France, Russia, UK and USA). These 5 nuclear-weapon states have concluded agreements with the Agency which permit the application of IAEA safeguards to all their nuclear activities. Installations in non-nuclear-weapon states under safeguards or containing safeguarded material at 1 Jan. 1998 were 194 power reactors, 159 research reactors and critical assemblies, 13 conversion plants, 42 fuel fabrication plants, 6 reprocessing plants, 13 enrichment plants, and 359 other installations. In 1997, 2,499 inspections were conducted under the safeguard agreements at 931 nuclear installations in 63 non-nuclear-weapon states, and 3,038 samples of uranium and plutonium were analyzed. By Jan. 1998 a total of 221 safeguard agreements were in force with 137 states. A programme designed to prevent and combat illicit trafficking of nuclear weapons came into force in April 1996.

Organization. The Statute provides for an annual General Conference, a 35-member Board of Governors and a Secretariat headed by a Director-General. The IAEA had 128 member states in Nov. 1998.

There are also research laboratories in Austria and Monaco. The International Centre for Theoretical Physics was established in Trieste, in 1964, and is operated jointly by UNESCO and the IAEA.

INTERNATIONAL SEABED AUTHORITY (ISA)

The ISA is an autonomous international organization established under the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) of 1982 and the 1994 Agreement relating to the implementation of Part XI of the above Convention. It came into existence on 16 Nov. 1994 and became fully operational in June 1996.

Following its initial financing from the UN budget, its administrative expenses were to be met by assessed contributions from its members. Membership currently numbers 130 and the budget for 1998 was US$4·7m.

The Convention on the Law of the Sea covers almost all ocean space and its uses: navigation and overflight, resource exploration and exploitation, conservation and pollution, fishing and shipping. It entitles coastal states and inhabited islands to proclaim a 200-mile exclusive economic zone or continental shelf (which may be larger). Its 320 Articles and 9 Annexes constitute a guide for behaviour by states in the world's oceans, defining maritime zones, laying down rules for drawing sea boundaries, assigning legal rights, duties and responsibilities to States, and providing machinery for the settlement of disputes.

Organization. The Assembly, consisting of representatives from all member States, is the supreme organ. The 36-member Council, elected by the Assembly, includes the 4 largest importers or consumers of seabed minerals, 4 largest investors in seabed minerals, 4 major exporters of the same, 6 developing countries representing special interests and 18 members from all the geographical regions. The Council is the executive organ of the Authority. There are also two subsidiary bodies: the Legal and Technical Commission (22 experts) and the Finance Committee (15 experts). The Secretariat serves all the bodies of the Authority and under the 1994 Agreement is in charge of the Enterprise organ (until such time as it starts to operate independently of the Secretariat). The Enterprise is the organ through which the ISA carries out deep seabed activities directly or through joint ventures.

Activities. The ISA is currently finalizing rules and regulations governing the exploration of polymetallic nodules (the Mining Code). Upon adoption of the Mining Code, it will issue contracts to seven registered pioneer investors who have submitted plans of work for deep seabed exploration. These include: the government of India; the Institut Français de Recherche pour l'Exploitation de la Mer (IFREMER) and Association Française pour l'Etude de la Recherche des Nodules (AFERNOD); Deep Ocean Resources Development Co. Ltd (DORD), Japan; Yuzhmorgeologiya (Russian Federation); China Ocean Minerals Research and Development Association (COMRA); Interoceanmetal Joint Organization (IOM) Bulgaria, Cuba, Czech Republic, Poland, Russian Federation and Slovakia; and the government of the Republic of Korea.

In 1998 the ISA organized a workshop in China to develop guidelines for the assessment of possible environmental impacts arising from the exploration of polymetallic nodules. Two other workshops are envisaged: one on the technologies for exploration and exploitation and for the protection of the environment, in 1999; the second on the available knowledge on mineral resources other than polymetallic nodules, in 2000. The Authority is also developing a database on mineral resources of the seabed (POLYDAT).

The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea (ITLOS), founded in Oct. 1996 and based in Hamburg, adjudicates on disputes with respect to the ISA's activities. It comprises 21 judges elected by signatories from 5 world regional blocs: 5 each from Africa and Asia; 4 from Western Europe and North America; 4 from Latin America; and 3 from Eastern Europe. Judges serve for 9 years, but 7 of the inaugural judges will serve for 3 years only and another 7 will serve for 6. Disputing parties may also take their case to the International Court of Justice in The Hague, or to a temporary arbitration tribunal.

Headquarters: 14-20 Port Royal St., Kingston, Jamaica.
Secretary-General: Satya N. Nandan (Fiji Islands, elected 1996).

Publications. Handbook 1998; plus selected decisions and documents from the Authority's first three sessions.

WORLD TRADE ORGANIZATION (WTO)

Origin. The WTO is founded on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), which entered into force on 1 Jan. 1948. Its 23 original signatories were members of a Preparatory Committee appointed by the UN Economic and Social Council to draft the charter for a proposed International Trade Organization. Since this charter was never ratified, the General Agreement remained the only international instrument laying down trade rules. In Dec. 1993, there were 111 contracting parties, and a further 22 countries applying GATT rules on a de facto basis. On 15 April 1994, trade ministers of 123 countries signed the Final Act of the GATT Uruguay Round of negotiations at Marrakesh, bringing the WTO into being on 1 Jan. 1995. As of Nov. 1998, the WTO had 132 members.

The object of the Act is the liberalization of world trade. By it, member countries undertake to apply fair trade rules covering commodities, services and intellectual property. It provides for the lowering of tariffs on industrial goods and tropical products; the abolition of import duties on a variety of items; the progressive abolition of quotas on garments and textiles; the gradual reduction of trade-distorting subsidies and import barriers; and agreements on intellectual property and trade in services. Members are required to accept the results of the Uruguay Round talks in their entirety, and subscribe to all the WTO's agreements and disciplines. There are no enforcement procedures, however; decisions are ultimately reached by consensus.

Functions. The WTO is the legal and institutional foundation of the multilateral trading system. Surveillance of national trade policies is an important part of its work. At the centre of this is the Trade Policy Review Mechanism (TPRM), agreed by Ministers in 1994 (Article III of the Marrakesh Agreement). The TPRM was broadened in 1995 when the WTO came into being, to cover services trade and intellectual property. Its principal objective is to facilitate the smooth functioning of the multilateral trading system by enhancing the transparency of members' trade policies. All members are subject to review under the TPRM, which mandates that 4 members with the largest share of world trade (European Union, USA, Japan, Canada) be reviewed every 2 years; the next 16, every 4 years; and others every 6, with a longer period able to be fixed for the least-developed members. Also, in 1994, flexibility of up to 6 months was introduced into the review cycles, and in 1996, it was agreed that every second review of each of the first 4 trading entities should be an interim review. Reviews are conducted by the Trade Policy Review Body (TPRB) on the basis of a policy statement by the member under review and a report by economists in the Secretariat's Trade Policy Review Division.

The International Trade Centre (since 1968 operated jointly with the United Nations through UNCTAD) was established by GATT in 1964 to provide information and training on export markets and marketing techniques, and thereby to assist the trade of developing countries. In 1984 the Centre became an executing agency of the UN Development Programme, responsible for carrying out UNDP-financed projects related to trade promotion.

Organization. A 2-yearly ministerial meeting is the ultimate policy-making body. The 132-member General Council has some 30 subordinate councils and committees. The Dispute Settlement Body was set up to deal with disputes between countries. Appeals against its verdicts are heard by a 7-member Appellate Body. In 1997, it was composed of representatives of Egypt, European Union, Japan, New Zealand, Philippines, USA and Uruguay. Dispute panels may be set up ad hoc, and objectors to their ruling may appeal to the Appellate Body whose decision is virtually binding. Refusal to comply at this stage results in the application of trade sanctions. Each appeal is heard by 3 of the Appellate Body members. Before cases are heard by dispute panels, there is a 60-day consultation period. The previous GATT Secretariat now serves the WTO, which has no resources of its own other than its operating budget. The budget for 1997 was 116m. Swiss francs.

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION (NATO)

Origin and History. On 4 April 1949 the foreign ministers of Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, the UK and the USA signed the North Atlantic Treaty, establishing the North Atlantic Alliance. In 1952, Greece and Turkey acceded to the Treaty; in 1955 came the Federal Republic of Germany; in 1982 Spain; in 1999 the Czech Republic, Hungary and Poland, bringing the total to 19 member nations.

Functions. The Alliance was established as a defensive political and military alliance of independent countries in accordance with the terms of the UN Charter. It provides common security for its members through co-operation and consultation in political, military and economic as well as scientific and other non-military fields. The Alliance links the security of North America to that of Europe. NATO is the organization which enables the goals of the Alliance to be implemented.

Reform and Transformation of the Alliance. Following the demise of the Warsaw Pact in 1991, and the improved relations with Russia, NATO has undertaken a fundamental transformation of structures and policies to meet the new security challenges in Europe. Attention has focused in particular on the need to reinforce the political role of the Alliance.

An essential component of this transformation has been the establishment of close security links with the states of Central and Eastern Europe and those of the former USSR through the North Atlantic Co-operation Council (NACC), established in Dec. 1991 as an integral part of NATO's new Strategic Concept, which was adopted by heads of state and government at a summit in Rome earlier that year.

The Partnership for Peace Programme. The PfP builds on the momentum of co-operation created by the North Atlantic Co-operation Council. It was launched at the 1994 Brussels Summit and is expanding and intensifying political and military co-operation throughout Europe. Its core objectives are: the facilitation of transparency in national defence planning and budgeting processes; democratic control of defence forces; members' maintenance of capability and readiness to contribute to operations under the authority of the UN; development of co-operative military relations with NATO (joint planning, training and exercises) in order to strengthen participants' ability to undertake missions in the fields of peacekeeping, search and rescue, and humanitarian operations; development, over the longer term, of forces better able to operate with those of NATO member forces. NATO will consult with any active Partner which perceives a direct threat to its territorial integrity, political independence or security; and active participation in the Partnership is to play an important role in the process of NATO's expansion.

PfP has been a key factor in promoting the spirit of practical co-operation and commitment to the democratic principles which underpin the Alliance. One of the most tangible aspects of the PfP has been the holding of joint peacekeeping exercises. PfP exercises take place on a regular basis in both NATO and Partner countries. A large number of nationally sponsored exercises in the spirit of PfP have also been set up. In 1998 NATO had 27 PfP partners: Albania, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Hungary, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Lithuania, Macedonia, Malta, Moldova, Poland, Romania, Russia, Slovakia, Slovenia, Sweden, Turkmenistan, Ukraine and Uzbekiston. Many of these countries have accepted the Alliance's invitation to send liaison officers to permanent facilities at NATO Headquarters in Brussels and to the Partnership Co-ordination Cell in Mons, Belgium, where the Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE) is located.

Other key reforms undertaken include a reduced and more flexible force structure, development of increased co-ordination and co-operation with other international institutions (EU, UN, WEU), implementation of the concept of Combined Joint Task Forces (CJTFs), development of the European Security and Defence Identity (ESDI), and the agreement to make NATO's assets and experience available to support international peace enforcement operations.

In 1997, Allied Foreign and Defence Ministers launched a wide range of enhancement measures to PfP, which have strengthened it in political, security, military and institutional fields. The establishment of the Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council (EAPC) as a new co-operative mechanism replacing the former 44-member North Atlantic Co-operation Council (NACC) was itself a significant enhancement of the consultation element in PfP.

In Jan. 1994, NATO heads of state and government welcomed the Maastricht Treaty which allows for the development of a common European foreign policy to strengthen the European Pillar of Combined Joint Task Forces (CJTFs) and the separable capabilities of NATO and the WEU. At the meeting of NATO Foreign Ministers in Berlin in June 1996, agreement was reached on the implementation of CJTF policy. The agreement will facilitate NATO's new missions in crisis management and peace support operations by providing the flexibility needed to deploy at short notice forces specifically tailored to a particular contingency. The agreement also enables CJTFs to be made available for operations undertaken by the WEU, and represents a decisive and effective step towards the emergence of the new European Security and Defence Identity (ESDI) within the Alliance.

NATO's military capabilities and its adaptability to include forces of non-NATO countries were decisive factors in the Alliance's role in implementing the Bosnian Peace Agreement. Following the signing of the Agreement in Paris on 14 Dec. 1995, and on the basis of the UN Security Council's Resolution 1031, NATO commenced implementation of the military aspects of the accord through the NATO-led multinational force, the Implementation Force (IFOR), under an operation code-named Joint Endeavour. Its task was to help the parties implement the peace accord to which they had freely agreed and create a secure environment for civil and economic reconstruction. IFOR in Bosnia was the largest-ever military operation undertaken by the Alliance.

In March 1999, following the collapse of negotiations with President Milošević of Yugoslavia on a settlement to the Kosovan crisis, NATO forces launched a series of attacks on Serb military targets.

Enlargement. In Dec. 1994, NATO foreign ministers initiated a study on enlargement, which was followed by intensified individual dialogues with interested partner countries and by an analysis of the relevant factors associated with the admission of new members. The conclusion was that, subject to agreed criteria, the accession of new members would enhance security and extend stability throughout the Euro-Atlantic area.

On 27 May 1997, in Paris, NATO and Russia signed the Founding Act on Mutual Relations, Co-operation and Security, committing them to build together a lasting peace in the Euro-Atlantic area, and establishing a new forum for consultations and co-operation called the NATO-Russia Permanent Joint Council.

Two days later, in Sintra, Portugal, a NATO-Ukraine charter was drawn up and initialled, to be signed in Madrid the following July. At the same time, Foreign Ministers agreed to enhance their dialogue, begun in 1995, with 6 countries of the Mediterranean (Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Mauritania, Morocco, Tunisia), and a new committee, the Mediterranean Co-operation Group was established to take the Mediterranean Dialogue forward.

At the July 1997 meeting of Heads of State and Government in Madrid it was decided to invite 3 countries (Czech Republic, Hungary and Poland) to begin accession negotiations. On 16 Nov. 1997, 85·6% of Hungarians endorsed that initiative and voted in favour of joining NATO. By Dec. 1997, the 3 had signed accession agreements, and subsequently joined NATO early in 1999.

Organization. The North Atlantic Council (NAC) is the highest decision-making body and forum for consultation within the Atlantic Alliance. It is composed of Permanent Representatives of all 19 member countries meeting together at least once a week. The NAC also meets at higher levels involving foreign ministers or heads of state or government, but it has the same authority and powers of decision-making, and its decisions have the same status and validity at whatever level it meets. All decisions are taken on the basis of consensus, reflecting the collective will of all member governments. The NAC is the only body within the Atlantic Alliance which derives its authority explicitly from the North Atlantic Treaty. The NAC has responsibility under the Treaty for setting up subsidiary bodies. Committees and planning groups have since been created to support the work of the NAC or to assume responsibility in specific fields such as defence planning, nuclear planning and military matters.

The Military Committee is responsible for making recommendations to the Council and the Defence Planning Committee on military matters and for supplying guidance to the Allied Commanders. Composed of the Chiefs-of-Staff of member countries (Iceland, which has no military forces, may be represented by a civilian), the Committee is assisted by an International Military Staff. It meets at Chiefs-of-Staff level at least twice a year but remains in permanent session at the level of national military representatives. The area covered by the North Atlantic Treaty is divided into 2 commands: European and the Atlantic.

Finance. The co-ordination of military plans and defence expenditures rests on detailed and comparative analysis of the capabilities of member countries. In 1997, the cost of enlargement sparked a potentially damaging dispute between the USA and European members of the Alliance following Pentagon estimates that the cost would be in the region of US$27,000–35,000m. over a 12-year period. Later assessments, taking into account the fact that Britain, France and Germany are already engaged in improving and increasing the mobility of their rapid-reaction or crisis forces, reduced the estimate to current members to US$1,300m. over 10 years, with the cost of improved military capability in line with NATO standards in new member countries being the responsibility of new members.

Under the terms of the Partnership for Peace strategy, partner countries undertake to make available the necessary personnel, assets, facilities and capabilities to participate in the programme, and share the financial cost of any military exercises in which they participate.

BANK FOR INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENTS (BIS)

Origin. Founded in 1930 to settle the question of German First World War reparations, the BIS now functions as the central banks' bank. Its assets are owned by 45 central banks.

Aims. To promote co-operation between central banks; provide facilities for international financial operations, monetary and economic research; and act as agent or trustee in international financial settlements.

Finance. The authorized share capital of the Bank is 1,500m. gold francs, divided into 600,000 shares of equal nominal value (2,500 gold francs per share), and at the close of the financial year, in 1998, 517,165 shares were in issue. In 1998, it held US$104,900m. (about 7% of world foreign exchange reserves) on behalf of some 120 central banks and international financial institutions.

Organization and Membership. The 17-member Board of Directors consists of the governors of the central banks of the following member countries: Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Sweden, Switzerland, the UK and the USA. The Chairman of the Board acts as President.

3 Standing Committees operate within the BIS: the Basle Committee on Banking Supervision (the Basle Committee); Committee on the Global Financial System (CFGS); Committee on Payment and Settlement Systems (CPSS); and a number of specialized Groups have been set up such as the Group of Experts on Monetary and Economic Databank Questions, and the Co-ordinating Service for Central Banks and International Organizations.

Since Jan. 1998 the BIS has hosted the Secretariat of the International Association of Insurance Supervisors (IAIS). The Secretariat operates in full independence of the BIS but has its offices at the Bank.

The Joint Year 2000 Council, comprising members nominated by the Basle Committee, CPSS, IAIS and the International Organization of Securities Commissions (IOSCO) and supported by the CPSS Secretariat, is also located at the BIS. It was formed in April 1998 to maintain a high level of attention within the supervisory community and to support and encourage private-sector efforts with regard to the Year 2000 issue.

The Financial Stability Institute, a joint initiative of the BIS and the Basle Committee on Banking Supervision, was set up in 1998 in response to the need to strengthen financial systems worldwide. Interaction between the private sector, central banks and supervisory authorities will play an important role in the Institute's activities.

As at 31 March 1998, the Bank's balance sheet stood at 62·5bn. gold francs (US$124,800m.), with funds (capital and reserves) at 2·6bn. gold francs (US$5,200m.).

The BIS has had a long and close association with the Group of Ten (G10) and participates at G10 meetings.

ORGANISATION FOR ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT (OECD)

Origin. Founded in 1961 to replace the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation (OEEC), which was linked to the Marshall Plan and was established in 1948. The change of title marks the Organisation's altered status and functions: with the accession of Canada and USA as full members, it ceased to be a purely European body, and at the same time added development aid to the list of its priorities. The aims of the organization are to promote policies designed to achieve the highest sustainable economic growth and employment and a rising standard of living in Member countries, while maintaining financial stability, and thus to contribute to the development of the world economy; to contribute to sound economic expansion in Member as well as non-member countries in the process of economic development; and to contribute to the expansion of world trade on a multilateral, non-discriminatory basis in accordance with international obligations.

Members. Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Korea (Republic of), Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, UK and USA.

Activities. The OECD's main fields of programming in 1999 were: economic policy; statistics; energy; development co-operation; sustainable development; public management; international trade; financial, fiscal and enterprise affairs; food, agriculture and fisheries; territorial development; environment; science, technology and industry; education, employment, labour and social affairs.

Relations with non-member countries. The Centre for Co-operation with Non-Members (CCNM) was established in Jan. 1998 when the OECD's Centre for Co-operation with Economies in Transition (CCET) was merged with the Liaison and Co-ordination Unit (LCU). The CCNM, in combining the functions of these two entities, serves as the focal point for the development of policy dialogue between the OECD and non-member economies.

The CNNM manages multicountry thematic, regional and country programmes. The Emerging Market Economy Forum (EMEF), the Transition Economy Programme (TEP) and the Special Programme on financial instability in East Asia provide the framework for these programmes. The programmes are linked to the core generic work areas of the Organisation, such as trade and investment, taxation, labour market, social policies and the environment. Country and regional programmes, with specially focused dialogue and assistance, are in place for Bulgaria, China, Romania, Russia, the Slovak Republic, Slovenia, South America and the Baltic States.

Relations with developing countries. The OECD's Development Assistance Committee (DAC) is the principal body through which the Organisation deals with issues related to co-operation with developing countries and is one of the key forums in which the major bilateral donors work together to increase the effectiveness of their common effort to support sustainable development. Guided by the 'development partnership strategy' (OECD, 1996), the DAC's mission is to foster co-ordinated, integrated, effective and adequately financed international efforts in support of sustainable economic and social development. In addition, the Development Centre researches social and economic issues in the developing world and the Club du Sahel acts as a forum between the countries of West Africa and OECD assistance agencies.

Relations with other international organizations. Under a protocol signed at the same time as the OECD Convention, the European Commission generally takes part in the work of the OECD. EFTA may also send representatives to attend OECD meetings. Formal relations exist with a number of other international organizations, including the ILO, FAO, IMF, IBRD, UNCTAD, IAEA and the Council of Europe. A few non-governmental organizations have been granted consultative status enabling them to discuss subjects of common interest and be consulted in a particular field by the relevant OECD Committee or its officers, notably the Business and Industry Advisory Committee to the OECD (BIAC) and the Trade Union Advisory Committee (TUAC).

Organization. The governing body of OECD is the Council, on which each member country is represented. It meets from time to time (usually once a year) at the level of government ministers, with the chairmanship at ministerial level being rotated among member governments. The Council also meets regularly at official level, when it comprises the Secretary-General (chairman) and the Permanent Representatives to OECD (ambassadors who head resident diplomatic missions). It is responsible for all questions of general policy and may establish subsidiary bodies as required to achieve the aims of the organization. Decisions and recommendations of the Council are adopted by agreement of all its members.

The Council is assisted by an Executive Committee which prepares its work and is also called upon to carry out specific tasks where necessary. Apart from its regular meetings, the Committee meets occasionally in special sessions attended by senior governments officials. The greater part of the work of the OECD is prepared and carried out by about 200 specialized bodies (Committees, Working Parties, etc). All members are normally represented on these bodies, except those of a restricted nature. Delegates are usually officials coming either from the capitals of member states or from the Permanent Delegations to the OECD. They are serviced by an International Secretariat headed by the OECD Secretary-General. Funding is by contributions from member states, based on a formula related to their size and economy.

3 other bodies are part of the OECD system: the International Energy Agency (IEA), the Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA) and the Centre for Educational Research and Innovation (CERI).

A CAPITAL FOR EUROPE

Barry Turner

Fast forward twenty, maybe thirty years. The European Union has progressed from a hands-off association of neighbouring countries to a fully-fledged United States of Europe. The system of government is a mélange of the US and German models with the old nation states retaining control over essentially regional matters including all the social services. A central administration, the real power centre, watched over by the European Parliament is based in .... Well, where is it based?

If the Europhile's dream is realised (and even the sceptics acknowledge it as an odds-on possibility) it will need a metropolitan focus. Current wisdom would nominate Brussels. Nearly all that is presently essential to the working of the European Union is already based there. But in its European guise, the city is essentially a weak compromise between German and French aspirations. Notwithstanding the superb quality of its restaurants (better than Paris, say the gourmets) Brussels still has a provincial feel about it. Then, looking ahead to one Europe, Brussels is likely to lose status as Belgium splits into its French and Flemish sectors, each having its own regional government within the European framework.

Strasbourg is even less likely to measure up to its European pretensions. With their triumph over the Commission, MEPs are getting a taste for genuine parliamentary democracy. But once we have a European assembly in more than name, this charming yet unexciting border city will fade from the political scene.

The culmination of European unity will need a capital with a recognisable face. Paris has many of the essential qualities including a universally respected cultural tradition. But Paris is too French to be properly European. The enduring attractions of the city cannot disguise an underlying hostility towards outsiders. Parisians are keen Europeans as long as they call the shots.

London? A world class city without question and one that is not too full of self regard to resist change. But London is on the edge of Europe. So too, it may be argued, is Washington on the edge of the United States. The difference, of course, is that Washington set the pace for the American Union while London has consistently dragged its feet over Europe. There is no reason to doubt the Blair government's eagerness to re-establish Britain's European credentials. Even so, the weight of post-war antipathy towards Europe puts London out of the running.

Others are disqualified by a tradition of erratic politics (Rome, Athens), relative inexperience in democratic management (Madrid, Lisbon) or a reluctance to take on the job (Stockholm, Copenhagen, The Hague). Dublin might appeal (Ireland is, after all, a notable beneficiary of EU largesse) but not while Belfast remains an aggravation.

That leaves Berlin. Those of a certain age will be shocked at the idea. Berlin as the capital of Europe? Isn't that why two great wars were fought, to prevent such a thing happening? But the days of the Kaiser and the Fuhrer are long past. Post-1945 Germany is Europe's success story. The democracy created by the Federal Republic proved itself as the begetter of a succession of enlightened leaders. Social welfare went hand in hand with economic prosperity.

The current fashion is to belie Germany as a lumbering giant in drastic need of rejuvenation. But this is the same Germany that absorbed the costs of reunification. It was not achieved without pain. It came as no surprise to find that the Communists had left behind them not so much a workers' paradise as a workers' nightmare. But the miracle is that reunification was achieved at all.

So what about Berlin?

Its geographical advantage is undeniable. If not quite at the centre of the Union it soon will be as Hungary, Poland and other countries to the East sign up for membership. Berlin is a cosmopolitan city, well accustomed to coping with English, the only language to qualify as the lingua franca of Europe. The link with the US is important here. Britain prides herself on the 'special relationship' but Germany's handshake across the Atlantic is every bit as firm and has been so ever since the late forties when America decided that free market Germany was better able than socialist Britain to lead the economic revival of Europe. Also, of course, Berlin has a symbolic significance for Americans as a beacon of democracy in the dark days of the Cold War.

A CAPITAL FOR EUROPE

High school students of middle America may not know much of Hitler (or Churchill for that matter) but they are able to tell you about the Berlin airlift of 1948-49 when some 280,000 flights carried 2 million tons of supplies to the beleaguered western sector. They also know that President Kennedy promised to stand by the city come what may, a pledge that was reinforced by the ugly reality of the Berlin Wall. Such collective memories, let it not be forgotten, are the stuff of practical diplomacy.

Berlin is a new city built on old foundations. First impressions are of glass and concrete, generously landscaped. (Berlin sprawls. Spread over 39 square miles, its area is six times that of Paris.) Starting with a pile of rubble in 1945, Berliners acquired a passion for building and rebuilding. They are still at it today, their vigour renewed by the need to wipe clean the Communist desecration of much of the east side and to make ready for the imminent restoration of the city as host to the government of a united Germany.

And that is the excitement of Berlin. It is taking shape before your eyes. There may be arguments as to the quality of the architecture (traditional it is not) and the planners' scale of priorities but for the visitor there is the ever present sensation of history in the making.

Reconstruction has opened the way to new ideas, maybe even a return to the glory days of the 1920s when Berlin was synonymous with modernism. The arts thrive in old East Berlin north of Unter den Linden where the cafes and bars are crowded with young people who feel themselves part of a renaissance. Potsdamer Platz, once the hub of Berlin, later, with the Wall slicing its centre, the symbol of divided Germany, now regeneration made manifest in a frenzy of construction, has attracted the world's leading architects to match their powers of invention.

Recent history may count against Berlin. The discovery by construction workers of a bunker used by Joseph Goebbels prompted the acid comment that the trouble with burying the past is that every now and then someone comes along and digs it up again. It came as a shock to Berliners that their bid to host the 2000 Olympics was sunk by the weighty image of 1936 when the Games were turned into an instrument of Nazi propaganda.

But the city should not be judged purely by association. In 1932, when the Nazis became the biggest single party in the Reichstag, Berlin was alone in resisting the trend. Three out of four Berliners voted against Hitler. Their traditional and deep-rooted irreverence for authority—especially when dressed up in uniform—also explains why Bismark disliked the place so intensely, refusing ever to buy a home there.

Much will depend on how Berlin adapts to its role as capital of a united Germany. The costs of updating the infrastructure have been huge. After reunification it was found that the sewage system on the east side was near collapse, that electricity supply was dependent on seventy-year-old equipment and that 500 miles of gas piping needed to be replaced. There was only one telephone for every ten people. Closing down uneconomic industries has pushed up the unemployment rate while borrowing to support and retrain the jobless has inflated the budget deficit.

But in the context of Berlin's eventful history, no crisis is beyond solution. Having measured up to its latest challenge, Berlin should be better equipped than any other city to take on the European mantle.

Siren voices will warn of Germany hegemony. And, yes, it could happen. Germany is and will remain by far the largest economy in the Union. But no one now seriously suggests that Germany is a military threat to the rest of Europe. Or, that in the progress towards union, Germany has not been sensitive to the interests of other member states. Partnership has proved its worth, as even Britain has come to recognise. The question is, can the spirit of partnership be maintained by this and the next generation. The answer will determine whether Berlin becomes the capital of Europe on German or on European terms.

EUROPEAN UNION (EU)

Origin. The Union is founded on the existing European communities set up by the Treaties of Paris (1951) and Rome (1957), supplemented by revisions, the Single European Act in 1986, the Maastricht Treaty on European Union in 1992, and the draft Treaty of Amsterdam in 1997.

Members (15). As at March 1999: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Republic of Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and the UK.

History. On 19 Sept. 1946, in Zürich, Winston Churchill called for a 'united states of Europe'. Two years later, the Congress of Europe (the meeting in The Hague of nearly 1,000 Europeans from 26 countries calling for a united Europe) resulted in the birth in 1949 of the Council of Europe, a European assembly of nations whose aim (Art. 1 of the Statute) was: 'to achieve a greater unity between its members for the purpose of safeguarding and realizing the ideals and principles which are their common heritage'.

On 18 April 1951, subsequent to a proposal by the French foreign minister Robert Schuman (Schuman Declaration), Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Luxembourg and the Netherlands signed the Treaty of Paris establishing the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC). The treaty provided for the pooling of coal and steel production and was regarded as a first step towards a united Europe. Encouraged by the success of the ECSC, plans were laid down for the establishment of 2 more communities. The European Economic Community (EEC) and the European Atomic Energy Community (EAEC or Euratom) were subsequently created under separate treaties signed in Rome on 25 March 1957. The treaties provided for the establishment by stages of a common market with a customs union at its core, the approximation of economic policies, and the promotion of growth in the nuclear industries for peaceful purposes.

To this end, Euratom was awarded monopoly powers of acquisition of fissile materials for civil purposes EUROPEAN UNION (EU) (it is not concerned with the military uses of nuclear power). Subsequently, the various powers of the 3 communities (ECSC, EAEC, EEC, sometimes referred to collectively as the European Community or EC) were transferred by a treaty signed in Brussels in 1965 to a single Council and single Commission of the European Communities, today the core of the EU. The Commission is advised on matters relating to EAEC by a Scientific and Technical Committee.

Enlargement. On 30 June 1970, membership negotiations began between the European Community and the UK, Denmark, Ireland and Norway. On 22 Jan. 1972, all 4 countries signed a Treaty of Accession, and with the exception of Norway which later rejected membership in a referendum in Nov. that year, the UK, Denmark and Ireland became full members on 1 Jan. 1973 (though Greenland exercised its autonomy under the Danish Crown to secede in 1985). Greece joined on 1 Jan. 1981; Spain and Portugal on 1 Jan. 1986. The former German Democratic Republic entered into full membership on reunification with Federal Germany in Oct. 1990, and following referendums in favour, Austria, Finland and Sweden became members on 1 Jan. 1995. In a referendum in Nov. 1994, Norway again rejected membership.

Single European Act. The enlarging of the Community resulted in renewed efforts to promote European integration, culminating in the signing in Dec. 1985 of the Single European Act. The SEA represented the first major revision of the Treaties of Rome and provided for greater involvement of the European Parliament in the decision-making process.

Maastricht Treaty on European Union. Further amendments were agreed at the Maastricht Summit of Dec. 1991 in the draft Treaty on European Union whereby moves to a common currency were agreed subject to specific conditions (including an opt-out clause for the UK) and the social dimension was recognized in a protocol (not applicable to the UK) allowing member states to use EC institutions for this purpose. Ratification by member states of the Maastricht Treaty proved unexpectedly controversial. In June 1992, the Danish electorate in a referendum voted against it, then reversed the decision in a second referendum in May 1993. Ratification was finally completed during 1993, with the UK ratifying on 2 Aug., and the European Union (EU) officially came into being on 1 Nov. that year.

Further Enlargement. On 16 July 1997, Jacques Santer presented Agenda 2000, the European Commission's detailed strategy for consolidating the Union through enlargement as far eastwards as Ukraine, Belarus and Moldova. It recommended the early start of accession negotiations with Hungary, Poland, Estonia, the Czech Republic and Slovenia under the provision of Article 0 of the Maastricht Treaty whereby 'any European State may apply to become a member of the Union' (subject to the Copenhagen Criteria set by the European Council at its summit in 1993). The first accession could be as early as 2001 though Agenda 2000 assumes 2003 to be more likely.

Meanwhile, other central and eastern European applicants (Bulgaria, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania and Slovakia) enjoy associate agreements to help speed up their preparations for membership. Applications to join the EU have been received by Cyprus (already favourably received), Turkey, Malta and Switzerland; and the Prince of Liechtenstein has made it known that he wishes his government to apply.

Objectives. The ultimate goal of the EU is 'an ever closer union among the peoples of Europe, in which decisions are taken as closely as possible to the citizen'. Priorities include the implementation of the Treaty of Amsterdam (new rights for citizens, freedom of movement, strengthening the institutions of the EU, employment); economic and monetary union; further expansion of the scope of the Communities; implementation of a common foreign and security policy; and development in the fields of justice and home affairs.

Structure. The institutional arrangements of the EU provide for an independent policy-making executive with powers of proposal (European Commission), various consultative and advisory bodies, and a decision-making body drawn from the Governments (Council of Ministers).

Website: http://www.europa.eu.int

1. European Commission consists of 20 members appointed by the member states (one from each small country, two from each big one) to serve for 5 years. The President of the Commission is selected by a consensus of prime ministers and serves a 5-year term. In addition to its power of proposal, the Commission acts as the EU executive body and as guardian of the Treaties. In this it has the right of initiative (putting proposals to the Council of Ministers for action) and of execution (once the Council has decided); and it can take the other institutions or individual countries before the European Court of Justice should any of these renege upon its responsibilities. Decisions on legislative proposals made by the Commission are taken in the Council of the European Union. Members of the Commission swear an oath of independence, distancing themselves from partisan influence from any source. The Commission operates through 23 Directorates-General.

The Commission first took office on 23 Jan. 1995. Members, their nationality and political affiliation (CD, Christian-Democrat; Cons, Conservative; Ind Lib, Independent Liberal; Lab, Labour; Lib, Liberal; R, Radical; Ri, Rightist; S, Socialist; SD, Social-Democrat) in Feb. 1999 (prior to the entire Commission resigning in March) were as follows.

President: Jacques Santer (Luxembourg, CD; app. 1994), to be succeeded by Romano Prodi (Italy); responsible for monetary and institutional affairs, foreign policy and common security.

Having resigned in March 1999, in the wake of a Parliamentary motion of censure, the following Commissioners acted in a caretaker capacity:

Vice-president: Sir Leon Brittan (UK, Cons) Trade policy and relations with industrialized countries of America and the Pacific Zone.

Vice-president: Manuel Marin (Spain, S) Relations with the Southern Mediterranean, Near East, Latin America and part of Asia.

Agriculture and rural development: Franz Fischler (Austria, Cons).

Budget, personnel and administration: Erkki Liikanen (Finland, S).

Competition: Karel van Miert (Belgium, S).

Consumers, fisheries and humanitarian aid: Emma Bonino (Italy, R).

Environment and nuclear safety, and Cohesion Fund: Ritt Bjerregaard (Denmark, S).

Domestic market, financial services and taxation: Mario Monti (Italy, Ind Lib).

Economic, financial and monetary affairs: Yves Thibault de Silguy (France, Ri).

Energy and primary materials: Christos Papoutsis (Greece, S).

External relations with central and eastern Europe, the CIS and other European countries; common foreign security policy and human rights (with the President): Hans van den Broek (Netherlands, CD).

Immigration, internal and judicial affairs: Anita Gradin (Sweden, S).

Industrial affairs, information and telecommunications: Martin Bangemann (Germany, Lib).

Institutional questions and relations with the European Parliament: Marcelino Oreja (Spain, CD).

Regional policies and funding: Monika Wulf-Mathies (Germany, SD).

Relations with South Africa and ACP Countries: João de Deus Pinheiro (Portugal, Lib).

Science, research and development, education and training: Edith Cresson (France, S).

Social affairs and employment: Pádraig Flynn (Ireland, Cons).

Transport and the Cohesion Fund: Neil Kinnock (UK, Lab).

Official languages. Danish, Dutch, English, Finnish, French, German, Greek, Italian, Portuguese, Spanish and Swedish.

Headquarters: 200 rue de la Loi, B-1049 Brussels, Belgium.
Secretary-General: David Williamson.

2. The European Council. Since 1974, Heads of State or Government meet at least twice a year (in the capital of the member state currently exercising the presidency of the Council of European Union) in the form of the European Council or European Summit as it is commonly known. Its membership includes the President of the European Commission, and the President of the European Parliament is invited to make a presentation at the opening session. The European Council has become an increasingly important element of the Union, setting priorities, giving political direction, providing the impetus for its development and resolving contentious issues that prove too difficult for the Council of the European Union. It has become directly responsible for common policies within the fields of foreign and security policy, justice and home affairs. Though there was no provision made for its existence in the original Treaty of Rome, its position was later acknowledged and formalized in the Single European Act.

3. Council of the European Union (Council of Ministers) Consists of foreign ministers from the 15 national governments and is the only institution which directly represents the member states' national interests. It is the Union's principal decision-making body. Here, members legislate for the Union, set its political objectives, co-ordinate their national policies and resolve differences between themselves and other institutions. The presidency rotates every 6 months. Meetings are held in Brussels, except in April, June and Oct. when all meetings are in Luxembourg. In 1994-95, the Council held around 100 formal ministerial sessions during which it adopted some 300 regulations, 50 directives and 160 decisions.

Decisions are taken either by qualified majority vote or by unanimity. Since the adoption of the Single European Act, an increasing number of decisions are by majority vote, though some areas such as taxation are reserved to unanimity. 27 votes are needed to veto a decision, and member states carry the following vote weightings: France, Germany, Italy and the UK, 10; Spain, 8; Belgium, Greece, the Netherlands and Portugal, 5; Austria and Sweden, 4; Denmark, Finland and the Republic of Ireland, 3; Luxembourg, 2. Each member state has a national delegation in Brussels known as the Permanent Representation, headed by Permanent Representatives, senior diplomats whose committee (Coreper) prepares ministerial sessions. Coreper meets weekly and its main task is to ensure that only the most difficult and sensitive issues are dealt with at ministerial level. Coreper is also the point of reference for many of the Council's working groups of national experts. Specialist Councils such as the Agriculture Council meet to discuss matters related to individual policies.

The Secretariat provides the practical infrastructure of the Council at all levels.

Legislation. The Community's legislative process starts with a proposal from the Commission (either at the suggestion of its services or in pursuit of its declared political aims) to the Council. The Council generally seeks the views of the European Parliament on the proposal, and the Parliament adopts a formal Opinion after consideration of the matter by its specialist Committees. The Council may also (and in some cases is obliged to) consult the Economic and Social Committee which similarly delivers an opinion. When these opinions have been received, the Council will decide. Most decisions are taken on a majority basis, but will take account of reservations expressed by individual member states. The text eventually approved may differ substantially from the original Commission proposal.

Provisions of the Treaties and secondary legislation may be either directly applicable in Member States or only applicable after Member States have enacted their own implementing legislation. Community law, adopted by the Council (or by Parliament and the Council in the framework of the co-decision procedure) may take the following forms: (1) Regulations, which are of general application and binding in their entirety and directly applicable in all member states; (2) Directives, which are binding upon each Member State as to the result to be achieved within a given time, but leave the national authority the choice of form and method of achieving this result; and (3) Decisions, which are binding in their entirety on their addressees. In addition the Council and Commission can issue recommendations and opinions which have no binding force.

Transparency. The Council is making strong efforts to make more of its work accessible to its citizens. Votes on legislative matters, as well as the explanations of these votes, are now automatically made public. Other attempts to improve transparency include briefings for journalists and the provision of background notes on subjects under discussion. Europe Day is celebrated on 9 May each year.

Headquarters: 170 rue de la Loi, B-1048 Brussels, Belgium.
Secretary-General: Jürgen Trumpf.

4. European Parliament Consists of 626 members, 542 elected by proportional representation, 84 (British) by single-seat constituencies for 5-year terms. 567 members were elected from 12 member states on 9 and 12 June 1994.

All EU citizens may stand or vote in their adoptive country of residence. Germany returned 99 members, France, Italy and the UK 87 each, Spain 64, the Netherlands 31, Belgium and Portugal 25, Greece 24, Denmark 16, Ireland 15 and Luxembourg 6. Seats allocated to countries which joined in Jan. 1995, and where elections were subsequently held, were: Sweden (1995) 22, Austria 21 and Finland 16 (1996).

Political groupings. Party of European Socialists (PES) 215 seats; European People's Party (EPP) 182; Union for Europe (UE) 56; European Liberal Democratic and Reformist Group (ELDR) 43; European Unitary Left (EUL) 33; Greens (GR) 27; European Radical Alliance (ERA) 20; Independents (I) 32; Europe of the National States (ENS) 18.

The Parliament has a right to be consulted on a wide range of legislative proposals and forms one arm of the Community's Budgetary Authority. Under the Single European Act, it gained greater authority in legislation through the 'concertation' procedure under which it can reject certain Council drafts in a second reading procedure. Under the Maastricht Treaty, it gained the right of 'co-decision' on legislation with the Council of Ministers on a restricted range of domestic matters. The President of the European Council must report to the Parliament on progress in the development of foreign and security policy. It also plays an important role in appointing the President and members of the Commission. It can hold individual commissioners to account and can pass a motion of censure on the entire Commission, a prospect that was realized in March 1999 when the Commission, including the President, Jacques Santer, was forced to resign following an investigation into mismanagement and corruption. Parliament's seat is in Strasbourg where the 1-week plenary sessions are held each month. In the Chamber, members sit in political groups, not as national delegations. All the activities of the Parliament and its bodies are the responsibility of the Bureau, consisting of the President and 14 Vice-Presidents elected for a two-and-a-half year period. The Conference of Presidents is responsible for organizing Parliament's work and drawing up the agenda for plenary sessions.

Parliamentary committees generally meet for 2 weeks a month in Brussels for ease of contact with the Commission and Council of Ministers.

Location: Brussels, but meets at least once a month in Strasbourg.
President: José Gil-Robles Gil-Delgado (Spain; EPP).

5. The Court of Justice of the European Communities composed of 13 judges and 6 advocates-general is responsible for the adjudication of disputes arising out of the application of the treaties, and its findings are enforceable in all member countries. A Court of First Instance (est. 1989) handles certain categories of cases, including cases arising under the competition rules of the EC and cases brought by Community officials.

Address: Palais de la Cour de Justice, Kirchberg, Luxembourg.
President: Gil Carlos Rodríguez Iglesias (Spain).

6. The Court of Auditors of the European Communities was established by a treaty of 22 July 1975 which took effect on 1 June 1977. It consists of 12 members and was raised to the status of a full EU institution by the 1993 Maastricht Treaty. It audits all income and current and past expenditure of the EU.

Address: 12, rue Alcide de Gasperi, L-1615 Luxembourg.
President: Bernhard Friedmann (Germany).

Major Policy Areas. The major policy areas of the EU were laid down in the Treaty of Rome of 25 March 1957 which guaranteed certain rights to the citizens of all member states, including the outlawing of economic discrimination by nationality, and equal pay for equal work as between men and women.

The single internal market. The single internal market represents the core of the process of economic integration and is characterized by the removal of obstacles to the 4 fundamental freedoms of movement for persons, goods and capital. Under the Treaty, individuals or companies from 1 Member State may establish themselves in another country (for the purposes of economic activity) or sell goods or services there on the same basis as nationals of that country. With a few exceptions, restrictions on the movement of capital have also been ended. Under the Single European Act the member states bound themselves to achieve the suppression of all barriers to free movement of persons, goods and services by 31 Dec. 1992.

The Schengen Accord abolished border controls on persons and goods between those EU and non-EU states which have signed it. It came into effect on 26 March 1995 and was signed by Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

Economic and Monetary Union. The establishment of the single market provided for the next phase of integration: economic and monetary union. The European Monetary System (EMS) was founded in March 1979 to control inflation, protect European trade from international disturbances and ultimately promote convergence between the European economies. At its heart was the Exchange Rate Mechanism (ERM). The ERM is run by the finance ministries and central banks of the EU countries on a day-to-day basis; monthly reviews are carried out by the EU Monetary Committee (finance ministries) and the EU Committee of Central Bankers. Greece and Sweden are not in the ERM; the UK suspended its membership on 17 Sept. 1992. In Jan. 1995, Austria joined the ERM. Finland followed in 1996, and in Nov. that year the Italian lira, which had been temporarily suspended, was re-admitted.

Members are obliged to restrict the fluctuations in the value of their currencies to a variation 'band', of 15% (2·25% for Germany and the Netherlands) higher or lower than a central rate established by comparing all the currencies in the ERM and the European Currency Unit, the ecu. If a currency reaches its top or bottom limits, central banks are obliged to buy or sell currency on the foreign exchanges. Further stabilization measures would involve adjustment of national interest rates, central bank borrowing from other central banks or withdrawal of reserves from the European Monetary Co-operation Fund. The adjustment of last resort is re- or devaluation. In July 1993, following intensive currency speculation on European financial markets, forcing the weaker currencies to the edge of their permitted bands, the ERM almost collapsed. In response the fluctuation margins were widened. The ecu's value in national currencies is calculated and published daily.

Under the Maastricht Treaty the second stage in economic and monetary union began with the establishment of the European Monetary Institute (see below) in order to prepare for the implementation of a single monetary policy and single currency. A future European Central Bank (ECB) will take over the tasks of the EMI once a single policy and currency are in place.

European Monetary Union (EMU). The single European currency with 11 member states came into operation in Jan. 1999 although it will be another 2 years before the currency is in general circulation. The euro-zone is the world's second largest economy after the USA in terms of output and the largest in terms of trade. EMU currency will consist of the euro of 100 cents, with coins of 1, 2, 5, 10, 20 and 50 cents and 1 and 2 euros and notes of 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 200 and 500 euros. From 1 July 2002 it will be the only legal currency in EMU countries. EU member countries not in EMU will select a central rate for their currency in consultation with members of the euro bloc and the European Central Bank. The rate is set according to an assessment of each country's chances of joining the euro zone.

An agreement on the legal status of the euro and currency discipline, the Stability and Growth Pact, was reached by all member states at the Dublin summit on 13 Dec. 1996. Financial penalties will be applied to member states running a GDP deficit (negative growth) of up to 0·75%. If GDP falls between 0·75% and 2%, EU finance ministers will have discretion as to whether to apply penalties. Members running an excessive deficit will be automatically exempt from penalties in the event of a natural disaster or if the fall in GDP is at least 2% over 1 year.

In economic and financial terms, the euro-11 countries are a close match for the USA. Their combined GDP in 1997 was US$6·5 trillion, compared with America's $6·1 trillion. Their share of international trade outside the euro area (19%) is a shade larger than that of the USA (17%). Taken together, bond markets in euro countries are somewhat smaller than America's, although Europe's equity markets are much smaller than Wall Street.

The dollar's role in international finance is, however, far bigger. It is the main currency used for the world's trade and investment. Roughly half of world trade is invoiced in dollars. Almost all commodities are priced in dollars. According to a recent survey by the Bank for International Settlements, the dollar features in at least one side of 87% of all foreign-exchange transactions, the D-mark in 30%, and other euro-member currencies in only 24%.'

Environment. The Single European Act gave environmental policy its place with the view of making the protection of the environment an integral part of economic and social policies. Community policy aims at preventing pollution (the Prevention Principle), rectifying pollution at source, and imposing the costs of prevention or rectification upon the polluters themselves (the Polluter Pays Principle). The European Environment Agency (see below) was established to ensure that policy was based on reliable scientific data.

The Common Agricultural Policy (CAP). The objectives set out in the Treaty are to increase agricultural productivity, to ensure a fair standard of living for the agricultural community, to stabilize markets, to assure supplies, and to ensure reasonable consumer prices. In Dec. 1960 the Council laid down the fundamental principles on which the CAP is based: a single market, which calls for common prices, stable currency parities and the harmonizing of health and veterinary legislation; Community preference, which protects the single Community market from imports; common financing, through the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund (EAGGF), which seeks to improve agriculture through its Guidance section, and to stabilize markets against world price fluctuations through market intervention, with levies and refunds on exports. At present, common market organizations cover over 95% of EU agricultural production.

Following the disappearance of stable currency parities, artificial currency levels have been applied in the CAP. This factor, together with over-production due to high producer prices, meant that the CAP consumed about two-thirds of the Communities' budget. It was finally agreed in May 1992 to reform CAP and lessen over-production by reducing the price supports to farmers by 29% for cereals, 15% for beef and 5% for dairy products. In June 1995, the guaranteed intervention price for beef was decreased by 5%. In July 1996, agriculture ministers agreed a reduction in the set-aside rate for cereals from 10% to 5%. Fruit and vegetable production subsidies were fixed at no more than 4% of the value of total marketed production, rising to 4·5% in 1999. Compensatory grants are made available to farmers who remove land from production or take early retirement. The CAP reform aims in the long term to make the agricultural sector more responsive to the level of supply and demand. Farm spending currently absorbs 50% of the EU budget but accounts for only 1·8% of Europe's GDP.

The Beef Crisis. In July 1994 Community ministers adopted measures to prevent the spread of bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) by imposing strict controls on carcass beef trade. In March 1996, owing to increased fears about possible links between BSE and Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease (CJD) and a collapse in consumer confidence in the beef market, the Commission accepted that member countries could unilaterally stop imports of beef on health grounds. By 22 March, 12 EU countries had taken the step of banning UK beef, and on 27 March the Commission agreed a ban on exports from the UK of live cattle, beef and beef products. The UK responded to the crisis with a programme of selective slaughter to eradicate BSE from the national herd, then later repudiated the agreement and applied for the ban to be suspended. This was duly rejected by the European Court of Justice in July 1996 and an additional cull on the UK herd was requested. In Aug. 1996, the Beef Assurance Scheme for specialist grass reared beef herds which had not been affected by BSE or come into contact with meat and bonemeal was introduced. A report criticizing the UK handling of the BSE problem was published by the European Temporary Committee of Inquiry. The ban on beef exports from Northern Ireland was lifted on 1 June 1998. On 25 Nov. 1998, the European Commission adopted a proposal for a Date Based Export Scheme, for the export of deboned beef and beef products from the UK. The Commission is to undertake an inspection of the UK's procedures for implementing the Scheme and, if satisfied, they will set a date for exports to begin.

Customs Union and External Trade Relations. Goods or Services originating in one Member State have free circulation within the EU, which implies common arrangements for trade with the rest of the world. Member States can no longer make bilateral trade agreements with third countries; this power has been ceded to the EU. The Customs Union was achieved in July 1968.

In Oct. 1991 a treaty forming the European Economic Area (EEA) was approved by the member states of the then EC and European Free Trade Association (EFTA). Association agreements which could lead to accession or customs union have been made with Cyprus, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Israel, Malta, Morocco and Turkey. The customs union with Turkey came into force on 1 Jan. 1996. Commercial, industrial, technical and financial aid agreements have been made with Algeria, Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Morocco, Russia, Syria, Tunisia and the former Yugoslavia. In 1976 Canada signed a framework agreement for co-operation in industrial trade, science and natural resources, and a transatlantic pact was signed with the USA in Dec. 1995. Co-operation agreements also exist with a number of Latin American countries and groupings, and with Arab and Asian countries, and an economic and commercial agreement has been signed with the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN). Partnership and co-operation agreements were signed with Ukraine in June 1994, Kazakhstan in Jan. 1995, Kyrgyzstan in Feb. 1995 and with Uzbekiston in June 1996. In the Development Aid sector, the EU has an agreement (the Lomé Convention, originally signed in 1975 but renewed and enlarged in 1979 and 1984) with some 60 African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries which removes customs duties without reciprocal arrangements for most of their imports to the Community.

The application of common duties has been conducted mainly within the framework of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), which was succeeded in 1995 by the establishment of the World Trade Organization.

Fisheries. The Common Fisheries Policy (CFP) came into effect in Jan. 1983, according to which all EU fishermen have equal access to the waters of member countries (a zone extending up to 200 nautical miles from the shore around all its coastlines), with the total allowable catch for each species being set and shared out between member countries according to pre-established quotas, with in some cases 'historic rights' applying, as well as special rules to conserve stock, preserve marine biodiversity, and the sustainable pursuit of fishing.

A number of agreements are in place with other countries (Canada, Norway, USA and some African countries) allowing reciprocal fishing rights. When Greenland withdrew from the Community in 1985 EU boats retained their fishing rights subject to quotas and limits, which were revised in 1995 owing to concern about overfishing of Greenland halibut. Agreements were initialled with Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Argentina in 1992.

Transport. Under the Maastricht Treaty, the Community must contribute to the establishment and development of trans-European networks in the areas of transport, telecommunications and energy infrastructures.

Competition. The Competition (anti-trust) law of the EU is based on 2 principles: that businesses should not seek to nullify the creation of the common market by the erection of artificial national (or other) barriers to the free movement of goods; and against the abuse of dominant positions in any market. These two principles have led among other things to the outlawing of prohibitions on exports to other Member States, of price-fixing agreements and of refusal to supply; and to the refusal by the Commission to allow mergers or takeovers by dominant undertakings in specific cases. Increasingly heavy fines are imposed on offenders.

A number of structural funds have been established in an attempt to counter specific problems within and across the Community. These include:

European Social Fund. Provides resources with the aim of combating long-term unemployment and facilitating integration into the labour market of young people and the socially disadvantaged. The 1996 budget included an allocation of around ecu 7,146m. for the Fund's commitments.

European Regional Development Fund. Intended to compensate for the unequal rate of development among different regions of the EU by encouraging investment and improving infrastructure in 'problem regions'.

Finances. The general budget of the EU covers all EEC and Euratom expenditure, and the administrative expenditure of the ECSC.

EU revenue in ecu 1m.:

Own resources	81,754
Miscellaneous Community taxes, levies and dues	476
Administrative operation of the institutions	97
Contributions to EU programmes	16
Borrowing and lending	18
Miscellaneous	5

Expenditure for 1996 was ecu 85,094m.

The resources of the Community (the levies and duties mentioned above, and up to a 1·4% VAT charge) have been surrendered to it by Treaty. The Budget is made by the Council and the Parliament acting jointly as the Budgetary Authority. The Parliament has control, within a certain margin, of non-obligatory expenditure (where the amount to be spent is not set out in the legislation concerned), and can also reject the Budget. Otherwise, the Council decides. An agreement of 1992 fixed the permissible ceiling of expenditure at 1·2% of EC GDP in 1993 and 1994, rising to 1·27% in 1999. In Dec. 1994, taking into account the enlargement of the EU to 15 countries (from 1 Jan. 1995), it was agreed to set a level of maximum expenditure at ecu 75,500m., in 1995, increasing to ecu 87,000m., in 1999.

The Consultative Bodies There are 3 main consultative committees whose members are appointed in a personal capacity and are not bound by any mandatory instruction.

1. Economic and Social Committee. The 222-member committee is consulted by the Council of Ministers or by the European Commission, particularly with regard to agriculture, free movement of workers, harmonization of laws and transport. It is served by a permanent and independent General Secretariat, headed by a Secretary-General.

Secretary-General: Adriano Graziosi.

2. ECSC (European Coal and Steel Community) Consultative Committee. A 108-member committee representing producers, workers, consumers and traders in the coal and steel industry. Appointed by the Council for a 2-year term and attached to the Commission, it plays an advisory role on the coal and steel sectors.

3. Committee of the Regions. A new advisory body established by the Maastricht Treaty and consisting of 222 full members and an equal number of alternate members appointed by the Council for a 4-year term. The Committee must be consulted on matters regarding education, culture, public health, trans-European networks, economic and social cohesion, and on any issue with regional implications.

President: Pasqual Maragall I. Mara (Spain).

In addition to these, there are many advisory committees dealing with all aspects of EU policy and several hundred special interest groups, which may hold unofficial talks with the Commission.

EU General information. Available as free-of-charge publications. The Official Journal, other official documents, specialized publications and databases addressing professional needs can be ordered from the EUR-OP network.

Address: Jean Monnet Building, rue Alcide de Gasperi, L-2920 Luxembourg.

The EU Ombudsman was inaugurated in 1995. The present incumbent is Jacob Söderman (Finland).

EUROPEAN INVESTMENT BANK (EIB) Created in 1958 by the 6 founder member states of the EEC under the Treaty of Rome to which its statute is annexed, its role was reaffirmed in a protocol to the Maastricht Treaty. Its governing body is the Board of Governors, consisting of ministers designated by member states. Its main task is to further regional development within the Community by financing capital projects; modernizing or converting undertakings; or developing new activities. To this end, it raises on the markets substantial volumes of funds which it directs on favourable terms.

Address: 100 Bd Konrad Adenauer, L-2950 Luxembourg.
President: Sir Brian Unwin.

EUROPEAN MONETARY INSTITUTE Established by the Maastricht Treaty on 1 Jan. 1994 as the precursor of a European Central Bank (ECB). Its purpose is to strengthen the co-ordination of monetary policies of member states with a view to ensuring price stability, and to make the necessary preparations required for the establishment of the European System of Central Banks (ESCB), for the conduct of a single monetary policy and creation of a single European currency, the euro. The EMI was to be replaced by the ESCB at the start of Stage II of the process of economic and monetary union in 1999, when the changeover to the euro began.

Address: 29 Kaiserstrasse, 60311 Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany.
President: Willem Duisenberg (Netherlands).

EUROPEAN ENVIRONMENT AGENCY Launched by the EU in 1993 with a mandate to orchestrate, cross-check and put to strategic use information of relevance to the protection and improvement of Europe's environment. Based in Copenhagen, it has a mandate to ensure objective, reliable and comprehensive information on the environment at European level to enable its members to take the requisite measures to protect it. The Agency carries out its tasks through the European Information and Observation Network (EIONET). Membership is open to countries outside the EU that share the Agency's concerns. Current membership includes all EU countries, Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway.

EUROPOL Founded in 1994 to exchange criminal intelligence between EU countries. Its precursor was the European Drug Unit whose field of operations was extended in 1994 to include traffic in nuclear and radioactive substances, illegal immigration and stolen vehicles. All EU states are represented by liaison officers (ELOs) working for their national police, gendarme or customs services. The 1995 budget was ecu 4·5m. Member countries subscribe in proportion to their GNP.

Co-ordinator: Jürgen Storbeck (Germany).

STATISTICAL OFFICE OF THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES (EUROSTAT) Eurostat's mission is to provide the EU with a high-quality statistical service. It receives statistical data collected according to uniform rules from the national statistical institutes of member states, then consolidates and harmonizes the data, before making them available to the public as printed or electronic publications. The data are directly available from the Data Shop network and from EUR-OP distribution networks.

Address: Jean Monnet Building, L-2920 Luxembourg.
Data Shop: Rue de la Loi 120, B-1049 Brussels, Belgium.

COUNCIL OF EUROPE

Origin and Membership. In 1948, the Congress of Europe, bringing together at The Hague nearly 1,000 influential Europeans from 26 countries, called for the creation of a united Europe, including a European Assembly. This proposal, examined first by the Ministerial Council of the Brussels Treaty Organization, then by a conference of ambassadors, was at the origin of the Council of Europe, which is, with its 41 member States, the widest organization bringing together all European democracies. The Statute of the Council was signed at London on 5 May 1949 and came into force 2 months later.

The founder members were Belgium, Denmark, France, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the UK. Turkey and Greece joined in 1949, Iceland in 1950, the Federal Republic of Germany in 1951 (having been an associate since 1950), Austria in 1956, Cyprus in 1961, Switzerland in 1963, Malta in 1965, Portugal in 1976, Spain in 1977, Liechtenstein in 1978, San Marino in 1988, Finland in 1989, Hungary in 1990, Czechoslovakia (after partitioning, the Czech Republic and Slovakia rejoined in 1993) and Poland in 1991, Bulgaria in 1992, Estonia, Lithuania, Romania and Slovenia in 1993, Andorra in 1994, Albania, Latvia, Macedonia, Moldova and Ukraine in 1995, Croatia and Russia in 1996, and Georgia in 1999.

Membership is limited to European states which 'accept the principles of the rule of law and of the enjoyment by all persons within [their] jurisdiction of human rights and fundamental freedoms'. The Statute provides for both withdrawal (Article 7) and suspension (Articles 8 and 9). Greece withdrew during 1969–74.

Aims and Achievements. Article 1 of the Statute states that the Council's aim is 'to achieve a greater unity between its members for the purpose of safeguarding and realizing the ideals and principles which are their common heritage and facilitating their economic and social progress'; 'this aim shall be pursued... by discussion of questions of common concern and by agreements and common action'. The only limitation is provided by Article 1 (d), which excludes 'matters relating to national defence'.

The main areas of the Council's activity are: human rights, the media, social and socio-economic questions, education, culture and sport, youth, public health, heritage and environment, local and regional government, and legal co-operation. 167

Conventions and Agreements have been concluded covering such matters as social security, cultural affairs, conservation of European wildlife and natural habitats, protection of archaeological heritage, extradition, medical treatment, equivalence of degrees and diplomas, the protection of television broadcasts, adoption of children and transportation of animals.

Treaties in the legal field include the adoption of the European Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism, the European Convention on the Legal Status of Migrant Workers and the Transfer of Sentenced Persons. The Committee of Ministers adopted a European Convention for the protection of individuals with regard to the automatic processing of personal data (1981), a Convention on the compensation of victims of violent crimes (1983), a Convention on spectator violence and misbehaviour at sport events and in particular at football matches (1985), the European Charter of Local Government (1985), and a Convention for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (1987). The European Social Charter of 1961 sets out the social and economic rights which all member governments agree to guarantee to their citizens.

European Social Charter. The Charter defines the rights and principles which are the basis of the Council's social policy, and guarantees a number of social and economic rights to the citizen, including the right to work, the right to form workers' organizations, the right to social security and assistance, the right of the family to protection and the right of migrant workers to protection and assistance. Two committees, comprising independent and government experts, supervise the parties' compliance with their obligations under the Charter. A revised charter, incorporating new rights such as protection for those without jobs and opportunities for workers with family responsibilities, was opened for signature on 3 May 1996 and signed by 13 members.

Human rights. The promotion and development of human rights is one of the major tasks of the Council of Europe. The European Convention on Human Rights, signed in 1950, set up special machinery to guarantee internationally fundamental rights and freedoms. The European Commission of Human Rights investigates alleged violations of the Convention submitted to it either by States or, in most cases, by individuals. Its findings can then be examined by the European Court on Human Rights (est. 1959), whose obligatory jurisdiction has been recognized by all the 40 States, or by the Committee of Ministers empowered to take binding decisions by two-thirds majority vote. In Oct. 1997, leaders of the 40 members of the Council of Europe met in Strasbourg to reinforce and extend the organization's watchdog role on human rights in Europe, turning its human rights court into a full-time body and appointing a human rights mediator, and to encourage more members, particularly in Eastern Europe, to sign the Council's social charter. The summit, only the second in the Council's 48-year history, also endorsed the idea of a continent-wide ban on human cloning, and closer co-operation to combat corruption, organized crime and money laundering.

President of the European Commission of Human Rights: Stefan Trechsel (Switzerland).

President of the European Court on Human Rights: Rudolf Bernhardt (Germany).

The Social Development Fund, formerly the Resettlement Fund, was created in 1956. The main purpose of the Fund is to give financial aid in the spheres of housing, vocational training, regional planning and development. Since 1956 the Fund has granted loans totalling ecu 10,000m.

The European Youth Foundation provides money to subsidize activities by European youth organizations in their own countries.

Structure. Under the Statute, 2 organs were set up: an intergovernmental Committee of [Foreign] Ministers with powers of decision and recommendation to governments, and an interparliamentary deliberative body, the Parliamentary Assembly (referred to in the Statute as the Consultative Assembly)—both served by the Secretariat. A Joint Committee acts as an organ of co-ordination and liaison between the two and gives members an opportunity to exchange views on matters of important European interest. In addition, a number of committees of experts have been established. On municipal matters the Committee of Ministers receives recommendations from the Congress of Local and Regional Authorities of Europe. The Committee usually meets twice a year and has a rotatory chair; their deputies meet for several days each month.

The Parliamentary Assembly consists of 286 parliamentarians elected or appointed by their national parliaments (Albania 4, Andorra 2, Austria 6, Belgium 7, Bulgaria 6, Croatia 5, Cyprus 3, the Czech Republic 7, Denmark 5, Estonia 3, Finland 5, France 18, Germany 18, Greece 7, Hungary 7, Iceland 3, Ireland 4, Italy 18, Latvia 3, Liechtenstein 2, Lithuania 4, Luxembourg 3, Macedonia 3, Malta 3, Moldova 5, Netherlands 7, Norway 5, Poland 12, Portugal 7, Romania 10, Russia 18, San Marino 2, Slovakia 5, Slovenia 3, Spain 12, Sweden 6, Switzerland 6, Turkey 12, Ukraine 12, UK 18). It meets 3 times a year for approximately a week. The work of the Assembly is prepared by parliamentary committees. Since June 1989 representatives of a number of central and East European countries have been permitted to attend as non-voting members ('special guests'), namely Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bosnia-Hercegovina and Georgia.

Although without legislative powers, the Assembly acts as the powerhouse of the Council, initiating European action in key areas by making recommendations to the Committee of Ministers. As the widest parliamentary forum in Western Europe, the Assembly also acts as the conscience of the area by voicing its opinions on important current issues. These are embodied in Resolutions. The Ministers' role is to translate the Assembly's recommendations into action, particularly as regards lowering the barriers between the European countries, harmonizing their legislation or introducing, where possible, common European laws, abolishing discrimination on grounds of nationality, and undertaking certain tasks on a joint European basis.

WESTERN EUROPEAN UNION (WEU)

Origin. In March 1948, the signing of the Brussels Treaty of Economic, Social and Cultural Collaboration and Collective Defence by Belgium, France, Luxembourg, Netherlands and the UK opened the way for the establishment of the Western European Union. Six years later, the Paris Agreements, signed in Oct. 1954, which amended the Brussels Treaty, gave birth to WEU as a new international organization and provided for the Federal Republic of Germany and Italy to join. WEU came into being in 1955. Today, as an international defence and security organization, it brings together 18 nations that are also members of the European Union and/or NATO and 10 Central European countries which are closely involved in the work of the organization. Its primary role is to enable Europeans to undertake the politico-military management of crises in which the North Americans would not wish to become directly involved. WEU will probably act following a political decision by the European Union and may, depending on the circumstances, call on NATO assets and capabilities.

Members. Belgium, France, Germany, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and the UK. Spain and Portugal became members in 1990; Greece in 1995. In 1991 at Maastricht the WEU decided to extend invitations to other members of the EU to accede to the WEU or seek observer status, and to European members of NATO to become associate members. In Jan. 1998, Austria, Denmark, the Republic of Ireland, Finland and Sweden had observer status; the Czech Republic, Hungary, Iceland, Norway, Poland and Turkey are associate members; Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia and Slovenia are associate partners.

Reform. A joint meeting of the foreign and defence ministers within the WEU framework, held in Rome on 26–27 Oct. 1984, was marked by the adoption of the founding text of WEU's reactivation: the Rome Declaration. Work on the definition of a European security identity and the gradual harmonization of its members' defence policies were among the stated objectives. Ministers recognized the 'continuing necessity to strengthen western security, and that better utilization of WEU would not only contribute to the security of Western Europe but also to an improvement in the common defence of all the countries of the Atlantic Alliance'.

In 1987, WEU foreign and defence ministers adopted the Hague Platform on European Security Interests, defining the conditions and criteria for European security, and the responsibilities of WEU members to provide an integrated Europe with a security and defence dimension. In 1987 and 1988, following the laying of mines in the Persian Gulf during the Iran-Iraq war, minesweepers dispatched by WEU countries helped secure free movement in international waters. Operation Cleansweep helped to complete the clearance of a 300-mile sea lane from the Strait of Hormuz, and was the first instance of a concerted action in WEU. During the Gulf Crisis, at the end of 1990 and early 1991, co-ordinated action took place among WEU nations contributing forces and other forms of support to the coalition forces involved in the liberation of Kuwait.

In Maastricht, on 10 Dec. 1991, WEU ministers stated that: 'WEU will be developed as the defence component of the European Union and as the means to strengthen the European pillar of the Atlantic Alliance. To this end, it will formulate common European defence policy and carry forward its concrete implementation through the further development of its own operational role.' The Declaration then proposed ways of strengthening WEU's relations with the European Union and NATO, as well as measures to develop its operational role. A number of practical decisions were taken, including the transfer of the WEU headquarters from London to Brussels, which was completed in Jan. 1993.

At a meeting in Bonn in June 1992, they went on to adopt the Petersberg Declaration, agreeing that the WEU should have a military capability in order to conduct humanitarian and rescue tasks, peacekeeping tasks and tasks of combat forces in crisis management, including peacemaking (the so-called 'Petersberg tasks') at the initiative of the WEU Council or following a request by the European Union, the OSCE or the UN.

At the Alliance Summit of Jan. 1994, NATO leaders gave their full support to the development of a European Security and Defence Identity (ESDI) and to the strengthening of the WEU. They declared their readiness to make collective assets of the Alliance available for WEU operations. The Alliance leaders also endorsed the concept of Combined Joint Task Forces (CJTFs) with the objective not only of adapting Alliance structures to NATO's new missions but also of improving co-operation with the WEU, and in order to reflect the emerging ESDI. Work on the CJTF concept came to fruition at the NATO Ministerial meeting in Berlin in June 1996. One of the fundamental objectives of the Alliance adaptation process identified by NATO Ministers in Berlin was the development of the European Security and Defence Identity within the Alliance.

With the agreement on the Treaty of Amsterdam revising the Treaty on European Union, WEU has drawn closer to the EU. In particular, the European Council's guidelines for the Common Foreign Security Policy (CFSP) 'shall obtain in respect of WEU for those matters for which the Union avails itself of the WEU'; and the Petersberg tasks have been incorporated into the EU Treaty. It is stated that WEU is an integral part of the development of the European Union, giving the Union access to an operational capability, notably in the context of the Petersberg tasks. In the WEU Ministerial Declaration of 22 July 1997 responding to the Treaty of Amsterdam, WEU confirmed its readiness to develop WEU's relations with the EU and work out arrangements for enhanced co-operation.

In the context of the Yugoslav conflict, WEU has undertaken 3 operations, 2 of them to help in the enforcement of sanctions imposed by the UN Security Council (the WEU/NATO operation SHARP GUARD in the Adriatic and the WEU Danube operation) and one to assist in the European Union administration of the town of Mostar. Since 1997, WEU has deployed a Multinational Advisory Police Element (MAPE) in Albania to assist in the reorganization of the Albanian Police.

Organization. Since the 1984 reforms, the Council, supreme authority of the WEU, meets twice a year at ministerial level (foreign and defence) in the capital of the presiding country. The presidency rotates biannually. The Permanent Council, chaired by the Secretary-General, meets weekly at ambassadorial level, at the WEU headquarters in Brussels. The WEU Military Committee is responsible to the WEU Council for the general conduct of WEU's military affairs. It provides military advice on military and operational matters to the Council. The WEU has a satellite centre at Torrejon de Ardoz in Spain, and a WEU Institute for Security Studies was set up in Paris in 1990. The WEU Assembly, located in Paris, comprises 115 parliamentarians of member states and meets twice a year, usually in Paris. There are Permanent Committees on: defence questions and armaments; general affairs; scientific questions; budgetary affairs and administration; rules of procedure and privileges; and parliamentary and public relations.

Headquarters: WEU, B-1000 Brussels, Belgium.
Secretary-General: José Cutileiro (Portugal).

ORGANIZATION FOR SECURITY AND CO-OPERATION IN EUROPE (OSCE)

The OSCE is a pan-European security organization of 55 participating states. It was established as a primary instrument in its region for early warning, conflict prevention, crisis management and post-conflict rehabilitation in Europe.

Origin. Initiatives from both NATO and the Warsaw Pact culminated in the first summit Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe (CSCE) attended by heads of state and government in Helsinki on 30 July–1 Aug. 1975. It adopted the Helsinki Final Act laying down 10 principles governing the behaviour of States towards their citizens and each other, concerning human rights, self-determination and the interrelations of the participant states. The CSCE was to serve as a multilateral forum for dialogue and negotiations between East and West.

The Helsinki Final Act comprised 4 main sections: 1) security in Europe, including commitments to non-aggression and respect for human rights; 2) co-operation in the fields of economics, science, technology and the environment; 3) co-operation in humanitarian and related fields, including promotion of cultural exchange and free movement of peoples; 4) a commitment to the process of consultation and increased co-operation.

From CSCE to OSCE. The Paris Summit of Nov. 1990 set the CSCE on a new course. In the Charter of Paris for a New Europe, the CSCE was called upon to contribute to managing the historic change in Europe and respond to the new challenges of the post-Cold War period. At the meeting, members of NATO and the Warsaw Pact signed an important Treaty on the Reduction of Conventional Forces in Europe (CFE) and a declaration that they were 'no longer adversaries' and did not intend to 'use force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state'. All 34 participants adopted the Confidence and Security-Building Measures (CSBMs), which pertained to the exchange of military information, verification of military installations, objection to unusual military activities etc., and signed the Charter of Paris. The Charter sets out principles of human rights, democracy and the rule of law to which all the signatories undertake to adhere, and lays down the bases for east-west co-operation and other future action. In July 1992, member nations unanimously agreed to set up an armed peace-keeping force. The 1994 Budapest Summit recognized that the CSCE was no longer a conference and on 1 Jan. 1995, the CSCE changed its name to the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE). The 1996 Lisbon Summit elaborated the OSCE's key role in fostering security and stability in all their dimensions. It also stimulated the development of an OSCE Document-Charter on European Security.

Members. Albania, Andorra, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Belgium, Bosnia-Hercegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Holy See, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Macedonia, Malta, Moldova, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Russian Federation, San Marino, Slovak Republic, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, UK, USA and Uzbekiston. Currently suspended: Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro). Partners for co-operation: Japan and the Republic of Korea. Mediterranean partners for co-operation: Algeria, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Morocco, Tunisia.

Organization. The OSCE's regular body for political consultation and decision-making is the Permanent Council. Its members, Permanent Representatives of the OSCE participating States, meet weekly in the Hofburg Congress Center in Vienna to discuss and take decisions on all issues pertinent to the OSCE. The Forum for Security Co-operation (FSC), which deals with arms control and confidence and security-building measures, meets weekly in Vienna. In addition, a Senior Council is convened for periodic political deliberations. It also meets once a year as the Economic Forum. The Chairman-in-Office has overall responsibility for executive action. The chair rotates annually. The Secretary-General acts as representative of the Chairman-in-Office and manages OSCE structures and operations.

The Secretariat is based in Vienna and includes a Conflict Prevention Centre which provides operational support for OSCE missions. There are some 200 staff employed in OSCE institutions, and about 2,500 professionals, seconded by OSCE-participating states, work at OSCE missions and other field operations. The Secretariat is assisted by the Prague Office.

The Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights is located in Warsaw. It is active in monitoring elections and developing national electoral and human rights institutions, providing technical assistance to national legal institutions, and promoting the development of NGOs.

The budget for 1999 (not including the budget for the Kosovo Verification Mission) was EUR104m.

EUROPEAN BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT (EBRD)

History and Membership. A treaty to establish the EBRD was signed in May 1990; it was inaugurated on 15 April 1991. The EBRD has 60 members (58 countries, the European Community and the European Investment Bank), including 26 countries of operations in central and eastern Europe and the CIS.

Capital. Its subscribed capital is ecu 20bn., of which 30% is paid in. The Bank borrows in various currencies on world capital markets.

Objectives. The EBRD was set up to foster the transition towards market-oriented economies in central and eastern Europe, to lend funds at market rates to companies and countries 'committed to, and applying, the fundamental principles of multiparty democracy, pluralism and market economics'. Facilities were extended to the countries of the former USSR in 1992.

A policy statement of May 1991 placed initial emphasis on programmes: to support the creation and strengthening of infrastructures; privatization and reform of the financial sector, including development of capital markets and privatization of commercial banks; development of productive competitive private sectors of small and medium-sized enterprises in industry, agriculture and services; restructuring industrial sectors to put them on a competitive basis; encouraging foreign investment; and the promotion of sustainable and environmentally sound development.

Activities. Under a phased programme, countries which fulfil certain development criteria graduate out of the Bank's sphere of operations. By 30 Sept. 1998, the Bank had approved 603 projects, involving ecu 13·9bn. of EBRD's own funds, which were expected to mobilize an additional ecu 32·2bn. Of the approved projects, 525 had been signed, committing ecu 11·2bn. of EBRD funds. 84% of total committed funding was for private-sector projects.

Project-related technical co-operation is a major part of EBRD's activities. By 1997, 53 co-operation fund agreements with bilateral donors, totalling ecu 512m. had been made with the Bank for this purpose; 1,808 projects, with a total estimated cost of ecu 500m. had been committed.

Organization. There is a Board of Governors with full management powers, and a 23-member Board of Directors elected for a 3-year term, which is involved in day-to-day operations. The President is elected by the Board of Governors for a 4-year term. The EBRD's headquarters are in London with 29 Resident Offices or other offices in 22 of its countries of operations.

EUROPEAN FREE TRADE ASSOCIATION (EFTA)

History and Membership. The Stockholm Convention establishing the Association entered into force on 3 May 1960. Founder members were Austria, Denmark, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and the UK. With the accession of Austria, Denmark, Finland, Portugal, Sweden and the UK to the EU, EFTA was reduced to 4 member countries: Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway and Switzerland.

Activities. Free trade in industrial goods among members was achieved by 1966. Co-operation with the EU began in 1972 with the signing of free trade agreements and culminated in the establishment of a European Economic Area (EEA), encompassing the free movement of goods, services, capital and labour throughout EFTA and the EU countries. The Agreement was signed by all members of the EU and EFTA on 2 May 1992, but was rejected by Switzerland in a referendum on 6 Dec. 1992. Entry into force took place on 1 Jan. 1994.

The main provisions of the EEA Agreement are: free movement of products within the EEA from 1993 (with special arrangements to cover food, energy, coal and steel); EFTA to assume EU rules on company law, consumer protection, education, the environment, research and development and social policy; EFTA to adopt EU competition rules on anti-trust matters, abuse of a dominant position, public procurement, mergers and state aid; EFTA to create an EFTA Surveillance Authority and an EFTA Court; individuals to be free to live, work and offer services throughout the EEA, with mutual recognition of professional qualifications; capital movements to be free with some restrictions on investments; EFTA countries not to be bound by the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) or Common Fisheries Policy (CFP).

The EEA-EFTA states have established a Surveillance Authority and a Court to ensure implementation of the Agreement among the EFTA-EEA states. Political direction is given by the EEA Council which meets twice a year at ministerial level, while ongoing operation of the Agreement is overseen by the EEA Joint Committee. Legislative power remains with national governments and parliaments.

EFTA has formal relations with several other states. Declarations on co-operation were signed with Hungary, former Czechoslovakia and Poland (1990), Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Romania (1991), Slovenia and Albania (1992), Egypt, Morocco and Tunisia (1995), the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and the Palestine Liberation Organization (1996), Jordan and Lebanon (1997). Co-operation with Yugoslavia was suspended in Nov. 1991. Free trade agreements have been signed with Turkey (1991), Israel and Czechoslovakia (1992, with protocols on succession with the Czech Republic and Slovakia in 1993), Poland and Romania (1992), Bulgaria and Hungary (1993), Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Slovenia (1995), Morocco (1997). Contacts with the Gulf Co-operation Council have also been established.

A Central European Free Trade Area (CEFTA) has also now been established between the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland, Slovakia and Slovenia.

Organization. The operation of the free trade area among the EFTA states is the responsibility of the EFTA Council which meets regularly at ambassadorial level in Geneva. The Council is assisted by a Secretariat and standing committees. Each EFTA country holds the chairmanship of the Council for 6 months. For EEA matters there is a separate committee structure.

CERN – THE EUROPEAN LABORATORY FOR PARTICLE PHYSICS

Founded in 1954, CERN is the world's leading particle physics research centre. By studying the behaviour of nature's fundamental particles, CERN aims to find out what our Universe is made of and how it works. CERN's biggest accelerator, the large Electron Positron collider (LEP) recreates conditions at the birth of the Universe. A yet more powerful accelerator, the large Hadron Collider (LHC), is due for completion in 2005. One of the beneficial byproducts of CERN activity is the Worldwide Web, developed at CERN to give particle physicists easy access to shared data. One of Europe's first joint ventures, CERN now has a membership of 19 Member States: Austria, Belgium, Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Italy, The Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Slovak Republic, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United Kingdom. Some 6,500 scientists, half of the world's particle physicists, use CERN's facilities.

THE NORDIC COUNCIL

Founded in 1952 as a co-operative link between the parliaments and governments of the Nordic states. The co-operation focuses on Intra-Nordic co-operation, co-operation with Europe/EU/EEA and co-operation with the adjacent areas. The Council consists of 87 elected MPs and the committees meet several times a year, as required. Every year the Nordic Council grants prizes for literature, music, and nature and environment.

Members: Denmark (including the Faroe Islands and Greenland), Finland (including Åland), Iceland, Norway, Sweden.

Address: Postboks 3043, DK-1021 Copenhagen K, Denmark.
Website: http://www.norden.org/
President: Berit Brørby Larsen.

COUNCIL OF BALTIC SEA STATES

Established in 1992 in Copenhagen following a conference of ministers of foreign affairs.

Members. Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Germany, Iceland, Latvia, Lithuania, Norway, Poland, Russia, Sweden and the European Commission.

Aims. To promote co-operation in the Baltic Sea region in the field of trade, investment and economic exchanges, combating organized crime, civil security, culture and education, transport and communication, energy and environment, human rights and assistance to democratic institutions.

The Council meets at ministerial level once a year, chaired by rotating foreign ministers; it is the supreme decision-making body. Between annual meetings the Committee of Senior Officials meets once a month. A number of action programmes have already been adopted and are now implemented.

DANUBE COMMISSION

History and Membership. The Danube Commission was constituted in 1949 according to the Convention on the regulation of shipping on the Danube signed in Belgrade on 18 Aug. 1948. The Belgrade Convention declared that navigation on the Danube from Ulm to the Black Sea (with access to the sea through the Sulina arm and the Sulina Canal) is equally free and open to the nationals, merchant shipping and merchandise of all states as to harbour and navigation fees as well as conditions of merchant navigation. The Commission holds annual sessions and is composed of 1 representative from each of its members countries: Austria, Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania, Russia, Slovakia, Ukraine and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. Croatia, Germany and Moldova have observer status.

Functions. To ensure that the provisions of the Belgrade Convention are carried out; to establish a uniform buoying system on all navigable waterways; to establish the basic regulations for navigation on the river and ensure facilities for shipping; to co-ordinate the regulations for river, customs and sanitation control as well as the hydrometeorological service; to collect relevant statistical data concerning navigation on the Danube. Recent events, including the emergence of newly independent states with justified interests in the region, will require a new multilateral agreement on management of the river. The scope of the original Convention may also be broadened to include new areas such as energy production and environmental protection.

Official languages. French, Russian.
Headquarters: Benczúr utca 25, H-1068 Budapest, Hungary.
Director-General: Hellmuth Strasser (Austria).

THE COMMONWEALTH

The Commonwealth is a free association of sovereign independent states. It numbered 54 members in 1998. With a membership of 1·7bn. people, it represents over 30% of the world's population. There is no charter, treaty or constitution; the association is expressed in co-operation, consultation and mutual assistance for which the Commonwealth Secretariat is the central co-ordinating body.

Origin. The Commonwealth was first defined by the Imperial Conference of 1926 as a group of 'autonomous Communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown, and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations'. The basis of the association changed from one owing allegiance to a common Crown, and the modern Commonwealth was born in 1949 when the member countries accepted India's intention of becoming a republic at the same time as continuing 'her full membership of the Commonwealth of Nations and her acceptance of the King as the symbol of the free association of its independent member nations and as such the Head of the Commonwealth'. In 1998 the Commonwealth consisted of 33 republics and 21 monarchies, of which 16 are Queen's realms. All acknowledge the Queen symbolically as Head of the Commonwealth. The Queen's legal title rests on the statute of 12 and 13 Will. III, c. 3, by which the succession to the Crown of Great Britain and Ireland was settled on the Princess Sophia of Hanover and the 'heirs of her body being Protestants'.

A number of territories, formerly under British jurisdiction or mandate, did not join the Commonwealth: Egypt, Iraq, Transjordan, Burma (now Myanmar), Palestine, Sudan, British Somaliland, South Cameroons and Aden. 4 countries, Ireland in 1948, South Africa in 1961, Pakistan in 1972, and Fiji (now Fiji Islands) in 1987 have left the Commonwealth. Pakistan was re-admitted to the Commonwealth in 1989, South Africa in 1994, Fiji Islands in 1997. Nigeria was suspended in 1995 for violation of human rights. Mozambique, admitted in Nov. 1995, is the first member state not to have been a member of the former British Commonwealth or Empire. Nauru and Tuvalu are special members, with the right to participate in all functional Commonwealth meetings and activities but not to attend meetings of Commonwealth Heads of Government.

United Kingdom Overseas Territories and Associated States. There are 13 United Kingdom overseas territories, 6 Australian external territories, 2 New Zealand dependent territories and 2 New Zealand associated states. A dependent territory is a territory belonging by settlement, conquest or annexation to the British, Australian or New Zealand Crown.

United Kingdom Overseas Territories administered through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office comprise, in the Indian Ocean: British Indian Ocean Territory; in the Mediterranean: Gibraltar; in the Atlantic Ocean: Bermuda, Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands, British Antarctic Territory, St Helena and Dependencies (Ascension and Tristan da Cunha); in the Caribbean: Montserrat, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Turks and Caicos Islands, Anguilla; in the Western Pacific: Pitcairn Group of Islands.

The Australian external territories are: Coral Sea Islands, Cocos (Keeling) Islands, Christmas Island, Heard and McDonald Islands, Australian Antarctic and Ashmore and Cartier Islands. The New Zealand dependent territories are: Tokelau Islands and the Ross Dependency. The New Zealand associated states are: Cook Islands and Niue.

British Government Department. With effect from 17 Oct. 1968, the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is responsible for the conduct of relations with members of the Commonwealth as well as with foreign countries. While constitutional responsibility to Parliament for the government of the United Kingdom overseas territories rests with the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the administration of the territories is carried out by the Governments of the territories themselves.

Aims and Conditions of Membership. Membership involves acceptance of certain core principles, as set out in the Harare Declaration of 1991, and is subject to the approval of other member states. The Harare Declaration charts a course to take the Commonwealth into the 21st century and affirms members' continued commitment to the Singapore Declarations of 1971, by which members committed themselves to the pursuit of world peace and support of the UN.

The core principles defined by the Harare Declaration are: political democracy, human rights, good governance and the rule of law, and the protection of the environment through sustainable development. Commitment to these principles was made binding as a condition of membership at the 1993 Heads of Government meeting in Cyprus.

The Millbrook Action Programme of 1995 aims to support countries in implementing the Harare Declaration, providing assistance in constitutional and judicial matters, running elections, training and technical advice. Violations of the Harare Declaration will provoke a series of measures by the Commonwealth Secretariat, including: expression of disapproval, encouragement of bilateral actions by member states, appointment of fact-finders and mediators, stipulation of a period for the restoration of democracy, exclusion from ministerial meetings, suspension of all participation and aid and finally punitive measures including trade sanctions. An 8-member Ministerial Action Group may be convened by the Secretary-General as and when necessary to deal with violations. The Group held its first meeting in Dec. 1995. Its terms of reference are as set out in the Millbrook Action Programme.

The Commonwealth Parliamentary Assembly was founded in 1911. As defined by its constitution, its objectives are to 'promote knowledge of the constitutional, legislative, economic, social and cultural aspects of parliamentary democracy'. It meets these objectives by organizing conferences, meetings and seminars for members, arranging exchange visits between members, publishing books, newsletters, reports, studies and a quarterly journal and providing an information service. Its principal governing body is the General Assembly, which meets annually during the Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference and is composed of members attending that Conference as delegates. The Assembly elects an Executive Committee comprising a Chair, President, Vice-President, Treasurer and 27 regional representatives, which meets twice a year. The Chair is elected for 3-year terms. The Assembly is financed by membership fees levied on each branch and based on the number of delegates entitled to attend the Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference. The Secretariat is headed by the Secretary-General, with access to Heads of Government; the Secretariat is staffed by officers from member countries and is financed by contributions from member governments.

Commonwealth Secretariat. The Commonwealth Secretariat is an international body at the service of all 54 member countries. It provides the central organization for joint consultation and co-operation in many fields. It was established in 1965 by Commonwealth Heads of Government as a 'visible symbol of the spirit of co-operation which animates the Commonwealth', and has observer status at the UN General Assembly.

The Secretariat disseminates information on matters of common concern, organizes and services meetings and conferences, co-ordinates many Commonwealth activities, and provides expert technical assistance for economic and social development through the multilateral Commonwealth Fund for Technical Co-operation. The Secretariat is organized in divisions and sections which correspond to its main areas of operation: international affairs, economic affairs, food production and rural development, youth, education, information, applied studies in government, science and technology, law and health. Within this structure the Secretariat organizes the biennial meetings of Commonwealth Heads of Government (CHOGMs), annual meetings of Finance Ministers of member countries, and regular meetings of Ministers of Education, Law, Health, and others as appropriate. To emphasize the multilateral nature of the association, meetings are held in different cities and regions within the Commonwealth. Heads of Government decided that the Secretariat should work from London as it has the widest range of communications of any Commonwealth city, as well as the largest assembly of diplomatic missions.

Commonwealth Heads of Government Meetings (CHOGMs). Outside the UN, the CHOGM remains the largest intergovernmental conference in the world. Meetings are held every 2 years. The theme for the 1997 CHOGM in Edinburgh was the promotion of interCommonwealth trade, investment and development. At the Commonwealth Business Forum 2 days before the CHOGM, Tony Blair announced the British Government's decision to sell its majority holding in the Commonwealth Development Corporation and introduce private capital to the Corporation, which would effectively become a public-private partnership. The CDC has £1·6bn. invested in over 400 businesses in 54 countries worldwide. The hope is that this will allow the CDC to raise money in financial markets, which it is banned from doing under Treasury rules as a state-owned company. The proceeds from the sale will go back into development aid. A host of Commonwealth organizations and agencies are dedicated to enhancing interCommonwealth relations and the development of the potential of Commonwealth citizens. A list of these can be obtained from the Commonwealth Institute in London.

Commonwealth Day is celebrated on the second Monday in March each year. The theme for 1999 was music.

COMMONWEALTH OF INDEPENDENT STATES (CIS)

The Commonwealth of Independent States, founded on 8 Dec. 1991 in Viskuli, home of the Belarussian government, is a community of independent states which proclaimed itself the successor to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in some aspects of international law and affairs. The member states are the founders, Russia, Belarus and Ukraine, and 9 subsequent adherents: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Moldova, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekiston.

History. Extended negotiations in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) in 1990 and 1991, under the direction of President Gorbachev, sought to establish a 'renewed federation' or, subsequently, to conclude a new union treaty that would embrace all the 15 constituent republics of the USSR at that date. According to a referendum conducted in March 1991, 76% of the population (on an 80% turn-out) wished to maintain the USSR as a 'renewed federation of equal sovereign republics in which the human rights and freedoms of any nationality would be fully guaranteed'. In Sept. 1991, the 3 Baltic republics—Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania—were nonetheless recognized as independent states by the USSR State Council, and subsequently by the international community. Most of the remaining republics reached agreement on the broad outlines of a new 'union of sovereign states' in Nov. 1991, which would have retained a directly elected President and an all-union legislature, but which would have limited central authority to those powers specifically delegated to it by the members of the union.

A referendum in Ukraine in Dec. 1991, however, showed overwhelming support for full independence, and following this the 3 Slav republics (Russia, Belarus and Ukraine) concluded the Minsk Agreement on 8 Dec. 1991, establishing a Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS), headquartered in Minsk. The USSR, as a subject of international law and a geopolitical reality, was declared no longer in existence, and each of the 3 republics individually renounced the 1922 treaty through which the USSR had been established.

The CIS declared itself open to other former Soviet republics, and to states elsewhere that shared its objectives, and on 21 Dec. 1991 in Alma-Ata, a further declaration was signed with 8 other republics: Armenia, Azerbaijan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Moldova, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekiston. The declaration committed signatories to recognize the independence and sovereignty of other members, to respect human rights including those of national minorities, and to the observance of existing boundaries. Relations among the members of the CIS were to be conducted on an equal, multilateral, interstate basis, but it was agreed to endorse the principle of unitary control of strategic nuclear arms and the concept of a 'single economic space'. In a separate agreement the heads of member states agreed that Russia should take up the seat at the United Nations formerly occupied by the USSR, and a framework of interstate and intergovernment consultation was established. Following these developments Mikhail Gorbachev resigned as USSR President on 25 Dec. 1991, and on 26 Dec., the USSR Supreme Soviet voted a formal end to the 1922 Treaty of Union, and dissolved itself. Georgia decided to join on 9 Dec. 1993 and on 1 March 1994 the national parliament ratified the act.

The Charter, adopted on 22 Jan. 1993 in Minsk, proclaims that the Commonwealth is based on the principles of the sovereign equality of all members. It is not a state and does not have supranational authority.

Activities and Institutions. The principal organs of the CIS, according to the agreement concluded in Alma-Ata on 21 Dec. 1991, are the Council of Heads of States, which meets twice a year, and the Council of Heads of Government, which meets every 3 months. Both councils may convene extraordinary sessions, and may hold joint sittings. There is also a Council of Defence Ministers, established Feb. 1992, and a Council of Foreign Ministers (Dec. 1993). The Secretariat is the standing working organ.

At a summit meeting of heads of states (with the exception of Azerbaijan) in July 1992, agreements were reached on a way to divide former USSR assets abroad; on the legal cessionary of state archives of former Soviet states; on the status of an Economic Court; and on collective security. In 1992 an Inter-Parliamentary Assembly was established by 7 member states (Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russia, Tajikistan and Uzbekiston).

At a subsequent meeting in Jan. 1993, Russia, Belarus, Armenia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekiston agreed on a charter to implement co-operation in political, economic, ecological, humanitarian, cultural and other spheres; thorough and balanced economic and social development within the common economic space; interstate co-operation and integration; and to ensure human rights and freedoms. Three participants (Ukraine, Moldova and Turkmenistan) agreed only to a declaration that the decision would be open for signing in the future. For the purpose of the maintenance and development of multilateral industrial, trade and financial relations, Heads of State established an Inter-State Bank and adopted a Provision on it. Its charter was signed by 9 Heads of State (Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Moldova, Russia, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekiston, Ukraine) on 22 Dec. 1993.

The CIS Inter-State Bank was set up with a starting capital of 5,000m. roubles, to facilitate multilateral clearing of CIS interstate transactions. Members' contributions (by %), based on their share of foreign trade turnover in 1990, were as follows: Russia, 50%; Ukraine, 20·7%; Belarus, 8·4%; Kazakhstan, 6·1%; Uzbekiston, 5·5%; Moldova, 2·9%; Armenia, 1·8%; Tajikistan, 1·6%; Kyrgyzstan, 1·5%; Turkmenistan, 1·5%. The bank is an international settlement and financial-credit institution, established in accordance with the rules of international public law. The authorized capital on 1 Jan. 1999 was 20,000m. roubles. Members' contributions are the same as in 1993. The bank's highest management body is a Bank Council.

In accordance with the Agreement on Armed Forces and Border Troops, concluded on 30 Dec. 1991, it was decided to consider and solve the issue on the transference of the management of the General-Purpose Armed Forces in accordance with the national legislation of member states. On 14 Feb. 1992 the Council of Defence Ministers was established. In 1993, the Office of Commander-in-Chief of CIS Joint Armed Forces was reorganized in a Staff for Co-ordinating Military Co-operation. Its Chief of Staff is appointed by the Council of Heads of State. On 24 Sept. an Agreement on collective peacekeeping was concluded. Peacekeeping operations in intra-CIS conflicts could be implemented at the request of member states, and with the consent of parties to the conflict. CIS members contribute to this force in proportion to the size of their armed forces and are responsible for the conditions, training and supply of military and civil personnel to the conflict region; the commander is appointed on each occasion by the Council of Heads of State.

At the same meeting, Azerbaijan, Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Moldova, Russia, Tajikistan and Uzbekiston signed an agreement to form an Economic Union. Georgia and Turkmenistan signed later (14 and 23 Jan. 1994). Ukraine became an associated member on 15 April 1994. In Oct. 1994, a summit meeting established the Inter-State Economic Committee (MEK) to be based in Moscow. Members include all CIS states except Turkmenistan. The Committee's decisions are binding if voted by 80% of the membership. Russia commands 50% of the voting power; Ukraine 14%. The Committee's remit is to co-ordinate energy, transport and communications policies. The leading MEK organs are the Presidium and Collegium. There are 60 inter-state bodies within the CIS, 40 of them dealing with issues of economic or social policy. One of the MEK's main tasks is the co-ordination of the work of these councils or bodies. A Customs Union to regulate payments between member states with non-convertible independent currencies and a regulatory Economic Court have also been established.

On 29 March 1996, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Russia signed an agreement increasing their mutual economic and social integration by creating a Community of Integrated States (Tajikistan signed in 1998). The agreement established a Supreme Inter-Governmental Council comprising heads of state and government and foreign ministers, with a rotatory Chair, an integration committee of Ministers and an Inter-Parliamentary Committee.

On 2 April 1996, the Presidents of Belarus and Russia signed a treaty providing for political, economic and military integration, creating the nucleus of a Community of Russia and Belarus. The agreement establishes a Supreme Council comprising the Presidents, Prime Ministers and Speakers of both countries and the Chairman of the Executive Committee. A further treaty was signed on 22 May 1997, instituting common citizenship, common deployment of military forces and the harmonization of the 2 economies with a view to the creation of a common currency. The Community was later renamed the Union of Belarus and Russia and signed subsequent agreements on equal rights for its citizens and equal conditions for state and private entrepreneurship.

In March 1994, the CIS was accorded observer status in the UN.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES (OAS)

Origin. On 14 April 1890, representatives of the American republics, meeting in Washington at the First International Conference of American States, established an International Union of American Republics and, as its central office, a Commercial Bureau of American Republics, which later became the Pan-American Union. This international organization's object was to foster mutual understanding and co-operation among the nations of the western hemisphere. This led to the adoption on 30 April 1948 by the Ninth International Conference of American States, at Bogotá, Colombia, of the Charter of the Organization of American States. This co-ordinated the work of all the former independent official entities in the interAmerican system and defined their mutual relationships. The Charter of 1948 was subsequently amended by the Protocol of Buenos Aires (1967) and the Protocol of Cartagena de Indias (1985).

Members. This is on a basis of absolute equality, with each country having 1 vote and there being no veto power. Members (1998): Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba (suspended 1962), Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Jamaica, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, St Kitts and Nevis, St Lucia, St Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, USA, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Permanent Observers. Algeria, Angola, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia-Hercegovina, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, EU, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Holy See, Hungary, India, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kazakhstan, Republic of Korea, Latvia, Lebanon, Morocco, the Netherlands, Pakistan, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Russia, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, UK, Ukraine.

Aims and Activities. To strengthen the peace and security of the continent; promote and consolidate representative democracy, with due respect for the principle of non-intervention; prevent possible causes of difficulties and ensure the peaceful settlement of disputes among member states; provide for common action in the event of aggression; seek the solution of political, juridical and economic problems; promote by co-operative action economic, social and cultural development; and achieve an effective limitation of conventional weapons in order to devote maximum resources to economic and social development.

The Santiago Commitment to Democracy and the Renewal of the Inter-American System. With the emergence of democratically elected governments throughout the continent, the OAS has been increasingly concerned with the preservation, protection and promotion of democracy. At its 21st Regular Session (Santiago, Chile, 1991) the OAS General Assembly adopted the Santiago Commitment to Democracy and the Renewal of the Inter-American System as well as the Protocol of Washington (1992) to amend the Charter by provisions of the Resolution 1080 on representative democracy. The latter calls for collective action in the event of a 'sudden or irregular interruption of the democratic political institutional process or of the legitimate exercise of power by the democratically elected government in any of the Organization's member states'. Specifically, the Assembly approved an Article which provides that a member of OAS whose democratically constituted government has been overthrown by force may be suspended from the exercise of the right to participate in the sessions of OAS organs, and spells out the way such suspension shall be applied.

The Protocol of Washington also incorporates among the essential purposes of the OAS the eradication of extreme poverty which constitutes an obstacle to the full democratic development of the peoples of the hemisphere. This commitment was further strengthened by amendments under the Protocol of Managua the following year, with measures designed to improve the delivery of technical co-operation to such member states. At its 20th Special Session (Feb. 1994, Mexico City), the OAS General Assembly approved a resolution on a commitment to a partnership for development and struggle to overcome extreme poverty.

Declaration of Belém do Pará. At its 24th Regular Session (June 1994, Belém do Pará), the General Assembly adopted the Declaration of Belém do Pará, in which the Ministers of Foreign Affairs and Heads of Delegation of Member States declared their commitment to strengthening the OAS as the main hemispheric forum of political consensus, so that it may support: the realization of the aspirations of member states in promoting and consolidating peace, democracy, social justice, and development, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter; their decision to promote and deepen co-operative relations in the economic, social, educational, cultural, scientific, technological and political fields; their commitment to continue and further the dialogue on hemispheric security in order to consolidate and strengthen mutual confidence; their determination to continue to contribute to the objective of general and complete disarmament, under effective international control; their determination to strengthen regional co-operation to increase the effectiveness of efforts to combat the illicit use of narcotic drugs and traffic therein; their decision to co-operate in a reciprocal effort towards preventing and punishing terrorist acts, methods and practices, and the development of international law in this matter; and their commitment to promote economic and social development for the indigenous populations of their countries.

The OAS also carries out programmes to promote the economic and social development of its member states. Specialized training is provided for Latin American and Caribbean citizens each year in development-related fields; and development projects are executed each year in response to requests from member governments.

Organization. Under its Charter the OAS accomplishes its purposes by means of:

(a) The General Assembly, which meets annually.

(b) The Meeting of Consultation of Ministers of Foreign Affairs, held to consider problems of an urgent nature and of common interest.

(c) The Councils: The Permanent Council, which meets on a permanent basis at OAS headquarters and carries out decisions of the General Assembly, assists the member states in the peaceful settlement of disputes, acts as the Preparatory Committee of that Assembly, submits recommendations with regard to the functioning of the Organization, and considers the reports to the Assembly of the other organs. The Inter-American Council for Integral Development (CIDI) (formed from the merger of two previous councils, the Inter-American Economic and Social Council and the Inter-American Council for Education, Science and Culture) directs and monitors OAS technical co-operation programmes.

(d) The Inter-American Juridical Committee which acts as an advisory body to the OAS on juridical matters and promotes the development and codification of international law. 11 jurists, elected for 4-year terms by the General Assembly, represent all the American States.

(e) The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights which oversees the observance and protection of human rights. 7 members elected for 4-year terms by the General Assembly represent all the OAS member states.

(f) The General Secretariat, which is the central and permanent organ of the OAS.

(g) The Specialized Conferences, meeting to deal with special technical matters or to develop specific aspects of inter-American co-operation.

(h) The Specialized Organizations, intergovernmental organizations established by multilateral agreements to discharge specific functions in their respective fields of action, such as women's affairs, agriculture, child welfare, Indian affairs, geography and history, and health.

The Secretary-General is elected by the General Assembly for 5-year terms. The General Assembly approves the annual budget which is financed by quotas contributed by the member governments. The budget in 1996 amounted to US$100·6m.

INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK (IDB)

The IDB, the oldest and largest regional multilateral development institution, was established in 1959 to help accelerate economic and social development in Latin America and the Caribbean. The Bank's original membership included 19 Latin American and Caribbean countries and the USA. Today, membership totals 46 nations, including non-regional members.

Members. Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Brazil, Britain, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, France, Germany, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Mexico, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Slovenia, Spain, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Trinidad and Tobago, USA, Uruguay, Venezuela.

In carrying out its mission, the Bank has mobilized some US$206,000m. for project financing, and its lending has increased dramatically from the US$294m. approved in 1961 to US$6,700m. in 1996.

Current lending priorities include poverty reduction and social equity, modernization and integration, and the environment. The Bank has a Fund for Special Operations for lending on concessional terms for projects in countries classified as economically less developed. An additional facility, the Multilateral Investment Fund (MIF), was created in 1992 to help promote and accelerate investment reforms and private-sector development throughout the region.

The Board of Governors is the Bank's highest authority. Governors are usually Ministers of Finance, Presidents of Central Banks or officers of comparable rank. The Board of Directors is the Bank's executive body. The IDB has country offices in each of its borrowing countries, and in Paris and Tokyo.

CENTRAL AMERICAN COMMON MARKET (CACM)

In Dec. 1960, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua concluded the General Treaty of Central American Economic Integration under the auspices of the Organization of Central American States (ODECA) in Managua. Long-standing political and social conflicts in the area have repeatedly dogged efforts to establish integration towards the establishment of a common market.

Members. Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama.

A protocol to the 1960 General Treaty signed by all 6 members in Oct. 1993 reaffirmed an eventual commitment to full economic integration with a common external tariff of 20% to be introduced only voluntarily and gradually.

A Treaty on Democratic Security in Central America was signed by all 6 members at San Pedro Sula, Honduras in Dec. 1995, with a view to achieving a proper 'balance of forces' in the region, intensifying the fight against trafficking of drugs and arms, and reintegrating refugees and displaced persons.

In addition, the CACM countries signed a new framework co-operation agreement with the EC in Feb. 1993, revising the previous (1985) failing agreement between them, to provide support to CACM's integration plans.

Secretary-General: Haroldo Rodas Melgar.

LATIN AMERICAN INTEGRATION ASSOCIATION (ALADI/LAIA)

The ALADI was established to promote freer trade among member countries in the region.

Members. (12) Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela and Cuba, subject to the receipt by ALADI of the Instrument of Ratification.

Observers. (23) China, Commission of the European Communities, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Inter-American Development Bank, Italy, Nicaragua, Organization of American States, Panama, Portugal, Spain, UN Development Programme, UN Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), Romania, Russia, Switzerland, Inter-American Institute for Cooperation on Agriculture (IICA), Andean Development Corporation (CAF), Latin-American Economic System (SELA).

Headquarters: calle Cebollati 1461, Casilla de Correo 577, 11000 Montevideo, Uruguay.

THE ANDEAN COMMUNITY

On 26 May 1969, an agreement was signed by Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru establishing the Cartagena Agreement (also referred to as the Andean Pact or the Andean Group). Chile withdrew from the Group in 1976. Venezuela, which was initially actively involved, did not sign the agreement until 1973. In 1997, Peru announced its withdrawal for 5 years; and Panama joined.

The Act of Caracas signed at the Group's 5th meeting in May 1991 established a free trade zone between member states to come into effect on 1 Feb. 1993 as the first step towards the creation of a common market. Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela have fully liberalized the trade among them, while Peru is still implementing its liberalization process, due to end by 2005. A Common External Tariff for imports from third countries has been in effect since Feb. 1, 1995.

In March 1996 at the Group's 8th summit in Trujillo in Peru, member countries (Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Venezuela) signed a reform protocol to the Agreement, according to which the Group would be superseded by the Andean Community, in order to promote greater economic, commercial and political integration between member countries under a new Andean Integration System (SAI).

Organization. The Andean Presidential Council, composed of the presidents of the Member States, is the highest-level body of the Andean Integration System (SAI). The Commission and the Andean Council of Foreign Ministers are legislative bodies. The General Secretariat is the executive body and the Andean Parliament is the deliberative body of the SAI. The Court of Justice, which began operating in 1984, resolves disputes between members and interprets legislation. The SAI has other institutions: Andean Development Corporation (CAF), Latin American Reserve Fund (FLAR), Simon Bolivar Andean University, Andean Business Advisory Council, Andean Labour Advisory Council and various Social Agreements.

SOUTHERN COMMON MARKET (MERCOSUR)

Founded in March 1991 by the Treaty of Asunción between Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay, the treaty committed the signatories to the progressive reduction of tariffs culminating in the formation of a common market on 1 Jan. 1995. This duly came into effect as a free trade zone affecting 90% of commodities. A common external tariff averaging 14% applies to 80% of trade with countries outside Mercosur. Details were agreed at foreign minister level by the Protocol of Ouro Preto signed on 17 Dec. 1994.

In 1996, Chile negotiated a free-trade agreement with Mercosur which came into effect on 1 Oct. Two weeks later, Bolivia signed the same. In Dec. that year, an agreement conferring associate membership on Bolivia was also endorsed.

Organization. The member states' foreign ministers form a Council responsible for leading the integration process, the chairmanship of which rotates every 6 months. The permanent executive body is the Common Market Group of member states, which takes decisions by consensus. There is a Trade Commission and Joint Parliamentary Commission, an arbitration tribunal whose decisions are binding on member countries, and a secretariat in Montevideo.

Headquarters: Rincon 575 P12, 11000 Montevideo, Uruguay.
Administrative Secretary: Manuel Olarreaga.

ASSOCIATION OF CARIBBEAN STATES (ACS)

The Convention establishing the ACS was signed on 24 July 1994 in Cartagena de Indias, Colombia, with the aim of promoting integration among all the countries of the Caribbean, comprising 25 full Member States and a number of potential Associate Members.

Members. Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Jamaica, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, St Lucia, St Kitts and Nevis, St Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, Venezuela.

The CARICOM Secretariat, the Latin American Economic System (SELA), the Central American Integration System (SICA) and the Permanent Secretariat of the General Agreement on Central American Economic Integration (SIECA) were declared Founding Observers of the ACS.

Functions. The ACS is an organization for consultation, co-operation and concerted action in the context of economic integration and functional co-operation. Its objectives are enshrined in the Convention and are focused around the following: the strengthening of the regional co-operation and integration process, with a view to creating an enhanced economic space in the region; preserving the environmental integrity of the Caribbean Sea which is regarded as the common patrimony of the peoples of the region; and promoting the sustainable development of the Great Caribbean.

Organization. The main organs of the Association are the Ministerial Council and the Secretariat. There are also Special Committees on: Trade Development and External Economic Relations; Protection and Conservation of the Environment and the Caribbean Sea; Natural Resources; Tourism; Budget and Administration; Science and Technology; Health; and Education and Culture.

Headquarters: ACS Secretariat, 11-13 Victoria Ave., POB 660, Port of Spain, Trinidad and Tobago.

Secretary-General: Dr Simón Molina Duarte (Venezuela).

CARIBBEAN COMMUNITY (CARICOM)

Origin. The Treaty of Chaguaramas establishing the Caribbean Community and Common Market was signed by the Prime Ministers of Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago at Chaguaramas, Trinidad, on 4 July 1973, and entered into force on 1 Aug. 1973.

6 additional countries and territories (Belize, Dominica, Grenada, St Lucia, St Vincent and the Grenadines, Montserrat) signed the Treaty on 17 April 1974, and the Treaty came into effect for those countries on 1 May 1974. Antigua acceded to membership on 4 July that year; St Kitts and Nevis on 26 July; the Bahamas on 4 July 1983 (not Common Market); Suriname on 4 July 1995.

Members. Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Dominica, Grenada, Guyana, Haiti, Jamaica, Montserrat, St Kitts and Nevis, St Lucia, St Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname and Trinidad and Tobago. The British Virgin Islands and Turks and Caicos Islands are associate members.

Activities. The Caribbean Community has 3 areas of activity: (i) economic co-operation through the Caribbean Common Market; (ii) co-ordination of foreign policy; (iii) functional co-operation in areas such as health, education and culture, labour and manpower development, and women's affairs.

In 1998 the Region moved closer to putting the necessary legal instruments in place for the achievement of a CARICOM Single Market and Economy with the signing of 2 additional Protocols amending the Treaty of Chaguaramas. These were Protocol III: Industrial Policy—the objectives of which are international competitive and sustainable production of goods and services for the promotion of the Region's economic and social development; and Protocol V: Agricultural Policy—the transformation of the agricultural sector towards market-oriented, internationally competitive and environmentally sound production of traditional and non-traditional primary agricultural products, and efficient management and sustainable exploitation of the Region's natural resources.

The Treaty of Chaguaramas is in the process of being revised by means of 9 Protocols. By March 1999, Protocols I, II, III and V had been signed.

Agreement was reached for the setting up of a Caribbean Court of Justice. Issues that were addressed during the year included the policy implications of investing the Caribbean Court of Justice with original jurisdiction in respect of the interpretation and application of the Treaty establishing the Caribbean Community, as amended, and in particular the issues relating to exclusive jurisdiction of the Court; parties to be accorded locus standi in proceedings before the Court; the doctrine of precedent in respect of decisions of the Court and privileges and immunities of the Court; Rules of the Court; the Regional Judicial and Legal Services Commission; and judges and counsel enjoying the right of audience before the Court.

Structure. The Conference of Heads of Government is the principal organ of the Community, and its primary responsibility is to determine and provide the policy direction for the Community. It is the final authority on behalf of the Community for the conclusion of treaties and for entering into relationships between the Community and international organizations and States. It is responsible for financial arrangements to meet the expenses of the Community.

The Community Council of Ministers is the second highest organ of the Community and consists of Ministers of Government responsible for Community Affairs. The Community Council has primary responsibility for the development of Community strategic planning and co-ordination in the areas of economic integration, functional co-operation and external relations.

Ministerial Councils established by the Conference of Heads of Government to assist the principal organs are: Council for Trade and Economic Development (COTED); the Council for Foreign and Community Relations (COFCOR); the Council for Human and Social Development (COHSOD); and the Council for Finance and Planning (COFAP).

The Bureau of the Conference of Heads of Government which is recognized as a Committee of the Conference has the authority to initiate proposals, update consensus, facilitate implementation of Community decisions and provide guidance to the Community on policy issues. The Bureau comprises the current Chairperson of the Conference of Heads of Government, the outgoing and incoming chairpersons, as well as the Secretary-General.

The Secretariat is the principal administrative organ of the Community. The Secretary-General is appointed by the Conference (on the recommendation of the Community Council) for a term not exceeding 5 years, and may be re-appointed. The Secretary-General is the Chief Executive Officer of the Community and acts in that capacity at all meetings of the Community Organs.

Institutions of the Community: Caribbean Disaster Emergency Response Agency (CDERA); Caribbean Meteorological Institute (CMI); Caribbean Meteorological Organization (CMO); Caribbean Food Corporation (CFC); Caribbean Environmental Health Institute (CEHI); Caribbean Regional Centre for the Education and Training of Animal Health Assistants; Association of Caribbean Community Parliamentarians (ACCP); Caribbean Centre for Development Administration (CARICAD); Caribbean Food and Nutrition Institute (CFNI).

Associate Institutions. Caribbean Development Bank (CDB); University of Guyana (UG); University of the West Indies (UWI); Caribbean Law Institute (CLI)/Caribbean Law Institute Centre (CLIC).

Headquarters: Bank of Guyana Building, PO Box 10827, Georgetown, Guyana.
Secretary-General: Edwin W. Carrington (Trinidad and Tobago).

ORGANIZATION OF EASTERN CARIBBEAN STATES (OECS)

Founded 1981 when 7 eastern Caribbean states signed the Treaty of Basseterre agreeing to co-operate with each other to promote unity and solidarity among the members.

Members. (1998) Antigua and Barbuda, Dominica, Grenada, Montserrat, St Kitts and Nevis, St Lucia, and St Vincent and the Grenadines. The British Virgin Islands and Anguilla have associate membership.

Functions. As set out in the Treaty of Basseterre: to promote co-operation among members and to defend their sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence; to assist member states in the realization of their obligations and responsibilities to the international community with due regard to the role of international law as a standard of conduct in their relationships; to assist member states in the realization of their obligations and responsibilities to the international community with due regard to the role of international issues, and to establish and maintain, where possible, arrangements for joint overseas representation and common services; to promote economic integration among members; to pursue these through its respective institutions by discussion of questions of common concern and by agreement on common action.

OECS's work is carried out through a number of specialized institutions, work units or projects in 7 countries. Main areas of interest include: natural resources and solid waste management; education reform, technical and vocational education; pharmaceuticals; trade and agricultural diversification; investment promotion; and civil aviation.

Headquarters: Morne Fortune, PO Box 179, Castries, St Lucia.
Director-General: Swinburne Lestrade.

ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

A multilateral development finance institution established in 1966 to promote economic and social progress in the Asian and Pacific region, the Bank's strategic objectives in the medium term are to foster economic growth, reduce poverty, improve the status of women, support human development (including population planning) and protect the environment.

The bank's capital stock is owned by 56 member countries, 40 regional, 16 non-regional. The bank makes loans and equity investments, and provides technical assistance grants for the preparation and execution of development projects and programmes; promotes investment of public and private capital for development purposes; and assists in co-ordinating development policies and plans in its developing member countries (DMCs).

The bank gives special attention to the needs of smaller or less developed countries, giving priority to regional, subregional and national projects which contribute to the economic growth of the region and promote regional co-operation. Loans from ordinary capital resources on non-concessional terms account for about 70% of cumulative lending. Loans from the bank's principal special fund, the Asian Development Fund, are made on highly concessional terms almost exclusively to the poorest borrowing countries.

Regional members. Afghanistan, Australia, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Cambodia, China, Cook Islands, Fiji Islands, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kiribati, Republic of Korea, Kyrgyzstan, Laos, Malaysia, Maldives, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Mongolia, Myanmar, Nauru, Nepal, New Zealand, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Samoa, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Sri Lanka, Taiwan, Thailand, Tonga, Tuvalu, Uzbekiston, Vanuatu and Vietnam.

Non-regional members. Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, UK, USA.

Organization. The bank's highest policy-making body is its Board of Governors, which meets annually. Its executive body is the 12-member Board of Directors (each with an alternate), 8 from the regional members, 4 non-regional.

The ADB also has seven resident missions: in Dhaka, Bangladesh; Phnom Penh, Cambodia; New Delhi, India; Jakarta, Indonesia; Káthmandu, Nepal; Islamabad, Pakistan; Hanoi, Vietnam; and a regional mission in Port Vila, Vanuatu. There are also 3 representative offices: in Tokyo, Frankfurt and Washington; and resident missions are being set up in Kazakhstan, Uzbekiston and Sri Lanka.

Headquarters: 6 ADB Avenue, Mandaluyong, Metro Manila, Philippines.

ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION ORGANIZATION (ECO)

An intergovernmental organization established in 1985 by Iran, Pakistan and Turkey for the purpose of promoting regional economic co-operation among member states. Afghanistan, Azerbaijan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekiston joined in 1992, bringing the total of member states to 10.

The principal objectives of the Organization are to promote conditions for sustainable economic development and raise the standard and quality of living in Member States through mobilization of the region's economic and social potentials. Areas of co-operation include trade, industry, agriculture, environment, transport and communications, energy, drug abuse control, human resource development, social, cultural, technical and scientific fields.

At a conference in Tehran in Feb. 1992, it was agreed to introduce preferential tariffs between member states, set up a development bank in Istanbul, and co-operate in the modernization of transport, communications, industry and agriculture. In 1993, a protocol on Preferential Tariff Arrangements was signed between Turkey, Iran and Pakistan.

At the 1995 summit of heads of state, it was agreed to set up 4 regional institutions: a trade and development bank, a shipping line, an airline and a reinsurance company. The fifth summit meeting was held in Almaty, Kazakhstan in May 1998. The Council of Ministers was to meet in Baku, Azerbaijan, in May 1999. The sixth summit will take place in Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan in 2000.

The long-term perspectives and priorities of ECO are defined in the form of 2 Action Plans: the Quetta Plan of Action, and the Istanbul Declaration and Economic Co-operation Strategy, which was adopted in 1996, with concrete targets to be achieved by 2005.

The highest policy and decision-making body is the Council of Ministers (COM) which meets at least once a year by rotation among Member States. The Council of Permanent Representatives (CPR) meets regularly in Tehran to formulate issues requiring decision by Member States and to implement decisions taken by COM. The Regional Planning Council (RPC) meets annually to review and evaluate programmes and evolve new programmes of action for submission to and approval by COM. In addition there are two specialized agencies (the Cultural Institute and the Science Foundation) and six regional institutions. ECO has observer status at the UN General Assembly and the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC).

Headquarters: 1 Goulbou Alley, Kamranieh, PO Box 14155-6176, Tehran, Islamic Republic of Iran.
Secretary-General: H. E. Mr. Onder Ozar (Turkey).

COLOMBO PLAN

History. Founded in 1950 to promote the development of newly independent Asian member countries, the Colombo Plan has grown from a group of 7 Commonwealth nations into an organization of 24 countries. Originally the Plan was conceived for a period of 6 years. This was renewed from time to time until the Consultative Committee gave the Plan an indefinite lifespan in 1980.

The Plan is multilateral in approach, bilateral in operation: multilateral in that it takes cognizance of the problems of development of member countries in the Asia and Pacific region and endeavours to deal with them in a co-ordinated way; bilateral because negotiations for assistance are made direct between a donor and a recipient country.

Members. (Permanent Member Countries) Afghanistan, Australia, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Cambodia, Fiji Islands, India, Indonesia, Islamic Republic of Iran, Japan, South Korea, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Maldives, Myanmar, Nepal, New Zealand, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Thailand and USA; (Provisional member country) Mongolia.

Aims. The aims of the Colombo Plan are: (1) to provide a forum for discussion, at local level, of development needs; (2) to facilitate development assistance by encouraging members to participate as donors and recipients of technical co-operation; and (3) to execute programmes to advance development within member countries. The Plan currently has the following programmes:

Programme for Public Administration (PPA). Initiated in 1995 to provide developing member country officials training in all sectors of public administration in the context of market-oriented economies, drawing on the experience of more developed economies in the region.

South-South Technical Co-operation Data Bank Programme (SSTC/DB). Published a report in December 1997 entitled South-South Technical Co-operation in Selected Member Countries covering technical co-operation activities of India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Pakistan, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand.

Drug Advisory Programme (DAP). Initiated in 1972, it works with governments, international bodies and NGOs in the region to deliver more effective anti-narcotics programmes. It works both in supply (controlling availability of drugs) and demand (helping counter the culture and providing assistance to addicts).

Programme for Private Sector Development (PPSD). In 1998 the PPSD conducted training programmes co-sponsored by the Asian Development Bank (ADB), the Malaysian Technical Co-operation Programme (MTCP) and the Pakistan Industrial Technical Assistance Centre (PITAC).

Colombo Plan Staff College for Technician Education (CPSC). Established in 1973, it trains management and technical staff from member countries. It is separately financed by most member countries and functions under the guidance of its own Governing Board, consisting of the heads of member countries' permanent diplomatic missions in the Philippines.

Structure. The Consultative Committee is the principal policy-making body of the Colombo Plan. Consisting of all member countries, it meets every 2 years to review the economic and social progress of members, exchange views on technical co-operation programmes and generally review the activities of the Plan. The Colombo Plan Council represents each member government and meets several times a year to identify development issues, recommend measures to be taken and ensure implementation.

Headquarters: 12 Melbourne Avenue, PO Box 596, Colombo 4, Sri Lanka.

ASIA-PACIFIC ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION (APEC)

Origin and Aims. Founded in 1989 in response to the growing interdependence among Asia-Pacific economies. Begun as an informal dialogue group, APEC has since become the primary regional vehicle for promoting open trade and practical economic co-operation in the region. It aims to promote free and open trade in the Asia-Pacific region through trade and investment liberalization and facilitation. Also, to promote economic and technical co-operation among its members. APEC's 21 member economies had a combined GDP of over US$16 trillion in 1996 and 45 per cent of global trade. New Zealand is the APEC Chair for 1999. Membership consists of economies rather than countries. Peru, Russia and Vietnam joined the community at the 10th APEC Ministerial Meeting held in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, in Nov. 1998.

Members. Australia, Brunei, Canada, Chile, China, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Japan, Korea (Republic of), Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Russia, Singapore, Taipei (Taiwan), Thailand, USA and Vietnam.

Activities. At Blake Island near Seattle in Nov. 1993, Economic Leaders envisaged a community of Asia-Pacific economies based on the spirit of openness and partnership, of co-operative efforts to solve the challenges of change, of free exchange of goods, services and investment, of broadly based economic growth and higher living and educational standards, and of sustainable growth that respects the natural environment. In 1994, in Bogor, Indonesia, Ministers translated the vision of an open trading system into the goal of free and open trade and investment in the Asia-Pacific by 2010 for developed member countries and 2020 for developing ones.

In Osaka, 1994, Leaders adopted the Osaka Action Agenda, establishing the three pillars of APEC activities: trade and investment liberalization, business facilitation and economic-technical co-operation. The Manila Action Plan for APEC (MAPA), adopted by Economic Leaders in Nov. 1996, includes the individual joint activities of all APEC economies to achieve the objectives outlined in Bogor. Attention was focused on the following 6 areas of economic and technical co-operation: developing human capital; fostering safe and efficient capital markets; strengthening economic infrastructure; harnessing technologies of the future; promoting environmentally sustainable growth; and encouraging the growth of small and medium-sized enterprises.

In Vancouver, in 1997, Economic Leaders recognized members' efforts to improve the commitments in their Individual Action Plans and reaffirmed their intention to update these annually. Leaders endorsed their Ministers' agreement that action should be taken with respect to early voluntary sectoral liberalization (EVSL) in 15 sectors, with 9 to be advanced through 1998 and implementation to begin in 1999. At the same time, they endorsed the Vancouver Framework for Enhanced Public-Private Partnership for Infrastructure Development.

In Kuala Lumpur, in 1998, Leaders reaffirmed their commitment to co-operative growth strategy. They resolved to strengthen social safety nets, financial systems, trade and investment flows, the scientific and technological base, human resources development, economic infrastructure, and business and commercial links, so as to provide the base for sustained growth into the 21st century. They also adopted the Kuala Lumpur Action Program on Skills Development, which seeks to encourage greater participation of the private/business sectors in skills development in APEC through public-business 'smart partnership'.

THE PACIFIC COMMUNITY (SPC)

Until Feb. 1998 known as the South Pacific Commission, this is a regional intergovernmental organization founded in 1947 under an Agreement commonly referred to as the Canberra Agreement. It is funded by assessed contributions from its 22 members and by voluntary contributions from member and non-member countries, international organizations and other sources.

Members. American Samoa, Australia, Cook Islands, Fiji Islands, France, French Polynesia, Guam, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Nauru, New Caledonia, New Zealand, Niue, Northern Mariana Islands, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Pitcairn Islands, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tokelau, Tonga, Tuvalu, UK, USA, Vanuatu, and Wallis and Futuna.

Functions. The SPC has 3 main areas of work: land resources, marine resources and social resources. It conducts research and provides technical assistance and training in these areas to member Pacific Island countries and territories of the Pacific.

Organization. The Conference of the Pacific Community is the governing body of the Community. Its key focus is to appoint the Director-General, to consider major national or regional policy issues and to note changes to the Financial and Staff Regulations approved by the CRGA, the Committee of Representatives of Governments and Administrations. It meets every 2 years. The CRGA meets once a year and is the principal decision-making organ of the Community. There is also a regional office in Fiji Islands.

Headquarters: BP D5, 98848 Nouméa Cedex, New Caledonia.
Website: http://www.spc.org.nc e-mail: spc@spc.org.nc
Director-General: Robert Dun (Australia).

SOUTH PACIFIC FORUM (SPF)

The South Pacific Forum held its first meeting of Heads of Government in New Zealand in 1971. The SPF provides an opportunity for informal discussions to be held on a wide range of issues. It meets annually or as necessary. The Forum has no written constitution or international agreement governing its activities nor any formal rules relating to its purpose, membership or conduct of meeting. Decisions are reached by consensus. In Oct. 1994, the Forum was granted observer status to the UN.

Members. (1998) Australia, Cook Islands, Fiji Islands, Kiribati, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, New Zealand, Niue, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu and Vanuatu.

Functions. The Secretariat's mission is to enhance the economic and social well-being of the South Pacific peoples, in support of the efforts of the national governments. Its particular responsibility is to facilitate, develop and maintain co-operation and consultation between and among its 16 member countries. Its mandate includes the identification of opportunities for the modification of trade patterns; investigation of development methods which are in keeping with the concept of regional enterprise and free and open trade; establishment of an advisory service on technical assistance, aid and investment finance; provision of economic expertise and assistance.

Activities. The Secretariat has 4 core divisions: Trade and Investment; Political and International Affairs; Development and Economic Policy; Corporate Services. Its focus is on providing a policy advisory role on issues which cannot be fully assessed on a national basis, and on providing high-level policy advice on trade and investment to members.

The South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone Treaty (of Rarotonga) was signed in 1985, prohibiting the acquisition, stationing or testing of nuclear weapons in the region. The major nuclear powers were to sign a protocol to the treaty. Russia and China signed in 1987; France, the UK and USA did not. In July 1995, when the French government decided to resume testing in French Polynesia, pressure was brought to bear on the 3 governments to sign. All 3 announced their intention to accede by mid-1996. In Jan. 1996 France announced its intention to cut short its programme, and all 3 countries signed up to the Treaty in March 1996.

Organization. The South Pacific Bureau for Economic Co-operation (SPEC) was established by the Agreement of 17 April 1973 at the 4th meeting of the SPF. In 1988 at its 19th meeting, SPEC was reorganized and renamed the South Pacific Forum Secretariat. The Secretariat has been headed (since 1977) by a Secretary-General and a Deputy Secretary-General. They form the Executive. It is governed by an executive committee, the Forum Officials Committee, which acts as intermediary between it and the Forum.

Headquarters: Ratu Sukuna Road, Suva, Fiji Islands.
Secretary-General: Ieremia Tabai.

ASSOCIATION OF SOUTH EAST ASIAN NATIONS (ASEAN)

History and Membership. ASEAN is a regional intergovernmental organization formed by the governments of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand through the Bangkok Declaration which was signed by their foreign ministers on 8 Aug. 1967. Brunei joined in 1984, Vietnam in 1995, Laos and Myanmar in 1997. The decision on whether to admit Cambodia, which has for some time enjoyed observer status in ASEAN, was deferred in July 1997 due to civil unrest there. Papua New Guinea also has observer status. In 1998, the combined GDP of member countries was estimated to be US$500,000m.

Objectives. The main objectives are to accelerate economic growth, social progress and cultural development, to promote active collaboration and mutual assistance in matters of common interest, to ensure the political and economic stability of the South East Asian region, and to maintain close co-operation with existing international and regional organizations with similar aims.

Activities. Principal projects concern economic co-operation and development, with the intensification of intra-ASEAN trade, and trade between the region and the rest of the world; joint research and technological programmes; co-operation in transportation and communications; promotion of tourism, South East Asian studies, cultural, scientific, educational and administrative exchanges. The decision to set up an ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA) was taken at the Fourth Summit meeting, in Singapore in 1992, with the aim of creating a common market in 15 years. The first step towards this was the Common Effective Preferential Tariff (CEPT) Scheme Agreement, setting a common tariff regime for manufactured and processed agricultural goods.

In Dec. 1995, heads of government meeting in Bangkok signed a treaty establishing a South-East Asia Nuclear-Free Zone, which was extended to cover offshore economic exclusion zones. Individual signatories were to decide whether to allow port visits or transportation of nuclear weapons by foreign powers through territorial waters. The ASEAN Regional Forum (ARF) was proposed at a meeting of foreign ministers in July 1993 to discuss security issues in the region. Its first formal meeting took place in July 1994 attended by all 7 members and its dialogue partners (Australia, Canada, the EU, Japan, Republic of Korea, New Zealand and the USA) and observers (People's Republic of China, Laos, Papua New Guinea, Russia and Vietnam).

Organization. The highest authority is the meeting of Heads of Government, which takes place on a formal basis every 3 years, with informal meetings each year in between. The highest policy-making body is the annual Meeting of Foreign Ministers, commonly known as AMM, the ASEAN Ministerial Meeting, which convenes in each of the member countries on a rotational basis in alphabetical order. The AEM (ASEAN Economic Meeting) meets formally or informally each year to direct ASEAN economic co-operation. The AEM and AMM report jointly to the heads of government at summit meetings. The ASEAN Standing Committee (ASC) is the policy arm and organ of co-ordination between the AMMs. An advisory body to the permanent committees, the ASC reviews the work of committees with a view to implementing policy guidelines set by the AMM. There are 5 economic committees under the AEM, and 5 non-economic committees that recommend and draw up programmes for co-operation. These committees are responsible for the operation and implementation of projects in their respective fields. Each capital has its own national secretariat. The central secretariat in Jakarta is headed by the Secretary-General, a post that revolves among the member states in alphabetical order every 3 years.

ASEAN MEKONG BASIN DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION (MEKONG GROUP)

The ministers and representatives of Brunei, Cambodia, China, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam met in Kuala Lumpur on 17 June 1996 and agreed the following basic objectives for the Group. Its principal objectives are to co-operate in the economic and social development of the Mekong Basin area and strengthen the link between it and ASEAN member countries, through a process of dialogue and common project identification.

Priorities include: development of infrastructure capacities in the fields of transport, telecommunications, irrigation and energy; development of trade and investment-generating activities; development of the agricultural sector to enhance production for domestic consumption and export; sustainable development of forestry resources and development of mineral resources; development of the industrial sector, especially small to medium enterprises; development of tourism; human resource development and support for training; co-operation in the fields of science and technology.

SOUTH ASIAN ASSOCIATION FOR REGIONAL CO-OPERATION (SAARC)

SAARC was established to accelerate the process of economic and social development in member states through joint action in agreed areas of co-operation. The foreign ministers of the 7 member countries met for the first time in New Delhi in Aug. 1983 and adopted the Declaration on South Asian Regional Co-operation whereby an Integrated Programme of Action (IPA) was launched. The charter establishing SAARC was adopted at the first summit meeting in Dhaka in Dec. 1985.

Members. Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka.

Objectives. To promote the welfare of the peoples of South Asia; to accelerate economic growth, social progress and cultural development; to promote and strengthen collective self-reliance among members; to promote active collaboration and mutual assistance in the economic, social, cultural, technical and scientific fields; to strengthen co-operation with other developing countries, and among themselves through international forums on matters of common interest. Co-operation within the framework is based on respect for the principles of sovereign equality, territorial integrity, political independence, non-interference in the internal affairs of other states, and mutual benefit. Agreed areas of co-operation under the Integrated Programme of Action (IPA) include agriculture; communications; education, culture and sports; environment and meteorology; health, population activities and child welfare; prevention of drug trafficking and drug abuse; rural development; science and technology; tourism; transport; and women in development.

The eradication of poverty in South Asia by the year 2002 was accorded the highest priority at the 1991 Colombo Summit, which established an Independent South Asian Commission on Poverty Alleviation (ISACPA) to study the problem and report back with recommendations.

SAARC has taken important steps to expand co-operation among member countries in core economic areas. The completion of the Regional Study on Trade, Manufactures and Services (TMS) in 1991 was the first significant step towards strengthening co-operation in the field. A high-level Committee on Economic Cooperation (CEC), comprising the Commerce Secretaries of member states, was established in July 1991 to act as the forum for addressing trade and economic issues. Members signed a Preferential Trading Agreement (SAPTA) on 7 Dec. 1995 and are working towards the realization of a South Asian Free Trade Area by 2000, and no later than 2005.

Organization. The highest authority of the Association rests with the heads of state or government, who meet annually at Summit level. The Council of Foreign Ministers, which meets twice a year, is responsible for formulating policy, reviewing progress and deciding on new areas of co-operation and the mechanisms deemed necessary for that. The Council is supported by a Standing Committee of Foreign Secretaries, and by the Programming Committee and 11 Technical Committees. There is a secretariat in Kâthmandu, headed by a Secretary-General, who is assisted in his work by 7 Directors, appointed by the Secretary-General upon nomination by member states for a period of 3 years which may in special circumstances be extended.

Decisions at all levels are taken on the basis of unanimity. Bilateral and contentious issues are excluded from deliberations.

Headquarters: PO Box 4222, Kâthmandu, Nepal.
Secretary-General: Naeem U. Hasan (Pakistan).

THE LEAGUE OF ARAB STATES

Origin. The League of Arab States is a voluntary association of sovereign Arab states, established by a Pact signed in Cairo on 22 March 1945 by the representatives of Egypt, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and Yemen. It seeks to promote closer ties among member states and to co-ordinate their economic, cultural and security policies with a view to developing collective co-operation, protecting national security and maintaining the independence and sovereignty of member states, in order to enhance the potential for joint Arab action across all fields.

Members. Algeria, Bahrain, Comoros, Djibouti, Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Oman, Palestine, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Sudan, Syria, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates and Republic of Yemen.

Joint Action. In the political field, the League is entrusted with defending the supreme interests and national causes of the Arab world through the implementation of joint action plans at regional and international levels, and with examining any disputes that may arise between member states with a view to settling them by peaceful means. The Joint Defence and Economic Co-operation Treaty signed in 1950 provided for the establishment of a Joint Defence Council as well as an Economic Council (renamed the Economic and Social Council in 1977). Economic, social and cultural activities constitute principal and vital elements of the joint action initiative.

Arab Common Market. The Arab Common Market came into operation on 1 Jan. 1965. The agreement, reached on 13 Aug. 1964 and open to all the Arab League states, has been signed by Iraq, Jordan, Syria and Egypt. The agreement provides for the abolition of customs duties on agricultural products and natural resources within 5 years, by reducing tariffs at an annual rate of 20%. Customs duties on industrial products are to be reduced by 10% annually. The agreement also provides for the free movement of capital and labour between member countries, the establishment of common external tariffs, the co-ordination of economic development and the framing of a common foreign economic policy. In May 1997, in a move to finance economic reforms, 2 funds totalling US$900m. were set up.

Organization. The machinery of the League consists of a Council, 11 specialized ministerial committees entrusted with drawing up common policies for the regulation and advancement of co-operation in their fields (information, internal affairs, justice, housing, transport, social affairs, youth and sports, health, environment, telecommunications and electricity), and a permanent secretariat. On the Council each state has 1 vote. Councils may meet in any of the Arab capitals. Its functions include mediation in disputes between members or a member and a country outside the League. The Secretariat is the executive organ of the Council and ministerial councils. There are also 22 specialized agencies.

The League is considered to be a regional organization within the framework of the United Nations at which its Secretary-General is an observer. It has permanent delegations in New York and Geneva for the UN, in Addis Ababa for the Organization of African Unity (OAU), as well as offices in Bonn, Vienna, Brussels, Athens, Madrid, Washington D.C., New Delhi, Beijing, Moscow, Rome, London and Paris.

Headquarters: Al Tahrir Square, Cairo, Egypt.
Secretary-General: Ahmed Esmat Abdel-Meguid (Egypt).

GULF CO-OPERATION COUNCIL (CCG)

Origin. Also referred to as the Cooperation Council for the Arab States of the Gulf (CCASG), the Council was established on 25 May 1981 on signature of the Charter by Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

Aims. To assure security and stability of the region through economic and political co-operation; promote, expand and enhance economic ties on solid foundations, in the best interests of the people; co-ordinate and unify economic, financial and monetary policies, as well as commercial and industrial legislation and customs regulations; achieve self-sufficiency in basic foodstuffs.

In June 1997 the 6 member states, together with Egypt and Syria, agreed to consolidate national markets into a larger regional market by the abolition of national tariffs and the adoption of a minimum and maximum customs duties on non-national products imported from outside the region.

Organization. The Supreme Council is formed by the heads of member states and is the highest authority. Its presidency rotates, based on the alphabetical order of the names of the member states. It holds 1 regular session every year. The Cooperation Council has a commission, called 'Commission for the Settlement of Disputes', which is attached to the Supreme Council. The Ministerial Council is formed of the Foreign Ministers of the member states or other delegated ministers and meets quarterly. The Secretariat-General is composed of Secretary-General, Assistant Secretaries-General and a number of staff as required. The Secretariat consists of the following sectors: Political Affairs, Military Affairs, Economic Affairs, Information Centre, Information Department, Secretary-General's Office, GCC Delegation in Brussels, Technical Telecommunications Bureau in Bahrain.

Finance. The annual budget of the GCC Secretariat is shared equally by the 6 member states.

Headquarters: P.O. Box 7153, Riyadh-11462, Saudi Arabia.
Secretary-General: HE Shaikh Jamil Ibrahim Alhejailan (Saudi Arabia).

Publications. GCC News (monthly, in English); Attaawun (quarterly, in Arabic); GCC Economic Bulletin (annual).

ORGANIZATION OF THE PETROLEUM EXPORTING COUNTRIES (OPEC)

Origin and Aims. Founded in Baghdad in 1960 by Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela. The principal aims are: to unify the petroleum policies of member countries and determine the best means for safeguarding their interests, individually and collectively; to devise ways and means of ensuring the stabilization of prices in international oil markets with a view to eliminating harmful and unnecessary fluctuations; and to secure a steady income for the producing countries, an efficient, economic and regular supply of petroleum to consuming nations, and a fair return on their capital to those investing in the petroleum industry. It is estimated that OPEC members possess 75% of the world's known reserves of crude petroleum, of which about two-thirds are in the Middle East.

Members. (1998) Algeria, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates and Venezuela. Membership applications may be made by any other country having substantial net exports of crude petroleum, which has fundamentally similar interests to those of member countries. Gabon became an associated member in 1973 and a full member in 1975, but in 1996 withdrew owing to difficulty in meeting its percentage contribution.

Organization. The main organs are the Conference, the Board of Governors and the Secretariat. The Conference, which is the supreme authority meeting at least twice a year, consists of delegations from each member country, normally headed by the respective minister of oil, mines or energy. All decisions, other than those concerning procedural matters, must be adopted unanimously.

OPEC FUND FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

The OPEC Special Fund was established in 1976 to provide financial aid on advantageous terms to developing countries (other than OPEC members) and international development agencies whose beneficiaries are developing countries. In 1980 the fund was transformed into a permanent autonomous international agency and renamed the OPEC Fund for International Development. It is administered by a Ministerial Council and a Governing Board. Each member country is represented on the Council by its finance minister.

The initial endowment of the fund amounted to US$800m. At the start of 1999, pledged contributions totalled US$3,435m., and the fund had extended 778 loans totalling US$3,982·7m. of which US$2,953·1m. or 74·1% was for project financing, US$724·2m. (18·2%) for balance-of-payments support and US$305·3m. (7·7%) for programme funding. The Fund has recently been authorized by its governing bodies to participate in the financing of private-sector activities involving entities located in eligible beneficiary countries.

ARAB MAGHREB UNION

Founded in 1989 to promote political co-ordination, co-operation and 'complementarity' across various fields, with integration wherever and whenever possible.

Members. Algeria, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, Tunisia.

By late 1996, joint policies and projects under way or under consideration included: the establishment of the Maghreb Investment and Foreign Trade Bank to fund joint agricultural and industrial projects; free movement of citizens within the region; joint transport undertakings, including railway improvements and a Maghreb highway; creation of a customs union; and establishment of a common market.

A Declaration committing members to the establishment of a free trade zone was adopted at the AMU's last summit in Tunis. In Nov. 1992, members adopted a charter on protection of the environment.

Headquarters: 27 rue Okba, Agdal, Rabat, Morocco.
Secretary-General: Mohamed Amamou (Tunisia).

ORGANIZATION OF AFRICAN UNITY (OAU)

History. On 25 May 1963, the heads of state or government of 32 African countries, at a conference in Addis Ababa, signed a charter establishing an Organization of African Unity. Membership comprises 53 of the 54 African countries. The only state that is not a member is Morocco, which withdrew in 1985 following admittance of the disputed state of Western Sahara as a member in 1982. In Nov. 1995, the following countries were suspended from voice and vote for failure to pay their dues: Central African Republic, Chad, Comoros, Equatorial Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Niger, São Tomé e Príncipe, Seychelles and Sierra Leone.

Aims. OAU's chief objectives are the furtherance of African unity and solidarity; the co-ordination of political, economic, cultural, health, scientific and defence policies; the elimination of colonialism in Africa; and the defence of sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence.

Activities. In June 1991, the heads of state of member countries signed a treaty to create an Africa-wide economic community by 2000, and in 1993, a mechanism was adopted for conflict prevention, management and resolution by the OAU.

Organization. The Assembly of the Heads of State and Government is the principal policy-making organ, and meets annually. The Council of Ministers meets twice a year, with each session electing its own chairperson. There is also a permanent secretariat headed by the Secretary-General elected for a 4-year term by the Assembly.

The Commission of Mediation, Conciliation and Arbitration is a 21-member body (no state may have more than 1 member) elected by the Assembly for a 5-year term, to hear and settle disputes between member states by peaceful means. There are also specialized commissions for economic, social, transport and communication, education, science, culture and health, defence, human rights and labour affairs. The biennial budget for 1996-98 was US$61·45m.

Official languages. Arabic, French, Portuguese and English.
Headquarters: POB 3243, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.
Secretary-General: Dr Salim Ahmed Salim (Tanzania).

ECONOMIC COMMUNITY OF WEST AFRICAN STATES (ECOWAS)

Founded 1975 as a regional common market, it has now become involved in political disputes, and in 1993 amended its charter to assume responsibility for the regulation of regional armed conflicts. Its military arm is Ecomog.

Members. Benin, Burkina Faso, Cape Verde, Côte d'Ivoire, Gambia, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Togo.

Organization. It meets at yearly summits which rotate in the different capitals of member states. There is a secretariat in Abuja.

Headquarters: 60 Yakubu Gowon Crescent, Asokoro, Abuja, Nigeria.

COMMON MARKET FOR EASTERN AND SOUTHERN AFRICA (COMESA)

COMESA is a grouping of 21 countries who are committed, over the long term, to the creation of a Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa. It was established in 1994 as a building block for the African Economic Community and replaces the Preferential Trade Area for Eastern and Southern Africa, which had been in existence since 1981.

Membership: Angola, Burundi, Comoros, Democratic Republic of Congo, Djibouti, Egypt, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Kenya, Madagascar, Malaŵi, Mauritius, Namibia, Rwanda, Seychelles, Sudan, Swaziland, Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

Objectives: To establish a Free Trade Area by 2000 by eliminating tariff and non-tariff barriers to intra-COMESA Trade; to establish a Customs Union with Common External Tariff by 2004.

Activities: COMESA is already on its way to achieving a Free Trade Area and a Customs Union. By 1999, 8 of its Member States had reduced their tariffs by 80%, another 4 members had reduced by 60–70%. All Member States are committed to reducing their tariffs to zero by 2000. Currently, the conventional non-tariff barriers (quantitative restrictions, licensing, import permits and restrictive foreign exchange controls) have been largely eliminated. As a result of trade liberalization and transport facilitation measures taken by COMESA, Intra-COMESA trade is now growing at the rate of 15% while overall trade has been growing at about 10%. Furthermore, the cost of transporting goods within the region has reduced by about 25%.

In addition to creating the policy environment for freeing trade, COMESA has also created specialized institutions like the Trade and Development Bank of Eastern and Southern Africa, the Re-Insurance Company, the Clearing House and the Court of Justice, to provide the required financial infrastructure and service support.

Headquarters: COMESA Secretariat, COMESA Centre, Ben Bella Road, PO Box 30051, 10101 Lusaka, Zambia.

SOUTHERN AFRICAN DEVELOPMENT COMMUNITY (SADC)

History and Membership. The Declaration and Treaty establishing the SADC was signed at the summit of heads of state or government on 17 July 1992 in Windhoek, Namibia. It replaces the South African Development Co-ordination Conference (SADCC), established in 1980 on the adoption of the Lusaka Declaration to reduce the region's economic dependence on South Africa and combat the effects of sanctions.

Members. The 10 founder member countries are Angola, Botswana, Lesotho, Malaŵi, Mozambique, Namibia, Swaziland, Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe. South Africa joined in 1994; Mauritius in 1995. Each member state has responsibility for co-ordinating a sector or sectors on behalf of all other members.

Aims and Activities. To promote economic integration and strengthen regional solidarity, peace and security. The founding treaty provides for the establishment of an arbitration tribunal.

At the Johannesburg summit in Aug. 1995, an agreement was reached committing members to the sharing of water resources. A treaty to eliminate internal trade barriers by 2000 is also being drawn up; and in 1994, SADC ministers of defence meeting in Arusha, Tanzania, approved the establishment of a regional rapid deployment peacekeeping force to contain regional conflicts or civil unrest in member states.

Official languages. English, Portuguese.
Headquarters: Private Bag 0095, Gaborone, Botswana.
Executive Secretary: Kaire Mbuende (Namibia).

LAKE CHAD BASIN COMMISSION

Established by a Convention and Statute signed on 22 May 1964 by Cameroon, Chad, Niger and Nigeria, and later by the Central African Republic, to regulate and control utilization of the water and other natural resources in the Basin; to initiate, promote and co-ordinate natural resources development projects and research within the Basin area; and to examine complaints and promote settlement of disputes, with a view to promoting regional co-operation.

In Dec. 1977, at Enugu in Nigeria, the 3rd summit of heads of state of the commission signed the protocol for the Harmonization of the Regulations Relating to Fauna and Flora in member countries, and adopted plans for the multidonor approach towards major integrated development for the conventional basin. An international campaign to save Lake Chad following a report on the environmental degradation of the conventional basin was launched by heads of state at the 8th summit of the Commission in Abuja in March 1994.

The Commission operates an annual budget of CFA 400m., and receives assistance from various international and donor agencies including the FAO, and UN Development and Environment Programmes.

Headquarters: BP 727, N'Djaména, Chad.
Executive Secretary: Bobboi Jauro.

WORLD COUNCIL OF CHURCHES

The World Council of Churches was formally constituted on 23 Aug. 1948 in Amsterdam. Today, member churches number over 330 from more than 100 countries.

Origin. The World Council was founded by the coming together of diverse Christian movements, including the overseas mission groups gathered from 1921 in the International Missionary Council, the Faith and Order Movement founded by American Episcopal Bishop Charles Brent, and the Life and Work Movement led by Swedish Lutheran Archbishop Nathan Söderblom. On 13 May 1938, at Utrecht, a provisional committee was appointed to prepare for the formation of a World Council of Churches, under the chairmanship of William Temple, then Archbishop of York.

Membership. The basis of membership (1975) states: 'The World Council of Churches is a fellowship of Churches which confess the Lord Jesus Christ as God and Saviour according to the Scriptures and therefore seek to fulfil together their common calling to the glory of the one God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit.' Membership is open to Churches which express their agreement with this basis and satisfy such criteria as the Assembly or Central Committee may prescribe. Today, more than 330 Churches of Protestant, Anglican, Orthodox, Old Catholic and Pentecostal confessions belong to this fellowship.

Activities. WCC programmes are organized by a range of supervisory committees drawn from member churches. The 4 programme units are: Unity and Renewal; Churches in Mission: Health, Education Witness; Justice, Peace and Creation; and Sharing and Service.

In Aug. 1997, the WCC launched a Peace to the City campaign, as the initial focus of a programme to overcome violence in troubled cities.

Organization. The governing body of the World Council, consisting of delegates specially appointed by the member Churches, is the Assembly, which meets every 7 or 8 years to frame policy. It has no legislative powers and depends for the implementation of its decisions upon the action of member Churches. The 8th Assembly in Harare, in 1998, had as its theme, 'Turn to God, Rejoice in Hope'. A 150-member Central Committee meets annually to carry out the Assembly mandate, with a smaller 28-member Executive Committee meeting twice a year. The General Secretariat includes Offices for Church and Ecumenical Relations, Interreligious Relations, Programme Co-ordination, Department of Communication, Office of Management and Finance, and the Ecumenical Institute at Bossey.

The budget in 1996 amounted to 103m. Swiss francs, funded by the churches and their agencies, and other project-related organizations.

UNREPRESENTED NATIONS AND PEOPLES ORGANIZATION (UNPO)

UNPO is an international organization created by nations and peoples around the world who are not represented as such in the world's principal international organizations, such as the UN. Founded in 1991, UNPO has over 50 members representing over 100m. people.

Membership. Open to all nations and peoples unrepresented, subject to adherence to the 5 principles which form the basis of UNPO's charter: equal right to self-determination of all nations and peoples; adherence to internationally accepted human rights standards; to the principles of democracy; promotion of non-violence; and protection of the environment. Applicants must show that they constitute a 'nation or people' as defined in the Covenant.

Functions and Activities. UNPO offers an international forum for occupied nations, indigenous peoples, minorities and oppressed majorities, who struggle to regain their lost countries, preserve their cultural identities, protect their basic human and economic rights, and safeguard their environment.

It does not represent those peoples; rather it assists and empowers them to represent themselves more effectively. To this end, it provides professional services and facilities as well as education and training in the fields of diplomacy, international and human rights law, democratic processes and institution building, conflict management and resolution, and environmental protection. The Organization is funded by members, private foundations and voluntary contributions.

5 former members of UNPO (Armenia, Belau, Estonia, Georgia and Latvia) subsequently achieved full independence and gained representation in the UN. Belau is now called Palau.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION FOR MIGRATION (IOM)

Established in Brussels in 1951 to help solve European population and refugee problems though migration, and to stimulate the creation of new economic opportunities in countries lacking certain manpower. IOM is committed to the principle that humane and orderly migration benefits migrants and society.

Members. Albania, Angola, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bangladesh, Belgium, Bolivia, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kenya, Liberia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Mali, Morocco, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Senegal, Slovak Republic, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania, USA, Uruguay, Venezuela and Zambia. Some 48 governments and a large number of government agencies and NGOs have observer status.

Activities. As an intergovernmental body, IOM acts with its partners in the international community to: assist in meeting the operational challenges of migration; advance understanding of migration issues; encourage social and economic development through migration; work towards effective respect of human dignity and the wellbeing of migrants. Since 1952 the IOM has assisted over 10m. refugees and migrants. The operational budget in 1997 was US$238·1m.

INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE RED CROSS (ICRC)

Origin: Founded in Geneva in Feb. 1863. From its outset the ICRC saw that volunteers could act effectively on the battlefield, without risking rejection by officers and soldiers, only if they could be told apart from ordinary civilians by a distinctive emblem and were protected from fighting.

Mission Statement: The ICRC acts to help all victims of war and internal violence, attempting to ensure implementation of humanitarian rules restricting armed violence.

The ICRC's mission arises from the basic human desire, common to all civilizations, to lay down rules governing the use of force in war and to safeguard the dignity of the weak. With a mandate from the international community to help victims of war and internal violence and to promote compliance with international humanitarian law, the ICRC's activities are aimed at protecting and assisting the victims of armed conflict and internal violence so as to preserve their physical integrity and their dignity and to enable them to regain their autonomy as quickly as possible.

* The ICRC is independent of all governments and international organizations. Its work is prompted by the desire to promote humane conduct and is guided by empathy for the victims. The ICRC is impartial: its only criterion for action is the victims' needs. The ICRC is neutral and remains detached from all political issues related to conflict.

* By applying these principles strictly, the ICRC is able to act as an intermediary between the parties to armed conflict and to promote dialogue in situations of internal violence, with a view to finding solutions for matters of humanitarian concern.

* Through its work, the ICRC helps to prevent the worsening of crises and even at times to resolve them.

* The ICRC systematically reminds all military and civilian authorities directly involved in armed conflict or internal violence of their obligations under international humanitarian law and the other humanitarian rules by which they are bound.

* The ICRC has the duty to remind all States of their collective obligation to ensure respect for international humanitarian law.

* In all societies and cultures, the ICRC endeavours to promote international humanitarian law and the fundamental human values underlying the law.

* As the founding member of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement, the ICRC directs and co-ordinates the international work of the Movement's components in connection with armed conflict and internal violence.

* The ICRC gives priority to co-operation with the National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies and their Federation. It acts in consultation with all other organizations involved in humanitarian work.

Finance. The ICRC relies for its financing on voluntary contributions from signatories to the Geneva Conventions, supranational organizations such as the European Union; and public and private sources. To obtain the necessary funding the ICRC launches annual appeals.

In 1997, the ICRC maintained a permanent presence in 54 countries but conducted operations in around 80. It also stepped up its drive to raise awareness of the banning of landmines, lobbying at international, national and regional levels.

AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL (AI)

Origin: Founded in 1961 by British lawyer Peter Beneson as a 1-year campaign for the release of prisoners of conscience, Amnesty International has grown to become a worldwide organization, winning the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977. As defined by AI, 'prisoners of conscience' are people imprisoned solely because of their political or religious beliefs, gender, or their racial or ethnic origin, who have neither used nor advocated violence. The organization's mandate is based on the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

AI has over 1m. members, subscribers and regular donors in more than 100 countries. The organization is governed by a 9-member International Executive Committee (IEC). It comprises 8 volunteer members elected every 2 years by an International Council comprising representatives of the worldwide movement, and an elected member of the International Secretariat. During the 12 months to 31 March 1998 the International Secretariat had expenditure of £16,312,000.

Each year, AI produces a global report detailing human rights violations in all regions of the world. The 1998 report, which detailed abuses during 1997, included the fact that executions were carried out in 40 countries, people were arbitrarily arrested and detained, or in detention without charge or trial in 53 countries, and in 117 countries people were reportedly tortured or ill-treated by security forces, police or other state authorities.

ORGANIZATION FOR THE PROHIBITION OF CHEMICAL WEAPONS (OPCW)

The OPCW is responsible for the implementation of the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC), which became effective on 29 April 1997. The principal organ of the OPCW is the Conference of the States Parties, composed of all the members of the organization.

Given the relative simplicity of producing chemical warfare agents, the verification provisions of the CWC are far-reaching. The routine monitoring regime involves submission by States Parties of initial and annual declarations to the OPCW, initial visits and systematic inspections of declared weapons storage, production and destruction facilities. Verification is also applied to chemical industry facilities which produce, process or consume, above certain thresholds, chemicals listed in the three Schedules of the Convention.

ANTARCTIC TREATY

Antarctica is an island continent some 15·5m. sq. km in area which lies almost entirely within the Antarctic Circle. Its surface is composed of an ice sheet over rock, and it is uninhabited except for research and other workers in the course of duty. It is in general ownerless: for countries with territorial claims, see ARGENTINA; AUSTRALIA: Australian Antarctic Territory; CHILE; FRANCE: Southern and Antarctic Territories; NEW ZEALAND: Ross Dependency; NORWAY: Queen Maud Land; UNITED KINGDOM: British Antarctic Territory.

12 countries which had maintained research stations in Antarctica during International Geophysical Year, 1957-58 (Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Chile, France, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, South Africa, the USSR, the UK and the USA) signed the Antarctic Treaty (Washington Treaty) on 1 Dec. 1959. Austria, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, Germany, Greece, Hungary, India, Italy, South Korea, North Korea, the Netherlands, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Poland, Romania, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Uruguay have subsequently acceded to the Treaty. The Treaty reserves the Antarctic area south of 60° S. lat. for peaceful purposes, provides for international co-operation in scientific investigation and research, and preserves, for the duration of the Treaty, the status quo with regard to territorial sovereignty, rights and claims. The Treaty entered into force on 23 June 1961. The 39 nations party to the Treaty (26 full voting signatories and 13 adherents) meet biennially. Decisions taken by the signatories of the 1959 Washington Treaty must be unanimous.

An agreement reached in Madrid in April 1991 and signed by all 39 parties in Oct. imposes a ban on mineral exploitation in Antarctica for 50 years, at the end of which any one of the 26 voting parties may request a review conference. After this the ban may be lifted by agreement of three quarters of the nations then voting, which must include the present 26. The agreement demilitarizes the continent, establishes the right to scientific research for all countries and creates a procedure for monitoring the environment.

INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION (IPU)

Founded in 1889 by William Randal Cremer (UK) and Frédéric Passy (France), the Inter-Parliamentary Union was the first permanent forum for political multilateral negotiations. The Union is a centre for dialogue and parliamentary diplomacy among legislators representing every political system and all the main political leanings in the world. It was instrumental in setting up what is now the Permanent Court of Arbitration in The Hague.

Activities: The IPU fosters contacts, co-ordination and the exchange of experience among parliaments and parliamentarians of all countries; considers questions of international interest and concern, and expresses its views on such issues in order to bring about action by parliaments and parliamentarians; contributes to the defence and promotion of human rights—an essential factor of parliamentary democracy and development; contributes to better knowledge of the working of representative institutions and to the strengthening and development of their means of action.

Membership: The IPU had 137 Members and 3 Associate Members in March 1999.

WORLD CUSTOMS ORGANIZATION

Established in 1952 as the Customs Co-operation Council, the World Customs Organization is an intergovernmental body with worldwide membership, whose mission it is to enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of customs administrations throughout the world. It has 145 member countries or territories.

Headquarters: Rue de l'Industrie 26-38, B-1040 Brussels, Belgium.
Secretary-General: J. W. Shaver (USA).

INTERPOL (INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL POLICE ORGANIZATION)

Organization: Founded in 1914 and composed of 177 member countries, INTERPOL provides assistance to the law enforcement community. The police of any Member State can communicate with the police of any other Member State using INTERPOL's 4 official languages: English, Arabic, French and Spanish.

Aims: Under Article 2 of the Organization's Constitution, INTERPOL's aims are:

(a) 'To ensure and promote the widest possible mutual assistance between all criminal police authorities, within the limits of the laws existing in the different countries and in the spirit of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

(b) To establish and develop all institutions likely to contribute effectively to the prevention and suppression of ordinary law crimes.'

The limits of its actions are laid down in Article 3:

'It is strictly forbidden for the Organization to undertake any intervention or activities of a political, military, religious or racial character.' A political offence is one which is considered to be of a predominantly political nature because of the surrounding circumstances and underlying motives, even if the offence itself is covered by the ordinary criminal law in the country in which it was committed. But offences are not considered to be political when they are committed outside a 'conflict area', and when the victims are not connected with the aims or objectives pursued by the offenders.

Co-operation with INTERPOL is based on actions taken by the police forces in the various Member States, operating within their own national boundaries and in accordance with their own national laws. All Member States are provided with the same services and have the same rights, irrespective of the size of their financial contributions to the Organization.

Although governed by principles designed to ensure regularity and continuity, working methods are flexible enough to take account of the wide variety of structures and situations in different countries. Respect for these principles means that INTERPOL cannot have teams of detectives with supranational powers who travel around investigating cases in different countries. International co-operation has to depend on co-ordinated action on the part of the Member States' police forces, all of which may supply or request information or services as needed.

INTERNATIONAL MOBILE SATELLITE ORGANIZATION (IMSO)

Founded in 1979 as the International Maritime Satellite Organization (Inmarsat) to establish a satellite system to improve maritime communications for distress and safety and commercial applications. Its competence was subsequently expanded to include aeronautical and land mobile communications. Privatization, due to be completed in April 1999, transfers the business to a newly created company and the Organization remains as a regulator to ensure that the company fulfils its public services obligations. The company is to take the Inmarsat name and the Organization is to use the acronym IMSO. In March 1999 the Organization had 86 member Parties.

Organization. The Assembly of all Parties to the Convention meets every 2 years. There is also a 22-member Council of representatives of national tele-communications administrations as well as an executive Directorate.

Headquarters: 99 City Road, London, EC1Y 1AX, UK.
Director of the Secretariat, IMSO: Jerzy Vonau.
Chief Executive, Inmarsat Ltd: Warren Grace.

INTERNATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS SATELLITE ORGANIZATION (INTELSAT)

Intelsat was founded in 1964 to own and operate the worldwide commercial satellite communications system. Costs are borne by members in proportion to their usage of the system. 19 Intelsat satellites in geosynchronous orbit provided a global communications service, including most of the world's overseas traffic in 1998. It has 143 member states.

Objectives. To provide international telephone and TV services, a digital data transmission service (Intelnet), a business service (IBS) and domestic telecommunications services.

Organization. The Assembly of Parties attended by representatives of member governments meets every 2 years to consider policy and long-term aims, and matters of interest to members. Practical aspects of the system are dealt with at the annual Meeting of Signatories. There is a 27-member Board of Governors.

Headquarters: 3400 International Drive, NW, Washington, D.C., 20008–3098, USA.
Director-General: Irving Goldstein (USA).

INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORT ASSOCIATION (IATA)

Founded in 1945 for inter-airline co-operation in promoting safe, reliable, secure and economical air services, IATA has over 230 members from more than 130 nations worldwide. IATA is the successor to the International Air Traffic Association, founded in the Hague in 1919, the year of the world's first international scheduled services.

INTERNATIONAL ROAD FEDERATION (IRF)

The IRF is a non-profit, non-political service organization whose purpose is to encourage better road and transportation systems worldwide and to help apply technology and management practices to give maximum economic and social returns from national road investments.

Founded following the second world war, over the years the IRF has led major global road infrastructure developments, including achieving 1,000 km of new roads in Mexico in the 1950s, and promoting the Pan-American Highway linking North and South America. It publishes World Road Statistics, as well as road research studies, including a 140-country inventory of road and transport research in co-operation with the US Bureau of Public Roads.

INTERNATIONAL CONFEDERATION OF FREE TRADE UNIONS (ICFTU)

Origin. The founding congress of the ICFTU was held in London in Dec. 1949 following the withdrawal of some Western trade unions from the World Federation of Trade Unions (WFTU), which had come under Communist control. The constitution, as amended, provides for co-operation with the UN and the ILO, and for regional organizations to promote free trade unionism, especially in developing countries. By 1999 the ICFTU represented some 124m. workers across 213 national trade union centres in 143 countries.

Aims. The ICFTU aims to promote the interests of working people and to secure recognition of workers' organizations as free bargaining agents; to reduce the gap between rich and poor; and to defend fundamental human and trade union rights. In 1996, it campaigned for the adoption by the WTO of a social clause, with legally binding minimum labour standards.

Organization. The Congress meets every 4 years. It elects the Executive Board of 50 members nominated on an area basis for a 4-year period; 5 seats are reserved for women, nominated by the Women's Committee; and the Board meets at least once a year. Various committees cover economic and social policy, violation of trade union and other human rights, trade union co-operation projects and also the administration of the International Solidarity Fund. There are joint ICFTU–International Trade Secretariat committees for co-ordinating activities.

The ICFTU has branch offices in Geneva and New York, and regional organizations in America (Caracas), Asia (Singapore) and Africa (Nairobi).

WORLD FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS (WFTU)

Origin and History. The WFTU was founded on a worldwide basis in 1945 at the international trade union conferences held in London and Paris, with the participation of all the trade union centres in the countries of the anti-Hitler coalition. The aim was to reunite the world trade union movement at the end of the Second World War. The acute political differences among affiliates, especially the east-west confrontation in Europe on ideological lines, led to a split. A number of affiliated organizations withdrew in 1949 and established the ICFTU. The WFTU now draws its membership from the industrially developing countries like India, Vietnam and other Asian countries, Brazil, Peru, Cuba and other Latin American countries, Syria, Lebanon, Kuwait and other Arab countries, and it has affiliates and associates in more than 20 European countries. It has close relations with the International Confederation of Arab Trade Unions, the Organization of African Trade Union Unity as well as the All-China Federation of Trade Unions, all of which participated at its Congress in Damascus in 1994. Its Trade Unions Internationals (TUIs) have affiliates in Russia, the Czech Republic, Poland and other East European countries, Portugal, France, Spain, Japan and other OECD countries.

The headquarters of the TUIs are situated in Helsinki, New Delhi, Budapest, Paris and Moscow. The WFTU and its TUIs have 130m. members, organized in 92 affiliated or associated national federations and 6 Trade Unions Internationals, in 130 countries. It has regional offices in New Delhi, Havana, Dakar, Damascus and Moscow and Permanent Representatives accredited to the UN in New York, Geneva and Rome.

WORLD CONFEDERATION OF LABOUR (WCL)

Founded in 1920 as the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, it went out of existence in 1940 as a large proportion of its 3·4m. members were in Italy and Germany, where affiliated unions were suppressed by the Fascist and Nazi regimes. Reconstituted in 1945 and declining to merge with the WFTU or ICFTU, its policy was based on the papal encyclicals Rerum novarum (1891) and Quadragesimo anno (1931), and in 1968 it became the WCL and dropped its openly confessional approach.

Today, it has Protestant, Buddhist and Moslem member confederations, as well as a mainly Roman Catholic membership. In its concern to defend trade union freedoms and assist trade union development, the WCL differs little in policy from the ICFTU above. A membership of 11m. in about 90 countries is claimed. The biggest group is the Confederation of Christian Trade Unions (CSC) of Belgium (1·2m.).

Organization. The WCL is organized on a federative basis which leaves wide discretion to its autonomous constituent unions. Its governing body is the Congress, which meets every 4 years. The Congress appoints (or re-appoints) the Secretary-General at each 4-yearly meeting. The General Council which meets at least once a year, is composed of the members of the Confederal Board (at least 22 members, elected by the Congress) and representatives of national confederations, international trade federations, and trade union organizations where there is no confederation affiliated to the WCL. The Confederal Board is responsible for the general leadership of the WCL, in accordance with the decisions and directives of the Council and Congress. There are regional organizations in Latin America (Caracas), Africa (Banjul, Gambia) and Asia (Manila), and a liaison centre in Montreal.

Headquarters: 33 rue de Trèves, Brussels 1040, Belgium.
Secretary-General: Carlos Luís Custer (Argentina).

Publications. Annual Report; Labour Press and Information Bulletin (6 a year).

THE FRANCOPHONIE INSTITUTIONNELLE

The Francophonie Institutionnelle is an intergovernmental organization representing 52 states (including 3 with observer status) using French as the official language. Objectives include the exchange of information and the holding of ministerial conferences to promote economic and social development. The Secretary-General is based in Paris.

Members: Belgium, Benin, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Republic of Cameroon, Canada (New Brunswick, Quebec), Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Comoros, Republic of the Congo, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Djibouti, Dominica, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, France, Gabon, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, Laos, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Mali, Mauritius, Mauritania, Moldova, Monaco, Morocco, Niger, Romania, Rwanda, St Lucia, Senegal, Seychelles, Switzerland, Chad, Togo, Tunisia, Vanuatu, Vietnam.

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION FOR STANDARDIZATION (ISO)

Established in 1947, the International Organization for Standardization is a non-governmental federation of national standards bodies from some 130 countries worldwide, one from each country. ISO's work results in international agreements which are published as International Standards. The first ISO standard was published in 1951 with the title 'Standard reference temperature for industrial length measurement'.

Mission: To promote the development of standardization and related activities in the world with a view to facilitating the international exchange of goods and services, and to developing co-operation in the spheres of intellectual, scientific, technological and economic activity.

Headquarters: 1 rue de Varembé, Case postale 56, CH-1211 Geneva 20, Switzerland.

WORLD WIDE FUND FOR NATURE (WWF)

Origin: WWF was officially formed and registered as a charity on 11 Sept. 1961. The first National Appeal, with HRH The Duke of Edinburgh as President, was launched in the United Kingdom on 23 Nov. 1961, shortly followed by the United States and Switzerland.

Organization: WWF is the world's largest and most experienced independent conservation organization with over 4·7m. supporters and a global network of 24 National Organizations, 5 Associates and 26 Programme Offices.

The National Organizations carry out conservation activities in their own countries and contribute technical expertise and funding to WWF's international conservation programme. The Programme Offices implement WWF's fieldwork, advise national and local governments, and raise public understanding of conservation issues.

Mission: preserving genetic, species and ecosystem diversity; ensuring that the use of renewable natural resources is sustainable now and in the longer term, for the benefit of all life on Earth; promoting actions to reduce to a minimum pollution and the wasteful exploitation and consumption of resources and energy; WWF's ultimate goal is to stop, and eventually reverse, the accelerating degradation of our planet's natural environment, and to help build a future in which humans live in harmony with nature.

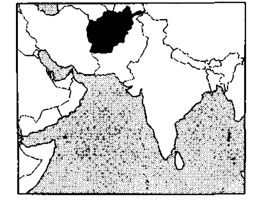
INTERNATIONAL UNION AGAINST CANCER (UICC)

Founded in 1933, the UICC is an international non-governmental association of more than 260 member organizations in about 80 countries.

Objectives: The UICC is devoted exclusively to all aspects of the worldwide fight against cancer. Its objectives are to advance scientific and medical knowledge in research, diagnosis, treatment and prevention of cancer, and to promote all other aspects of the campaign against cancer throughout the world. Particular emphasis is placed on professional and public education.

Membership: The UICC is made up of voluntary cancer leagues, associations and societies as well as cancer research and treatment centres and, in some countries, ministries of health.



Activities: The UICC creates and carries out programmes around the world in collaboration with several hundred volunteer experts, most of whom are professionally active in UICC member organizations. It co-operates with other organizations, societies and governmental bodies engaged in promoting cancer control and research. The international Cancer Congress is held by the UICC every 4 years; the most recent took place in Aug. 1998 in Rio de Janeiro.

AFGHANISTAN

Islamic State of Afghanistan

Capital: Kabul
Population estimate, 2000: 25·59m.
Estimated GDP: $18·1bn.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Ahmad Sháh Durráni consolidated Afghanistan as a kingdom, ruling with an advisory council of tribal chiefs from 1747 until his death in 1773. His frontiers extended into modern Kir and Pakistan, although by 1770 he had suffered reversals at the hands of the Sikhs in the Punjab. After 1773 the unity of Afghanistan was threatened by internal quarrels. In 1816–24 there was civil war, ending in victory for the Barakzay clan, whose leader Dost Mohammed became Amir in 1826. His capital was Kabul.

By then the Punjab and Kashmir had been lost, the British had become dominant in India and the Russian empire was ambitious to expand southwards. The British, believing that Dost Mohammed was unwilling or unable to resist Russia, invaded Afghanistan in 1839 in an attempt to replace him with their own protégé, Shah Shoja. An apparent British victory in 1840 was followed by actual defeat when the Afghans murdered Shah Shoja, and British forces were forced to retreat from Kabul with heavy losses.

Dost Mohammed was restored in 1843 and made friendship treaties with Britain in 1855 and 1857; he died in 1863 and was succeeded by his third son Shír 'Ali Khan. There was then civil war between two branches of the family and once more the Russians and the British tried to exploit internal instability. There was a second war with Britain (1878–79). In 1879 Shír 'Ali Khan fled leaving his son Ya'qúb Khan on the throne. In 1880 the British recognized the rival 'Abdor Rahmán Khan, in return for his undertaking to accept British control of his foreign policy. He defeated internal uprisings and in 1893 he accepted the Durand Line as his frontier with Russia.

Habíbolláh Khan (1901–19) continued the relationship with Britain in return for a subsidy. During the First World War he succeeded in remaining neutral. However, there was popular support in Afghanistan for the Ottoman Turks, and Habíbolláh's refusal to ally himself with them against Britain led to his assassination in 1919. His son and successor Amánolláh declared total independence from Britain at his coronation. Fighting broke out, but Britain then recognized the independence of Afghanistan at the Treaty of Rawalpindi, 1919.

Amánolláh was a reforming Khan who antagonized the conservatives of traditional society. Tribal revolt and banditry reached a climax in 1928 and the Khan abdicated in 1929 to be replaced first by Habíbolláh (soon murdered) and then by Mohammed Nadir (1929–33). The latter signed a friendship treaty with Russia. He was murdered in 1933 and succeeded by Mohammed Záhir who (like Nadir towards the end of his reign) took the title of Shah. Záhir Shah ruled with the advice, and under the influence, of his family for 40 years. In 1964 he was able to overcome opposition and put through a constitution establishing parliamentary democracy (effective 1965). In 1973 there was a military coup led by his cousin and brother-in-law Mohammed Daoud who abolished the 1964 constitution and declared a republic. Záhir Shah abdicated on 24 Aug. 1973.

The republic inherited pressure for tribal autonomy and economic crises mainly brought about by drought and famine. In April 1978 President Daoud was overthrown and killed in a further coup which installed a pro-Soviet government led by the People's Democratic Party. The new president was Noor Mohammad Taraki who signed a new treaty of friendship with the Soviet Union. In Sept. 1979 Taraki was overthrown, whereupon the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan in Dec., deposed his successor and placed Babrak Karmal at the head of government.

In Dec. 1986 Sayid Mohammed Najibullah became president amid continuing civil war between government and rebel Moslem forces. Whereas in the 1960s both the USSR and the USA had financed government projects, in 1987 the USSR provided considerable military support and development aid to the pro-Soviet administration while the USA extended more limited support to the rebels. In the mid-1980s the UN began negotiations on the withdrawal of Soviet troops and the establishment of a government of national unity. Soviet troops began withdrawing from Afghanistan in early 1988.

After talks in Nov. 1991 with Afghan opposition movements ('mujahideen'), the Soviet government agreed to transfer its support from the Najibullah regime to an 'Islamic Interim Government'. As mujahideen insurgents closed in on Kabul President Najibullah stepped down on 16 April 1992. On 28 April an interim council received power from the outgoing government. Factional fighting between troops of the Minister of Defence, Ahmed Shah Massoud, and the Hezb-i-Islami, led by Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, continued until the signing of a peace agreement on 21 May providing for the withdrawal of armed forces from Kabul and the establishment of a neutral zone. On 11 Aug. 1992 fighting between government forces and the Hezb broke out again.

Late in 1994 a newly formed militant Islamic movement, 'Taliban' (i.e. 'students of religion'), took possession of Kandahar and routed Hekmatyar's Hezb-i-Islami at Kabul in Feb. 1995, apparently with Pakistani support. They were in turn defeated by the troops of President Rabbani, who regained possession of Kabul by 11 March 1995, but had rallied by Sept. 1995 and captured Herat, carrying out air and rocket raids on Kabul in Nov. 1995. On 13 May 1996 Hekmatyar and President Rabbani formed an alliance against the Taliban.

On 26 Sept. 1996 Taliban forces captured Kabul and set up an interim government under Mohamed Rabbani. Former President Najibullah and his brother were hanged, and Afghanistan was declared a complete Islamic state under Sharia law.

Government forces which had retreated to the north of Kabul, in alliance with an Uzbek warlord, Abdul Rashid Dostam, and a pro-Iranian Sh'ite faction, Hezb-i-Wahdat, then counter-attacked.

A new Taliban offensive, launched on 27 Dec. 1996, gave Taliban control of 90% of the country. In Aug. 1998 the Taliban seized control of Mazar i Sharif, and it now controls all but a small part of the country in the north. However, only three countries—Pakistan, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates—recognize Taliban as the legal government. In early 1999, hopes were raised of a broad based government to include representatives of the opposition coalition.

On 20 Aug. 1998 the USA launched cruise missile attacks against a camp at Khowst, 150 km south of Kabul, which the USA claimed was one of the most active terrorist bases in the world. The attack was carried out in response to the bombings of the US embassies in Kenya and Tanzania earlier in the month in which a total of 263 people had been killed.

Early in 1999, hopes were raised of a broad-based government to include representatives of the opposition coalition.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Afghanistan is bounded in the north by Turkmenistan, Uzbekiston and Tajikistan, east by China, east and south by Pakistan and west by Iran.

The area is 251,773 sq. miles (652,090 sq. km). Population according to the last (1979) census was 15,551,358, of which some 2·5m. were nomadic tribes. Estimate (1995) 23·5m. Population density, 31 per sq. km. The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 25·59m. In 1995 an estimated 19·9% of the population lived in urban areas. There remained 3·5m. refugees in Pakistan and Iran in 1995.

The capital, Kabul, had an estimated population of 0·7m. in 1993. Other towns (with UN population estimates, 1988): Kandahar (225,500), Herat (177,300), Mazar i Sharif, (130,600), Jalalabad (55,000).

Main ethnic groups: Pashtuns, 35–38%; Tajiks, 25–30%; Hazaras, 10–15%; Uzbeks, 10%; Turkman, 5%; Others, 2%. The official languages are Pashto and Dari.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Infant mortality, 1990–95, 163 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate (number of births per woman), 6·9; annual growth rate, 2·6%. Expectation of life at birth, 43 years for men and 44 for women over the period 1990–95.

CLIMATE

The climate is arid, with a big annual range of temperature and very little rain, apart from the period Jan. to April. Winters are very cold, with considerable snowfall, which may last the year round on mountain summits. Kabul, Jan. 27°F (–2·8°C), July 76°F (24·4°C). Annual rainfall 13" (338 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

After the removal of President Najibullah, power was exercised by a 10-member Ruling Council chaired by Burhanuddin Rabbani who became interim President of the country on 28 June 1992. In Dec. 1992 a Grand Council of 1,335 national delegates convened and re-elected Burhanuddin Rabbani president. The Grand Council was wound up after 205 of its members had been designated a constituent assembly. President Rabbani's mandate expired in June 1994 but he remained in office.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

The de facto government is formed by the Taliban movement. The de jure government is led by President Burhanuddin Rabbani.

President: Burhanuddin Rabbani, b. 1942; (Jamiat Party; sworn in 2 Jan. 1993).

Prime Minister: Arsala Rahmani.

Local Government. There are 32 provinces, each administered in theory by an appointed governor.

DEFENCE

In 1997 military expenditure totalled US$209m. (US$10 per capita), representing 12·5% of GDP.

Army. Army organization disintegrated into factional groups after the deposition of President Najibullah in April 1992. Equipment included 700 T-54/-55/-62 main battle tanks. Strength was (1993) about 40,000, mainly conscripts, but most units of the Army are well below strength, largely as a result of desertions.

Air Force. Prior to the overthrow of the regime of President Najibullah in 1992, the Air Force had about 180 combat aircraft and 5,000 officers and men. Since then, the service has also been broken into various factions and few combat aircraft remain airworthy; the helicopters and transport aircraft fleet are also largely grounded.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Relations between Iran and Afghanistan have deteriorated as Taliban militants gain ground against government forces supported by Iran. Threats of war were provoked in Oct. 1998 after the Taliban allegedly killed 6 Iranian diplomats and a journalist during the capture of Mazar i Sharif, Afghanistan's 4th largest city, and Bamiyan, one of the last strongholds of the Iranian-backed Shia Muslims. Border clashes were reported on 8 Oct. near the north-eastern city of Torbat-e-Jam. 1·5m. Afghan refugees, mostly from the Shia minority, have fled to Iran.

Afghanistan is a member of the UN and Colombo Plan.

ECONOMY

Performance. Real GDP growth was 26·2% in 1995, after many years of negative growth (–3·0% in 1994 and –10·8% in 1993).

Currency. The unit of currency is the afghani (AFA) of 100 puls.

Banking and Finance. The Afghan State Bank is the largest of the 3 main banks and also undertakes the functions of a central bank, holding the exclusive right of note issue. Foreign banks have been permitted to operate since 1990.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in increasingly common use. Local units include: 1 khurd = 0·244 lb; 1 pao = 0·974 lb; 1 charak = 3·896 lb; 1 sere = 16 lb; 1 kharwar = 1,280 lb or 16 maunds of 80 lb each; 1 gaz = 40 inches; 1 jarib = 60 x 60 kabuli yd or ½ acre; 1 kulba = 40 jaribs (area in which 2½ kharwars of seed can be sown); 1 jarib yd = 29 inches.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Most generating plant is hydroelectric. Installed capacity was 371,000 kW in 1993. Production was 670m. kWh in 1994; consumption per capita was an estimated 35 kWh in 1995.

Oil and Gas. Oil reserves are estimated at 100m. tonnes; gas at 100,000m. cu. metres. A consortium of oil and gas companies led by Unocal plans a US$2bn. natural gas pipeline from Turkmenistan through Afghanistan to Pakistan.

Minerals. There are deposits of coal, copper, barite, lapis-lazuli, emerald, talc and salt.

Agriculture. The greater part of Afghanistan is mountainous but there are many fertile plains and valleys. In 1994 there were 7·91m. ha of arable land, 0·14m. ha of permanent cropland and 30m. ha of pasture; 2·8m. ha were irrigated in 1994. 69·2% of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture in 1995. Principal crops include grains, rice, fresh and dried fruits, vegetables, cotton seed and potatoes.

Production, 1992, in 1,000 tonnes: Wheat, 1,650; barley, 150; maize, 300; rice, 300. Livestock (1996): Cattle, 1·65m.; horses, 300,000; camels, 265,000 (1995); sheep, 14·3m.; goats 2·15m. (1995); asses, 1·16m.; chickens, 9m. (1995).

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 2·1% of the total land area (3·1% in 1990). Timber production in 1995 was 7·68m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1995 total catches were estimated to be 1,300 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Major industries include natural gas, fertilizers, cement, coalmining, small vehicle assembly plants, building, carpet weaving, cotton textiles, clothing and footwear, leather tanning, sugar manufacturing and fruit canning.

Labour. The workforce was 8,851,000 in 1996 (65% males). In 1995 the unemployment rate was estimated at 8%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Total exports (1995), US$153m.; imports US$344m. Main exported products: non-edible crude materials (excluding fuels), manufactured goods (raw material intensive), machinery and transport equipment, fruits, nuts, hand-woven carpets, wool, hides, precious and semi-precious gems. Main imports: foodstuffs and live animals, beverages and tobacco, mineral fuels, manufactured goods, chemicals and related products, machinery and transport equipment. Main trading partners : Kyrgyzstan, Pakistan and Russia.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were an estimated 21,000 km of roads in 1996, of which 2,800 km were paved. All roads, particularly outside the towns, are in a very poor state of repair as a result of military action. Approximately 31,000 passenger cars (1·4 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 25,000 trucks and vans were in use in 1996.

Rail. There are no railways in the country, but the Oxus bridge—opened in 1982—brought a short section of 1,524 mm gauge track into the country from Uzbekistan. A Trans-Afghan Railway was proposed in an Afghan-Pakistan-Turkmen agreement of 1994.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Kabul (Khwaja Rawash Airport). The national carrier is Ariana Afghan Airlines, which in 1998 operated direct flights from Kabul to Amritsar, Dubai and Jeddah. In 1995 scheduled airline traffic of Afghanistan-based carriers flew 5·8m. km, carrying 250,000 passengers (107,000 on international flights).

Shipping. There are practically no navigable rivers. A port has been built at Qizil Qala on the Oxus and there are 3 river ports on the Amu Darya, linked by road to Kabul.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 29,000 telephone main lines, or 1·3 per 1,000 inhabitants. There is telegraphic communication between all the larger towns and with other parts of the world.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 352 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A Supreme Court was established in June 1978. If no provision exists in the Constitution or in the general laws of the State, the courts follow the Hanafi jurisprudence of Islamic law.

Religion. The predominant religion is Islam. An estimated 84% of the population are Sunni Moslems, and 15% Shi'ites.

Education. Adult literacy was 31·5% in 1995 (male, 47·2%; female, 15·0%). Afghanistan has the biggest difference in literacy rates between the sexes in favour of males of any country outside Africa. There are elementary schools throughout the country, but secondary schools exist only in Kabul and provincial capitals. Both elementary and secondary education are free. In 1995 there were 1,312,197 pupils (20,055 teachers in 1994) in primary education and 512,851 pupils (17,548 teachers in 1994) in secondary education. During the period 1990–95 only 8% of females of primary school age were enrolled in school (the lowest percentage in the world).

In 1995–96 there were 5 universities, 1 university of Islamic studies, 1 state medical institute and 1 polytechnic. Kabul University had 9,500 students and 500 academic staff.

Health. In 1991 there were 2,233 doctors, 267 dentists, 1,451 nurses, 510 pharmacists and 338 midwives.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio and TV Afghanistan is government-controlled. In 1995 there were 2·4m. radio receivers and 200,000 television receivers (colour by PAL and SECAM).

Press. In 1995 there were 15 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 200,000, at a rate of 10 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. In 1996 there were 4,000 foreign tourists.

ALBANIA

Republika e Shqipërisë

Capital: Tirana
Population estimate, 2000: 3·49m.
Estimated GDP: $4·4bn.
HDI/world rank: 0·656/105

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Of Illyrian origin, the Albanian clans were compelled to recognize the suzerainty of the expanding Ottoman empire in 1385. Split since 1054 between Rome (Catholics) and Constantinople (Orthodox), many Albanians converted to Islam and were able to rise high in the Ottoman administration. One such was Gjergj Kastrioti (1405–68), surnamed Skanderbeg, who defected from his Turkish commandership in 1443, reconverted to Christianity and maintained, with help from Naples, Venice and the Papal States, a guerrilla resistance to the Turks. In 1431 the Turks introduced a fiefdom system, whereby land was held in return for military or civil service. These fiefdoms became hereditary estates, and a class of large landowners developed. With the decline of central power, some lords acquired a wide measure of local autonomy.

After the Russo-Turkish war of 1877–78, an Albanian League was set up at Prizren to resist the cession of Albanian territory ordered by the Treaty of San Stefano and the Congress of Berlin. Demands grew for autonomy from the Turkish government, and although the League was suppressed by force in 1881, revolts continued. Expectations of reform from the Young Turk government of 1909 were disappointed. After the defeat of Turkey in the Balkan war of 1912, Albanian nationalists under the leadership of Ismail Kemal, a liberal opposition deputy in the Turkish parliament, proclaimed Albania's independence at Vlorë on 28 Nov. 1912 and set up a provisional government with Kemal at its head.

The London conference of 1912–13 recognized Albania's independence and chose the German, Prince William of Wied, as ruler, aided by a government of landowners and an international control commission. Weid's 6-month reign was bedevilled by subversion. During the First World War Albania became a battlefield for warring occupation forces. By the secret Treaty of London (26 April 1915), Britain, France and Russia offered Italy large tracts of Albania as an inducement to enter the war; and on 3 June 1917 the Italian commander in Albania declared Albania's independence under Italian protection. Such clandestine arrangements, however, were in conflict with the US President Woodrow Wilson's 'Fourteen Points' which emphasized self-determination and open treaties. In Jan. 1920, 50 Albanian regional delegates met at Lushnjë to protest to the peace conference against partitioning. They set up a regency council of 4 (representing the religious denominations) and formed a government under Sulejman Delvina. Irregular forces ejected the Italians who, however, retained the island of Sazan. Albania was admitted to the League of Nations on 20 Dec. 1920. In Nov. 1921 the conference of ambassadors confirmed her 1913 frontiers with minor alterations.

A parliament was elected in April 1921 in which 2 factions emerged led respectively by Ahmet Zogu, representing conservative landowners, and the Orthodox Bishop Fan Noli, representing the intelligentsia and urbanized middle class. Zogu became prime minister in 1922 and secured 40 out of 95 seats in the elections of Dec. 1923, but his government's harshness and corruption provoked a military coup on 10 June 1924. Zogu fled to Yugoslavia and Fan Noli set up a government which was idealistic but ineffective and made the fatal step of recognizing the Soviet Union. In Dec. 1924, with Yugoslav help, Zogu drove Noli into exile and set up a personal authoritarian régime. On 1 Sept. 1928 he proclaimed himself King Zog I.

Italian influence grew from the mid-1920s. A friendship pact was signed with Italy in 1926 and a defence treaty in 1927. In April 1939 Mussolini invaded Albania outright and set up a puppet state, uniting the Italian and Albanian crowns. Zog went into exile.

During the Second World War Albania suffered first Italian and then German occupation. Resistance was carried on by royalist, nationalist republican and communist movements, often at odds with each other. The latter enjoyed the support of Tito's partisans, who were instrumental in forming the Albanian Communist Party on 8 Nov. 1941. Communists dominated the Anti-Fascist National Liberation Committee which became the Provisional Democratic Government on 22 Oct. 1944 after the German withdrawal, with Enver Hoxha, a French-educated school teacher and member of the Communist Party Central Committee, at its head. Large estates were broken up and the land distributed, though full collectivization was not brought in until 1955–59. Britain, the USA and the USSR recognized the provisional government on condition that free elections were held, but at the elections of 2 Dec. 1945 only communists and their sympathizers were allowed to stand. The new national assembly met in Jan 1946, proclaimed a people's republic and promulgated a Soviet-type constitution.

In 1946 Yugoslav plans to incorporate Albania were set in motion with a customs union and Treaty of Mutual Aid. Hoxha emerged as an opponent, and managed to delay the tactics of the pro-Yugoslav faction until the Stalin-Tito rift of 1948 gave him a chance to espouse the Moscow line. Close ties were forged with the USSR, but following Khrushchev's reconciliation with Tito in 1956 China replaced the Soviet Union as Albania's powerful patron from 1961 until the end of the Maoist phase in 1977. The régime then adopted a policy of 'revolutionary self-sufficiency'. In Dec. 1981 Mehmet Shehu, then prime minister, allegedly committed suicide. Hoxha died on 11 April 1985.

Following the collapse of the Soviet empire, there were demonstrations against the government, often led by students. In Dec. 1990 the People's Assembly adopted a decree legalizing opposition parties. A Communist government was elected in March 1991, but following a general strike resigned in June. A successor government was itself replaced by a non-party interim government in Dec. 1991. A non-Communist government was elected in March 1992.

In 1997 Albania was disrupted by financial crises caused by the collapse of fraudulent pyramid finance schemes. A period of violent anarchy, with many fatalities, led to the fall of the administration led by President Berisha (Democratic Party) and to fresh elections which returned a Socialist-led government. A UN peacekeeping force withdrew in Aug. 1997 but sporadic violence continued, with the opposition calling for new elections.

On 12 Sept. 1998 a close aide of former President Berisha was assassinated in what the Socialist government claimed was a failed coup attempt. Violence erupted, bringing with it 2 days of rioting, the resignation of the Interior Minister and on 28 Sept. the resignation of Prime Minister Fatos Nano. The Socialist Party nominated 30-year-old Pandeli Majko as his replacement.

In April 1999 the Kosovo crisis which led to NATO air attacks on Yugoslavian military targets set off a flood of refugees into Albania.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Albania is bounded in the north by Yugoslavia, east by Macedonia, south by Greece and west by the Adriatic. The area is 28,748 sq. km (11,101 sq. miles). At the census of 1989 the population was 3,184,417; density, 111 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 3·49m.

In 1995, 62·8% of the population lived in rural areas. The capital is Tirana (population in 1,000 in 1991, 251); other large towns are Durrës (86·9), Shkodër (83·7), Elbasan (83·2), Vlorë (76), Korçë (67·1), (populations in 1990) Fier (37), Berat (37), Lushnjë (24), Kavajë (23) and Gjirokastër (Argyrocastro) (21).

The country is administratively divided into 26 districts, 66 towns, 306 town boroughs, 537 village unions and 2,844 villages.

Districts are named after their capitals; exceptions: Tropojë, capital—Bajram Curri; Mat—Burrel; Mirditë—Rrëshen; Skrapar—Çorovodë; Dibrë—Peshkopi; Kolonjë—Ersekë.

At the 1989 census, members of ethnic minorities totalled 64,816, including 58,758 Greeks and 4,697 Macedonians.

The official language is Albanian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 estimates: Births, 76,000; deaths, 26,000. Rates (per 1,000, 1996 est.): Births, 22·2; deaths, 7·6. Infant mortality, 1990–95, was 32 per 1,000 live births, the highest in Europe. Fertility rate (number of births per woman), 2·9 in 1990–95, also the highest in Europe. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, 68·0 years for males and 74·0 years for females. Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 2·3%. Abortion was legalized in 1991.

CLIMATE

Mediterranean-type, with rainfall mainly in winter, but thunderstorms are frequent and severe in the great heat of the plains in summer. Winters in the highlands can be severe, with much snow. Tirana, Jan. 44°F (6·8°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall 54" (1,353 mm). Shkodër, Jan. 39°F (3·9°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 57" (1,425 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was promulgated on 26 April 1991. The supreme legislative body is the single-chamber National Assembly of 155 deputies, 115 directly elected and 40 elected by proportional representation, for 4-year terms. Where no candidate wins an absolute majority, a run-off election is held. Senior members of the former Communist Party, or members of parliament before May 1991, are not permitted to stand in national or local elections until 2002.

A draft new constitution, submitted to a referendum in Nov. 1994, was rejected by 53·8% of votes cast; turn-out was 75%.

The President is elected by Parliament for a 5-year term.

National Anthem. 'Rreth Flamurit të për bashkuar' ('The flag that united us in the struggle'); words by A. S. Drenova, music by C. Porumbescu.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On 2 March 1997 President Berisha dismissed the government of Alexander Meksi (Democratic Party of Albania) and declared a state of emergency. On 3 March Sali Berisha was re-elected President for a second term. In an agreement between the Government and opposition brokered by Italy, President Berisha promised a general amnesty, the formation of a government of national reconciliation and elections in June. On 11 March he appointed Bashkim Fino (Socialist Party of Albania) prime minister. On 11 May the government adopted an electoral law, approved by the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe, setting up a mixed system of 2 rounds of first-past-the-post voting and proportional representation. These elections took place on 29 June and 6 July 1997. The Socialist Party of Albania won 99 of the 155 seats with 52·8% of votes cast, the ruling Democratic Party of Albania 29 with 25·7%, Social Democratic Party of Albania 8 with 2·5%, Human Rights' Unity Party 4 with 2·8%, National Front 3 with 2·3%. Non-partisans won 3 seats and 5 other parties won 7 seats between them. There were also 2 seats vacant.

The newly elected parliament chose Rexhep Mejdani (Socialist Party of Albania; PSS) as President on 24 July 1997.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Rexhep Mejdani (PSS), elected 24 July 1997.

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Pandeli Majko (PSS).

Deputy Prime Minister: Ilir Meta. Foreign: Paskal Milo (Social Democratic Party of Albania; SDP). Defence: Luan Hajdaraga. Public Sector Economy and Privatization: Ulli Bufi (PSS). Labour and Social Affairs: Kadir Rrapi. Food and Agriculture: Lufter Xhuveli (Agrarian Party). Finance: Anastas Angjeli. Public Works and Transport: Ingrid Shuli. Education: Et'hem Ruka (PSS). Culture, Youth and Sport: Edi Rama. Health: Leonard Solis (Human Rights Union). Information: Musa Ulqini. Economic Co-operation and Trade: Ennelinda Meksi (PSS). Governmental Co-ordination: Ilir Meta. Justice: Thimio Kondi (Independent). State Secretary for European Integration: Maqo Lakrori (PSS). Local Government: Arben Demeti. Minister of State for Legislative Reform and Relations with Parliament: Arben Imami (Democratic Alliance).

Local Government. There are 12 prefectures, each under a prefect nominated by the Prime Minister, subdivided into 36 districts. Elected councils function at district, municipal and commune level. There are 64 city and 310 commune mayoralties. Elections were held on 20 and 26 Oct. 1996; turn-out was 72%. The Democratic Party gained 58 city and 267 commune mayoralties. The OSCE refused to monitor the elections because it was not permitted sufficient observers.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 15 months. In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$94m. (US$26 per capita), representing 6·7% of GDP.

Army. The Army consists of 9 infantry divisions. Equipment includes 138 T-34 and 721 T-59 main battle tanks. Strength (1996) 60,000 (including 20,000 conscripts). There is an internal security force of 5,000; frontier guards number 5,000. There is a People's Militia of 3,500.

Navy. The combatant navy includes 2 submarines, 2 offshore patrol craft, 24 hydrofoil torpedo boats, 11 inshore patrol craft and 4 inshore minesweepers. Auxiliaries include 2 tankers and about 10 service craft. Navy personnel in 1996 totalled 2,500 officers and ratings, including 350 coastal defence guards. There are naval bases at Durrës and Vlorë.

Air Force. The Air Force, controlled by the Army, had (1997) about 7,000 personnel (1,400 conscripts), and operated 70 combat aircraft, mostly Chinese. There are 5 aviation regiments, 3 with fighters, 1 with transport aircraft and 1 with helicopters. In 1997 the USA agreed to supply Cessna T-37 trainers.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Albania is a member of the UN, the Council of Europe, the Central European Initiative and the NATO Partnership for Peace.

ECONOMY

Policy. Priority is given to the development of agriculture and the exploitation of tourism and natural resources. Privatization of land, small businesses and housing was effected in 1991–93. A privatization programme for large enterprises was initiated in 1995 under the aegis of the National Privatization Agency. Sales are at auction or through vouchers.

Towards the end of 1997 Prime Minister Fatos Nano succeeded in raising US$600m. from foreign donors (more than had been requested) to help rebuild the country's economy.

Performance. GDP fell by 6% in 1997 after the collapse of pyramid finance schemes.

Budget. The fiscal year is the calendar year.

In 1995 revenue amounted to 49,068m. leks and expenditure to 69,687m. leks.

Currency. The monetary unit is the lek (ALL), notionally of 100 qindars. In Aug. 1965 a new lek was introduced: 10 old leks = 1 new lek. In Sept. 1991 the lek was pegged to the ecu at a rate of 30 leks = 1 ecu. In June 1992 it was devalued from 50 to 110 to US$1. Annualized inflation was 14·5% in 1995 (85% in 1993), but in Feb. 1998 was reported to be nearing 50%. In Feb. 1996 the UK restored 1,574 kg of gold which had been held in compensation under a French-UK-US trusteeship for the mining of 2 British warships in the 'Corfu incident' of 1946. Foreign exchange reserves were US$317m. in Feb. 1998 and gold reserves 120,000 troy oz. Total money supply was 87m. leks in Nov. 1997.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the formally independent Bank of Albania, founded in 1925 with Italian aid as the Albanian State Bank and renamed in 1993. Its governor is Qarmil Tusha. In 1996 there were 3 state-owned commercial banks, 1 foreign bank and 2 joint ventures.

A stock exchange opened in Tirana in 1996.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Albania is rich in hydro-electric potential. Electricity capacity was 1·53m. kW in 1995. Production was 3·86bn. kWh in 1994. Consumption per capita in 1995 was an estimated 1,221 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Offshore exploration began in 1991. Oil has been produced onshore since 1920. Oil reserves are some 540m. tonnes. Output of crude in 1992, 0·99m. tonnes. Natural gas is extracted. Reserves, 8,000m. cu. metres. Output, 1993, 100m. cu. metres. Oil investment includes the building of a 40 km pipeline to the Adriatic coast.

A consortium led by Premier Oil, an independent UK company, signed an agreement in Dec. 1997 to develop Albania's biggest onshore oilfield, Patos Merinze, by investing US$250m. Production is to increase from 6,000 bbls. a day to more than 25,000 within 4 years as a result of the venture, which represents the largest single foreign investment made in Albania.

Minerals. Mineral wealth is considerable and includes lignite, chromium, copper and nickel. Production, 1994 (in 1,000 tonnes): Lignite, 169; chromium ore, 223; copper ore, 178; iron-nickel ore (1991), 931. Nickel reserves are 60m. tonnes of iron containing 1m. tonnes of nickel, but extraction had virtually ceased by 1996. A consortium of British and Italian companies is modernizing the chrome industry with the aim of making Albania the leading supplier of ferrochrome to European stainless steel producers.

Agriculture. In 1996, 60% of the population depended upon agriculture, which contributed 56% of GDP. No other European country is dominated by agriculture to such an extent. The country is mountainous, except for the Adriatic littoral and the Korçë Basin, which are fertile. Only 25% of the land area is suitable for cultivation. In 1994 there were 0·58m. ha of arable land, 0·13m. ha of permanent cropland and 0·4m. ha of pasture. 0·35m. ha were irrigated in 1994.

A law of Aug. 1991 privatized co-operatives' land. Families received allocations according to their size made by village committees. In 1994 there were 0·42m. private farms; holdings averaged 1·4 ha. Since 1995 owners have been permitted to buy and sell agricultural land. In 1994 there were 9,000 tractors in use.

Production (in 1,000 tonnes), 1994: Total grains, 508 (including maize, 151); sugar-beet, 60; potatoes, 86; barley, 3; sunflower seeds, 2; tobacco, 13; dried beans, 16; soya beans, 1; fodder, 20; vegetables (including water melons), 585.

Livestock, 1996: Cattle, 0·85m.; sheep, 2·45m.; goats, 1·28m. (1995); pigs, 1·1m.; horses 58,000; asses, 113,000; chickens, 3m. (1995). Livestock products, 1994 (in 1,000 tonnes): Beef and veal, 50; pork, 20; mutton and goat, 33; chicken, 4; wool, 3; milk, 764,000 litres; 285m. eggs.

Forestry. Forests covered 1,046,000 ha in 1995 (38·2% of the total land area), mainly oak, elm, pine and birch. Timber production in 1995 was 409,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. The total catch in 1995 amounted to an estimated 3,100 tonnes (1,850 tonnes from sea fishing).

INDUSTRY

Output is small, and the principal industries are agricultural product processing, textiles, oil products and cement. Closures of loss-making plants in the chemical and engineering industries built up in the Communist era led to a 60% decline in production by 1993. Output, 1994 (in 1,000 tonnes): Rolled steel, 17; phosphate fertilizer, 11; ammonium nitrate, 6; sulphuric acid, 4; cement, 240; cigarettes, 1; soap, 3; vegetable oil, 6; 40m. bricks; 3m. articles of knitwear; beer, 7·2m. litres; wine, 0·5m. litres.

Labour. In 1994 the workforce was 1·54m., including 0·6m. in the private sector. Nearly half of the active labour force is engaged in agriculture. Unemployment was 15·8% in 1997.

Minimum wages may not fall below one-third of maximum. Hours of labour: 8-hour day, 6-day week and 12 days yearly paid holiday. Retirement age is 60 for men and 55 for women.

Trade Unions. Independent trade unions became legal in Feb. 1991.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign investment was legalized in Nov. 1990. Foreign debt was some US$781m. in 1996. Remittances from Albanians working abroad totalled US$334m. in 1993.

Imports and Exports. Exports in 1996 totalled US$211m.; imports, US$938m. In 1994 exports included 45·3% manufactures, 26·7% fuels and lubricants, 14·3% foodstuffs, tobacco and live animals, 4·6% raw materials, 3·4% machinery and transport equipment; imports: 31·8% machinery and transport equipment, 25·5% foodstuffs, tobacco and live animals, 18·9% manufactures, 10·9% fuels and lubricants, 6·5% chemical products.

Main export markets, 1995 (% of total trade): Italy, 51·1%; Greece, 9·7%; Germany, 6·1%; Turkey, 6%. Main import suppliers: Italy, 36·8%; Greece, 26·1%; Germany, 4·8%; Turkey, 3·9%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1995 there were 2,900 km of paved main roads, 5,000 km of unpaved secondary roads and 9,500 km of rural tracks. 160,000 vehicles were registered in 1996.

Rail. Total length in 1996 was 742 km. 4m. passengers and 0·6m. tonnes of freight were carried in 1995.

Civil Aviation. The national carrier is Albanian Airlines, a joint venture with a Kuwaiti firm. It began operations in Oct. 1995. In 1998 it flew services to Bologna, Frankfurt, Istanbul and Rome. Tirana (Rinas Airport) was also served in 1998 by Ada Air, Adria Airways, Alitalia, Austrian Airlines, Hemus Air, Lufthansa, Malév, Olympic Airways, SABENA, Swissair and Turkish Airlines. 200,000 passengers used Rinas in 1995 (30,000 in 1990). In 1995 scheduled airline traffic of Albanian carriers flew 0·2m. km, carrying 13,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping. In 1995 merchant shipping totalled 80,954 GRT. The main ports are Durrës, Vlorë, Sarandë and Shëngjin.

Telecommunications. A state-owned mobile telephone network was set up in 1996, initially serving 8,000 subscribers. There were 86,800 telephone main lines in 1997, or 23·3 per 1,000 inhabitants (the lowest telephone provision of any European country).

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 698 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. A new criminal code was introduced in June 1995. The administration of justice is presided over by the Council of Justice, chaired by the President of the Republic, which appoints judges to courts. A Ministry of Justice was re-established in 1990 and a Bar Council set up. In Nov. 1993 the number of capital offences was reduced from 13 to 6 and the death penalty was abolished for women.

Religion. The population is 70% of Moslem origin, mainly Sunni with some Belaktashi, 7% Albanian Orthodox, 5% Roman Catholic and 18% others. The Albanian Orthodox Church is autocephalous; it is headed by an Exarch and 3 metropolitans. In 1993 there were 47 priests. The Roman Catholic cathedral in Shkodë has been restored. In 1993 there were 4 Roman Catholic bishops. Percentages of the population actively practising were estimated in 1996 as Moslems, 20%; Orthodox, 6%; Roman Catholics, 3%.

Education. Primary education is free and compulsory in 8-year schools from 7 to 15 years. Secondary education is also free and lasts 4 years. Secondary education is divided into 3 categories: General; technical and professional; vocational. There were, in 1995–96, 2,670 nursery schools with 84,536 pupils and 4,416 teachers; in 1994–95, 1,782 primary schools with 550,737 pupils and 30,893 teachers; and in 1995–96, 89,895 pupils and 6,321 teachers at secondary schools. In 1995–96 there were 4 universities, 1 agricultural university, 1 technological university, 1 polytechnic, 1 academy of fine arts and 1 higher institute of physical education. There were 14,699 university students and 1,138 academic staff in 1994–95. Adult literacy is 85%.

In 1994 total expenditure on education came to 3% of GNP.

Health. Medical services are free, though medicines are charged for. In 1993 there were 40 hospitals, 6,308 doctors and 6,801 nurses. In 1995 there were about 10,000 hospital beds.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is regulated by the National Council for Radio-Television, 1 member of which is appointed by the president, and the other 6 by the permanent Commission on the Media, which is composed equally of representatives of government and opposition parties. The National Council broadcasts a national radio programme and a second radio programme from 14 stations. There are also regional programmes and an external service. In 1995 there were 700,000 radio and 350,000 TV receivers (colour by PAL). Albania has the fewest TV receivers per 1,000 population in Europe, with 103 per 1,000 in 1995.

Cinema. In 1990 there were 108 cinemas with an attendance of 3·3m.

Press. In 1995 there were 4 national dailies (combined circulation of 180,000, at a rate of 53 per 1,000 inhabitants), 2 owned by political parties; and 45 other newspapers.

Tourism. In 1996 there were 56,000 foreign tourists, spending US$11m. In 1995 there were 3,000 hotel beds.

ALGERIA

Jumhuriya al-Jazairiya ad-Dimuqratiya ash-Shabiya (People's Democratic Republic of Algeria)

Capital: Algiers
Population estimate, 2000: 31·6m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 4,620
HDI/world rank: 0·746/82

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first Algerian kingdom emerged from the Punic Wars. Massinissa reigned over his kingdom of Numidia from 202–148 BC and his dynasty lasted until 106 BC when his grandson Jugurtha became a Roman client. As part of the Roman Empire, Numidia flourished, becoming known as the 'granary of Rome'.

With the decline of the Roman Empire, Algeria became part of the powerful Berber empires of the Almoravids and Almohads. Tlemcen became the eastern capital of the Almohads and flourished as a centre of Islam. During this period Algerian seaports like Algiers, Annaba and Bijaya thrived on trade with European markets. The demise of the Almohad empire created a power vacuum which led to the rise of piracy along what became known as the Barbary Coast. Coastal cities hired corsairs to seize merchant vessels and gain an advantage in the fierce competition for trade on the high seas. It was not until late in the 18th century that Europeans were able to challenge the Barbary pirates of Algeria with superior naval power and artillery. In 1815 a US naval squadron under Captain Stephen Decatur attacked Algiers and forced its governor to sign a treaty banning piracy against US ships.

Persistent attacks on European shipping caused the British and Dutch to combine their forces against the Algerians and almost totally destroyed their fleet in 1816. The French took Algiers in 1830 and, despite formidable resistance, by 1857 the whole country was in French control. The French settlers who subsequently arrived developed political and economic power at the expense of the indigenous Moslem population. In Nov. 1954 the Front de Libération Nationale (FLN), representing the Moslem majority, sought national independence by open warfare against the French administration and armed forces. There was extensive loss of life and property during the fighting which continued unabated until in March 1962 a ceasefire was agreed between the French government and the nationalists. The conflict marked the only successful challenge to colonialism by a Middle Eastern country. Against the wishes of the French in Algeria, Gen. de Gaulle conceded Algerian independence on 3 July 1962.

The Political Bureau of the FLN took over the functions of government, a National Constituent Assembly was elected and the Republic was declared on 25 Sept. 1962. The founder of the FLN, Ahmed Ben Bella, became prime minister, becoming president the following year. On 15 June 1965 the government was overthrown by a junta of army officers, who established a Revolutionary Council under Col. Houari Boumédienne. After 10 years of rule, Boumédienne proposed that elections should be held for a president and a National Assembly. The proposed new constitution was accepted in a referendum in Nov. 1976 and Boumédienne was elected president (unopposed), securing more than 99% of the votes cast. A National Assembly was elected in Feb. 1977, only FLN members being allowed as candidates.

On the death of the president in Dec. 1978 the Revolutionary Council again took over the government. Col. Bendjedid Chadli was proposed president, and a referendum accepted him. When he stood for re-election in 1984, as the sole candidate, he was chosen for a further 5 years. But in Dec. 1991, when the Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) won the first round, the President resigned and his functions were assumed by a High Committee of State. The second round of elections was cancelled. In March 1992 the FIS was dissolved by court order. The head of state, Mohamed Boudiaf, was assassinated on 29 July 1992, and a campaign of terrorism was launched by Moslem fundamentalists which has continued to the present day. It is estimated that over 100,000 lives have been lost since the war between the Government and the Islamists began in 1992. Additionally, more than 1,000 Algerians have 'disappeared' after being arrested by government forces.

Liamine Zeroual was appointed State President in Jan. 1994 and elected President on 16 Nov. 1995. Hopes that violence would be brought to an end by the parliamentary poll of June 1997 were disappointed and local elections in Oct. 1997 brought opposition accusations of ballot rigging. 1998 began with reports of over 1,000 deaths in the previous 2 weeks. The Algerian government blamed the slaughter on fanatical Islamists.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Algeria is bounded in the west by Morocco and Western Sahara, south-west by Mauritania and Mali, south-east by Niger, east by Libya and Tunisia, and north by the Mediterranean Sea. It has an area of 2,381,741 sq. km (919,595 sq. miles). Population (census 1987) 22,971,558; estimate (1998) 29,300,000. Population density (1995), 12 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 31·6m.

2·5m. Algerians live in France.

83% of the population speak Arabic, 17% Berber; French is widely spoken. A law of Dec. 1996 made Arabic the sole official language.

The estimated populations (1993-94) of the 48 wilayat (provincial councils) were as follows:

The capital is Algiers (1995 population, 2,168,000). Other major towns (with 1987 census populations): Oran, 609,823; Constantine, 440,842; Annaba, 222,518; Batna, 181,601; Sétif, 170,182; Sidi-bel-Abbès, 152,778; Skikda, 128,747; Biskra, 128,280; Blida, 127,284; Béjaia, 114,534; Mostaganem, 114,037; Tlemcen, 107,632; Tébassa, 107,559; Béchar, 107,311.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998 estimates: Births, 806,000; deaths, 164,000; marriages, 151,467; stillbirths, 17,190. Rates (1998): Births, 27·5 per 1,000; deaths, 5·6 per 1,000; growth, 2·14%. Expectation of life (1992), 65·6 years.

CLIMATE

Coastal areas have a warm temperate climate, with most rain in winter, which is mild, while summers are hot and dry. Inland, conditions become more arid beyond the Atlas Mountains. Algiers, Jan. 54°F (12·2°C), July 76°F (24·4°C). Annual rainfall 30" (762 mm). Biskra, Jan. 52°F (11·1°C), July 93°F (33·9°C). Annual rainfall 6" (158 mm). Oran, Jan. 54°F (12·2°C), July 76°F (24·4°C). Annual rainfall 15" (376 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A referendum was held on 28 Nov. 1996. The electorate was 16,434,527; turn-out was 79·6%. The electorate approved by 85·81% of votes cast a new Constitution which defines the fundamental components of the Algerian people as Islam, Arab identity and Berber identity. It was signed into law on 7 Dec. 1996. Political parties are permitted, but not if based on a separatist feature such as race, religion, sex, language or region. The terms of office of the President are limited to 2, but the President's powers of nomination are widened (General-Secretary of the Government, governor of the national bank, judges, chiefs of security organs and prefects). Parliament is bicameral: A 380-member National Assembly elected by direct universal suffrage using proportional representation, and a 144-member Council of the Nation, one-third nominated by the President and two-thirds indirectly elected by the 48 local authorities. The Council of the Nation debates bills passed by the National Assembly which become law if a three-quarters majority is in favour.

National Anthem. 'Qassaman bin nazilat Il-mahiqat' ('We swear by the lightning that destroys'); words by M. Zakaria, tune by Mohamed Fawzi.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential elections on 16 Nov. 1995 the electorate was 15,969,904; turn-out was 74·92%. Liamine Zeroual was elected for a second term with 61·34% of votes cast against 3 opponents.

Elections for the National Assembly were held on 5 June 1997. There were 7,486 candidates from 39 parties. The electorate was 16·8m. Turn-out was officially put at 65·4%. The National Democratic Rally (RND) gained 155 seats, the Society for Peace Movement (MSP) 69, the National Liberation Front (FLN) 64, Ennahda 34, FFS 19, Rally for Culture and Democracy 19, Labour Party 4 and others 16. In the elections to the Council of the Nation on 25 Dec. 1997 the National Democratic Rally won 80 of the 96 seats, the National Liberation Front 10, FFS 4 and MSP 2.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President and Minister for National Defence: Liamine Zeroual (b. 1941; sworn in 27 Nov. 1995).

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Ismail Hamdani.

Agriculture and Fisheries: Boulahouadjeb Benalia. Commerce: Belaid Bakhti. Communication, Culture and Government Spokesman: Abdelaziz Rahabi. Energy and Mines: Youcef Yousfi. Equipment, Urban and Rural Development: Abderrahmane Belayat. Finance: Abdelkrim Harchaoui. Foreign Affairs: Ahmed Attaf. Health and Population: Yahia Guidoum. Higher Education and Scientific Research: Amar Tou. Housing: Abdelkader Bounekraf. Industry and Restructuring: Abdelmadjid Menasra. Interior, Local Communities and Environment: Abdelmalek Sellal. Justice: Ghaouti Mekamcha. Labour, Social Protection and Vocational Training: Hacene Laskri. National Education: Boubakeur Benbouzid. National Solidarity and Family: Rabea Mechernene. Posts and Telecommunications: Mohamed Salah Youyou. Religious Affairs: Bouabdallah Ghoulemallah. Small and Medium-sized Enterprises: Bougerra Soltani. Tourism and Handicrafts: Abdelkader Bengrina. Transportation: Sid Ahmed Boulil. Veterans Affairs: Mohamed Said Abadou. Youth and Sports: Mohamed Aziz Derouaz.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 18 months (6 months basic training and 12 months civilian tasks) at the age of 19.

Military expenditure totalled US$2,114m. in 1997 (US$73 per capita), representing 4·6% of GDP.

Army. There are 6 military regions. The Army had a strength of 107,000 (75,000 conscripts) in 1996, organized in 2 armoured and 2 mechanized divisions, 5 motorized infantry brigades, 1 airborne division, and 7 artillery and 5 air defence battalions. Equipment includes 330 T-54/-55, 330 T-62 and 300 T-72 main battle tanks. The Ministry of the Interior maintains National Security Forces of 20,000. The Republican Guard numbers 1,200 personnel and the Gendarmerie 25,000.

Navy. The Naval combatant force consists of 2 modern Russian-built diesel-powered patrol submarines, 3 frigates, 3 missile-armed corvettes, 11 fast missile craft, 8 other patrol craft, 1 ocean minesweeper, 2 tank landing ships, and 1 tank landing craft. There are some 10 auxiliaries. An associated coastguard 500-strong operates 28 fast cutters. Naval personnel in 1997 totalled 7,000. There are naval bases at Algiers, Annaba, Mers el Kebir and Jijel.

Air Force. The Air Force in 1997 had about 200 combat aircraft and 10,000 personnel. There are 8 squadrons of MiG-21s, 5 squadrons of MiG-23 variable-geometry interceptors and fighter-bombers, 3 squadrons of Su-20 variable-geometry attack aircraft, more than 30 Mi-24 assault helicopters and gunships, 17 C-130H Hercules, 3 F.27, 4 Il-76 and 5 An-12 transports and a variety of smaller transports, a wing of helicopters mainly operating Mi-8/17s, and training units equipped with CM.170 Magister and L-39 Albatros armed jet counter-insurgency/trainers, and two-seat versions of operational types. Surface-to-air missile units have Soviet-built 'Guidelines', 'Goas', 'Gainfuls' and 'Gaskins'.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Algeria is a member of UN, OAU, the Arab League, UMA (Maghreb Arab Union) and OPEC.

ECONOMY

Policy. A law on privatization of July 1995 envisages the creation of small- and medium-size businesses in commerce, tourism and transport. Strategic industries (gas and oil) and large industrial complexes are to remain state-owned. Some 1,200 small and 50 large businesses were offered for sale to Algerian citizens; 30% of the shares are reserved for employees (5% free of charge).

Performance. GDP growth was 4% in 1995 (0·6% in 1994; –1·2% in 1993).

Budget. The fiscal year starts on 1 Jan. In 1996 (1995 in brackets) revenue was DA 825,157m. (DA 600,847m.) and expenditure DA 749,009m. (DA 625,695m.).

Currency. The unit of currency is the Algerian dinar (DZD) of 100 centimes. Foreign exchange reserves were US$8,803m. in Feb. 1998, with gold reserves 5·58m. troy oz. Total money supply was 584,695m. dinars in Sept. 1996. Inflation was 15·1% in 1996. The dinar was devalued by 28·6% in April 1994.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Banque d'Algérie. The Governor is Abdelwahab Keramane. In 1996 there were 5 state-owned commercial banks. Private banking recommenced in Sept. 1995.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 6·01m. kW in 1994. 7% is hydro-electric. Production in 1994 was 18·7bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was estimated to be 583 kWh in 1995.

Oil and Gas. A law of Nov. 1991 permits foreign companies to acquire up to 49% of known oil and gas reserves. Oil and gas production accounted for 23·2% of GDP in 1994. Oil production in 1995 was 1·21m. bbls. a day. Production of natural gas in 1995 was 150,000m. cu. metres. Proven reserves are 3,700,000m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Output in 1992 (in tonnes): Iron ore 2,565,300; lead, 1,507; phosphates, 1,173; zinc, 7,488. There are also deposits of mercury, silver, copper, antimony, kaolin, marble, onyx, salt and coal.

Agriculture. In 1996 agriculture accounted for 13% of GDP. Much of the land is unsuitable for agriculture. The northern mountains provide grazing. There were 7·48m. ha of arable land in 1994, 0·57m. ha of permanent crops and 31·6m. ha of permanent pasture. 0·55m. ha were irrigated in 1994. In 1987 the government sold back to the private sector land which had been nationalized on the declaration of independence in 1962; a further 0·5m. ha, expropriated in 1973, were returned to some 30,000 small landowners in 1990. In 1995 the agricultural population was 6·57m. There were 98,800 tractors and 10,000 harvester-threshers in 1994.

The chief crops in 1993 were (in 1,000 tonnes): Wheat, 1,350; barley, 800; dates, 265; potatoes, 1,200; oranges, 270; mandarins and tangerines, 96; watermelons, 395; wine, 65; tomatoes, 515; olives, 130; onions, 232; oats, 40.

Livestock, 1996: Horses, 67,000; mules, 82,000; asses, 230,000; cattle, 1·28m.; camels, 115,000 (1995); sheep, 17·56m.; goats, 2·55m. (1995), chickens, 80m. (1995).

Forestry. Forests covered 1·86m. ha. in 1995, or 0·8% of the total land area. The greater part of the state forests are brushwood, but there are large areas with cork-oak trees, Aleppo pine, evergreen oak and cedar. The dwarf-palm is grown on the plains, alfa on the tableland. Timber is cut for firewood and for industrial purposes, and for bark for tanning. Timber production in 1995 was 2·52m. cu. metres.

ANDORRA

Principat d'Andorra

Capital: Andorra-la-Vella
Population estimate, 2000: 80,000
Estimated GDP: $1·2bn.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The political status of Andorra was regulated by the Paréage of 1278 which placed Andorra under the joint suzerainty of the Comte de Foix and of the Bishop of Urgel. The rights vested in the house of Foix passed by marriage to that of Bearn and, on the accession of Henri IV, to the French crown. A democratic constitution was adopted in 1993.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The co-principality of Andorra is situated in the eastern Pyrenees on the French–Spanish border. The country is mountainous. Area, 450 sq. km. In lieu of a census, a register of population is kept. The registered population on 1 July 1996 was 72,766; 0–14 years, 16%; 15–64 years, 73%; 65 and over, 11%. Density, 162 per sq. km.

In 2000 the population is projected to be 80,000.

In 1995, 95·4% of the population lived in urban areas.

The chief towns are Andorra-la-Vella, the capital (population, 22,387) and its suburb Escaldes-Engordany (13,177). 30% of the residential population are Andorran, 61% Spanish and 6% French. Catalan is the official language; Spanish is widely spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births (1995, per 1,000 inhabitants), 11·0; deaths, 3·4. Life expectancy (1997): male, 80·5 years; female, 86·5 years.

CLIMATE

Escaldes-Engordany, Jan. 36°F (2·3°C), July 67°F (19·3°C). Annual rainfall 32" (808 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The joint heads of state are the President of the French Republic and the Bishop of Urgel, the co-princes.

A new democratic constitution was approved by 74·2% of votes cast at a referendum on 14 March 1993. The electorate was 9,123; turn-out was 75·7%. The new Constitution, which came into force on 4 May 1993, makes the co-princes a single constitutional monarch and provides for a parliament, the General Council of the Andorran Valleys, elected by universal suffrage. The General Council has 28 members elected, 2 from each of the 7 parishes and 14 elected from the single national constituency, for 4 years. In 1982 an Executive Council was appointed and legislative and executive powers were separated. The General Council elects the President of the Executive Council, who is the head of the government

There is a Constitutional Court of 4 members who hold office for 8-year terms, renewable once.

National Anthem. 'El Gran Carlemany, mon pare' ('Great Charlemagne, my father'); words by Enric Marfany, tune by D.J. Benlloch i Vivò.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the General Council were held on 15 Feb. 1997. Electorate, 10,837; turn-out was 82%. The Liberal Union gained 18 seats.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 1999 the government comprised:

President, Executive Council: Marc Forné Molné (Liberal Union).

Minister for Presidential Affairs and the Interior: Estanislau Sangrà Cardona. Foreign Affairs: Albert Pintat Santolària. Finance: Susagna Arasanz Serra.

Economy: Enric Casadevall Medrano. Land Management: Càndid Naudi Mora. Health and Social Affairs: Josep Maria Goicoechea Utrillo. Education, Youth and Sports: Josep Cervós Cardona. Tourism and Culture: Enric Pujal Areny. Agriculture and Environment: Olga Adellach Coma.

Local Government. Andorra is divided into 7 parishes, each of which is administered by a Communal Council. Councillors are elected for 4-year terms by universal suffrage.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The 1993 Constitution empowers Andorra to conduct its own foreign affairs, with consultation on matters affecting France or Spain.

Andorra is a member of the UN, UNESCO, WIPO and the Council of Europe.

ECONOMY

Performance. Real GDP growth was 3·9% in 1995 (2·1% in 1994).

Budget. 1993: Revenue, US$138m. Expenditure, US$177m.

Currency. French and Spanish currency are both in use. Diner coins are minted for collectors.

Banking and Finance. The banking sector, with its tax-haven status, contributes substantially to the economy.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 35,000 kW in 1992. Production in 1992 was 140m. kWh.

Agriculture. In 1992 there were some 1,000 ha of arable land (2% of total) and 25,000 ha of pasture (56%). Tobacco and potatoes are principal crops. The principal livestock activity is sheep raising.

Forestry. In 1992 there were some 10,000 ha of forests (22% of the total area).

INDUSTRY

Labour. Only 1% of the workforce is employed in agriculture, the rest in tourism, commerce, services and light industry. Manufacturing consists mainly of cigarettes, cigars and furniture.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Andorra is a member of the EU Customs Union for industrial goods, and is a third country for agricultural produce. There is a free economic zone.

Imports and Exports. 1997 exports, US$46·2m.; imports, US$920·2m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 269 km of roads (198 km paved). Motor vehicles (1993): motor cars, 36,660; trucks and vans, 4,343.

Civil Aviation. There is an airport for Andorran traffic at Seo de Urgel.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 32,000 telephone main lines, or 431·4 per 1,000 inhabitants. There were 2,800 cellular phone subscribers and 1,300 fax machines in 1995.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by the High Council of Justice, comprising 5 members appointed for single 6-year terms. The independence of judges is constitutionally guaranteed. Judicial power is exercised in civil matters in the first instance by Magistrates' Courts and a Judge's Court. Criminal justice is administered by the Corts, consisting of the judge of appeal, 2 rahonadors elected by the General Council of the Valleys, a general attorney and an attorney nominated for 5 years alternately by each of the co-princes.

Religion. The Roman Catholic is the established church, but the 1993 Constitution guarantees religious liberty. In 1997 around 79% of the population were Catholics.

Education. Free education in French- or Spanish-language schools is compulsory: 6 years primary starting at 6 years, followed by 4 years secondary. A Roman Catholic school provides education in Catalan. In 1993–94 there were 18 schools altogether with 9,163 pupils.

Health. In 1994 there were 2 hospitals and 132 doctors.

ANGOLA

República de Angola

Capital: Luanda
Population estimate, 2000: 12·78m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 1,030
HDI/world rank: 0·344/156

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The earliest people in Angola, as in most of sub-Saharan Africa, were hunter-gatherers. They were displaced by Bantu-speaking farmers who by the 14th century were organized in several powerful states such as the kingdoms of Kongo and Mbundu. The rulers of Mbundu were called ngola, from which the Portuguese derived the name Angola. The Portuguese first made contact with Kongo in 1491, and for some time thereafter its kings were Catholic and their capital was renamed São Salvador.

Only brief Dutch occupation in the 1640s interrupted 4 centuries of Portuguese rule along the coast, from which hundreds of thousands of slaves were shipped and where, by the 19th century, a small Portuguese-speaking African and mestiço (half-European) élite had emerged. Inland, African states remained independent until the 19th century.

The Portuguese founded Luanda in 1875, and from the 1870s gradually occupied the interior of Angola, often called Portuguese West Africa. The occupation was slow in the face of strong African resistance (such as the Bailundo rising of 1902), and Portuguese rule was only fully established about 1920. Angola remained a Portuguese colony until 11 June 1951, when it became an Overseas Province of Portugal.

After the coup d'état in Portugal in April 1974, negotiations between Portugal, the MPLA (People's Movement for the Liberation of Angola), the FNLA (National Front for the Liberation of Angola) and UNITA (National Union for the Total Liberation of Angola) resulted in the signing of the Alvor Agreement in Jan. 1975, under which a quadripartite transitional government was formed, with a view to elections in Oct. and independence on 11 Nov The FNLA tried to seize power by force, but was driven out of the capital. As independence approached, the invasion from the north was combined with a South African invasion in support of UNITA. The MPLA declared independence and, subsequently, with the help of Cuban troops, defeated the FNLA in the north and drove the invading South African army out of the country. South African invasions and the occupation of large areas of Angola continued until the signing of the New York Agreement in Dec. 1988, under which South Africa agreed to withdraw its forces from Angola and Namibia (and grant independence to Namibia), while Angola and Cuba agreed to the phased withdrawal of Cuban troops.

After many abortive attempts to end the internal conflict with UNITA, a peace agreement was signed on 31 May 1991 under which the government and UNITA armies were to be disbanded, a single national army formed and multi-party elections held. In Sept. 1992 the MPLA won the elections and José Eduardo dos Santos was re-elected President against UNITA leader Jonas Savimbi. But the latter rejected the election results, withdrew his generals from the unified army and went back to war, seizing an estimated 70% of the country.

On 15 Sept. 1993 the UN Security Council unanimously adopted an embargo on arms and fuel supplies to UNITA. On 20 Nov. 1994 an agreement was signed in Lusaka, but not at presidential level because Jonas Savimbi failed to turn up. The Lusaka Protocol provided for the quartering and disarming of UNITA troops, the integration of 26,300 of them into the single national army, and the demobilization of the remainder. The government also agreed to offer UNITA a substantial number of posts in central and local government. The settlement required the extension of central administration to all UNITA-held areas and free movement of people and goods throughout the country. Elections were to be held when the UN deemed that conditions permitted. Despite the fact that the military aspects of the Protocol were not completed 70 elected UNITA deputies took their seats in the National Assembly in April 1997. A Government of Unity and National Reconciliation included officials from UNITA and all other parties with seats in the National Assembly. The mandate of the third UN peacekeeping force, UNAVEM III, expired on 30 June 1997. It was replaced by a smaller mission of 86 military and 345 police known as MONUA. There were continued delays in the completion of the registration and demobilization of UNITA troops and on 29 Oct. 1997 the UN Security Council imposed a further package of sanctions on UNITA including the closure of its offices abroad and restrictions on travel abroad by its officials.

On 9 Jan. 1998 a breakthrough in negotiations between the government and UNITA rebels was announced. Jonas Savimbi, UNITA's leader, met with President dos Santos but talks soon foundered and serious fighting resumed in the north, raising fears of a major new offensive by the Angolan Armed Forces against the UNITA rebels. Meanwhile, Angolan troops fought in the Republic of the Congo alongside the forces of President Kabila in his efforts to quash a Rwandan-backed rebellion in the east of his country.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Angola is bounded in the north by the Republic of the Congo, north and north-east by the Democratic Republic of the Congo, east by Zambia, south by Namibia and west by the Atlantic Ocean. The area is 1,246,700 sq. km (481,354 sq. miles) including the province of Cabinda, an exclave of territory separated by 30 sq. km of territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. The population at census, 1970, was 5,646,166, of whom 14% were urban. Official estimate, 1995, 11·5m. (31% urban); density, 9·2 per sq. km. Population figures are rough estimates because the civil war has led to huge movements of population.

There were 0·3m. Angolan refugees in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Zambia and the Republic of the Congo in 1995.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 12·78m.

Area, population and chief towns of the provinces:

Province	Area (in sq. km)	Population estimate, 1992 (in 1,000)	Chief town
Bengo	31,371	196·1	Caxito
Benguela	31,788	656·6	Benguela
Bié	70,314	1,119·8	Kuito
Cabinda	7,270	152·1	Cabinda
Cuando-Cubango	199,049	139·6	Menongue
Cuanza Norte	24,190	385·2	Ndalatando
Cuanza Sul	55,660	694·5	Sumbe

Namibe	58,137	107·3	Namibe
Uíge	58,698	802·7	Uíge
Zaire	40,130	237·5	Mbanza Congo

The most important towns (populations) are Luanda, the capital (1995, 2·25m.), Huambo (1995, 0·4m.), Lobito (1970, 59,258), Benguela (1970, 40,996), Lubango (1984, 105,000), Malanje (1970, 31,559) and Namibe (formerly Moçâmedes, 1981, 0·1m.).

The main ethnic groups are Umbundo (Ovimbundo), Kimbundo, Bakongo, Chokwe, Ganguela, Luvale and Kwanyama.

Portuguese is the official language. Bantu and other African languages are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, 44·9 years for males and 48·1 years for females. 1995 births (estimates), 567,000; deaths, 217,000. Birth rate in 1995 was 49·3 per 1,000 population; death rate, 18·9. Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 2·0%. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 124 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 7·2 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is tropical, with low rainfall in the west but increasing inland. Temperatures are constant over the year and most rain falls in March and April. Luanda, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 69°F (20·6°C). Annual rainfall 13" (323 mm). Lobito, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 68°F (20°C). Annual rainfall 14" (353 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the Constitution adopted at independence, the sole legal party was the MPLA. In Dec. 1990, however, the MPLA announced that the Constitution would be revised to permit opposition parties. The supreme organ of state is the 220-member National Assembly. There is an executive President elected for renewable terms of 5 years, who appoints a Council of Ministers.

National Anthem. 'O Pátria, nunca mais esqueceremos' ('Oh Fatherland, never shall we forget'); words by M. R. Alves Monteiro, tune by R. A. Dias Mingas.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential and parliamentary elections of 29–30 Sept. 1992 the electorate was 4,862,748. Turn-out was about 90%. Eduardo Dos Santos (MPLA) was re-elected as President with 49·5% of votes cast against 40·7% for his single opponent, Jonas Savimbi (UNITA). The latter refused to accept the result. The MPLA gained 129 seats in the National Assembly with 53·74% of votes cast, UNITA 70 with 34%.

On 11 April 1997 a Government of National Unity was installed, with 3 ministerial posts going to UNITA. Jonas Savimbi, UNITA's leader, received the specially created position of Chief of the Principal Opposition Party.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: José Eduardo dos Santos, b. 1943 (since 10 Sept. 1979; re-elected 9 Dec. 1985 and 29–30 Sept. 1992).

In March 1999 the Government comprised:

Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development: Gilberto Lutucuta. Assistance and Social Reintegration: Albino Malungo. Commerce: Victorino Domingos Hossi. Education and Culture: Antonio Burity da Silva Neto. Energy and Water: Luis Filipe da Silva. External Relations: Joao Bernardo de Miranda. Family and Women's Affairs: Candida Celeste da Silva. Finance: Joaquim Duarte da Costa David. Fisheries and Environment: Maria de Fatima Monteiro Jardim. Geology and Mines: Manuel Gunjo. Health: Adelino Manacas. Hotels and Tourism: Jorge Alicerces Valentim. Industry: Albina Faria de Assis 'Africano'. Interior: Fernando Dias dos Santos da Piedade 'Nando'. Justice: Paulo Tjipilica. National Defence: Kundi Paihama. Petroleum: Jose Maria Botelho de Vasconcelos. Planning: Ana Dias Lourenco. Posts and Telecommunications: Licinio Tavares Ribeiro. Public Administration, Employment and Social Welfare: Antonio Domingos Pitra Costa Neto. Public Works and Urban Affairs: Antonio Henriques da Silva. Science and Technology: Joao Baptista Nganda Gina. Social Communication: Pedro Hendrick Vaal Neto. Territorial Administration: Fernando Faustino Muteka. Transport: Andre Luis Brandao. War Veterans: Pedro Jose van Dunem. Youth and Sports: Jose Marcos Barrica.

Local Government. The 18 provinces, each under a Governor appointed by the President and an elected legislative of from 55 to 85 members, are subdivided into 139 districts.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 2 years. Defence expenditure totalled US$658m. in 1997 (US$58 per capita).

Army. In 1997 the Army had 25 regiments. Total strength 98,000. Equipment includes Soviet 100 T-34, 100 T-54/55 and some T-62 and T-72 main battle tanks.

Navy. The Navy, almost all Soviet-built, includes 5 inshore patrol craft, 1 minehunter, 1 landing ship and 6 landing craft, together with 10 auxiliary vessels. Naval personnel in 1997 totalled about 1,500. Naval bases are at Luanda, Lobito and Namibe.

Air Force. The Angolan People's Air Force (FAPA) was formed in 1976 and had (1996) about 5,000 personnel. Since the elections in 1992 and the relative calm, the Air Force has been run down and serviceability of combat aircraft is low. There are 5 combat squadrons, 2 with MiG-23s and 1 each with Mig-21s, Su-22s and Su-25s. The transport force, including An-26s, An-32s and Aviocars, is still active, as are the helicopter formations, mainly equipped with Mi-8/17s and Mi-25s. Pilatus PC-7 and PC-9 trainers are equipped for counter-insurgency operations.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Angola is a member of the UN, OAU, SADC and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Policy. Reforms are under way to introduce a market economy and restore private property. An Economic and Social Programme covered 1995–96.

Performance. GDP growth was 5% in 1995 (8·6% in 1994). 70% of Angola's population live below the poverty line. Although Angola has experienced an uneasy peace since the end of the civil war, there are few signs of the economy reviving.

Budget. The 1995 budget envisaged recurrent revenue (in 1,000m. former kwanzas) of 3,765·3 (of which taxes, 2,257·6; royalties, 1,159); capital revenue of 15·8 (mainly from privatization); recurrent expenditure of 2,515·6 and capital expenditure of 2,177·2.

Currency. The unit of currency is the readjusted kwanza (AOK) of 100 lwei, which replaced the former new kwanza at Kzr1 = Nkz1,000 in July 1995. In Jan. 1994 a 2-tier system was replaced by a single floating exchange rate. Foreign exchange reserves were US$163m. in 1995; gold reserves, 46,500 troy oz. in 1990. Inflation was an annualized 7,500% in 1996.

Banking and Finance. Banking was re-opened to commercial competition in 1991. The Banco Nacional de Angola is the central bank and bank of issue (Governor, Aguinaldo Jaime). All banks remain state-owned, though the government is progressively reducing its stake in them. An agricultural bank and a commercial and industrial bank were founded in 1991. 5 Portuguese banks have branches, as well as the French Banque Paribas, the Equator Bank, and the African Development Bank.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 620,000 kW in 1994. Production in 1994 was 1·82bn. kWh, with consumption per capita an estimated 171 kWh in 1995.

Oil and Gas. Oil is produced mainly in the Cabinda exclave and contributed 49·9% of Angolan GDP in 1994. Total production (1992) 25·57m. tonnes.

Minerals. Production of diamonds in 1992 totalled 1,235,000 carats; the illegal export of diamonds is the chief source of income for UNITA. Other minerals produced include (1991) granite, 635,000 cu. metres; marble, 244,000 cu. metres; salt, 6,600 tonnes. Iron ore, phosphate, manganese and copper deposits exist.

Agriculture. Agriculture contributed 7% of GDP in 1996. In 1994 there were 3m. ha of arable land, 0·5m. ha of permanent crops and 54m. ha of permanent pasture. The agricultural population in 1995 was 8·17m., of whom 3·78m. were economically active. The principal cash crops (with 1993 production, in 1,000 tonnes): Sugar-cane (290), coffee (5), bananas (280), palm oil (40), palm kernels (12), seed cotton (12); others include tobacco, citrus fruit and sisal. Food crops (1993, in 1,000 tonnes) include cassava (1,870), maize (274), sweet potatoes (170) and dry beans (36).

Livestock (1996): 3·1m. cattle, 245,000 sheep, 1,570,000 goats (1995), 810,000 pigs.

Forestry. In 1995, 222,000 sq. km, or 17·8% of the total land area, was covered by forests (18·8% in 1990), including mahogany and other hardwoods. Timber production in 1995 was 7m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1993 the fishing fleet had 73 vessels over 100 GRT totalling 17,332 GRT. Total catch in 1995 came to 93,847 tonnes, mainly from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The principal manufacturing branches are foodstuffs, textiles and oil refining. Output, 1991 (in tonnes): Maize flour, 21,200; wheat flour, 18,900; bread, 25,100; soap, 4,700; plate glass, 6,900; plastic bags, 1,600; pesticides, 46; zinc sheets, 6,012; cable, 112; 52,000 radio sets; 15,600 TV sets.

Labour. In 1996 the total labour force numbered 5,144,000 (54% males). In 1994, 2,762,000 people out of an economically active population of 4,053,000 were engaged in agriculture.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 1996 total foreign debt was US$10,612m.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995
Imports	1,347	1,988	1,463	1,633	1,700
Exports	3,449	3,833	2,900	3,002	3,880

Main exports, 1994 (in US$1m.): Crude oil, 2,821; diamonds, 96; refined oil, 61; gas, 14. Chief import suppliers (1991 trade in US$1m.): Portugal, 587; USA, 207; France, 194; Japan, 153; Brazil, 144. Chief export markets: USA, 1,751; France, 328; Germany, 174; Brazil, 152; Netherlands, 131.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were, in 1996, 72,626 km of roads (7,955 km highways and 25% of all roads surfaced), and approximately 207,000 passenger cars and 25,000 commercial vehicles. Many roads remain mined as a result of the civil war; a programme of de-mining and rehabilitation is under way.

Rail. The length of railways open for traffic in 1987 was 2,952 km, comprising 2,798 km of 1,067 mm gauge and 154 km of 600 mm gauge. The Benguela Railway runs from Lobito to the Democratic Republic of the Congo border at Dilolo where it connects with the National Railways of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. Other lines link Luanda with Malanje; Gunza with Gabela; and Namibe with Menongue. In 1993 railways carried 4m. passengers and 2·8m. tonnes of freight.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Luanda (Fourth of February). The national carrier is Linhas Aéreas de Angola (TAAG). In 1998 there were also services by Aeroflot, Air France, Air Gabon, Air Namibia, Ethiopian Airlines, SABENA, South African Airways and TAP. In 1995 scheduled airline traffic of Angola-based carriers flew 13·4m. km, carrying 545,000 passengers (148,000 on international flights).

Shipping. There are ports at Luanda, Lobito and Namibe, and oil terminals at Malongo, Lobito and Soyo. 1·24m. tonnes of cargo were discharged in 1994. There are 3 state shipping companies. In 1995 the merchant fleet totalled 120,000 GRT, including oil tankers, 2,665 GRT.

Telecommunications. There were 62,300 telephone main lines in 1997, or 5·4 per 1,000 inhabitants. In Jan. 1998 there were approximately 1,500 Internet users, and in 1995, 2,000 cellular phone subscribers.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 62 post offices, or 1 for every 162,000 persons.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Antigua and Barbuda make up the island nation of the lesser Antilles in the Eastern Caribbean. Most of the population is descended from African slaves brought in during colonial times to work on sugar plantations.

The country was sighted by Christopher Columbus on his second voyage to the West Indies in 1493. The Spaniards attempted to settle on the island in 1520 as did the French in 1629. Antigua was eventually colonized in the year 1632 and in 1667, under the Treaty of Breda, it became a British Colony. Barbuda was colonized in 1628 and leased to the Codrington Family in 1680. By the late 19th century, however, it had reverted to the British Crown.

Antigua and Barbuda formed part of the Leeward Islands Federation from 1871 until 30 June 1956 when Antigua and Barbuda became a separate Crown Colony. It was part of the West Indies Federation from 3 Jan. 1958 until 31 May 1962 and became an Associated State of the UK on 27 Feb. 1967. Antigua and Barbuda gained independence on 1 Nov. 1981.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Antigua and Barbuda comprises 3 islands of the Lesser Antilles situated in the Eastern Caribbean with a total land area of 442 sq. km (171 sq. miles); it consists of Antigua (280 sq. km), Barbuda, 40 km to the north (161 sq. km) and uninhabited Redonda, 40 km to the south-west (1 sq. km). The population at the census of 1991 was 65,962 (1,400 on Barbuda). Estimate, 1995, 63,900 (1,500 on Barbuda); density, 145 per sq. km; urban population, 35·8%.

In 2000 the population is projected to be 68,000.

The chief towns are St John's, the capital on Antigua (30,000 inhabitants in 1995) and Codrington (1,200), the only settlement on Barbuda.

English is the official language; local dialects are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Expectation of life, 1993: Males, 71·1 years, females, 75·3. Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 0·6%. Births, 1994, 1,217 (rate of 19·0 per 1,000 population); deaths, 415 (6·5 per 1,000 population). Infant mortality in 1998 was 18 per 1,000 live births.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, but drier than most West Indies islands. The hot season is from May to Nov., when rainfall is greater. Mean annual rainfall is 40" (1,000 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

H.M. Queen Elizabeth, as Head of State, is represented by a Governor-General appointed by her on the advice of the Prime Minister. There is a bicameral legislature, comprising a 17-member Senate appointed by the Governor-General and a 17-member House of Representatives elected by universal suffrage for a 5-year term. The Governor-General appoints a Prime Minister and, on the latter's advice, other members of the Cabinet.

Barbuda is administered by a 9-member directly elected council.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1515 Juan Diaz de Solis discovered the Río de le Planta. In 1534 Pedro de Mondoza was sent by the King of Spain to take charge of the 'Gobernación y Capitania de las tierras del Río de la Plata', and in Feb. 1536 he founded the city of the 'Puerto de Santa María del Buen Aire'. In 1810 the population rose against Spanish rule, and in 1816 Argentina proclaimed its independence. Civil wars and anarchy followed until, in 1853, stable government was established.

In this century there have been a succession of military coups. The first took place in 1930, the second in 1943 when Gen. Juan Domingo Perón won control. His regime was autocratic but popularist and nationalistic and propagated some social reforms. His wife Eva (Evita), played a major role, giving the regime an almost cult-like following. She died in 1955 and a civilian administration followed until 1966 when the next military coup led to seven years of government by the military. However, a political party had established itself around the Peróns, and when elections were held in 1973 the Peronists were the victors; Gen. Perón was elected president. When he died in 1974, his widow Isobel succeeded him as president. She was deposed in 1976 following another military coup, which established a three-man junta with Gen. Jorge Videla, C.-in-C. of the army, as president. The new government instituted a savagely repressive attitude towards any opposition.

Videla was succeeded as president first by Gen. Viola and then by Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, the army C.-in-C. In April 1982 Galtieri, in an effort to distract attention from domestic failings, invaded the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas). The subsequent military defeat helped to precipitate the fall of Galtieri and the junta in July 1982. Return to civilian rule took place on 10 Dec. 1983. A new Constitution was adopted in Aug. 1994 since when Argentina has reinforced its commitment to democratic rule and restructured its economy to allow for greater market freedom.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The second largest country in South America, the Argentine Republic is bounded in the north by Bolivia, in the north-east by Paraguay, in the east by Brazil, Uruguay and the Atlantic Ocean, and the west by Chile. The republic consists of 23 provinces and 1 federal district with the following areas and populations at the 1991 census:

Provinces	Area (sq. km)	Population (1991 census)	Capital	Population (1991 census)
Federal Capital	200	2,965,403	Buenos Aires	–
Buenos Aires	307,571	12,594,974	La Plata	542,567
Corrientes	88,199	795,594	Corrientes	258,103

Santa Cruz	243,943	159,839	Río Gallegos	64,640
Tierra del Fuego	21,571	69,369	Ushuaia	29,166

Argentina also claims territory in Antarctica.

The area is 2,780,400 sq. km excluding the claimed Antarctic territory and the population at the 1991 census was 32,615,528 (16,677,548 females); 1996 estimate, 34·6m., giving a density of 12 per sq. km. The official census included the 'sovereign territories of Argentina in the Antarctic': Population 3,300.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 37·03m.

In 1995 an estimated 88·1% of the population were urban.

In April 1990 the National Congress declared that the Falklands and other British-held islands in the South Atlantic were part of the new province of Tierra del Fuego formed from the former National Territory of the same name. 1991 census data for Tierra del Fuego above do not include these territories. The 1994 Constitution reaffirms Argentine sovereignty over the Falkland Islands.

The population of the principal metropolitan areas in 1992 (provisional) was: Buenos Aires, 11,662,050; Córdoba, 1,179,420; Rosario, 1,157,372; Mendoza, 801,920; La Plata, 676,128; Tucumán, 642,473.

95% speak the national language, Spanish, while 3% speak Italian, 1% Guaraní and 1% other languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 664,000; deaths, 269,000. Rates, 1996 (per 1,000 population): birth, 19·2; death, 7·8; infant mortality, 20·9 per 1,000 live births. Estimated life expectancy at birth, 1995–2000, 69·7 years for males and 76·8 years for females. Annual growth rate, 1995–2000, 1·3%; fertility rate, 2·6 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is warm temperate over the pampas, where rainfall occurs at all seasons, but diminishes towards the west. In the north and west, the climate is more arid, with high summer temperatures, while in the extreme south conditions are also dry, but much cooler. Buenos Aires, Jan. 74°F (23·3°C), July 50°F (10°C). Annual rainfall 37" (950 mm). Bahía Blanca, Jan. 74°F (23·3°C), July 48°F (8·9°C). Annual rainfall 21" (523 mm). CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 10 April 1994 elections were held for a 230-member constituent assembly to reform the 1853 constitution. The Justicialist National Movement (Peronist) gained 38·8% of votes cast and the Radical Union, 20%. On 22 Aug. 1994 this assembly unanimously adopted a new Constitution. This reduces the presidential term of office from 6 to 4 years, but permits the President to stand for 2 terms. The President is no longer elected by an electoral college, but directly by universal suffrage. A presidential candidate is elected who gains more than 45% of votes cast, or 40% if at least 10% ahead of an opponent; otherwise there is a second round. The Constitution attenuates the President's powers by instituting a Chief of Cabinet. The National Congress consists of a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies: The Senate comprises 72 members, 3 nominated by each provincial legislature and 3 from the Federal District for 9 years (one-third retiring every 3 years). The Chamber of Deputies comprises 257 members directly elected by universal suffrage (at age 18).

National Anthem. 'Oid, mortales, el grito sagrado Libertad' ('Hear, mortals, the sacred cry of Liberty'); words by V. López y Planes, 1813; tune by J. Blas Parera.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections for half the seats in the Chamber of Deputies were held on 3 Oct. 1993. The ruling Justicialist Party (JP; Peronist) gained 42% of votes cast, the Radical Civil Union 31%. Representation in the Chamber of Deputies following the 1993 elections was: JP, 126 seats; Radicals, 83; others, 50. Elections for the remaining seats were held on 14 May 1995. The JP gained 132 seats (and 38 in the Senate). In the presidential elections held on 14 May 1995 Carlos Saúl Menem was re-elected in the first round by 49% of votes cast.

On 6 Aug. 1997 the Radical Union and centre-left Frepaso parties joined together to form the Alliance to fight against the Peronists in the lower house of Congress elections in Oct. 1997. 127 of the 257 seats were up for election. On 26 Oct. 1997 the JP suffered its first legislative defeat since 1983. The Alliance received 36·5% of votes cast and in the 10 provinces where no coalition existed the two parties separately collected an additional 9·6%, bringing the opposition tally to 46·1%. The JP received nearly 36% of votes cast, losing 12 seats and its absolute majority in Congress (it remains the largest single political bloc). The Alliance has no agreed candidate or method of choosing one for the 1999 Presidential elections on 17 Oct. Menem's main Justicialist rival and leading hopeful for the presidential candidacy, Eduardo Duhalde, suffered a setback when his wife, Hilde Duhalde, was defeated in the 1997 Congress elections in the province of Buenos Aires, a previous Peronist bastion of power.

Parliamentary elections are due to take place on 17 Oct. 1999.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Carlos Saúl Menem, b. 1930 (JP; sworn in 8 July 1989 and re-elected in 1995).

Vice-President: Dr Carlos Ruckauf.

The Cabinet comprised in March 1999:

Defence: Jorge Dominguez. Economy, Public Works and Services: Roque Fernández. Education and Culture: Susana Decibe. Foreign Affairs, International Trade and Worship: Dr Guido José Maria di Tella. Interior: Dr Carlos Corach. Justice: Raúl Granillo Ocampo. Labour and Social Security: Antonio Erman González. Public Health and Social Action: Dr Alberto Mazza.

Local Government. 23 provincial gubernatorial elections were held Aug.–Dec. 1991. Peronists won 14 governorships.

DEFENCE

Conscription was abolished in 1995. In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$4,687m. (US$134 per capita), representing 1·7% of GDP.

Army. There are 5 military regions. The Army is organized in 3 corps, 1 with 1 armoured, 1 mechanized and 1 training brigade; 1 with 1 infantry and 1 mountain brigade, and 1 with 1 armoured, 1 mountain and 2 mechanized brigades. Equipment in 1996 included 96 M-4 Sherman and 200 TAM main battle tanks and about 100 aircraft, including 23 Mohawks for reconnaissance and 35 UH-1H Iroquois transport helicopters. In 1996 the Army was 41,000 strong. The trained reserve numbers about 250,000, of whom 200,000 belong to the National Guard and 50,000 to the Territorial Guard.

There is a paramilitary gendarmerie of 18,000 run by the Ministry of Defence.

Navy. The light aircraft carrier Veinticinco de Mayo remains in reserve. Combatant forces include 3 German-built diesel submarines with 1 more in major refit, 4 modern German-built destroyers, 2 British-built guided missile destroyers (Type 42), 4 German-designed and 3 French-built frigates, 2 old training frigates, 2 fast torpedo craft, 5 patrol ships, 4 coastal minesweepers, 2 minehunters and 1 tank landing ship. Auxiliaries include 1 survey ship, 2 training ships, 3 transports, 1 ice-breaker and numerous harbour and service craft. Serviceability is reported as very poor.

The new construction programme includes 2 diesel submarines (both building—but slowly) and 2 small frigates nearing completion but being offered for sale.

The Naval Aviation Service has some 32 combat aircraft and 15 helicopters with (1996) 3,500 personnel, in 5 wings. Aircraft include 8 Super-Etendard strike aircraft, 7 EMB-326 and 5 EMB-339A light jet armed trainers, 2 Lockheed Electra maritime surveillance aircraft and 6 S-2E carrier-adapted Tracker anti-submarine aircraft, as well as varied training, transport and general purpose aircraft. There is a squadron of 7 SH-3 anti-submarine helicopters, 4 Alouettes and 4 S-61 transport helicopters. The remaining Super-Etendards and Trackers as well as Sea King and Alouette helicopters could operate from the aircraft carrier if she is re-activated.

Personnel 1997, 20,000 including 3,500 marines, 4 reinforced battalions equipped with armoured personnel carriers and about 40 artillery pieces.

Main bases are at Buenos Aires, Puerto Belgrano (HQ and Dockyard), Mar del Plata, Ushuaia and Puerto Deseado.

The Prefectura Naval Argentina (PNA) for Coast Guard and rescue duties was 13,000 strong in 1996 and operates 5 910-tonne corvettes with helicopter and hangar, an ex-whaler of 700 tonnes, and 23 patrol vessels.

Air Force. The Air Force is organized into Air Operations, Air Regions, Materiel and Personnel Commands. Air Operations Command, responsible for all operational flying, is made up of air brigades, each with 1 to 4 squadrons, usually operating from a single base. No. I Air Brigade is a military air transport service, with responsibility also for airline operations into areas of Argentina not served by civilian companies. Its equipment includes 9 C-130 Hercules and 10 F.27 Friendship/Troopship turboprop transports, 2 KC-130H Hercules tanker/transports, 3 twin-turbofan F.28 Fellowship freighters, 15 Guarani IIs, the Presidential Boeing 757, 4 707s, 2 VIP Fellowships, and many older or smaller types. No. II Air Brigade comprises a photographic squadron with Guarani IIs and Learjets. No. III Air Brigade has 2 squadrons of IA 58 Pucara twin-turboprop COIN aircraft. No. IV Air Brigade comprises 2 ground attack squadrons, one equipped with about 20 Paris light jet combat and liaison aircraft, and the other with 15 IA 63 Pampas. No. V Air Brigade comprises 2 squadrons with a total of about 18 A-4 Skyhawk strike aircraft. No. VI Air Brigade has 30 Dagger (Israeli-built Mirage III) fighters, equipping 2 squadrons, 1 squadron of Mirage 5 fighter-bombers, and 1 squadron with 15 Mirage IIIE fighter-bombers and 4 Mirage IIID trainers. No. VII Air Brigade has 2 helicopter squadrons with 12 armed Hughes 500M, 6 Bell 212, 4 Bell UH-1 and 2 Chinook helicopters. There is a flying school at Córdoba, equipped with turboprop-powered Embraer Tucanos and Paris jets. There were (1997) 12,000 personnel and 220 combat aircraft.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Argentina is a member of the UN, OAS and Mercosur and is set to apply for membership of the OECD. Diplomatic relations with Britain broken since the 1982 Falklands War were re-opened in 1990. Praising Argentina's 'call to peace' US President Clinton plans to give the country 'major non-NATO ally' status (Nov. 1997). The alignment with US foreign policy comes after years of anti-American sentiment and a policy of neutrality.

ECONOMY

Policy. In 1990, the government introduced a programme privatizing some 40 public enterprises. An economic plan entering into force on 1 April 1991 guaranteed the convertibility of the currency, lowered interest rates and opened the economy to foreign imports. Agricultural export taxes were abolished in March 1991. Argentina suffered a severe recession in 1995 but since then privatization and deregulation have improved the economy's prospects into the medium term. Tax evasion and fraud remain a major occurrence but tighter controls are being instituted. In Feb. 1998 the IMF approved a 3-year US$2·8bn. extended fund facility for Argentina. The accord set a target for the 1998 fiscal deficit of US$3·5bn., just over 1% of GDP, against the 1996 US$4·5bn. target.

Performance. The economy grew by 4·4% in 1996, after falling 4·6% in 1995, and was estimated to have grown by 8·6% in 1997. Consumer spending is recovering gradually from the 1995 recession. GDP growth in 1997 totalled 8·4%. GDP per capita has more than tripled since 1989, to US$9,010 in 1997, and was forecast to rise still further to US$9,520 in 1998.

Budget. The financial year commences on 1 Jan. Estimated revenue in 1997 was US$55bn. and expenditure, US$59bn.

Currency. The monetary unit is the peso (ARP) which replaced the austral on 1 Jan. 1992 at a rate of 1 peso = 10,000 australs. Inflation was 0·3% in 1997 and was estimated at 0·8% in 1998. Gold reserves were 360,000 troy oz. in Feb. 1998. In 1999 foreign exchange reserves were estimated at US$20·0bn. Total money supply was 22,263m. pesos in Feb. 1998.

Banking and Finance. In 1996 there were 20 government banks, 100 private banks, 28 foreign banks and 27 other financial institutions. Bank and non-bank total monetary resources totalled US$67,449m. as at Dec. 1996. The Governor of the Central Bank is Pedro Pou. Convertibility regulations of April 1991 require the Central Bank to back the entire currency in circulation with its foreign currency reserves. The current account balance in 1999 was forecast to be US$–16·0bn.

There is a stock exchange at Buenos Aires.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is legal.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Electric power production (1995) was 62,478m. kWh (7,066m. kWh nuclear). In 1995 there were 2 nuclear plants. Installed capacity in 1995 was 20·21m. kW, with consumption per capita in 1995 an estimated 1,606 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil production (1996) 46m. cu. metres. Reserves were estimated at some 416m. cu. metres in 1997. The oil industry was privatized in 1993. Natural gas production (1996) 34,650m. cu. metres. Reserves were about 684,000m. cu. metres in 1997. The main area in production is the Neuquen basin in western Argentina, with over 40% of the total oil reserves and nearly half the gas reserves.

Minerals. An estimated 215,000 tonnes of washed coal were produced in 1996. Other minerals (with estimated production in 1996) include iron ore (3,388 tonnes of metal), gold (837 kg in 1995), silver (47,787 kg), tungsten, beryllium, clays (3·3m. tonnes), marble, lead (10,521 tonnes of metal), zinc (36,697 tonnes of metal), borates (244,933 tonnes), bentonite (0·11m. tonnes) and granite. Production from the US$1·1bn. Alumbrera copper and gold mine, the country's biggest mining project, in Catamarca province in the north-west, started in late 1997. In 1993 the mining laws were reformed and state regulation was swept away creating a more stable tax regime for investors. In Dec. 1997 Argentina and Chile signed a treaty laying the legal and tax framework for mining operations straddling the 5,000 km border, allowing mining products to be transported out through both countries.

Agriculture. In 1996 there were 23·5m. ha of arable land, 2·1m. ha of permanent crops and 142m. ha of permanent pasture. The agricultural population was 3·82m. in 1995, of whom 1·49m. were economically active. 1·7m. ha were irrigated in 1994.

Livestock (1998): Cattle, 47,075,156; sheep, 22,408,681; pigs, 3,341,652; horses, 1,994,241. In 1997 wool production was 45,120 tonnes; milk, 9,167m. litres.

Crop production (in 1,000 tonnes) in 1997: wheat, 15,914; sugar-cane, 9,949; rice, 1,205; maize, 15,537; potatoes, 2,275; tobacco, 123; sunflower seed, 5,450. Cotton, vine, citrus fruit, olives, soya and yerba maté (Paraguayan tea) are also cultivated.

Forestry. The woodland area was 44,975,115 ha in 1994. Production in 1996 included 1·71m. cu. metres of sawn wood, 6.6m. tonnes of round logs and 63,000 tonnes of tannin.

Fisheries. Fish landings in 1997 amounted to 1,339,615 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Production (1996 in tonnes): Paper, 1,123,000; primary iron, 3,388,000; crude steel, 4,065,000; primary aluminium, 184,533; sulfuric acid, 219,562; cement, 5,117,000; synthetic rubber, 57,994; polyethylene, 180,849; sugar, 1,290,000; vegetable oils, 4,044,000. Motor vehicles produced totalled 313,150; tractors, 5,589; tyres, 7,593,000. In Feb. 1998 it was forecast that industrial production would grow by about 6% over the year.

Labour. The labour force in 1996 totalled 13,809,000. 2·12m. persons were registered unemployed at July 1996. Unemployment in 1998 was 11·0% of the workforce, down from 18·4% in 1995.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$99,708m. in 1996.

Imports and Exports. Foreign trade (in US$1m.):

	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Imports	8,275	14,872	16,784	21,590	20,122	23,762
Exports	11,978	12,235	13,118	15,839	20,963	23,811

Principal exports in 1996 (in US$1m.) were cereals (2,560), residues and waste from the food industry (2,367), oils and fats (1,890), fuels, mineral oils and distillates (3,089), oilseeds and fruits (964) and fish, shellfish and molluscs (945).

Principal imports in 1996 (in US$1m.) were boilers, machines and mechanical equipment (4,576), electrical machinery and equipment (2,976), land vehicles (3,095), organic chemical products (1,387), plastic materials (1,106) and cast iron and steel (424).

In 1996 imports (in US$1m.) were mainly from Brazil (5,326), USA (4,749), Germany (1,427), Italy (1,503), Japan (725), Chile (559) and France (1,181); exports went mainly to Brazil (6,615), USA (1,973), Netherlands (1,225), Germany (565), Chile (1,766), Italy (721) and Spain (724).

In 1997 exports grew by 7%, but imports rose by 27%. In 1999 imports were forecast to rise to US$35·2bn. and exports to US$30·5bn.

The trade balance deteriorated to a deficit of almost US$4·9bn. in 1997, and around US$5·0bn. in 1998, but was projected to rise back to US$4·9bn. in 1999.

In Jan. 1998 Canadian and Argentine business leaders signed 70 contracts worth $200m. in mining, atomic energy and finance sectors.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 37,704 km of motorways and national and provincial highways, plus 180,572 km of secondary roads. The 4 main roads constituting Argentina's portion of the Pan-American Highway were opened in 1942. Vehicles in use in 1996 totalled 5,414,000, of which 4,459,000 were passenger cars, 943,000 trucks and vans, and 12,000 buses and coaches.

Rail. Much of the 33,000 km state-owned network (on 1,000 mm, 1,435 mm and 1,676 mm gauges; 210 km electrified) was privatized in 1993–94. 30-year concessions were awarded to 5 freight operators; long-distance passenger services are run by contractors to the requirements of local authorities. Metro, light rail and suburban railway services are also operated by concessionaires.

In 1996 railways carried 16,980,000 tonnes of freight and 419,455,000 passengers.

The metro and light rail network in Buenos Aires extends to 46 km.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Buenos Aires (Ministro Pistarini). The national carrier, Aerolíneas Argentinas, is 15% state-owned. In 1998 services were also operated by Aeroflot, Aeroperú, Air France, Alitalia, ALTA, American Airlines, Austral, Avianca, British Airways, Canadian Airlines International, Cubana, Ecuatoriana, Iberia, KLM, Lan-Chile, Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano, Lufthansa, Malaysia Airlines, Mexicana, Pluna, SAS, South African Airways, Swissair, Transbrasil, Transportes Aereos del Mercosur, United Airlines, VASP and Varig.

In 1996, 5,559,000 passengers and 139,467 tonnes of freight were carried on international flights, and 5,904,000 passengers and 16,447 tonnes of freight on internal flights.

Shipping. The merchant shipping fleet totalled 595,000 GRT in 1995, including oil tankers totalling 107,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. The telephone service Entel was privatized in 1990. The number of lines in service in 1997 totalled 6,824,425. In June 1997 there were approximately 170,000 Internet users. In 1995 there were 341,000 cellular phone subscribers, 850,000 PCs (25 per 1,000 persons) and 50,000 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 5,676 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by federal and provincial courts. The former deal only with cases of a national character, or those in which different provinces or inhabitants of different provinces are parties. The chief federal court is the Supreme Court, with 5 judges whose appointment is approved by the Senate. Other federal courts are the appeal courts, at Buenos Aires, Bahía Blanca, La Plata, Córdoba, Mendoza, Tucumán and Resistencia. Each province has its own judicial system, with a Supreme Court (generally so designated) and several minor chambers. The death penalty was re-introduced in 1976 for the killing of government, military police and judicial officials, and for participation in terrorist activities.

The police force is centralized under the Federal Security Council.

Religion. The Roman Catholic religion is supported by the State; affiliation numbered 31·06m. in 1997. There were 2·66m. Protestants of various denominations in 1997, and 520,000 Moslems. There were 267,000 Latter-day Saints (Mormons).

Education. Adult literacy was 96·2% in 1995 (males and females both 96·2%). In 1996, 1,116,951 children attended pre-school institutions, 5,250,329 primary schools, 2,594,329 secondary schools and 391,778 tertiary colleges. Numbers of teachers in 1994–95: Pre-school, 63,751; primary, 277,064; secondary, 228,289; tertiary, 40,160.

In 1996, in the public sector, there were 33 universities; 1 technical university; and university institutes of aeronautics, military studies, naval and maritime studies and police studies. In the private sector, there were 15 universities; 7 Roman Catholic universities; 1 Adventist university; universities of business administration, business and social science, the cinema, notarial studies, social studies, and theology; and university institutes of biomedical science, health and the merchant navy. In 1996, there were 790,775 university students and 128,478 academic staff.

In 1994 total expenditure on education came to 3·8% of GNP and represented 14% of total government expenditure.

Health. Free medical attention is obtainable from public hospitals. In 1996 there were 7,243 beds available in public health care institutions.

Welfare. Until the end of 1996 trade unions had a monopoly in the handling of the compulsory social security contributions of employees, but private insurance agencies are now permitted to function alongside them.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are state-owned, provincial, municipal and private radio stations overseen by the Secretaria de Comunicaciones, the Comité Federal de Radiodifusión, the Servicio Oficial de Radiodifusión (which also operates an external service and a station in Antarctica) and the Asociación de Teleradiodifusoras Argentinas. In 1995 there were 23,500,000 radio and 7,600,000 TV (colour by PAL) receivers.

Cinema. In 1997 there were 598 cinemas with an audience of approximately 26,565,000.

Press. In 1995 there were 190 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 4,700,000, a rate of 135 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. In 1997, 4,540,215 tourists visited Argentina. Receipts totalled US$4·57bn. in 1996.

Capital: Yerevan
Population estimate, 2000: 3·66m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 2,160
HDI/world rank: 0·674/99

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The early history of Armenia was one of foreign domination with, at various times, the Turkish, Persian and Russian empires claiming control. In the early part of this century the Armenians under Turkish rule suffered brutal persecution. Armenia enjoyed a brief period of independence after the First World War but in 1920 the country was proclaimed a Soviet Socialist Republic. The Soviet-Turkish Treaty of Kars (March 1921) confirmed the Turkish possession of the former Government of Kars and of the Surmali District of the Government of Yerevan. From 1922 to 1936, Armenia formed part of the Transcaucasian Soviet Federal Socialist Republic. In 1936 it was proclaimed a constituent republic of the USSR.

With the dramatic changes in Soviet politics initiated by Mikhail Gorbachev after 1985, Armenia began to assert its cultural and political identity, though a territorial dispute with Azerbaijan over Nagorno-Karabakh was the big issue until the 1991 referendum on independence when 99% of voters supported a breakaway from the Soviet Union. A declaration of independence in Sept. 1991 was followed by presidential elections after which President Ter-Petrosyan came to an agreement on economic co-operation with the other Soviet republics and joined the CIS. A new constitution adopted in July 1995 led to National Assembly elections, in which the Pan-Armenian National Movement (PANM) won 119 seats with 42·66% of votes cast; President Ter-Petrosyan was re-elected in Sept. 1996. OSCE observers noted 'very serious irregularities' in the conduct of the election.

Hostilities with Azerbaijan were brought to an end with a 1994 ceasefire but negotiations on a territorial settlement continue.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Armenia covers an area of 29,800 sq. km (11,490 sq. miles). It is bounded in the north by Georgia, in the east by Azerbaijan and in the south and west by Turkey and Iran. The 1989 census population was 3,304,776 (density, 111 per sq. km.), of whom Armenians accounted for 96·0% (1996), Azerbaijanis 2·6%, Kurds 1·7% and Russians 1·6%.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 3·66m.

In 1995 an estimated 68·6% of the population lived in urban areas.

The capital is Yerevan (1·2m. population in 1994). Other large towns are Kumairi (formerly Leninakan) (120,000) and Kirovakan (159,000).

The official language is Armenian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1994 births, 58,000; deaths, 27,000, marriages, 17,074. Rates, 1994 (per 1,000 population): Births, 15·8; deaths, 7·4; marriage, 4·6; infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 17·1. Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 1·2%. Life expectancy at birth, 67·2 years for men and 74·0 years for women, 1990–95; fertility rate, 2·2 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Summers are very dry and hot although nights can be cold. Winters are very cold, often with heavy snowfall. Yerevan, Jan. –9°C, July 28°C. Annual rainfall 318 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The head of state is the President, directly elected for 5-year terms. Parliament is a 190-member National Assembly, of which 150 members are directly elected on a first-past-the-post system, and 40 by proportional representation, distributed among those parties gaining more than 5% of votes cast. The government is nominated by the President.

National Anthem. 'Mer Hayrenik azat, ankakh' ('Land of our fathers, free and independent'); words by M. Nalbandyan, tune by B. Kanachyan.

RECENT ELECTIONS

President Ter-Petrosyan resigned in Feb. 1998 in a row over the disputed Armenian-inhabited enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh in Azerbaijan. In the election which resulted, Robert Kocharian, the Prime Minister, won, obtaining 59·7% of the votes in the second round on 30 March 1998 in a run-off against Karen Demirchyan, the former Communist Party leader, having previously obtained 38·8% in the first round of voting on 16 March against 4 other candidates. Parliamentary elections were scheduled for May 1999.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Robert Kocharian, formerly President of Nagorno-Karabakh, the Armenian-inhabited enclave in Azerbaijan.

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Armen Darbinian.

Minister of Foreign Affairs: Vartan Oskanian. Defence: Vazgen Sarkissian. Justice: David Artyunyan. Education and Science: Levon Mkrtchyan. Health: Hayk Nikosyan. Culture: Roland Sharoyan. Environmental Protection: Gevork Vardanyan. Industry and Trade: Hayk Gevorkyan. Post and Telecommunications: Artak Vardanyan. Agriculture: Vladimir Movsisian. Transportation: Yervan Zakaryan. Finance and Economy: Eduard Sandoyan. Economic and Structural Reforms: Vahram Avanesian. Statistics: Stepan Mnatsakanyan. Energy: Meruzhan Mikaelyan. Internal Affairs and National Security: Serzhik Sarkissian. Social Security: Gagik Yeganyan. Urban Planning and Construction: Felix Pirumian. Privatization: Pavel Ghaltakhchian. Territorial Administration: David Zadoyan.

The Speaker is Babken Ararktsyan.

DEFENCE

There is conscription for 18 months. Paramilitary Forces at the disposal of the Ministry of the Interior are estimated at 30,000. Most personnel are from local militia or police forces.

Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$138m. (US$37 per capita), representing 8·9% of GDP.

Army. Current troop levels are 32,682. There are approximately 300,000 Armenians who have received some kind of military service experience within the last 15 years. The Defence Ministry is aiming for a standing army of 70,000.

Army organization: 4 Motorized Rifle Brigades, 1 Special Forces Regiment, 1 Artillery Brigade, 1 Artillery Regiment, 1 Anti-tank Regiment, 2 Surface-to-Air Missile (SAM) Brigades, 1 Independent Helicopter Squadron.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

There is a dispute over the mainly Armenian-populated enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh, which lies within Azerbaijan's borders.

Armenia is a member of the UN, CIS and the NATO Partnership for Peace. It is the biggest recipient of US government aid, per head of population, after Israel.

ECONOMY

Policy. A privatization scheme was launched on 1 March 1995 under the auspices of a Privatization Commission.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 3·3% in 1997. The conflict with Azerbaijan is a serious brake on economic development.

Budget. Budgetary revenue in 1995 was US$237m.; expenditure in 1995 was US$318m.

Currency. In Nov. 1993 a new currency unit, the dram (AMD) of 100 lumma, was introduced to replace the rouble. Inflation was 17·4% in 1997. Foreign exchange reserves (including gold) were US$127·5m. in June 1996.

Banking and Finance. The Chairman of the Central Bank (founded in 1993) is Tigran Sarkisyan. In 1997 there were 33 commercial banks (1 state-owned).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Output of electricity in 1996 was 6,300m. kWh. Capacity was 2·77m. kW in 1994. Consumption per capita was an estimated 1,462 kWh in 1995. A nuclear plant closed in 1989 was re-opened in 1995 because of the blockade of the electricity supply by Azerbaijan; it was anticipated that domestic supply would be raised from 4 to 12 hours daily.

Minerals. There are deposits of copper, zinc, aluminium, molybdenum, marble and granite.

Agriculture. Agriculture accounts for approximately 44% of GDP. The chief agricultural area is the valley of the Arax and the area round Yerevan. Here there are cotton plantations, orchards and vineyards. Almonds, olives and figs are also grown. In the mountainous areas the chief pursuit is livestock raising. In 1994 there were 483,000 ha of arable land, 90,000 ha of permanent crops and 688,000 ha of permanent pasture. Private and commercial agriculture accounted for 96% of the value of agricultural output in 1993. Livestock (1996): Cattle, 497,000; sheep, 548,000; pigs, 79,000; horses, 8,000; chickens, 3m. (1995).

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 334,000 ha, or 11·8% of the total land area (10·4% in 1990).

Fisheries. Total catch in 1995 came to an estimated 4,500 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Among the chief industries are the chemical, producing mainly synthetic rubber and fertilizers, the extraction and processing of building materials, ginning- and textile-mills, carpet weaving and food processing, including wine-making.

Labour. In 1997 the population of working age was 1·98m., of whom 1·5m. were employed: 36% in agriculture, 22% in industry. The registered unemployment rate was 9% of the workforce in Oct. 1996. The average monthly income in 1996 was 6,000 drams.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$552m. in 1996.

Imports and Exports. In 1996 imports were valued at US$856m. and exports at US$290m. The main import suppliers were Iran (17·5%), Russia (14·7%), USA (12·1%) and Turkmenistan (10·1%). Principal export markets were Russia (33·1%), Belgium-Luxembourg (15·4%), Iran (15·1%) and the Southern African Customs Union (12·5%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were 11,300 km (10,500 km with hard surface) of motor roads in 1996. In 1995 there were 300 road deaths.

Rail. Total length in 1996 was 840 km of 1,000 mm gauge (590 km electrified). Passenger-kilometres travelled in 1995 came to 166m.

There is a tramway in Yerevan.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Yerevan (Zvartnots). The state-owned Armenian Airlines has been operational since 1995. In 1998 it operated services to Adler/Sochi, Aleppo, Amman, Amsterdam, Anapa, Ashgabat, Athens, Beirut, Delhi, Dubai, Ekaterinburg, Istanbul, Kharkiv, Krasnodar, Kyiv, London, Milan, Mineralnye Vody, Moscow, Nizhny Novgorod, Novosibirsk, Odesa, Paris, Rostov, St Petersburg, Samara, Saratov, Simferopol, Sofia, Stavropol, Tbilisi, Teheran, Toshkent, Vladikavkaz and Volgograd. Services were also provided in 1998 by Aeroflot, Air Enterprise, Arax Airways, Belavia, British Airways, Crimea Air, Donavia, Odessa Airlines, Samara Airlines, Siberia Airlines, Swissair and Volga Aircompany.

Telecommunications. Telephone main lines numbered 568,500 in 1997 (149·5 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were 300 fax machines in 1995.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1994, 9,923 crimes were reported, including 201 murders or attempted murders.

Religion. Armenia adopted Christianity in 301 AD, thus becoming the first Christian nation in the world. The Armenian Apostolic Church is headed by its Catholicos (Karekin II, b. 1932) whose seat is at Etchmiadzin, and who is head of all the Armenian (Gregorian) communities throughout the world. In 1995 it numbered 7m. adherents (4m. in diaspora). The Catholicos is elected by representatives of parishes. The Catholicos of the diaspora is Kachechyan of Cilicia, with seat at Antelias. In 1997, 70% of the population belonged to the Armenian Apostolic Church.

Education. Armenia has more than 99% literacy. In Jan. 1994, 0·1m. children, 23% of those eligible, attended pre-school institutions. In 1995–96 there were 249,872 pupils and 11,341 teachers in primary schools and, in 1994–95, 343,096 pupils and 32,674 teachers in secondary schools. In 1994–95 there were 69 technical colleges with 25,200 students and 14 higher educational institutions with 46,500 students. Yerevan houses the Armenian Academy of Sciences, 43 scientific institutes, a medical institute and other technical colleges, and a state university. In Jan. 1989, 33 institutions with 3,330 scientific staff were under the Academy of Sciences; scientific workers in 101 institutions totalled 21,800.

In 1995–96 there were 2 universities (including the American University), an engineering university, 10 other institutes of higher education and a conservatory.

Health. In Jan. 1994 there were some 14,000 doctors, 36,200 junior medical personnel and 183 hospitals with 31,000 beds.

Welfare. In Jan. 1995 there were 437,000 age, and 202,000 other, pensioners.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The state-owned Armenian Radio broadcasts 2 national programmes and relays of Radio Moscow and Voice of America, and a foreign service, Radio Yerevan (Armenian, English, French, Spanish, Arabic, Kurdish, Russian). Television broadcasting is by the state-controlled Armenian Television (colour by SECAM).

Press. In 1997 there were 80 daily publications.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Various dates are given for the discovery of Australia, including 1522 in which year it was sighted by Magellan's followers. Capt. Cook discovered the east coast in 1770 and initially the British planned to establish a colony there; instead, however, the government decided to set up a penal settlement. In 1801 Matthew Flinders, a British naval officer, completed the charting of Australia. He suggested that the name Australia replace New Holland, and this took place in 1817.

The appointment of Lachlan Macquarie as Governor in 1809 began a period of development in which Australia ceased primarily to be a penal settlement. The crossing of the Blue Mountains in 1813 was the first of many expeditions which led to discovery and use of vast areas of good grazing land.

On 1 Jan. 1901 the 6 separately constituted colonies of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia and Tasmania were federated under the name of the Commonwealth of Australia, the designation of 'colonies' being at the same time changed into that of 'states'—except in the case of Northern Territory which was transferred from South Australia to the Commonwealth as a 'territory' on 1 Jan. 1911.

In 1911 the Commonwealth acquired from the State of New South Wales the Canberra site for the Australian capital. Building operations were begun in 1923 and a Federal Parliament was opened at Canberra in 1927. A further area at Jervis Bay was acquired in 1915.

Territories under the administration of Australia are Norfolk Island, the territory of Ashmore and Cartier Islands, and the Australian Antarctic Territory (acquired on 24 Aug. 1936), the latter comprising all the islands and territory, other than Adélie Land, situated south of 60° S. lat. and between 160° and 45° E. long. The Coral Sea Islands became an External Territory in 1969.

The British Government transferred sovereignty in the Heard and McDonald Islands to the Australian Government on 26 Dec. 1947. Cocos (Keeling) Islands on 23 Nov. 1955 and Christmas Island on 1 Oct. 1958 were also transferred to Australian jurisdiction.

Since the Second World War, Australia has played an increasingly important role in Asia and the Pacific. For most of this period central government has been in the hands of the Australian Labor Party (ALP) which, in the last decade, has shifted its stance on state control and economic planning to allow for an ambitious programme of privatization. In March 1986 the Australia Act abolished the remaining legislative, executive and judicial controls of the British Parliament.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Australia, excluding external territories, covers a land area of 7,682,300 sq. km, extending from Cape York (10° 41' S) in the north some 3,680 km to Tasmania (43° 39' S), and from Cape Byron (153° 39' E) in the east some 4,000 km west to Western Australia (113° 9' E). External territories under the administration of Australia comprise the Ashmore and Cartier Islands, Australian Antarctic Territory, Christmas Island, the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, the Coral Sea Islands, the Heard and McDonald Islands and Norfolk Island. For these see below.

Growth in census population has been:

1901	3,774,310	1961	10,508,186	1981	15,053,600
1911	4,455,005	1966	11,599,498	1986	15,763,000
1921	5,435,734	1971	12,755,638	1991	16,852,258
1947	7,579,358	1976	13,915,500	1996	17,892,423

Of the 1996 census population, 9,043,199 were females. Estimated population at 30 June 1998 was 18,751,000.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 18·84m.

Areas and populations of the States and Territories at the 1996 census:

States and Territories	Area (sq. km)	Population	Per sq. km
New South Wales (NSW)	801,600	6,038,696	7·5
Victoria (Vic.)	227,600	4,373,520	19·2
Queensland (Qld.)	1,727,200	3,368,850	2·0
South Australia (SA)	984,000	1,427,936	1·5
Western Australia (WA)	2,525,500	1,726,095	0·7
Tasmania (Tas.)	67,800	459,659	6·8
Northern Territory (NT)	1,346,200	195,101	0·1
Australian Capital Territory (ACT)	2,400	299,243	124·7

Estimated population at 30 June 1998: New South Wales, 6,341,600; Victoria, 4,660,900; Queensland, 3,456,300; South Australia, 1,487,300; Western Australia, 1,831,400; Tasmania, 471,900; Northern Territory, 190,000; Australian Capital Territory, 308,400.

In 1996 density was 2·3 per sq. km. 86% of the population lived in urban areas. Resident population (estimate) in capitals and other statistical districts with more than 150,000 population at 30 June 1996:

Capital	State	Population	Capital	State	Population
Canberra[1]	ACT	344,800	Darwin	NT	82,400
Sydney	NSW	3,879,400	Statistical district
Melbourne	Vic.	3,283,000	Newcastle	NSW	463,700

Hobart	Tas.	195,800	Sunshine Coast	Qld.	156,100

The median age of the 1996 census population was 34 years.

Australians born overseas (census 1996), 3,901,900, of whom 1,124,000 were from the UK and Ireland, and 291,400 from New Zealand.

Aboriginals have been included in population statistics only since 1967. At the 1996 census 352,970 people identified themselves as being of indigenous origin. A 1992 High Court ruling that the Meriam people of the Murray Islands had land rights before the European settlement reversed the previous assumption that Australia was terra nullius before that settlement. The Native Title Act setting up a system for deciding land claims by Aborigines came into effect on 1 Jan. 1994.

Overseas arrivals and departures:

	1994	1995	1996
Arrivals	5,886,200	6,450,600	7,121,700
of whom long-term	221,910	253,930	261,340
(including settlers)	(77,940)	(96,970)	(92,500)
Departures	5,810,200	6,344,600	7,001,100
of whom long-term	114,660	121,490	158,260

The 1994–95 quota for settlers was 86,000. The Migration Act of Dec. 1989 sought to curb illegal entry and ensure that annual immigrant intakes were met but not exceeded. Provisions for temporary visitors to become permanent were restricted.

The national language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Life expectancy at birth, 1996, 75·2 years for males and 81·1 years for females.

Suicide rates (per 100,000 population, 1996): 13·1 (men, 21·2; women, 5·0).

CLIMATE

Over most of the continent, four seasons may be recognized. Spring is from Sept. to Nov., Summer from Dec. to Feb., Autumn from March to May and Winter from June to Aug., but because of its great size there are climates that range from tropical monsoon to cool temperate, with large areas of desert as well. In Northern Australia there are only two seasons, the wet one lasting from Nov. to March, but rainfall amounts diminish markedly from the coast to the interior. Central and southern Queensland are subtropical, north and central New South Wales are warm temperate, as are parts of Victoria, Western Australia and Tasmania, where most rain falls in winter. Canberra, Jan. 68°F (20°C), July 42°F (5·6°C). Annual rainfall 25" (635 mm). Adelaide, Jan. 73°F (22·8°C), July 52°F (11·1°C). Annual rainfall 21" (528 mm). Brisbane, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 58°F (14·4°C). Annual rainfall 45" (1,153 mm). Darwin, Jan. 83°F (28·3°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 59" (1,536 mm). Hobart, Jan. 62°F (16·7°C), July 46°F (7·8°C). Annual rainfall 23" (584 mm). Melbourne, Jan. 67°F (19·4°C), July 49°F (9·4°C). Annual rainfall 26" (659 mm). Perth, Jan. 74°F (23·3°C), July 55°F (12·8°C). Annual rainfall 35" (873 mm). Sydney, Jan. 71°F (21·7°C), July 53°F (11·7°C). Annual rainfall 47" (1,215 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Federal Government. Under the Constitution legislative power is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the Queen, represented by a Governor-General, a Senate and a House of Representatives. Under the terms of the constitution there must be a session of parliament at least once a year.

The Senate comprises 76 Senators (12 for each State voting as one electorate and as from Aug. 1974, 2 Senators respectively for the Australian Capital Territory and the Northern Territory). Senators representing the States are chosen for 6 years. The terms of Senators representing the Territories expire at the close of the day next preceding the polling day for the general elections of the House of Representatives. In general, the Senate is renewed to the extent of one-half every 3 years, but in case of disagreement with the House of Representatives, it, together with the House of Representatives, may be dissolved, and an entirely new Senate elected. Elections to the Senate are on the single transferable vote system; voters list candidates in order of preference. A candidate must reach a quota to be elected, otherwise the lowest-placed candidate drops out and his or her votes are transferred to other candidates.

The House of Representatives consists, as nearly as practicable, of twice as many Members as there are Senators, the numbers chosen in the several States being in proportion to population as shown by the latest statistics, but not less than 5 for any original State. Elections to the House of Representatives are on the alternative vote system; voters list candidates in order of preference, and if no one candidate wins an overall majority, the lowest-placed drops out and his or her votes are transferred. The Northern Territory has been represented by 1 Member in the House of Representatives since 1922; the Australian Capital Territory by 1 Member since 1949 and 2 Members since May 1974. The Member for the Australian Capital Territory was given full voting rights as from the Parliament elected in Nov. 1966. The Member for the Northern Territory was given full voting rights in 1968. The House of Representatives continues for 3 years from the date of its first meeting, unless sooner dissolved.

Every Senator or Member of the House of Representatives must be a subject of the Queen, be of full age, possess electoral qualifications and have resided for 3 years within Australia. The franchise for both Houses is the same and is based on universal (males and females aged 18 years) suffrage. Compulsory voting was introduced in 1925. If a Member of a State Parliament wishes to be a candidate in a federal election, he must first resign his State seat.

Executive power is vested in the Governor-General, advised by an Executive Council. The Governor-General presides over the Council, and its members hold office at his pleasure. All Ministers of State, who are members of the party or parties commanding a majority in the lower House, are members of the Executive Council under summons. A record of proceedings of meetings is kept by the Secretary to the Council. At Executive Council meetings the decisions of the Cabinet are (where necessary) given legal form, appointments made, resignations accepted, proclamations, regulations and the like made.

The policy of a ministry is, in practice, determined by the Ministers of State meeting without the Governor-General under the chairmanship of the Prime Minister. This group is known as the Cabinet. There are 11 Standing Committees of the Cabinet comprising varying numbers of Cabinet and non-Cabinet Ministers. In Labour Governments all Ministers have been members of Cabinet; in Liberal and National Country Party Governments, only the senior ministers. Cabinet meetings are private and deliberative, and records of meetings are not made public. The Cabinet does not form part of the legal mechanisms of Government; the decisions it takes have, in themselves, no legal effect. The Cabinet substantially controls, in ordinary circumstances, not only the general legislative programme of Parliament but the whole course of Parliamentary proceedings. In effect, though not in form, the Cabinet, by reason of the fact that all Ministers are members of the Executive Council, is also the dominant element in the executive government of the country.

The legislative powers of the Federal Parliament embrace trade and commerce, shipping, etc.; taxation, finance, banking, currency, bills of exchange, bankruptcy, insurance; defence; external affairs, naturalization and aliens, quarantine, immigration and emigration; the people of any race for whom it is deemed necessary to make special laws; postal, telegraph and like services; census and statistics; weights and measures; astronomical and meteorological observations; copyrights; railways; conciliation and arbitration in disputes extending beyond the limits of any one State; social services; marriage, divorce etc.; service and execution of the civil and criminal process; recognition of the laws, Acts and records, and judicial proceedings of the States. The Senate may not originate or amend money bills. Disagreement with the House of Representatives may result in dissolution and, in the last resort, a joint sitting of the two Houses. The Federal Parliament has limited and enumerated powers, the several State parliaments retaining the residuary power of government over their respective territories. If a State law is inconsistent with a Commonwealth law, the latter prevails.

The Constitution also provides for the admission or creation of new States. Proposed laws for the alteration of the Constitution must be submitted to the electors, and they can be enacted only if approved by a majority of the States and by a majority of all the electors voting.

The Australia Acts 1986 removed residual powers of the British government to intervene in the government of Australia or the individual states.

In Feb. 1998 an Australian Constitutional Convention voted for Australia to become a republic. A national referendum was to be held in 1999.

State Government. In each of the 6 States (New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia, Tasmania) there is a State government whose constitution, powers and laws continue, subject to changes embodied in the Australian Constitution and subsequent alterations and agreements, as they were before federation. The system of government is basically the same as that described above for the Commonwealth—i.e., the Sovereign, her representative (in this case a Governor), an upper and lower house of Parliament (except in Queensland, where the upper house was abolished in 1922), a cabinet led by the Premier and an Executive Council. Among the more important functions of the State governments are those relating to education, health, hospitals and charities, law, order and public safety, business undertakings such as railways and tramways, and public utilities such as water supply and sewerage. In the domains of education, hospitals, justice, the police, penal establishments, and railway and tramway operation, State government activity predominates. Care of the public health and recreative activities are shared with local government authorities and the Federal Government, social services other than those referred to above are now primarily the concern of the Federal Government; the operation of public utilities is shared with local and semi-government authorities.

Administration of Territories. Since 1911, responsibility for administration and development of the Australian Capital Territory (ACT) has been vested in Federal Ministers and Departments. The ACT became self-governing on 11 May 1989. The ACT House of Assembly has been accorded the forms of a legislature, but continues to perform an advisory function for the Minister for the Capital Territory.

On 1 July 1978 the Northern Territory of Australia became a self-governing Territory with expenditure responsibilities and revenue-raising powers broadly approximating those of a State.

National Anthem. 'Advance Australia Fair' (adopted 19 April 1984; words and tune by P. D. McCormick). The 'Royal Anthem' (i.e. 'God Save the Queen') is used in the presence of the British Royal Family.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The 39th Parliament was elected on 3 Oct. 1998.

Local Government. The system of municipal government is broadly the same throughout Australia, although local government legislation is a State matter.

Each State is sub-divided into areas known variously as municipalities, cities, boroughs, towns, shires or district councils, totalling about 900. Within these areas the management of road, street and bridge construction, health, sanitary and garbage services, water supply and sewerage, and electric light and gas undertakings, hospitals, fire brigades, tramways and omnibus services and harbours is generally part of the functions of elected aldermen and councillors. State governments may also be responsible for some services.

In some instances, e.g. in New South Wales, a number of local government authorities combine to conduct a public undertaking such as the supply of water or electricity. State and territory taxation revenue was $A30,298m. in 1995–96; local governments, $A5,522m.

DEFENCE

The Minister for Defence has responsibility under legislation for the control and administration of the Defence Force. The Chief of Defence Force Staff is vested with command of the Defence Force. He is the principal military adviser to the Minister. The Secretary, Department of Defence is the Permanent Head of the Department. He is the principal civilian adviser to the Minister and has statutory responsibility for financial administration of the Defence outlay. The Chief of Defence Force Staff and the Secretary are jointly responsible for the administration of the Defence Force except with respect to matters falling within the command of the Defence Force or any other matter specified by the Minister.

The Chief of Naval Staff, the Chief of the General Staff and the Chief of the Air Staff command the Navy, Army and Air Force respectively. They have delegated authority from the Chief of Defence Force Staff and the Secretary to administer matters relating to their particular Service.

The structure of Defence is characterized by 3 organizational types: (i) A Central Office comprising 5 groups of functional orientated Divisions: Strategic Policy and Force Development; Supply and Support; Manpower and Financial Services; Management and Infrastructure Services; and, Defence Science and Technology; (ii) the 3 Armed Services of the Defence Force, each having a Service Office element in addition to the command structure; and (iii) a small number of outrider organizations concerned with such specialist fields as intelligence and natural disasters.

Defence Support. The Department of Defence Support purchases goods and services for defence purposes; provides technical expertise and other assistance to the defence industry; involves Australian industry in defence equipment to the maximum practical extent; administers the Australian Offsets Program so as to stimulate technological advancement and broaden the capabilities of strategic industries; within overall defence policies helps the capacity, efficiency and capability of Australian industry to design and export defence materiel; manages the Government's munitions and aircraft factories, and dockyards; markets defence and allied products and services to help maintain strategic industries.

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$8,501m. (US$456 per capita) and represented 2·2% of GDP.

Army. Overall organization and financial control of the Army is vested in the Chief of General Staff. The Army is organized in a Land Headquarters and a Northern Command.

The strength of the Army was 25,885, including 2,783 women, at 30 June 1997. There was 1 infantry division, 1 armoured regiment, 1 armoured reconnaissance regiment, 1 armoured personnel carrier squadron, 4 infantry battalions, 2 artillery regiments, 1 air defence regiment, 2 combat engineer regiments, 1 special forces regiment and 2 aviation regiments. Equipment included 90 Leopard 1A3 main battle tanks. The Army Aviation Corps has 4 fixed-wing transports and 120 helicopters.

The effective strength of the Army Reserve at 30 June 1997 was 25,100.

Women have been eligible for combat duties since 1993.

Navy. The Chief of Naval Staff is assisted by the Deputy Chief of Naval Staff and Assistant Chiefs for Personnel and for Materiel. The command, operation and administration of the Fleet is vested in the Maritime Commander, Australia headquartered at Sydney.

The fleet includes 1 new Swedish-designed Collins class and 3 UK-built Oxley class diesel submarines, 3 US-built guided missile destroyers, 1 new ANZAC class German-designed frigate, 4 US- and 2 Australian-built guided missile frigates and 1 older frigate, 6 mine countermeasure vessels, 2 ex-US landing ships being converted for helicopter operations, 5 tank landing craft and 16 inshore patrol craft. Major auxiliaries include 2 fleet replenishment tankers and 2 survey ships, and there are some 80 minor auxiliaries and service craft.

A further 5 Collins class submarines and 5 ANZAC class frigates are under construction.

The Fleet Air Arm operates a shore-based anti-submarine helicopter squadron of 7 Sea Kings and 16 S-70B Seahawk helicopters for the guided missile frigates. There are additionally 2 transport and 1 survey aircraft, and 9 transport and utility helicopters.

The fleet main base is at Sydney, with subsidiary bases at Cockburn Sound (Western Australia), Cairns and Darwin.

The all-volunteer Navy was (1997) 14,701-strong including 990 Fleet Air Arm.

Air Force. Command of the Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF) is vested in the Chief of the Air Staff (CAS) assisted by the Deputy Chief of the Air Staff, Chief of Air Force Operations and Plans, Chief of Air Force Materiel, Chief of Air Force Personnel, Chief of Air Force Technical Services, Director-General Supply—Air Force and Assistant Secretary Resources Planning.

The CAS administers and controls RAAF units through two commands: Operational Command and Support Command. Operational Command is responsible to the CAS for the command of operational units and the conduct of their operations within Australia and overseas. Support Command is responsible to the CAS for training of personnel, and the supply and maintenance of service equipment.

Flying establishment comprises 16 squadrons, of which 2 are equipped with 22 F-111 strike/reconnaissance aircraft. Of the others, 3 are equipped with missile-armed F-18 Hornet interceptors and 3 with Orion maritime reconnaissance aircraft. There are 5 transport squadrons, 2 with Hercules turboprop transports, 1 with Caribou STOL transports, 1 with Boeing 707 tanker and transport aircraft, and 1 with Falcon 900 VIP transports. There were (1997) 125 combat aircraft.

Primary training has been transferred to a civilian school. Training aircraft include Pilatus PC-9 turboprop-powered basic trainers, Aermacchi MB 326H jets for pilot training, and HS 748 aircraft for navigator training. A training unit has F-18 Hornets for crew conversion.

Training for commissioned rank is carried out at the RAAF Academy and Officers' Training School, both located at Point Cook, Victoria. Other major training activities which lead to commissioned rank include basic aircrew training, and technical and commercial cadet schemes. Basic ground training to tradesman level is conducted at RAAF technical training schools. Higher command and staff training is, in the main, carried out at the RAAF Staff College, Fairbairn, ACT.

Personnel (30 June 1997) 16,650, including 2,645 women. There is also an Australian Air Force Reserve, 4,400-strong.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Australia is a member of the UN, the Commonwealth, OECD, Colombo Plan, the South Pacific Forum and the Pacific Community.

ECONOMY

Policy. Since 1942 the Federal Government alone has levied taxes on incomes. In return for vacating this field of taxation, the State Governments are reimbursed by grants from the Federal Government out of revenue received. Payments to the States represent about one-third of Federal Government outlays, and in turn the payments State Governments receive from the Federal Government account for nearly half of their revenues.

The Financial Agreement of 1927 established the Australian Loan Council which represents the Federal and six State Governments, and co-ordinates domestic and overseas borrowings by these governments, including annual borrowing programmes. The Federal Government acts as a central borrowing agency in raising loans to finance the major part of those programmes. The Loan Council in 1984 agreed upon arrangements for the co-ordination of borrowings by semi-government and local authorities, and government-owned companies.

Reforms were initiated at a special Premiers' Conference in Oct. 1990 to form a partnership between the Commonwealth, States, Territories and local government, with a view to improving national efficiency and international competitiveness, and enhancing delivery and quality of government services. In July 1991 the premiers agreed a programme of inter-state standardization and integration in such areas as the railway system, electricity grid, product control and professional qualifications.

Performance. There was strong growth of real domestic demand, 6%, in 1997–98, the seventh year of the current upswing. GDP was $A529,408m. for 1997 ($A433,688m. in 1995–96) with GDP growth of 4·0% in 1997–98. Over the past 7 years, real GDP expanded at an annual rate of 3·5% while inflation was brought down and kept low; this makes the Australian economy's performance one of the best in the OECD area.

Budget. In 1929, under a financial agreement between the Federal Government and States, approved by a referendum, the Federal Government took over all State debts existing on 30 June 1927 and agreed to pay $A15·17m. a year for 58 years towards the interest charges thereon, and to make substantial contributions towards a sinking fund on State debt. The Sinking Fund arrangements were revised under an amendment to the agreement in 1976.

In Aug. 1998, the Commonwealth Government introduced a tax reform package which is intended to come into effect in July 2000. The package includes: the introduction of a General Savings Tax (GST) at a 10% rate, with all the revenues going to states provided that they agree to abolish a range of other indirect taxes; the abolition of Financial Assistance Grants to states; the abolition of wholesale sales tax (which is levied by the Commonwealth Government); cuts in personal income tax; and increases in social security benefits, especially for families. In all, the package reduces the budget surpluses of the Commonwealth and States in the financial year 2000–01 by $A4·8bn. (0·7% of GDP) and $A0·7bn. (0·1% of GDP), respectively.

Outlays and revenue of the Commonwealth Government for years ending 30 June (in $A1m.):

[1]Estimate.

Currency. On 14 Feb. 1966 Australia adopted a system of decimal currency. The currency unit, the Australian dollar (AUD), is divided into 100 cents.

Foreign exchange reserves were US$15,627m. in Feb. 1998 and gold reserves 2·56m. troy oz. Total money supply was A$105,781m. in Feb. 1998.

Underlying inflation is projected to pick up from an estimated 1·75% in 1999 to a little over 3% in 2000.

Banking and Finance. The banking system comprises:

(a) The Reserve Bank of Australia is the central bank. It is responsible for the objectives of monetary policy, overall financial system stability and regulation of the payments system. It is also banker to the Commonwealth Government and several state governments. A wholly owned subsidiary of the Reserve Bank (Note Printing Australia) manufactures Australia's currency notes and other security products. The Governor is a statutory appointee (present incumbent, Ian Macfarlane, appointed 1996 for a 7-year term). Within the Reserve Bank there are two Boards: the Reserve Bank of Australia Board and the Payments System Board; the Governor is the Chairman of each.

As at 30 June 1998, total assets of the Reserve Bank of Australia were $A47,310m., including gold, $A1,237m., foreign exchange, $A24,197m. and domestic government securities, $A21,012m. Main liability items were capital and reserves, $A9,829m.; Australian notes on issue, $A21,651m.; and deposits, $A11,073m. Responsibilities derive principally from the Reserve Bank Act 1959 and Banking Act 1959.

Inflation rate for year ended June 1998 (Consumer Price Index—All Groups) was +0·7%.

(b) 4 major banks: (i) The Commonwealth Bank of Australia; (ii) The Australia and New Zealand Banking Group Ltd; (iii) Westpac Banking Corporation; (iv) National Australia Bank.

(c) Other banks: (i) 3 State Government banks—The State Bank of New South Wales, The State Bank of South Australia, and the Rural and Industries Bank of Western Australia; (ii) one joint stock bank—The Bank of Queensland Ltd, formerly The Brisbane Permanent Building and Banking Co. Ltd, which has specialized business in one district only; (iii) The Australian Bank Ltd; (iv) branches of 17 overseas banks—the restrictions on foreign banks operating in Australia, and on foreign investment in the merchant banks, were lifted in 1984-85.

(d) The Commonwealth Development Bank of Australia commenced operations on 14 Jan. 1960. Its function is to provide finance for primary production and small business.

(e) The Australian Resources Development Bank Ltd opened on 29 March 1968 to assist Australian enterprises in developing Australia's natural resources, through direct loans and equity investment or by re-financing loans made by trading banks. The bank is jointly owned by the 4 major Australian trading banks.

(f) The Primary Industry Bank of Australia Ltd commenced operations on 22 Sept. 1978. The equity capital of the bank consists of eight shares. Seven shares are held by the Australian Government and the major trading banks while the eighth share is held equally by the 4 State banks. The main objective of the bank is to facilitate the provision of loans to primary producers on longer terms than are otherwise generally available. The role of the bank is restricted to re-financing loans made by banks and other financial institutions.

(g) The Banking Legislation Amendment Act of 1989 removed the legislative differences between savings and trading banks. In June 1995 there were 49 authorized banks under 44 banking groups. In June 1995 there were 6,655 branches and 5,897 agencies.

Total deposits in Oct. 1996 were $A295,940m. (including $A8,380m. of non-residents' deposits).

(h) In March 1992 there were 45 building societies. Assets were $A10,576m. at 30 June 1997. Building societies are permitted to have up to 50% of their assets in non-home loans.

There is an Australian Stock Exchange (ASX).

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Electricity supply is the responsibility of the State governments. At 30 June 1994 total installed capacity was 37·3m. kW. Production 1996–97, 168,370m. kWh (11% hydro-electric). Total consumption at 30 June 1996 was an estimated 144·3m. kWh.

Oil and Gas. The main fields are Gippsland (Vic.) and Carnarvon (WA). Crude oil production was 30,763m. litres in 1995-96; natural gas, 29,985m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Australia is the world's largest producer of bauxite (39% of total world production) and diamonds (38%). Coal is Australia's major source of energy. Reserves are large (1996 estimate: 68,000m. tonnes) and easily worked. The main fields are in New South Wales and Queensland. Production in 1995-96 was 195·5m. tonnes. Brown coal (lignite) reserves are mainly in Victoria and were estimated at 41,700m. tonnes in 1990. Production, 1995-96 was 54·3m. tonnes.

Production of other major minerals in 1995-96 (1,000 tonnes): Bauxite, 50,724; copper concentrate, 1,297; iron ore, 137,267; manganese ore, 1,298; uranium concentrate, 3,200 tonnes; gold bullion, 291,965 kg.

Agriculture. At 31 March 1996 there were 143,202 establishments mainly engaged in farming. Agricultural land in 1997 covered an estimated 471·1m. ha, representing about 60% of total land area with 19·41m. ha sown to crops. The most important are (1995-96): wheat (16·5m. tonnes from 9·22m. ha); sugar-cane (35·89m. tonnes from 0·38m. ha); barley (5·8m. tonnes from 3·1m. ha); oats (1·88m. tonnes from 1·14m. ha); rice (0·97m. tonnes from 0·14m. ha). In 1995-96, 782,566 tonnes of grapes were harvested from 64,858 ha of vines.

Gross value of agricultural production in 1995-96, $A27,451·9m., including (in $A1m.): Crops, 15,396·7; livestock slaughtering, 6,192·7; wool, 2,548·5; other livestock products, 3,302·9.

Livestock (in 1,000) in 1996:

[1]Includes Northern Territory and ACT

Total poultry, 1996: 71,028,000.

In 1996 Australia was overtaken by China as the country with the greatest number of sheep.

Livestock products (in 1,000 tonnes) for the year ending 30 June 1996: Beef, 1,711; veal, 34; lamb and mutton, 575; pigmeat, 334; poultry meat, 516; wool, 726; milk, 8,716m. litres.

Williams, D. B. (ed.) Agriculture in the Australian Economy. 3rd ed. Sydney Univ. Press and OUP, 1991

Forestry. The Federal Government is responsible for forestry at the national level. Each State is responsible for the management of publicly owned forests. Total native forest cover was 155·84m. ha at 30 June 1997, made up of (in 1,000 ha): Public forest, 112,631, privately owned, 42,018. The major part of wood supplies derives from coniferous plantations, of which there were 883,840 ha in 1995. Production was 3·43m. cu. metres of sawn timber and 986,000 tonnes of wood pulp in 1995–96.

Fisheries. The Australian Fishing Zone covers an area 16% larger than the Australian land mass and is the third largest fishing zone in the world, but fish production is insignificant by world standards due to low productivity of the oceans. The major commercially exploited species are prawns, rock lobster, abalone, tuna, other fin fish, scallops, oysters and pearls. Total catch in 1996 came to 214,205 tonnes, mainly from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing industries at 30 June 1996: Persons employed, 923,100; salaries paid, $A29,902m.; turnover, $A197,963m. (excludes small single-establishment enterprises employing fewer than 4 persons).

Manufacturing by sector, 1995-96:

	Persons Employed	Salaries in $A1m.	Turnover in $A1m.
Food, beverages and tobacco	162,700	5,175	43,067
Textiles, clothing, footwear and leather products	75,900	1,857	9,832
Wood and paper products	60,400	1,858	11,446

Machinery and equipment	204,700	6,766	38,704
Other manufacturing	53,700	1,269	5,664

Manufactured products in 1995–96 included: Bricks, 1,468m.; portland cement, 6·7m. tonnes; ready-mixed concrete, 15·4m. sq. metres; confectionery, 181,059 tonnes; electric motors, 2·7m.; washing machines, 268,000; refrigerators, 398,000; pig iron, 7·3m. tonnes; tobacco and cigarettes, 22,192 tonnes; woven fabric, 209·1m. sq. metres; woollen yarn, 18,284 tonnes; motor cars, 304,000; beer, 1,735m. litres.

Labour. In June 1997 the total workforce (persons aged 15 and over) numbered 9,185,600, of whom 8·4m. (3,623,900 females) were employed. Since 1992-93, employment has increased by over 11%. In Sept. 1997 there were 8,415,400 employed persons and the unemployment rate was 8·6%. In 1996-97 the labour force included 354,100 employers, 6,676,500 wage and salary earners and 821,300 self-employed. The majority of wage and salary earners have had their minimum wages and conditions of work prescribed in awards by the Industrial Relations Commission, which in April 1991 awarded a 2·5% rise, making the minimum weekly wage about $A442, but in Oct. 1991 the Commission decided to allow direct employer-employee wage bargaining, provided agreements reached are endorsed by the Commission. In some States, some conditions of work (e.g., weekly hours of work, leave) are set down in State legislation. Average weekly wage, May 1997, $A577·50 (men, $A686·30; women, $A457·40). Average working week, 1996-97: 35·8 hours. 4 weeks annual leave is standard.

Employees in all States are covered by workers' compensation legislation and by certain industrial award provisions relating to work injuries.

During 1996 there were 543 industrial disputes in progress which accounted for 928,500 working days lost. In these disputes 577,700 workers were involved.

The following table shows the distribution of employed persons by industry in 1996-97, by sex and average weekly hours worked:

In June 1997, 796,500 persons (8·8% of the labour force) were unemployed, (including 334,300 females) of whom 403,800 persons were seeking full-time work. In June 1997, 233,100 persons had been unemployed for more than one year. In Aug. 1997 there were 63,900 job vacancies.

Trade Unions. In June 1996 there were 132 trade unions with 2,800,500 members. About 37·4% of wage and salary earners (35·5% females) were estimated to be members of unions. There were 62 unions with fewer than 1,000 members and 15 unions with 50,000 or more members. Many of the larger trade unions are affiliated with central labour organizations, the oldest and by far the largest being the Australian Council of Trade Unions formed in 1927. In July 1992 the Industrial Relations Legislation Amendment Act freed the way for employers and employees to negotiate enterprise-based awards and agreements.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 1990 Australia and New Zealand completed a Closer Economic Relations agreement (initiated in 1983) which establishes free trade in goods. Net foreign debt was $A203·7m. as at 30 June 1997. The effect of the Asian meltdown on exports became apparent towards the end of 1997. But in 1998 shipments of commodities and exports of manufactures and some services were increasingly redirected to other destinations, notably the USA and Europe. As a result, the volume of exported goods and services increased by 4·25%, well below the 10% increase of the year before.

Imports and Exports. Merchandise imports and exports for years ending 30 June (in $A1m.):

	Imports	Exports
1993–94	64,470	64,574
1994–95	74,634	67,063
1995–96	77,792	76,043
1996–97	78,977	78,885

The Australian customs tariff provides for preferences to goods produced in and shipped from certain countries as a result of reciprocal trade agreements. These include the UK, New Zealand, Canada and Ireland.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 803,075 km of roads (18,700 km of National Highways).

At 31 May 1995, 8,628,800 cars, 2,022,100 vans, trucks and buses, and 296,600 motor cycles were registered. New registrations, 1996–97, included 557,962 cars, 663,852 vans, trucks and buses, and 22,842 motor cycles.

In 1996, 1,942 persons were killed in road accidents (2,014 in 1995).

Rail. There are 7 government-owned railway systems. In 1991 the National Rail Corporation was set up to market inter-state freight service. Statistics for the year ended 30 June 1996:

State	Route length in km[4]	Passenger journeys, 1,000[5]	Goods carried, (1,000 tonnes)	Freight earnings, ($A1,000)

[5]Inter-system traffic is included in the total for each system over which it passes.

The State railway gauges are: New South Wales, 1,435 mm; Victoria, 1,600 mm (325 km, 1,435 mm); Queensland, 1,067 mm (111 km, 1,435 mm); South Australia, 1,600 mm for 2,533 km plus 1,435 mm for 1,824 km and the rest 1,067 mm; West Australia, 137 km, 1,435 mm and the rest 1,067 mm, and Tasmania, 1,067 mm. Australian National Railways comprises 3,530 km of 1,435 mm ('standard') gauge, 1,173 km of 1,600 mm ('broad') gauge and 1,532 km of 1,067 mm ('narrow') gauge routes. Under various Commonwealth–State standardization agreements, all the State capitals are now linked by standard gauge track (except Darwin—the Central Australia railway extends only as far north as Alice Springs).

The National Rail Corporation operating as 'National Rail' was incorporated in Sept. 1991; terminal operations commenced in 1993. It is scheduled to take over inter-state rail freight operations and the ownership of rail assets.

There are also private industrial and tourist railways, and tramways in Adelaide, Melbourne and Sydney.

Civil Aviation. Qantas Airways is Australia's international airline. In 1992 Qantas merged with Australian Airlines, and in 1993, 25% of the company was purchased by British Airways. The remainder is government-owned. Ansett Australia is the second largest airline after Qantas. There are 12 international airports, the main ones being Adelaide, Brisbane, Cairns, Darwin, Melbourne, Perth and Sydney. In 1998 services were also provided by Aerolíneas Argentinas, Air Calédonie International, Air China, Air Facilities, Air Mauritius, Air Nauru, Air New Zealand, Air Niugini, Air Pacific, Air Vanuatu, Air Zimbabwe, Airlines of South Australia, Airnorth Regional, Alitalia, All Nippon Airways, American Airlines, AOM French Airlines, Asiana Airlines, British Airways, Canadian Airlines International, Cathay Pacific Airways, China Eastern Airlines, Continental Airlines, Country Connection Airlines, Eastland Air, Egyptair, Emirates, EVA Airways, Flight West Airlines, Garuda Indonesia, Gulf Air, Hazelton Airlines, Impulse Airlines, International Aviation, JAL, Kendell Airlines, KLM, Korean Air, Lauda Air, Lufthansa, Macair, Malaysia Airlines, Mandarin Airlines, MBA Pty Ltd, Merpati Nusantara Airlines, National Jet, O'Connor-Mount Gambier Airline, Olympic Airways, Par Avion, Philippine Airlines, Polynesian, Royal Brunei Airlines, Royal Tongan Airlines, Rottnest Airlines, Shepparton Airlines, Singapore Airlines, Skywest Airlines, Solomon Airlines, South African Airways, Tamair, Thai Airways International, Transtate Airlines, United Airlines, Vietnam Airlines, Virgin Atlantic, Western Airlines, Whyalla Airlines and Yanda Airlines.

Sydney (Kingsford Smith) handles most passengers (20,337,000 in 1996), followed by Melbourne International (13,104,000 in 1996) and Brisbane (9,578,000 in 1996).

Internal airlines carried 21,465,300 passengers in 1993–94 and 217,900 tonnes of freight. Domestic airlines were deregulated in Oct. 1990.

At 30 June 1994 there were 400 Commonwealth or licensed aerodromes in Australia and its Territories. At 14 Dec. 1995, 9,633 aircraft were registered in Australia.

Shipping. The chief ports are Sydney, Newcastle, Port Kembla; Melbourne, Geelong, Westernport; Hay Point, Gladstone, Brisbane; Port Hedland, Dampier, Port Walcott, Fremantle. At 30 June 1996 the trading fleet comprised 82 vessels totalling 3,303,294 DWT, 2,267,719 GRT.

Coastal cargo handled at Australian ports in 1994–95 (in gross weight tonnes): Loaded, 49,190,000; unloaded, 50,466,000.

Telecommunications. Complete deregulation of the Australian telecommunications market occurred on 1 July 1997. The market is supervized by an independent regulatory authority, the Australian Telecommunications Authority (AUSTEL). Internal telecommunications used to be operated by Telecom Australia, while services to other countries were operated by the Overseas Telecommunications Corporation. In 1991 these merged to form Telstra, a general carrier providing both domestic and international services in competition with other licensed general carriers. Telstra was partly privatized in 1997, in the most successful flotation in Australia's history. In Sept. 1997 there were 12 licenced carriers operating under the Telecommunications Act 1997. Under this Act, carriers must have been able to provide digital data capability to at least 96% of the population by 31 Dec. 1998.

Telephone main lines numbered 9,350,000 in 1997 (504·5 per 1,000 inhabitants). Subscribers to digital mobile services increased from 309,000 in 1994-95 to 2,246,000 in 1996-97.

Three telecommunications satellites are in orbit covering the entire continent.

Nearly 4·2m. people accessed the Internet in the 12 months to Aug. 1998. In 1995, 4,979,000 PCs were in use, or 276 per 1,000 persons. There were 475,000 fax machines in use in 1995.

Postal Services. Postal services are operated by Australia Post, operating under the Australian Postal Corporation Act, 1989 as a government business enterprise. Revenue was $A3,109·7m. in 1996–97, expenditure $A2,763·1m. There were 4,468 post offices and other agencies in 1997, and 4,205·7m. postal items were handled.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judicial power of the Commonwealth of Australia is vested in the High Court of Australia (the Federal Supreme Court), in the Federal courts created by the Federal Parliament (the Federal Court of Australia and the Family Court of Australia) and in the State courts invested by Parliament with Federal jurisdiction.

High Court. The High Court consists of a Chief Justice and 6 other Justices, appointed by the Governor-General in Council. The Constitution confers on the High Court original jurisdiction, inter alia, in all matters arising under treaties or affecting consuls or other foreign representatives, matters between the States of the Commonwealth, matters to which the Commonwealth is a party and matters between residents of different States. Federal Parliament may make laws conferring original jurisdiction on the High Court, inter alia, in matters arising under the Constitution or under any laws made by the Parliament. It has in fact conferred jurisdiction on the High Court in matters arising under the Constitution and in matters arising under certain laws made by Parliament.

The High Court may hear and determine appeals from its own Justices exercising original jurisdiction, from any other Federal Court, from a Court exercising Federal jurisdiction and from the Supreme Courts of the States. It also has jurisdiction to hear and determine appeals from the Supreme Courts of the Territories. The right of appeal from the High Court to the Privy Council in London was abolished in 1986.

Other Federal Courts. Since 1924, 4 other Federal courts have been created to exercise special Federal jurisdiction, i.e. the Federal Court of Australia, the Family Court of Australia, the Australian Industrial Court and the Federal Court of Bankruptcy. The Federal Court of Australia was created by the Federal Court of Australia Act 1976 and began to exercise jurisdiction on 1 Feb. 1977. It exercises such original jurisdiction as is invested in it by laws made by the Federal Parliament including jurisdiction formerly exercised by the Australian Industrial Court and the Federal Court of Bankruptcy, and in some matters previously invested in either the High Court or State and Territory Supreme Courts. The Federal Court also acts as a court of appeal from State and Territory courts in relation to Federal matters. Appeal from the Federal Court to the High Court will be by way of special leave only. The State Supreme Courts have also been invested with Federal jurisdiction in bankruptcy.

State Courts. The general Federal jurisdiction of the State courts extends, subject to certain restrictions and exceptions, to all matters in which the High Court has jurisdiction or in which jurisdiction may be conferred upon it.

Industrial Tribunals. The chief federal industrial tribunal is the Australian Conciliation and Arbitration Commission, constituted by presidential members (with the status of judges) and commissioners. The Commission's functions include settling industrial disputes, making awards, determining the standard hours of work and wage fixation. Questions of law, the judicial interpretation of awards and imposition of penalties in relation to industrial matters are dealt with by the Industrial Division of the Federal Court.

In March 1997 the prison population averaged 16,871.

Total police force personnel at 1 July 1997: 42,092.

Religion. Under the Constitution the Commonwealth cannot make any law to establish any religion, to impose any religious observance or to prohibit the free exercise of any religion. The following percentages refer to those religions with the largest number of adherents at the census of 1996. The census question on religious adherence was not obligatory, however.

Christian, 71% of population: Catholic, 27·0%; Anglican, 22·0%; Uniting Church, 7·5%; Presbyterian and Reformed, 3·8%; Orthodox, 2·8%; Baptist, 1·7%; Lutheran, 1·4%; Pentecostal, 1·0%; Churches of Christ, 0·4%; Jehovah's Witnesses, 0·5%; Salvation Army, 0·4%; other Christian, 2·4%. Religions other than Christian 3·4%; no religion, 16·6%; no statement, 9·0%.

The Anglican Synod voted for the ordination of 10 women in Nov. 1992.

Education. The Governments of the Australian States and the Northern Territory have the major responsibility for education, including the administration and substantial funding of primary, secondary, and technical and further education. In most States, a single Education Department is responsible for these three levels, but in New South Wales and South Australia there is a separate department responsible solely for technical and further education, and in Victoria, a Technical and Further Education Board. Furthermore, in New South Wales an Education Commission advises the Minister on primary, secondary and post-secondary education.

The Australian Government is responsible for education in Norfolk Island, Christmas Island and the Cocos (Keeling) Islands. It also provides supplementary finance to the States and is responsible for the total funding of universities and colleges of advanced education. It has special responsibilities for student assistance, education programmes for Aboriginal people and children from non-English-speaking backgrounds, and for international relations in education.

The Australian Constitution empowers the Federal Government to make grants to the States and to place conditions upon such grants. The National Board of Employment, Education and Training was established in 1988 to advise the Federal Government on the financial needs of educational institutions. It is assisted by 4 councils: The Schools Council, the Higher Education Council, the Employment and Skills Formation Council, and the Australian Research Council.

The Commonwealth has been working with the states to develop a national perspective for schools and a common curriculum. The Curriculum Corporation has been established under the auspices of the Australian Education Council.

School attendance is compulsory between the ages of 6 and 15 years (16 years in Tasmania), at either a government school or a recognized non-government educational institution. Many children attend pre-schools for a year before entering school (usually in sessions of 2-3 hours, for 2-5 days per week). Government schools are usually co-educational and comprehensive. Non-government schools have been traditionally single-sex, particularly in secondary schools, but there is a trend towards co-education. Tuition is free at government schools, but fees are normally charged at non-government schools.

In post-secondary education, tuition fees were abolished in 1974 and student allowances are provided for full-time students subject to a means test. Universities are autonomous institutions. From 1 Jan. 1989 the university and college of advanced education sectors were merged by the Federal Government. The resulting institutions are self-governing, though funded by the Federal Government. A private university sector is developing (e.g. Notre Dame University in Western Australia and Bond University in Queensland). The major part of technical and further education is provided in government-administered technical and further education institutions (TAFE).

In 1996 there were 36 universities in the Unified National System which receive Commonwealth funding. These operate under state legislation. Outside this system, the Australian National University, Canberra University and the Australian Maritime College receive Commonwealth funding on a contract basis. There were 634,094 university students in 1996. Academic students by university within each State or Territory (1996): NSW: Sydney, 30,369; New South Wales, 27,348; New England, 16,433; Newcastle, 17,407; Macquarie, 17,827; Wollongong, 12,081; Southern Cross, 8,612; Sydney University of Technology, 21,397; Western Sydney, 24,997;

Teacher education usually takes place in colleges of advanced education, though a substantial number of secondary teachers and a few primary teachers receive their pre-service education in a university.

The Australian Government provides assistance for students. The Assistance for Isolated Children Scheme provides special support to families whose children are isolated from schooling or are handicapped. AUSTUDY is a means-tested scheme to assist students aged 16 years and over enrolled for full-time study in approved courses at secondary and post-secondary institutions. Allowances are also available for postgraduate study and overseas study. Aboriginal students are eligible for assistance under the ABSTUDY scheme. Federal government expenditure on these schemes was $A1,602m. in 1994. In addition, under the Higher Education Contribution Scheme, students may be funded by a government loan repaid interest-free later through the tax system. The Federal Government introduced a supplementary loans scheme for eligible students in 1993. The States also offer various schemes of assistance, principally at the primary and secondary levels.

National bodies with a co-ordinating, planning or funding role include: the Australian Education Council, comprising the Federal and State Ministers of Education, the Conference of Directors-General of Education, the Australian Council for Educational Research and advisory bodies, the National Aboriginal Education Committee, and the Vocational Education Employment and Training Advisory Committee.

Total government expenditure on education (public and private sectors) in 1995–96 was $A23,778m. (4·9% of GDP).

Health. In 1995–96 there were 45,800 physicians, 9,100 dentists, 160,500 nurses, 705 public acute hospitals and 1,104 hospitals (general); there were an average 4·5 hospital beds per 1,000 population. The Royal Flying Doctor Service serves remote areas. Total government expenditure on health services (public and private sectors) in 1995-96 was $A41,742m. ($A2,300 per person), representing 8·5% of GDP and 24·9% of total government expenditure.

Welfare. All Commonwealth Government social security pensions, benefits and allowances are financed from the Commonwealth Government's general revenue. In addition, assistance is provided for welfare services.

Expenditure on social security and welfare, 1995–96, $A49,534m., representing 29·3% of total government outlays.

The following summarizes the conditions of the major benefits:

Age and Disability Pensions—age pensions are payable to men 65 years of age or more and women 60 years and 6 months of age or more who have lived in Australia for a specified period and, unless permanently blind, also satisfy an income test. Persons over 16 years of age who are permanently blind or permanently incapacitated for work to the extent of at least 85% may receive an invalid pension. Invalid pension is paid subject to a residence qualification, income and assets test, unless the person is permanently blind. Additional amounts are paid to pensioners with dependent children. Supplementary assistance may be paid to a pensioner paying rent or private lodging subject to an income test. Remote area allowance is payable to pensioners living in certain remote areas, except for those aged 70 or more receiving the special rate of age pension. Supplementary assistance, additional pension for children, mother's/guardian's allowance and remote area allowance are not taxable.

In the year ending 30 June 1997, 1,680,214 age pensioners received a total of $A13,204,658, and 527,514 disability support pensioners received $A5,299,148.

Wife Pension—payable to the wife of an age or invalid pensioner if she is not eligible for a pension in her own right. The maximum rate and the income test are identical to those for age and invalid pensioners. Wife Pension is being phased out; new grants have ceased since 1 July 1995.

Carer Pension—payable to a person who is providing constant care and attention at home for a severely disabled age or invalid pensioner living in the same house, where the carer is not eligible for pension in his own right. Since March 1996 Carer Pension has been extended to carers of non-pensioners meeting the Basic Family Payment assets and income criteria. The maximum rate and the income test are identical to those for age and invalid pensions.

Sole Parent Pensions—sole parents who have custody, care and control of any dependent children may, if they satisfy a residence requirement and an income test, receive sole parent pensions. Mother's/guardian's allowance, additional pension for each dependent child, supplementary assistance and remote area allowance are also payable.

In 1996–97, 358,893 beneficiaries received a total of $A2,992,322.

Rehabilitation Allowance—persons undertaking a rehabilitation programme with the Commonwealth Rehabilitation Service who are eligible for a social security pension or benefit are eligible to receive a non-taxable rehabilitation allowance during treatment or training and for up to 6 months thereafter. The allowance is equivalent to the invalid pension and is subject to the same income test. There have been no new grants of Rehabilitation Allowance since 12 Nov. 1991.

Maternity Allowance—was introduced from 1 Feb. 1996 to assist families with the costs associated with a new baby (including forgone income). It is paid for each new child to families meeting the Family Payment residence, income and assets criteria. Since 1 Jan. 1998, Maternity Allowance is paid in 2 stages as part of the initiative to boost immunization rates. A lump sum of $A750 is paid within 13 weeks of the birth and an additional $A200 after the child reaches 18 months upon proof of age-specific immunization. Families are not disadvantaged in cases where children are not immunized for medical reasons, or where parents conscientiously object to immunization.

Family Payment—is paid subject to an income and assets test to assist families with children under 16 years or dependent full-time students aged 16 years to 18 years. Since July 1996 payments to students age 16 and over are paid by the Department of Employment, Education and Training through the AUSTUDY system. It is not subject to income tax.

In 1996–97, 1,811,745 families comprising 3,491,160 children received a total of $A6,284,731.

Child Disability Allowance—payable to parents or guardians of severely physically or mentally handicapped children in the family home and needing constant care and attention. The allowance is free of an income test but is subject to a residence qualification similar to that for family allowance.

Allowances totalling $A233·1m. were paid in 1996–97.

Double Orphan's Pension—the guardian of a child under 16 years of age or of a full-time student under 25, both of whose parents are dead, or one of whose parents is dead and the whereabouts of the other parent unknown, and for refugee children where both parents are outside Australia or in prison, may receive double orphan's pension. The payment is not subject to an income test, nor is it taxable. The amount paid out in 1996–97 was $A1·7m.

Unemployment and Sickness Allowances—are paid, subject to an income test, to persons between the ages of 18 and 16 respectively and age pensioners, who are unemployed, able and willing to work and making efforts to obtain work, or temporarily unable to work because of sickness or injury. Unemployment benefit was replaced in July 1991 by a two-payment structure under the 'Newstart Strategy': Jobsearch Allowance (JA) and Newstart Allowance (NSA). In Sept. 1996, JSA and NSA were amalgamated into a single payment called NSA, payable to those who are unemployed and capable and willing to undertake suitable paid work. Eligibility is subject to income and assets tests. To be granted benefit a person must have resided in Australia for at least 12 months preceding his or her claim or intend to remain in Australia permanently. For unemployment benefit purposes unemployment must not be due to industrial action by that person or by members of a union to which that person is a member. Special benefits may be granted to persons not qualified above. 769,859 unemployment beneficiaries received a total of $A6,048m. in the year to June 1997. A total of $A144·3m. was paid in sickness benefit and $A472·5m. in mature age allowance in the year ended June 1997.

Service Pensions—are paid by the Department of Veterans' Affairs, similar to the age and invalid pensions provided by the Department of Social Security. Male Veterans who have reached the age of 60 years or are permanently unemployable, and who served in a theatre of war, are eligible subject to an income test. Female Veterans who served abroad and who have reached the age of 55 or are permanently unemployable, are also eligible. Wives of service pensioners are also eligible, provided that they do not receive a pension from the Department of Social Security. Disability pension is a compensatory payment in respect of incapacity attributable to war service. It is paid at a rate commensurate with the degree of incapacity and is free of any income test. A separate allowance may be paid to dependants. In 1996–97, $A2,664m. of service pensions and $A1,819m. of disability and dependants' pensions were paid out; in 1997 there were 328,748 eligible veterans.

In addition to cash benefits, welfare services are provided either directly or through State and local government authorities and voluntary agencies, for people with special needs.

Medicare—On 1 Feb. 1984 the Commonwealth Government introduced a universal health scheme known as Medicare. This covers: Automatic entitlement under a single public health fund to medical and optometrical benefits of 85% of the Medical Benefits Schedule fee, with a maximum patient payment for any service where the Schedule fee is charged; access without direct charge to public hospital accommodation and to inpatient and outpatient treatment by doctors appointed by the hospital; the restoration of funds for community health to approximately the same real level as 1975; a reduction in charges for private treatment in shared wards of public hospitals, and increases in the daily bed subsidy payable to private hospitals.

The Medicare programme is financed in part by a 1·5% levy on taxable incomes, with low income cut-off points, which were $A13,127 p.a. for a single person in 1996-97 and $A22,152 p.a. for a family with an extra allowance of $A2,100 for each child. A levy surcharge of 1% was introduced from 1 July 1997 for single individuals with taxable incomes in excess of $A50,000 p.a. and couples and families with combined taxable incomes in excess of $A100,000 who do not have private hospital cover through private health insurance. The Commonwealth Government subsidizes registered health insurance organizations by contributing to the Health Benefits, and makes an annual contribution to the Reinsurance Trust Fund of $A20m. for payments of benefits to patients with hospital treatment in excess of 35 days.

Medicare benefits are available to all persons ordinarily resident in Australia. Visitors from the UK, New Zealand, Italy, Sweden, the Netherlands and Malta have immediate access to necessary medical treatment, as do all visitors staying more than 6 months.

Medical Benefits. The Health Insurance Act provides for a Medical Benefits Schedule which lists medical services and the Schedule (standard) fee applicable in each State in respect of each medical service. Schedule fees are set and updated by an independent fees tribunal appointed by the Government. The fees so determined are to apply for Medicare benefits purposes.

Home and Community Care Program—was introduced in 1985 to provide support services to enable aged and disabled persons to live at home. It is jointly funded by the Commonwealth and State or Territory Governments. Commonwealth funding was $A451·6m. in 1996–97.

CULTURE

Australia is preparing for a massive influx during the year 2000 as between 100,000 and 200,000 spectators, athletes, officials and journalists come to Sydney for the Olympic Games. The opening ceremony will be on 15 Sept. 2000, and the Games themselves from 16 Sept. to 1 Oct.

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is regulated by the Australian Broadcasting Authority, established in 1992 under the Broadcasting Services Act 1992. Foreign ownership of commercial radio and TV companies is restricted to 20%. The national broadcasting service is provided by the Australian Broadcasting Corporation (ABC), an independent statutory corporation receiving 85% of its funding from sales and other revenues, and the Special Broadcasting Service. The latter's function is to provide radio and TV services in more than 60 languages, reflecting a multicultural society. There are also commercial radio and TV services operated by companies under licence, subscription TV services, public radio services operated on a non-profit basis and a parliamentary radio service to state capitals, Canberra and Newcastle. The short-wave international service Radio Australia broadcasts in English, Bahasa Malay, Cantonese, Chinese, French, Khmer, Thai, Tok Pisin and Vietnamese. Radio Australia had an audience of 10m. in 1997.

In 1997 there were almost 30m. radios in use; 99% of Australian homes had TV sets with an average of 1·8 sets per household. In Aug. 1997 it was estimated that 16% of households subscribed to pay-TV.

Cinema. In 1995 there were 1,137 cinemas. In the year ending March 1995, attendance at cinemas by people aged 15 years and over was 8,734,000. 30 feature films were produced in 1995-96.

Press. There were 50 daily newspapers in 1997 (12 metropolitan and 38 regional). 30 magazines have a circulation of between 80,000 and 1m. copies per issue.

Tourism. Overseas visitors totalled 4·29m. in the year to Aug. 1997, an increase of 6·8% on the previous year. A total of $A17m. was spent. The figures are expected to double by 2006. The top source countries for visitors in the year to Sept. 1997 were Japan (810,000); New Zealand (675,000); UK (395,000); USA (330,000) and South Korea (253,000).

Festivals. Attendance at festivals between Nov. 1995 and Sept. 1996 totalled 4·1m.

Libraries. In the year ending March 1995, 5,403,100 people visited a national, State or local library at least once. In 1996 the number of books in public lending libraries was 30·4m.

National Theatre and Opera. At March 1995, 2,722,100 people aged 15 years and over had attended at least one performance of musical theatre in the past year; 2,336,300 people, other theatre; 2,634,400 people, other performing arts; 1,407,500 people, dance performances. Popular music concerts were attended by 3,790,700 people and classical music concerts by 2,634,400.

Museums and Galleries. In 1993 there were 1,765 museums and art museums operating in Australia. 3·9m. people aged 15 years and over visited a museum at least once in the year ending March 1995, while 3·1m. visited an art museum.

AUSTRALIAN TERRITORIES AND STATES

AUSTRALIAN CAPITAL TERRITORY

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area, now the Australian Capital Territory (ACT), was explored in 1820 by Charles Throsby who named it Limestone Plains. Settlement commenced in 1824. Until its selection as the seat of government, it was a quiet pastoral and agricultural community with a few large holdings and a sprinkling of smaller settlers.

In 1901 the Commonwealth constitution stipulated that a land tract of at least 260 sq. km in area and not less than 160 km from Sydney be set aside from New South Wales and reserved as a capital district. The Canberra site was adopted by the Seat of Government Act 1908. The present site, together with an area for a port at Jervis Bay, was surrendered by New South Wales and accepted by the Commonwealth in 1909. By subsequential proclamation the Territory became vested in the Commonwealth from 1 Jan. 1911. In 1911 an international competition was held for the city plan. The plan chosen was that of W. Burley Griffin, of Chicago. Construction was delayed by the First World War and it was not until 1927 that Canberra became in fact the seat of government.

In 1989 self-government was proclaimed and the first ACT assembly was elected in May of that year.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The total area is almost 2,400 sq. km of which 60% is hilly or mountainous. Timbered mountains are located in the south and west, and plains and hill country in the north. The ACT lies within the upper Murrumbidgee River catchment, in the Murray-Darling Basin. The Murrumbidgee flows throughout the Territory from the south, and its tributary, the Molonglo, from the east. The Molonglo was damned in 1964 to form Lake Burley Griffin. As at 30 June 1997 the estimated resident population was 309,800. The growth rate for 1996-97 was 0·5%, compared with a growth rate of 1·13% in the previous year. Population (1996 census), 299,243.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996: Births, 4,396; deaths, 1,300; marriages, 1,654; divorces, 1,610. Infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 5·7.

CLIMATE

ACT has a continental climate, characterized by a marked variation in temperature between seasons, with warm to hot summers and cold winters.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The ACT became self-governing on 11 May 1989. It is represented by 2 members in the Commonwealth House of Representatives and 2 senators.

The parliament of the ACT, the Legislative Assembly, consists of 17 members elected for a 3-year term. Its responsibilities are at State and Local Government level. The Legislative Assembly elects a Chief Minister and a 4-member cabinet.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 21 Feb. 1998 the Liberal Party won 7 seats, Labor 6, Greens 1 and ind. 3. 1 Liberal member subsequently resigned from the Liberals to become an independent member. The Liberals formed a coalition government with the minority parties.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Chief Minister: Kate Carnell.

Deputy Chief Minister, Minister Assisting the Treasurer, Attorney General, Justice and Community Safety: Gary Humphries. Urban Services: Brendan Smyth. Education: Bill Stefaniak. Health and Community Care: Michael Moore.

Speaker: Greg Cornwell.

ECONOMY

Budget. In 1987–88 the ACT was given its own budget. It is treated equitably with the States regarding local revenue raising, expenditure and assistance by the Commonwealth government. In 1996–97 current consolidated Territory outlays were $A1,218m., capital outlays $A128m., and revenue $A1,262m.

Banking and Finance. Bank Deposits and Loans, June 1997: Deposits, $A5,120m.; other lending, $A5,998m.; Credit Union loans, $A215m. Housing Finance for Owner Occupation (all lenders), total commitments 1996–97, $A925·1m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Water. The Australian Water Resources Council has estimated the ACT has around 175 gigalitres of surface water resources. 106 gigalitres (60·6%) has been developed for use and is currently sourced from 4 water supply dams. 3 are within the ACT, while the largest, Googong Dam, is on the Queanbeyan River.

Agriculture. Farming is mainly in grazing: Livestock (1995-96 estimate), 13,689 cattle, 72,670 sheep, and 210,500 poultry. In 1995-96, 675 tonnes of beef and veal, and 430 tonnes of greasy wool were produced.

Forestry. Outside Canberra, the Territory is mainly reserved for forestry and nature conservation (Namadgi National Park is 105,000 ha). A considerable amount of reafforestation (mostly pine) has been undertaken, the total area of coniferous plantations at 30 June 1997 being 21,600 ha.

INDUSTRY

Labour. In Oct. 1998 there were an estimated 156,800 employed persons and an estimated 10,200 unemployed persons.

25·6% of the ACT labour force were employed in public administration and defence; 13·1% in retail trade; 13·1% in property and business services.

Trade Unions. As at 30 June 1996 there were 32 separate trade unions registered in the ACT. Financial membership made up 33% of total employees. The number of unions fell by 40% from 1992 to 1996 due, in part, to amalgamations.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 1996-97, 80% of imports came from 4 countries: Germany, $A4·3m. (36%); USA, $A3·2m. (27%); India, $A1·2m. (10%); UK, $A1m. (8%). In the same year 74% of exports went to 4 countries: USA, $A3·5m. (40%); UK, $A1·6m. (18%); New Zealand, $A0·9m. (10%); Belgium-Luxembourg, $A0·6m. (7%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At 16 June 1998 there were 2,583 km of road.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. At the time of the 1996 census, 66·6% of the population were Christian. Of these, 44·5% were Roman Catholic and 29·5% Anglican. Non-Christian religions accounted for 3·4%, the largest groups being Buddhism, Islam and Hinduism.

Education. In Feb. 1997 there were 185 government schools comprising 82 pre-schools, 98 primary and secondary schools (including colleges) and 5 special schools. There were 44,066 students in government schools, 4,035 in pre-schools, 21,762 in primary schools, 11,058 in high schools, 6,815 in colleges and 396 in special schools. Non-government schools numbered 46 comprising 4 pre-schools and 42 primary and secondary schools (including colleges). There were 21,795 students in non-government schools: 87 in pre-schools, 10,637 in primary schools, 8,229 in high schools and 2,842 in colleges. Vocational education and training is provided by the Canberra Institute of Technology and the ACT Schools Authority, which had an estimated total of 18,700 students in 1997. There are 4 higher education institutions: The Australian National University (9,694 students in 1997); the University of Canberra (8,651); the Australian Defence Force Academy (1,675); the Australian Catholic University (648).

Health. The ACT is serviced by 2 public and 6 private hospitals.

CULTURE

In March 1995 a survey of attendance at selected cultural/leisure venues showed participation rates as follows: art gallery, 41·6%; museum, 45·4%; cinema, 72·9%; theatre, 23·0%; classical music, 14·2%; popular music, 39·6%; dance, 15·2%; opera or musical, 25·0%; other performing arts, 25·3%.

Tourism. Tourism is an important sector in the economy, attracting considerable numbers of national and international visitors.

Libraries. A survey conducted in Oct. 1996 showed that the ACT had a high level of library usage (54·4% of respondents were classified as library users). 6·4% of all households had at least 1 person who was a library user.

National Theatre and Opera. The Canberra Playhouse opened in 1998.

Museums and Galleries. The Canberra Museum and Gallery opened in 1998.

NORTHERN TERRITORY

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Northern Territory, after forming part of New South Wales, was annexed on 6 July 1863 to South Australia and in 1901 entered the Commonwealth as a corporate part of South Australia. The Commonwealth Constitution Act of 1900 having made provision for the surrender to the Commonwealth of any territory by any state, an agreement was entered into on 7 Dec. 1907 for the transfer of the Northern Territory to the Commonwealth. It formally passed under the control of the Commonwealth Government on 1 Jan. 1911. On 1 Feb. 1927, the Northern Territory was divided for administrative purposes into two territories but in 1931 it was again administered as a single territory under the control of an Administrator in Darwin. The Legislative Council for the Northern Territory, constituted in 1947, was reconstituted in 1959. In that year, citizenship rights were granted to Aboriginal people of 'full descent'. On 1 July 1978, self-government was granted to the Northern Territory.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Northern Territory is bounded by the 26th parallel of S. lat. and 129° and 138° E. long. Its total area is 1,346,200 sq. km and includes adjacent islands. It has 5,100 km of mainland coastline and 2,100 km of coast around the islands. The greater part of the interior consists of a tableland rising gradually from the coast to a height of about 700 metres. On this tableland there are large areas of excellent pasturage. The southern part of the Territory is generally sandy and has a small rainfall, but water may be obtained by means of sub-artesian bores.

The population of the Territory at the 1996 census was 195,101. The capital, seat of Government and principal port is Darwin, on the north coast; population 69,400 in June 1997. Other main centres include Katherine (9,800), 330 km south of Darwin; Alice Springs (25,700), in Central Australia; Tennant Creek (3,856), a rich mining centre 500 km north of Alice Springs; Nhulunbuy (3,800), a bauxite mining centre in the Gove Peninsula Province in eastern Arnhem Land; and Jabiru, a model town built to serve the rich Uranium Province in eastern Arnhem Land. Palmerston is a Darwin satellite town and Yulara is a resort village serving Uluru National Park and Ayers Rock. There also are a number of large self-contained Aboriginal communities. People identifying themselves as Aboriginal numbered 44,486 and Torres Strait Islanders 714 at the 1996 census.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996: Births, 3,562; deaths, 758; marriages, 797; divorces, 432. Infant mortality per 1,000 live births, 11·5. Life expectancy, 1996: 69·2 years for males, 75·0 for females.

CLIMATE

See AUSTRALIA: Climate.

The highest temperature ever recorded in the NT was 118·9°F (48·3°C) at Finke in 1960, while the lowest recorded temperature was 18·5°F (–7·5°C) at Alice Springs in 1976.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Northern Territory (Self-Government) Act 1978 established the Northern Territory as a body politic as from 1 July 1978, with Ministers having control over and responsibility for Territory finances and the administration of the functions of government as specified by the Federal Government. Regulations have been made conferring executive authority for the bulk of administrative functions. At 31 Dec. 1979 the only important powers retained by the Commonwealth related to rights in respect of Aboriginal land, some significant National Parks and the mining of uranium and other substances prescribed in the Atomic Energy Act. Proposed laws passed by the Legislative Assembly require the assent of the Administrator. The Governor-General may disallow any law assented to by the Administrator within 6 months of the Administrator's assent.

The Northern Territory has federal representation, electing 1 member to the House of Representatives and 2 members to the Senate.

The Legislative Assembly has 25 members, directly elected for a period of 4 years. The Chief Minister, Deputy Chief Minister and Speaker are elected by, and from, the members. The Administrator (Dr Neil Conn) appoints Ministers on the advice of the Leader of the majority party.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The Legislative Assembly elected in 1997: Country Liberal Party, 18; Australian Labor Party, 7.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

The Country Liberal Party Cabinet was as follows in Jan. 1999:

Chief Minister, Attorney-General, Minister for Young Territorians, Women's Policy, Constitutional Development: Shane I. Stone.

Deputy Chief Minister, Treasurer, Police, Fire and Emergency Services, Tourism, Public Employment, Industrial Relations, Minister Responsible for the Territory Insurance Office: Mike A. Reed. Leader of Government Business, Vice President Executive Council, Health, Family and Children's Services, Senior Territorians, Industries and Business, Regional Development, Racing, Gaming and Licensing, Defence Support: Denis Burke. Transport and Infrastructure Development, Territory Ports, the AustralAsia Railway, Essential Sevices: Barry F. Coulter. Aboriginal Development, Housing, Local Government, Lands, Planning and Environment: Tim D. Baldwin. Resource Development, Parks and Wildlife, Central Australia: Eric Poole. Asian Relations and Trade, Arts and Museums, Corporate and Information Services, Communications, Science and Advanced Technology: Daryl W. Manzie. Primary Industry and Fisheries, Ethnic Affairs, Correctional Services: Mick Palmer. School Education, Sport and Recreation, Tertiary Education and Training: Peter F. Adamson.

Local Government. Local government was established in Darwin in 1957 and later in 3 regional centres. These are each managed by a mayor and a municipal council elected at intervals of not more than 4 years by universal adult franchise. Provision has been made for a limited form of local government for smaller communities. In 1998 there were 6 municipal and 32 community government councils and 25 other incorporated community associations responsible for local government.

ECONOMY

Budget. Revenue and expenditure in $A1m.:

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Revenue	1,372	1,451	1,512	1,645	1,718
Expenditure	1,482	1,844	1,584	1,601	1,697

Using uniform presentation standards, total revenue in 1996–97 was $A1,718m. of which $A1,237m. were grants to the Northern Territory from the Commonwealth, and $A348m. was raised by the Northern Territory Government, which included $A309m. through state-like taxes.

Expenditure during 1996–97 included $A345m. for education; $A54m. for housing and community amenities; $A305m. for health; $A167m. for public order and safety, and $A136m. for transport and communication.

$A81m. of Territory borrowings were repaid in 1996–97, while other financing transactions of $A9m. (consisting mainly of cash balances) were used. Net debt declined by $A42m. to $A1,311m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Electric power is supplied by the Power and Water Authority (PAWA).

Oil and Gas. Significant oil and gas reserves have been discovered and developed offshore in the Joseph Bonaparte Gulf and Timor Sea areas, and onshore in the Amadeus Basin. In 1995–96, 1,547 megalitres of crude oil and 407bn. litres of natural gas were produced. Total value of oil and gas production in 1995–96 was $A259·6m., and in 1996–97 about $A229m. Natural gas is piped from the Amadeus Basin to Darwin. In 1998, 15 offshore oil and gas fields had been discovered in the previous 4 years (7 of them in 1997), with a success rate of about 30%, and development and exploration programmes were under way.

Water. The Power and Water Authority (PAWA) is responsible for providing water supply (also electric power and sewerage services) throughout the NT. The Aboriginal Essential Services Branch of PAWA maintains water supply to the 85 remote communities and Aboriginal outstations.

Minerals. The most important natural resources are minerals, and mining is one of the largest industries. At 30 June 1997 there were 30 mining establishments employing 1,911 people. Value of production (including uranium) in 1996–97 was estimated at $A1,438m., including (in $A1m.): Gold bullion, 347; manganese ore, 226; bauxite, 131; alumina, 356; base metals, 221; uranium oxide, 110. In 1995–96 the Territory produced 100% of Australia's manganese, 15·9% of its bauxite and 7·8% of gold bullion. In terms of value it produced 12·9% of its uranium. In the financial year 1996–97 mining contributed 10·7% ($A536m.) of Gross State Product.

Agriculture. Cattle production constitutes the largest farming industry. Livestock, 1997: Cattle, 1,608,846; domesticated buffalo, 9,440; pigs, 2,467; horses, 6,414. In 1996 the total value of the cattle industry was $A133·7m., from which 199,044 head were exported live at a value of $A84·8m. The value of other animal industries including buffalo, pigs, poultry, eggs, milk and crocodiles was estimated at $A154m. in 1996. In 1997 there were 8 crocodile farms: Production at 2 with abattoir facilities comprised 4,595 animals slaughtered and 15,689 kg of meat sold in the period 1 Jan.–30 June 1997.

At March 1997 there were 357 agricultural producers with a total area under holding of 70,768,932 ha, representing just over half of the Territory's land mass.

Horticultural production was valued at $A47·9m. in 1996–97 for fruit and vegetables. The main crops were mangoes, bananas, melons and grapes.

In 1995–96, 3,894 ha were used for grain crops, seed and hay production with an industry value of $A24m.

Forestry. Total area at 30 June 1997 was 35·39m. ha.

Environment. There are 93 parks and reserves covering 43,709 sq. km. Twelve of the parks are classified as national parks, including the Kakadu and Uluru-Kata Tjuta National Park.

Fisheries. The total value of the fishing industry in 1996-97 was $A118·4m. The expanding aquaculture industry (producing crayfish, prawns, giant clams and beta carotene extracts) made the largest contribution, generating $A58m. The production value of crustaceans was $A49·6m., with prawns comprising 81·3% ($A40·3m.). The value of fish caught was $A10·2m., with barramundi comprising 27·9% ($A2·8m.).

INDUSTRY

At June 1997 turnover was $A915·6m. 3,400 persons were employed in manufacturing in 1997. In the financial year 1996–97 manufacturing contributed 4·9% of Gross State Product.

Labour. The labour force totalled 91,100 in June 1998, of whom 87,500 were employed. The unemployment rate was 4·0%, the lowest of any State or Territory in Australia.

Trade Unions. At June 1996, 26 trade unions had 19,300 members.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 1997-98 the Territory's exports, valued at $A1,198·3m., accounted for 1·4% of all Australia's exports. Major export destinations were the USA, Japan and China, accounting for 47·7% of all exports from the Territory.

1997-98 imports, valued at $A656·9m., accounted for 0·7% of all Australia's imports. Major sources of imports were the USA, Japan and Singapore, accounting for 82·8% of all Northern Territory imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were (in 1997) 6,573 km of sealed road. They include three major interstate links: The Stuart Highway from Darwin to the South Australian border (1,787 km), the Barkley Highway, Three Ways to the Queensland border (434 km), and the Victoria Highway, Katherine to the Western Australian border (470 km). In addition to this there were 6,573 km of gravel roads and 4,724 km of formed roads. Total roads, excluding township and municipal, 20,541 km. Registered motor vehicles at 1 July 1997 numbered 113,554, including 93,894 light vehicles (less than 4·5 tonnes). There were 73 fatalities in road accidents in 1996.

Rail. In 1980 Alice Springs was linked to the Trans-continental network by a standard (1,435 mm) gauge railway to Tarcoola in South Australia (831 km). In 1998 the governments of the Northern Territory and South Australia were seeking the participation of the private sector to complete the construction of the AustralAsia Railway. The completion of the railway between Darwin and Alice Springs (1,410 km) will be a strategic link in the seamless AustralAsia Trade Route.

Civil Aviation. Darwin and most regional centres in the Territory are serviced by daily flights to all State capitals and major cities. In 1998 there were direct international services connecting Darwin to Bali, Brunei, Kuala Lumpur, Kupang and Singapore. In 1996–97 Darwin airport handled 0·84m. domestic and 165,000 international passengers, Alice Springs 864,000 domestic passengers, and Ayers Rock 265,000.

Shipping. Regular freight shipping services connect Darwin with both the east and west coasts of Australia, South East Asia and the rest of the world. In 1998 there were 10 shipping lines making regular calls, and cruise ships and naval vessels also include Darwin as a port of call.

The Port of Darwin is equipped to handle bulk, container and roll-on-roll-off traffic. 3,654 vessels visited the port and it handled 1,289,849 tonnes of cargo in 1996–97. There is a sheltered morning basin which provides 85 non-tidal berths.

Commercial and pleasure vessels also call at the ports of Melville Bay (Gove) and Milner Bay (Groote Eylandt), and at Seven Spirit Bay on a regular basis.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Voluntary euthanasia for the terminally ill was legalized in 1995. However, the federal Prime Minister stated that the High Court of Australia would consider cases of euthanasia as murder, and the law was overturned by the Federal Senate on 24 March 1997. The first person to have recourse to legalized euthanasia died on 22 Sept. 1996.

Police personnel at 30 June 1997, 819. At June 1997 the Territory had 3 prisons with a daily average of 541 prisoners held. In 1996-97, 19,821 crimes were reported to the police.

Education. In 1998 there were 3,177 children and 80 full-time teachers in 62 government and private pre-schools. Education is compulsory from the age of 6 to 15 years. There were (1997) 36,466 full-time students enrolled in 144 government primary, secondary and special education schools with 2,089 full-time equivalent teaching staff, and 8,172 full-time students enrolled in 29 private primary and secondary schools with 551 full-time equivalent teaching staff. The proportion of migrant and of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students in the Territory is high, with the 2 latter comprising 34·6% of all full-time enrolments in 1997 (9,432 primary and 3,172 secondary students). Schools range from single classrooms and transportable units catering for the needs of small Aboriginal communities and pastoral properties to urban high schools and secondary colleges (years 11–12), catering for about 7,500 students. Bilingual programmes operate in some Aboriginal communities where traditional Aboriginal culture prevails. Secondary education extends from school years 8 to 12 (7 to 12 in Alice Springs).

The Northern Territory University (NTU) was founded in 1989 by amalgamating the existing University College of the Northern Territory and the Darwin Institute of Technology, with the technical and further education courses hitherto offered by the latter to be conducted by an Institute of Technical and Further Education within the new University. At 31 March 1997, 4,203 students were enrolled in a total of 4,294 higher education courses at the NTU. Batchelor College, a multi-purpose institution of Aboriginal tertiary education, had 1,315 students enrolled in higher education or TAFE courses in 1995. There are 5 colleges of higher education. In 1997 there were 107 registered Vocational Education and Training (VET) course providers in the Territory, offering 101 courses. At 31 Dec. 1997, 22,321 students enrolled in VET courses.

Health. In 1997 there were 6 hospitals (5 public and 1 private) with 703 beds. Community health services are provided from urban and rural Health Centres including mobile units. Remote communities are served by the Aerial Medical Service and by resident Aboriginal health workers.

Welfare. The number of pensions current at Dec. 1997 was: Age, 4,981; wives' (due to be phased out), 639; carers', 179; disability, 4,195; widows' allowance, 90; sole parent, 4,928. Number of unemployed being paid benefit, 12,105. Youth Allowance, which commenced on 1 July 1998, supports the unemployed under the age of 21 years and students under 25 years.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Darwin's radio services include 4 ABC stations, 1 SBS station, 2 commercial stations and a community station.

Darwin has 2 commercial, 1 ABC and 1 SBS TV service.

Alice Springs radio services include 4 ABC stations, 2 commercial and 2 community stations. It has 2 commercial, 1 ABC and 1 SBS TV service.

Most other Northern Territory centres have 1 commercial and 1 national radio service, with 1 each of ABC, SBS and commercial television, many of these being provided by self-help projects.

Tourism. In 1996–97 nearly 1·3m. people visited the Territory, with tourist expenditure totalling $A715·9m. Largest proportion of visitors in 1996–97 were from mainland Europe, 34%; UK, 23%; Japan, 21%; North America, 14%.

NEW SOUTH WALES

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The name New South Wales was applied to the entire east coast of Australia when Capt. James Cook claimed the land for the British Crown on 23 Aug. 1770. The separate colonies of Tasmania, South Australia, Victoria and Queensland were proclaimed in the 19th century. In 1911 and 1915 the Australian Capital Territory around Canberra and Jervis Bay was ceded to the Commonwealth. New South Wales was thus gradually reduced to its present area. The first settlement was made at Port Jackson in 1788 as a penal settlement. A partially elective council was established in 1843 and responsible government in 1856.

Gold discoveries from 1851 had brought a large influx of immigrants, and responsible government was at first unstable, with 7 ministries holding office in the 5 years after 1856. The times were somewhat lawless and bitter conflict arose from loose land laws enacted in 1861. Lack of transport hampered agricultural expansion.

New South Wales federated with the other Australian states to form the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New South Wales is situated between the 29th and 38th parallels of S. lat. and 141st and 154th meridians of E. long., and comprises 309,433 sq. miles (801,600 sq. km), inclusive of Lord Howe Island, 6 sq. miles (17 sq. km), but exclusive of the Australian Capital Territory (911 sq. miles, 2,359 sq. km) and 28 sq. miles (73 sq. km) at Jervis Bay.

Lord Howe Island, 31° 33' 4" S., 159° 4' 26" E., which is part of New South Wales, is situated about 702 km north-east of Sydney; area, 1,654 ha, of which only about 120 ha are arable; resident population, estimate (30 June 1989), 320. The Island, which was discovered in 1788, is of volcanic origin. Mount Gower, the highest point, reaches a height of 866 metres.

The Lord Howe Island Board manages the affairs of the Island and supervises the Kentia palm-seed industry.

Census population of New South Wales (including full-blood Aboriginals from 1966):

The 1996 census population was 6,038,696. At 30 June 1996 the estimated resident population was 6,203,900 (3,123,200 females); population density, 7·7 per sq. km. Although NSW comprises only 10·4% of the total area of Australia, over 33·9% of the Australian population live there.

The state is divided into 12 Statistical Divisions. The estimated population of these (in 1,000) in 1996 was: Sydney, 3,879·4; Hunter, 555·5; Illawarra, 373·0; Richmond-Tweed, 200·7; Mid-North Coast, 262·6; Northern, 178·6; North Western, 117·3; Central West, 172·5; South Eastern, 179·0; Murrumbidgee, 149·2; Murray, 110·9; Far West, 25·3. Population of the Statistical Subdivisions Newcastle (within Hunter) and Wollongong (within Illawarra) was 463·7 and 255·7 respectively.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

	Live births	Marriages	Divorces	Deaths
1994	87,977	38,814	13,999	44,763
1995	87,849	37,828	14,945	44,773
1996	86,595	37,716	15,984	45,141

The annual rates per 1,000 of mean estimated resident population in 1996 were: Births, 14·0; deaths, 7·3; marriages, 5·8; infant mortality, 5·8 per 1,000 live births. Expectation of life in 1996: Males, 74·97 years, females, 80·88.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Within the State there are three levels of government: The Commonwealth Government, with authority derived from a written constitution; the State Government with residual powers; the local government authorities with powers based upon a State Act of Parliament, operating within incorporated areas extending over almost 90% of the State.

The Constitution of New South Wales is drawn from several diverse sources; certain Imperial statutes such as the Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act (1900); the Australian States Constitution Act (1907); an element of inherited English law; amendments to the Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act; the (State) Constitution Act; the Australia Acts of 1986; the Constitution (Amendment) Act 1987 and certain other State Statutes; numerous legal decisions; and a large amount of English and local convention.

The Parliament of New South Wales may legislate for the peace, welfare and good government of the State in all matters not specifically reserved to the Commonwealth Government.

The State Legislature consists of the Sovereign, represented by the Governor, and two Houses of Parliament, the Legislative Council (upper house) and the Legislative Assembly (lower house).

Australian citizens aged 18 and over, and other British subjects who were enrolled prior to 26 Jan. 1984, men and women aged 18 years and over, are entitled to the franchise. Enrolment and voting is compulsory. The optional preferential method of voting is used for both houses.

The Legislative Council has 42 members elected for a term of office equivalent to 2 terms of the Legislative Assembly, with 21 members retiring at the same time as the Legislative Assembly elections. The whole State constitutes a single electoral district.

The Legislative Assembly has 99 members elected in single-seat electoral districts for a maximum period of 4 years.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In 1995, the Legislative Council consisted of the following parties: Australian Labor Party (ALP), 17; Liberal Party of Australia (Lib), 12; National Party (NP), 6; Call to Australia Group (CTA), 2; Australian Democrats (AD), 2; A Better Future for Our Children,1; Shooters' Party, 1; Greens, 1.

The Legislative Assembly elected in 1995 consisted of the following parties: ALP, 50; Lib, 29; NP, 17; ind, 3.

Governor: Gordon J. Samuels, AC, QC, MA.

The New South Wales ALP Ministry, in Feb. 1999, was as follows:

Premier, Minister for Arts and Ethnic Affairs: Robert John Carr (b. 1948).

Deputy Premier, Minister for Health and Aboriginal Affairs: Dr Andrew John Refshauge. Treasurer, State Development, Vice President of Executive Council: Michael Rueben Egan. Police: Paul Francis Patrick Whelan. Olympics: Michael Steven Knight. Transport and Roads: Patrick Scully. Education and Training, Minister assisting the Premier on Youth Affairs: John Joseph Aquilina. Environment: Pamela Diane Allan. Public Works and Services: Ronald David Dyer. Community Services, Ageing, Disability Services and Women: Faye Lo Po'. Attorney-General, Industrial Relations, Fair Trading: Jeffrey William Shaw. Agriculture, Land and Water Conservation: Richard Sanderson Amery. Urban Affairs and Planning, Housing: Craig John Knowles. Regional Development, Rural Affairs: Harry Francis Woods. Energy, Tourism, Corrective Services, Emergency Services, Minister assisting the Premier on the Arts: Robert John Debus. Gaming and Racing, Minister assisting the Premier on Hunter Development: Richard Face. Mineral Resources and Fisheries: Robert Douglas Martin. Sport and Recreation: Gabrielle Mary Harrison. Local Government: Ernest Thomas Page. Information Technology, Forestry, Ports, Minister assisting the Premier on Western Sydney: Kimberley Yeadon.

Local Government. A system of local government extends over most of the State, including the whole of the Eastern and Central land divisions and almost three-quarters of the sparsely populated Western division. Since 1 July 1993, an area established for local government purposes is known as a council or city council, and the terms municipality or shire have been abandoned (except for Sutherland Shire). At 1 July 1993 there were 39 city councils and 138 councils. In addition there is one unincorporated area in the far west of the State. Local government councils most importantly provide the general services of administration, health, community amenities, recreation and culture, roads and debt servicing. County councils administer electricity or water supply or render other local services of common benefit in districts which comprise a number of councils.

Banking and Finance. Banking business is transacted chiefly by the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, the State Bank of New South Wales (government banks) and 3 private banks. At June 1997, there were 42 banking groups (comprised of 50 banking companies, of which 17 were domestic owned and 33 foreign owned). Banks operated 2,089 branches and 2,019 agencies in New South Wales.

Lending activity of financial institutions in New South Wales in 1995–96 comprised (in $A1m.): Business loans, 78,288·8; personal, 12,377·6; house purchase, 21,200·3; lease financing, 3,130·2.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In 1995–96, 60,006m. kWh were produced.

Oil and Gas. No natural gas is produced in NSW. All is imported from the Moomba field in South Australia.

Water. Ground water represents the largest source with at least 130 communities relying on it for drinking water.

Minerals. New South Wales contains extensive mineral deposits. For the year ended 30 June 1996, turnover from 120 mining establishments in the coal and metal ore mining industries, employing 15,509 people, was $A4,808m. The value of selected metallic minerals produced in 1995–96 was $A653m.; industrial minerals, $A203·4m.; construction materials, $A429m. Output of principal products:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Antimony concentrates (tonnes)	812	1,129	1,380
Coal (1,000 tonnes)	84,014	88,588	91,900
Copper concentrates (tonnes)	157,584	155,714	170,815
Gold (kg)	10,049	30,128	11,274
Lead concentrates (tonnes)	319,697	320,469	302,146
Construction sand (1,000 tonnes)	11,030	10,645	8,670
Zinc concentrates (tonnes)	599,258	604,879	557,876

Agriculture. In 1995–96 GDP at factor cost for agriculture, forestry, hunting and fishing was $A3,800m. Farm income (including Australian Capital Territory) was $A116m. At 31 March 1996 there were 42,497 farming establishments with a net worth of $A32,008m. These had an area of 61,008,553 ha, of which 4,756,721 ha were used for cropping.

Principal crops in the years ended 31 March 1996 with production in 1,000 tonnes: Wheat for grain, 4,508; barley for grain, 1,074; oats for grain, 711; rice, 965; cotton (raw and seed), 868; oilseeds, 339; sugar-cane, 1,922. (Data relates to farms whose estimated value of agricultural operations was $A5,000 or more at the census.)

The total area under grapes at 31 March 1996 was 16,883 ha (including 3,115 ha not bearing); the production of table grapes was 10,841 tonnes; of wine grapes, 167,556 tonnes; for drying, 46,687 tonnes (fresh weight).

In 1996, there were 3,625 ha of banana plantations; production, 38,708 tonnes. In 1995, there were 4·16m. citrus fruit trees; production (1994), 260,491 tonnes.

At 31 March 1996 there were 41·09m. sheep and lambs, 6·02m. beef cattle, 0·37m. dairy cattle and 0·71m. pigs. The production of shorn and crutched wool in 1996–97 was 194,897 tonnes (greasy). In 1996–97 production (in tonnes) of butter was 4,560; cheese, 21,552; beef and veal, 486,500; mutton, 109,280 and lamb, 66,909; pig meat, 88,530.

Forestry. State forests (timber reserves) represent 5% of land area.

INDUSTRY

A wide range of manufacturing is undertaken in the Sydney area, and there are large iron and steel works near the coalfields at Newcastle and Port Kembla. Around one-third of Australian manufacturing takes place in NSW.

Manufacturing establishments' operations, 1995–96:

Industry	No. of persons employed	Wages and salaries ($A1m.)	Turnover ($A1m.)	Industry gross product ($A1m.)
Food, beverages and tobacco	47,509	1,582·9	12,994·5	3,293·0
Textiles, clothing, footwear and leather	22,673	568·5	3,103·0	1,001·2

Total manufacturing	297,089	10,260·7	65,712·0	21,167·5

Some of the principal articles manufactured in 1996–97 were: 850,000 tonnes of plain wheat flour; 630m. clay bricks; 69·72m. sq. metres of man-made fibre woven fabric; 2,986,000 pairs of footwear; 4,456,000 men's and boys' shirts; 620,000 tonnes of hardwood chips; 346,000 tonnes of plastics in primary forms.

Labour. In May 1997 the labour force was estimated to number 3,049,200 persons, of whom 2,804,000 were employed: 487,600 as intermediate clerical, sales and service workers; 495,500 as professionals; 282,000 as labourers and related workers; 366,700 as tradespersons and related workers; 208,200 as managers and administrators; 250,500 as production and transport workers, and 129,500 as advanced clerical and service workers. There were 245,300 unemployed.

Industrial tribunals are authorized to fix minimum rates of wages and other conditions of employment. Their awards may be enforced by law, as may be industrial agreements between employers and organizations of employees, when registered.

The principal State arbitration and conciliation tribunal is the Industrial Commission of New South Wales. The Commission is empowered to exercise all the powers conferred on subsidiary tribunals, and has in addition authority to determine any widely defined 'industrial matter', to adjudicate in case of illegal strikes and lockouts, to investigate union ballots when irregularities are alleged, and to hear appeals from subsidiary tribunals. Subsidiary tribunals are Conciliation Committees for various industries, each having an equal number representing employers and employees and a Conciliation Commissioner as chairman.

Trade Unions. Registration of trade unions is effected under the New South Wales Trade Union Act 1881, which follows substantially the Trade Union Acts of 1871 and 1876 of England. Registration confers a quasi-corporate existence with power to hold property, to sue and be sued, etc., and the various classes of employees covered by the union are required to be prescribed by the constitution of the union. For the purpose of bringing an industry under the review of the State industrial tribunals, or participating in proceedings relating to disputes before Commonwealth tribunals, employees and employers must be registered as industrial unions, under State or Commonwealth industrial legislation respectively. At 30 June 1996 there were 71 trade unions with a total membership of just over 1m.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. External commerce, exclusive of interstate trade, is included in the statement of the commerce of Australia. Overseas commerce of New South Wales in $A1m. for years ending 30 June:

The major commodities exported in 1996-97 (in $A1m.) were coal, not agglomerated (3,396·5), wheat (including spelt) and meslin (unmilled) (1,115·0), aluminium (992·7), wool and other animal hair (858·2), cotton (614·2), meat (508·9) and parts and accessories for office machines and computers (403·9). Principal imports were computers (2,925·9), parts and accessories for computers (1,523·8), telecommunications equipment, parts and accessories of radio, TV, video, etc. (1,548·2), and private motor vehicles (1,714·8).

Principal destinations of exports in 1996-97 (in $A1m.) were Japan (3,929·0), New Zealand (1,668·3), South Korea (1,242·7), USA (1,050·1), Hong Kong (937·7) and Indonesia (820·5). Major sources of supply were USA (8,304·1), Japan (3,862·6), UK (2,467·4), China (1,819·5), Germany (1,811·6), New Zealand (1,459·2) and Taiwan (1,307·0).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At June 1997 there were 180,849 km of public roads of all sorts. The Roads and Traffic Authority of New South Wales is responsible for the administration and upkeep of major roads. In 1997 there were 20,368 km of roads under its control, comprising 3,010 km of national highways, 14,387 km of state roads and 2,971 km of regional and local roads.

The number of registered motor vehicles (excluding tractors and trailers) at 30 June 1996 was 3,448,900, including 2,775,700 passenger vehicles, 451,700 light commercial vehicles, 128,400 trucks, 15,200 buses and 77,900 motor cycles. There were 543 fatalities in road accidents in 1996–97.

Rail. In 1996 the Rail Access Corporation was formed to own and maintain the railway infrastructure. It leases trackage rights to the State Rail Authority, which operates passenger trains, and to the Freight Rail Corporation. At 30 June 1996, 8,851 km of government railway were open (618 km electrified). In 1996–97, 270·7m. passengers were carried and 76·62m. tonnes of freight. Also open for traffic are 325 km of Victorian Government railways which extend over the border; 68 km of private railways (mainly in mining districts), and 53 km of Commonwealth Government-owned track.

A tramway opened in Sydney in 1996. There is also a small overhead railway in the city centre.

Civil Aviation. Sydney Airport (Kingsford Smith) is the major airport in New South Wales and Australia's principal international air terminal. In 1996 it handled 20,237,000 passengers (13,684,000 on domestic and 6,553,000 on international flights). It is also the leading airport for freight, handling 372,500 tonnes in 1995.

Shipping. The main ports are at Sydney, Newcastle, Port Kembla and Botany Bay. Visits by vessels to the ports of New South Wales in 1992–93 totalled 4,245 (97·43m. GRT). The number of overseas vessels which entered in 1992–93 was 3,091.

Postal Services. At June 1997, a total of 1,320 post offices, post office agencies and community mail agencies provided Australia Post services throughout NSW and the ACT.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Legal processes may be conducted in Local Courts presided over by magistrates or in higher courts (District Court or Supreme Court) presided over by judges. There is also an appellate jurisdiction. Persons charged with the more serious crimes must be tried before a higher court.

Children's Courts have been established with the object of removing children as far as possible from the atmosphere of a public court. There are also a number of tribunals exercising special jurisdiction, e.g., the Industrial Commission and the Compensation Court.

As at 2 June 1996 there were 6,300 persons in prison.

Religion. At the 1996 census of those who stated a religion, 29% were Roman Catholic and 25% Anglican. These 2 religions combined had almost 3·3m. followers.

Education. The State Government maintains a system of free primary and secondary education, and attendance at school is compulsory from 6 to 15 years of age. Non-government schools are subject to government inspection.

In 1996 there were 2,186 government schools with 760,078 pupils (452,117 primary and 307,961 secondary) and 49,202 teachers, and 867 non-government schools with 305,269 pupils (159,546 primary and 145,723 secondary) and 19,892 teachers.

There were 195,240 students in higher education in 1996. The largest number of students (23%) were enrolled in arts, humanities and social sciences.

The University of Sydney, founded in 1850, had 30,369 students in 1996. There are 7 colleges providing residential facilities at the university. The University of New England at Armidale, previously affiliated with the University of Sydney, was incorporated in 1954, and in 1996 had 14,154 students.

The University of New South Wales was established in 1949. Enrolments in 1996 numbered 27,348. There are 7 colleges providing residential facilities at the university. The University of Newcastle, previously affiliated with the University of New South Wales, was granted autonomy from 1965, and in 1996 had 17,407 students. The University of Wollongong, also previously associated with the University of New South Wales, became autonomous in 1975, and in 1996 had 12,081 students. Macquarie University in Sydney, established in 1964, had 17,827 students in 1996. In 1996 the University of Technology, Sydney, had 21,397 students, the University of Western Sydney, 24,997, and Charles Sturt University, 20,123.

Colleges of advanced education were merged with universities in 1990.

Post-school technical and further education is provided at State TAFE colleges. Enrolments in 1996 totalled 417,873 (87% being part-time).

Health. At 30 June 1996 there were 22,231 medical practitioners, 3,979 dentists and 74,131 nurses. There were 18,953 beds in public hospitals, and 89 private hospitals with 5,987 beds.

Welfare. The Commonwealth Government makes provision for social benefits, such as age and disability pensions, widows' pensions, supporting parents' benefits, family allowances, and unemployment, sickness and special benefits.

The number of age and disability pensions (including wives' and carers' pensions) in New South Wales on 30 June 1996 was: Age, 546,499; carers/wives, 58,331; disability support, 172,352; sole parent, 114,778.

Under the Basic Family Payment scheme, which commenced in 1993, at 30 June 1996, 1,136,126 children and students in 587,757 families were receiving payments.

246,883 unemployment, 11,675 sickness and 8,688 special benefits were paid.

Direct State Government social welfare services are limited, for the most part, to the assistance of persons not eligible for Commonwealth Government pensions or benefits, and the provision of certain forms of assistance not available from the Commonwealth Government. The State also subsidizes many approved services for needy persons.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In addition to national broadcasting, at Sept. 1997 there were 11 commercial television services broadcasting in NSW and a total of 39 AM and 24 FM commercial radio services. The first cable-pay television service commenced in Sept. 1995, and satellite-delivered services in Nov. 1995.

Cinema. In the year ended March 1995, 2,836,900 people attended cinema screenings. Construction of a major film studio development for Fox Studios, valued at $A120m., began in 1997.

Tourism. In the year ended 30 June 1996, 1,719,900 overseas visitors arrived for short-term visits. At 30 June 1996 there were 1,743 hotels and motels providing 57,920 rooms; and 791 caravan parks.

Museums and Galleries. In the year to March 1995, 2,389,700 people visited museums and galleries.

QUEENSLAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Queensland was first visited by Capt. Cook in 1770. From 1778 it was part of New South Wales and was formed into a separate colony, with the name of Queensland, by letters patent of 8 June 1859, when responsible government was conferred. Although by 1868 gold had been discovered, wool was the colony's principal product. The first railway line was opened in 1865. Queensland federated with the other Australian states to form the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Queensland comprises the whole northeastern portion of the Australian continent, including the adjacent islands in the Pacific Ocean and in the Gulf of Carpentaria. Estimated area 1,727,200 sq. km.

The increase in the population as shown by the censuses since 1901 has been as follows (including Aboriginals from 1966):

	Census counts			Intercensal increase
Year	Males	Females	Total	Numerical	Rate per annum %
1901	277,003	221,126	498,129	—	—
1911	329,506	276,307	605,813	107,684	1·98
1921	398,969	357,003	755,972	150,159	2·24
1933	497,217	450,317	947,534	191,562	1·86
1947	567,471	538,944	1,106,415	158,881	1·11
1954	676,252	642,007	1,318,259	211,844	2·53
1961	774,579	744,249	1,518,828	200,569	2·04
1966	849,390	824,934	1,674,324	144,857	1·84
1971	921,665	905,400	1,827,065	152,741	1·76
1976	1,024,611	1,012,586	2,037,197	210,132	2·20
1981	1,153,404	1,141,719	2,295,123	257,926	2·41
1986	1,295,630	1,291,685	2,587,315	292,192	2·43
1991	1,482,406	1,495,404	2,977,810	390,495	2·60
1996	1,673,220	1,695,630	3,368,850	391,040	2·63

At the 1996 census there were 95,518 Aboriginals and Torres Strait Islanders.

Since the 1981 census, official population estimates are according to place of usual residence and are referred to as estimated resident population. Estimated resident population at 30 June 1997, 3,338,690.

Statistics on birthplaces from the 1996 census are as follows: Australia, 78·4% (83·6% in 1986); UK and Ireland, 5·6% (6·1%); other countries, 12·4% (14·4%); at sea and not stated, 3·6% (1·4%).

Brisbane, the capital, had at 30 June 1997 (estimate) a resident population of 1,548,346 (Statistical Division). The estimated resident populations of the other major centres (Statistical Districts) at 30 June 1997 (preliminary) were: Gold Coast-Tweed, (including that part in New South Wales) 367,722; Townsville, 123,575; Sunshine Coast, 162,099; Cairns, 109,516; Rockhampton, 64,477; Mackay, 62,442; Bundaberg, 54,809 and Gladstone, 38,141.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics (including Aboriginals) for calendar years:

	Total births	Marriages	Divorces	Deaths
1993	46,778	20,704	9,935	19,972
1994	46,578	20,798	9,762	21,655
1995	46,484	20,610	10,192	20,663
1996	47,769	20,913	10,996	22,281

The annual rates per 1,000 population in 1996 were: Marriages, 6·3; births, 14·3; deaths, 6·7. The infant death rate was 6·3 per 1,000 live births.

CLIMATE

A typical subtropical to tropical climate. High daytime temperatures during Oct. to March give a short spring and long summer. Centigrade temperatures in the hottest inland areas often exceed the high 30s before the official commencement of summer on 1 Dec. Daytime temperatures in winter are quite mild, in the low- to mid-20s. Average rainfall varies from about 150 mm in the desert in the extreme south-western corner of the State to about 4,000 mm in parts of the sugar lands of the wet north-eastern coast, the latter being the wettest part of Australia.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Queensland, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was formed into a separate colony in 1859, and responsible government was conferred. The power of making laws and imposing taxes is vested in a parliament of one house—the Legislative Assembly, which comprises 89 members, returned from 4 electoral zones for 3 years, elected from single-member constituencies by compulsory ballot.

Queensland elects 26 members to the Commonwealth House of Representatives.

The Elections Act, 1983, provides franchise for all males and females, 18 years of age and over, qualified by 6 months' residence in Australia and 3 months in the electoral district.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Following a by-election to the Legislative Assembly in Dec. 1998 the Australian Labor Party (ALP) held 45 seats, the National Party (NP) 23, One Nation 10, the Liberal Party (LP) 9, and ind 2.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor of Queensland: Maj. Gen. Peter Arnison, AO.

An NP-LP coalition government was formed in June 1996, with the support of independent Peter Wellington, comprising as at Feb. 1999:

Premier: Peter Douglas Beattie.

Local Government. In 1997, there were 125 local governments made up of 18 city councils (including Brisbane), 3 town councils and 104 shire councils. Queensland local governments own and manage public infrastructure worth at least $A50,000m. They provide water, sewerage and cleansing services, and are responsible for land use planning, building control and waste management. Facilities for recreational and sporting activities, including parks and gardens, libraries, child care and aged care, as well as a range of community development programmes covering areas such as arts, cultural heritage and youth activities, are also maintained.

The 1997 local government triennial elections were held on 15 March. In all, 349 Councillors were elected out of the almost 1,200 Councillor positions contested, and 36 new Mayors.

In addition to government grants and subsidies, local authority revenue is derived from general rates, paid by landowners on the unimproved capital value of land, and by charging for some specific services. For the year ended 30 June 1997, total outlays for all Queensland local government authorities were $A2,020m., while revenue totalled $A1,817m.

ECONOMY

Budget. In 1996–97 current outlays by the state totalled $A12,174m., of which $A7,097m. were general government final consumption expenditure, and capital outlays totalled $A2,171m. Revenue and grants received totalled $A13,390m.

Banking and Finance. In June 1996 deposits at all banks in Queensland totalled $A38,137m., of which $A10,107m. were current, $A21,171m. were term deposits and $A3,628m. were investment savings. Other lending totalled $A51,206m. In 1995–96 permanent building societies had total assets of $A6,625·7m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1991–92 was 5,285 MW. Output 1993–94, 31,831m. kWh, of which 24,001m. kWh was consumed by 1,355,793 customers. Some 0·9% of production is hydro-electric; most power stations are coal-fired.

Water. In the western portion of the State water is comparatively easily found by sinking artesian bores. Monitoring of water quality in Queensland is carried out by the Department of the Environment (estuarine and coastal waters) and the Department of Natural Resources (fresh water).

Minerals. Principal minerals produced during 1995–96 (in tonnes): Bauxite, 9,179,000; copper concentrates, 1,007,000; lead concentrate, 359,000; mineral sands, 208,000; nickel ore, 3,000; tin, 82,000; zinc concentrate, 446,000; zinc-lead concentrate, 48,000; gold bullion, 38,108 (kg); silver, 520,000. Total value of output, at the mine, in 1995–96 was $A6,053·5m.

Agriculture. In 1995–96 there were 32,186 agricultural establishments farming 149,748,000 ha. Livestock on farms and stations at 31 March 1996 numbered 10,214,000 cattle, 10,707,000 sheep and lambs and 603,000 pigs. Total wool production in the year ended 31 March 1995, 51,935 tonnes. The total area under crops during 1995–96 was 2,495,000 ha.

The gross value of agricultural commodity production in 1995–96 amounted to $A5,370m., which comprised crops, $A3,244m.; livestock disposals, $A1,552m., and livestock products, $A575m.

Forestry. A considerable area consists of natural forest, eucalyptus, pine and cabinet woods being the timbers mostly in evidence; a large quantity of ornamental woods is utilized by cabinet makers. The amount of sawn timber processed in 1994–95 was 651,979 cu. metres of pine and 238,310 cu. metres of other wood.

INDUSTRY

In 1995–96, manufacturing establishments recorded $A28,801m. in turnover, paid $A3,966m. in wages and salaries, and (at 30 June 1996) employed 133,855 persons. The largest manufacturing sector was food, beverages and tobacco with 30·1% of turnover, 25·8% of wages and salaries paid and 24·8% of employment.

Labour. In May 1997 the labour force numbered 1,713,900, of whom 1,546,500 (669,100 females) were employed. Unemployment was 9·7%.

Trade Unions. There were 51 trade unions in June 1996 with 477,400 members.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Total value of direct overseas imports and exports (in $A1,000) f.o.b. port of shipment for both imports and exports:

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Exports	10,865,144	11,798,170	11,984,172	12,510,814	19,844,300

In 1995–96 interstate exports totalled $A6,220,000 and imports $A13,381,40. Chief sources of imports in 1995–96 (in $A1m.): Japan, 1,427·4; USA 1,427·1; EU, 1,360·9; Papua New Guinea, 816·0; New Zealand, 558·8. Exports went chiefly to: Japan, 4,140·1; EU, 1,736·8; Korea, 1,119·4; USA, 612·6; Taiwan, 595·1.

The chief exports overseas in 1995–96 (in $A1m.) were: Coal, 4,481·5; sugar, 1,628·4; meat and meat preparations, 1,399·5; non-ferrous metals, 927·7; metalliferous ores and metal scrap, 811·2; machinery and transport equipment, 750·0. Principal overseas imports were: Road vehicles, 1,550·5; petroleum and petroleum products, 1,088·1; machinery, specialized for particular industries, 646·6; non-monetary gold, 400·9.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At 30 June 1996 there were 177,032 km of roads open to the public. Of these, 65,129 km were surfaced with sealed pavement. At 31 Oct. 1996 motor vehicles registered (in 1,000) totalled 2,082, comprising 1,567·3 passenger vehicles, 353·1 light commercial vehicles, 82·8 trucks, 12·4 buses and 66·4 motor cycles. There were 385 fatalities in road accidents in 1996.

Rail. Queensland Rail is a State government-owned corporation. Total length of line at 30 June 1996 was 9,442 km, of which 1,820 km were electrified. In 1995–96, 40·1m. passengers and 96·2m. tonnes of freight were carried.

Civil Aviation. Queensland is well served with a network of air services, with overseas and interstate connections. Subsidiary companies provide planes for taxi and charter work, and the Flying Doctor Service operates throughout western Queensland. In 1993 there were 134 licensed airports. In 1995-96 Brisbane handled 2,064,592 passengers and 56,102 tonnes of freight; Cairns, 694,348 passengers and 14,603 tonnes of freight. No international passenger services were recorded for Townsville during the year. The number of aircraft registered at 30 June 1995 was 2,186.

Shipping. Queensland has 14 modern trading ports, 2 community ports and· a number of non-trading ports. In 1995–96, cargo discharged was 25,124,000 mass tonnes and cargo loaded was 105,842,000 mass tonnes.

Telecommunications. There were 1·45m. telephones in 1993.

Postal Services. At 30 June 1997 there were 440 post offices and postal agencies.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by Higher Courts (Supreme and District), Magistrates' Courts and Children's Courts. The Supreme Court comprises the Chief Justice and 21 judges; the District Courts, 34 district court judges. Stipendiary magistrates preside over the Magistrates' and Children's Courts, except in the smaller centres, where justices of the peace officiate. A parole board may recommend prisoners for release.

The total number of appearances in the Higher Courts resulting in convictions in 1995–96 was 4,983; appearances resulting in convictions in Magistrates' Courts totalled 171,708, and proven offences in Children's Courts totalled 5,137. At 30 June 1996 there were 12 correctional centres with 3,538 prisoners (172 females). The total police force was 6,582 at 30 June 1996.

Religion. Religious affiliation at the 1991 census: Roman Catholic, 25·4%; Anglican, 25·2%; Uniting Church, 10·4%; Presbyterian, 5·4%; Lutheran, 2·3%; Baptist, 1·9%; other Christian, 6·4%; non-Christian, 1%; no religion, 11·6%; not stated, 10%.

Education. Education is compulsory between the ages of 6 and 15 years and is provided free in government schools.

Primary and secondary education comprises 12 years of full-time formal schooling, and is provided by both the government and non-government sectors. In 1997 the State administered 1,309 schools with 267,147 primary students and 148,116 secondary students. In 1997 there were 26,720 teachers in government schools. There were 417 private schools in 1997 with 80,537 primary students and 79,306 secondary students. Educational programmes at private schools were provided by 10,290 teachers in 1997.

In 1996 there were 24,039 full-time students at TAFE institutes. The 6 publicly funded universities had 108,175 full-time students in 1996. Teaching staff totalled 12,523.

Health. In 1995-96 there were 195 hospitals (148 public with over 9,900 beds), 7 psychiatric institutions. At 30 June 1997 there were 6,390 doctors, 3,147 specialists, 2,062 dentists and 34,278 registered nurses.

Welfare. Welfare institutions providing shelter and social care for the aged, the handicapped and children, are maintained or assisted by the State. A child health service is provided throughout the State. Age, invalid, widows', disability and war service pensions, family allowances, and unemployment and sickness benefits are paid by the Federal Government. At 30 June 1996, age pensioners in the State numbered 276,448 and invalid/disability support pensioners, 109,563 (including wife and carer pensioners); disability pensioners, 68,127; and service pensioners, 68,499 (including dependants).

There were 7,916 widows' and 69,341 sole parent pensions current at 30 June 1996, and basic family payment was being paid for 678,148 children under 16 years and eligible students aged 16 to 24 years in 349,799 families.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In addition to the national networks Queensland is served by 13 public radio stations (non-profit-making), 44 commercial radio stations and 3 commercial TV channels.

Tourism. Overseas visitors to Australia who specified Queensland as their primary destination numbered 1,279,700 in 1996 with the main source being from Asia with 62% of the State visitor total, of which Japanese made up 35·2% and other Asians 26·8%. Visitors from New Zealand accounted for 18·8%; Europe, 9·8% (including UK and Ireland, 5·1%) and North America, 4·5%.

Festivals. The Brisbane Festival in 1997 featured 238 performances in 37 venues across the city.

Libraries. The State Library of Queensland aims to provide equitable access to high-quality State Library and public library services. The Library received about 150,000 requests for information during 1996-97 and more than 450,000 people visited the State Library at South Bank.

National Theatre and Opera. The Queensland Performing Arts Complex at South Bank comprises a Concert Hall, Lyric Theatre, the Cremorne Theatre and, in 1998, a drama theatre: the Southbank Playhouse. During 1996-97, 850 performances and activities were presented in the 3 main auditoria of the Complex, with attendances totalling 730,000.

Museums and Galleries. The Queensland Museum focuses on science and human achievement. 492,874 people visited the museum during 1996-97. The Queensland Art Gallery is located at South Bank. Over 35,000 people attended the Gallery's travelling exhibitions in regional Queensland.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

South Australia was surveyed by Tasman in 1644 and charted by Flinders in 1802. It was formed into a British province by letters of patent of Feb. 1836, and a partially elective legislative council was established in 1851. From 6 July 1863, the Northern Territory was placed under the jurisdiction of South Australia until the establishment of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The total area of South Australia is 380,070 sq. miles (984,377 sq. km). The settled part is divided into counties and hundreds. There are 49 counties proclaimed, covering 23m. ha, of which 19m. ha are occupied. Outside this area there are extensive pastoral districts, covering 76m. ha, 49m. of which are under pastoral leases.

Estimated resident population at 30 June 1998 was 1,487,294, including (30 June 1997) 747,887 females and 22,503 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, of whom 11,499 were female. The 1996 census population was 1,427,936.

The Adelaide Statistical Division had 1,045,854 persons at the 1996 census in 25 councils and 4 municipalities and other districts. Cities outside this area (with 1996 census populations) are Whyalla (23,644), Mount Gambier (22,047), Port Augusta (14,244), Port Pirie (13,960) and Port Lincoln (12,182).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

	Live Births	Marriages	Divorces	Deaths
1995	19,336	8,547	4,199	11,218
1996	19,056	8,011	4,358	11,606
1997	18,362	7,945	4,115	11,658

The infant mortality rate in 1997 was 4·7 per 1,000 live births.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

South Australia was formed into a British province by letters patent of Feb. 1836, and a partially elective Legislative Council was established in 1851. The present Constitution dates from 24 Oct. 1856. It vests the legislative power in an elected Parliament, consisting of a Legislative Council and a House of Assembly. The former is composed of 22 members. Every 4 years half the members retire, and the resulting vacancies are filled at a general election on the basis of proportional representation with the State as one multi-member electorate. The qualifications of an elector are, to be an Australian citizen, or a British subject who on 25 Jan. 1984 was enrolled on a Commonwealth electoral roll and/or at some time between 26 Oct. 1983 and 25 Jan. 1984 inclusive was enrolled on an electoral roll for a South Australian Assembly district or a Commonwealth electoral roll in any State. The person must be at least 18 years of age and have lived continuously in Australia for at least 6 months, in South Australia for at least 3 months, and in the sub-division for which he is enrolled at least 1 month. War service may substitute for residential qualifications in some cases. By the Constitution Act Amendment Act, 1894, the franchise was extended to women, who voted for the first time at the general election of 25 April 1896. The qualifications for election as a member of both Houses are the same as for an elector. Certain persons are ineligible for election to either House.

The House of Assembly consists of 47 members elected for 4 years, representing single electorates. Election of members of both Houses takes place by preferential secret ballot. Voting is compulsory for those on the Electoral Roll.

Electors enrolled (2 March 1996) numbered 989,885.

The executive power is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown and an Executive Council, consisting of the Governor and the Ministers of the Crown. The Governor has the power to dissolve the House of Assembly but not the Legislative Council, unless that Chamber has twice consecutively with an election intervening defeated the same or substantially the same Bill passed in the House of Assembly by an absolute majority.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

The House of Assembly, elected on 27 Oct. 1998, consists of the following members: Liberal Party of Australia (LP), 23; Australian Labor Party (ALP), 21; Independent (IND), 2; National, 1. The Legislative Council consists of 10 LP, 8 ALP, 1 IND and 3 Australian Democrat members.

Governor: Sir Eric James Neal, AC, CVO.

In Feb. 1999 the Liberal Ministry was as follows:

Premier, Minister for Multicultural Affairs: John Wayne Olsen.

Deputy Premier, Minister for Primary Industries, Natural Resources and Regional Development: Robert Gerard Kerin. Treasurer: Kenneth Trevor Griffin. Human Services: Dean Craig Brown. Government Enterprises, Information, Economy: Dr Michael Harry Armitage. Transport, Urban Planning and the Arts: Diana Vivienne Laidlaw. Environment and Heritage, Aboriginal Affairs: Dorothy Christine Kotz. Education, Children's Services and Training: Malcolm Robert Buckby. Local Government, Employment, Youth: Mark Kennion Brindal. Industry and Trade, Recreation, Sport and Racing: Iain Frederick Evans. Tourism: Joan Hall. Year 2000 Compliance: Wayne Matthew. Disability Services, Ageing, Administrative Services, Information Services: Robert Lawson. Police, Correctional and Emergency Services: Robert Brokenshire.

Ministers are jointly and individually responsible to the legislature for all their official acts.

Local Government. The closely settled part of the State (mainly near the sea-coast and the River Murray) is incorporated into local government areas, and sub-divided into district councils (rural areas only), municipal corporations (mainly metropolitan, but including larger country towns) and cities (more densely populated areas with a qualification of 15,000 residents in the Adelaide metropolitan area, and 10,000 in the country). At 1 Jan. 1996 there were 118 local government authorities. The main functions of councils are the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges, sport and recreational facilities, and garbage collection and disposal.

The number and area of the sub-divisions, together with expenditure (in $A1,000) for the year ended 30 June 1996, were:

	No.	Area (1,000 ha)	Roads and bridges	Recreation and culture	All other	Total expenditure
Adelaide statistical division	24	189·3	89,750	87,935	74,905	531,032
Other municipal corporations and district councils	64	15,220·0	72,403	32,914	46,163	266,822
Total	88	15,409·3	162,153	138,562	120,258	797,854

ECONOMY

Budget. Public sector revenue and outlays (in $A1m.) for years ended 30 June:

	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
Revenue	4,787	5,154	5,324	6,139	6,433
Outlays	5,516	6,172	7,040	6,611	6,681

Banking and Finance. In March 1993 the average weekly balance of deposits held by all banks was $A14,651m. The average weekly balance of loans, advances and bills discounted was $A17,240m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Minerals. The value of minerals produced in 1994–95 was $A1,186·0m. (metallic minerals, $A323·4m.; opals, $A38·6m.; natural gas, $A339m.; crude oil, $A114·4m.; condensates, $A86·3m.; liquefied petroleum gas, $A92·5m.; coal, $A72·7m.; construction materials, $A64·7m.). The principal metallic minerals produced are iron ore, copper, uranium oxide, gold and silver.

Agriculture. Total area of agricultural establishments, at 31 March 1995, was 56,100,961 ha.

Soil Conservation. A Department of Agriculture programme to deal with the problems of erosion and soil conservation includes the planting of cereal rye, perennial rye and other grasses to check sand drifts; contour furrowing and contour banking; contour planting with vines and fruit trees; and several water-diversion schemes.

Gross value of agricultural production (in $A1,000), 1994–95: Crops, 1,493,100; livestock slaughtering, 466,200; livestock products, 505,300. Total gross value, $A2,464,600.

Sown area (in ha) and output (in tonnes) of the chief crops in 1994–95: Wheat, 1,534,900 and 2,794,900; barley, 1,023,310 and 1,008,900; oats, 120,600 and 155,800; hay, 103,200 and 383,000; vines, 38,545 and 374,589.

Fruit culture is extensive, and in 1996–97, 210,393 tonnes of citrus and 65,343 tonnes of other orchard fruit were produced. Other products, in addition to root crops and vegetables, are grass seeds and oil seeds.

Livestock, 31 March 1995: 1,216,020 cattle, 13,249,100 sheep and 422,903 pigs. In 1994, 87,313 tonnes of wool clip and (1994–95) 484m. litres of milk were produced.

Irrigation. For the year ended 31 March 1994, 112,177 ha were under irrigated culture, being used as follows: Vineyards, 23,667; fruit (excluding grapes), 16,008; vegetables, 8,940; other crops, 10,872; and pasture, 52,688.

INDUSTRY

The turnover for manufacturing industries for 1996–97 was $A18,449m.

Industry sub-division	Establishments (No.)	Persons employed (1,000)	Wages and salaries ($A1m.)	Turnover ($A1m.)
Food, beverages and tobacco	474	14·9	481	3,988·5
Textiles, clothing, footwear and leather manufacturing	275	4·9	134	779·2
Wood and paper products manufacturing	312	5·5	182	907·7
Printing, publishing and recorded media	422	5·8	180	809·8
Chemical, petroleum, coal and associated products	247	6·6	245	1,372·9
Non-metallic mineral products	217	2·6	94	610·4
Metal products manufacturing	681	11·1	401	2,510·9
Machinery and equipment	836	28·1	1008	6,889·1
Other manufacturing	588	5·1	123	571·0
Total	4,052	84·5	2,847	18,449·5

Practically all forms of secondary industry are to be found, the most important being motor vehicle manufacture, saw-milling and the manufacture of household appliances, basic iron and steel, meat and meat products, and wine and brandy.

Labour. Two systems of industrial arbitration and conciliation for the adjustment of industrial relations between employers and employees are in operation—the State system, which operates when industrial disputes are confined to the territorial limits of the State, and the Federal system, which applies when disputes involve other parts of Australia as well as South Australia.

The industrial tribunals are authorized to fix minimum rates of wages and other conditions of employment, and their awards may be enforced by law. Industrial agreements between employers and organizations of employees, when registered, may be enforced in the same manner as awards.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Overseas imports and exports in $A1m. (year ending 30 June):

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Imports	2,396·9	3,068·1	2,803·4	3,099·5	3,113·8
Exports	3,505·1	3,756·3	3,889·8	3,829·3	4,496·9

Principal exports in 1995–96 were (in $A1m.): Cereals and cereal preparations, 712·9; road vehicles, parts and accessories, 249·2; meat and meat preparations, 244·4; wool and sheepskins, 239·6; metals and metal manufacture, 610·4; petroleum and petroleum products, 220·4; wine, 317·3; fish and crustaceans, 196·3.

Principal imports in 1995–96 were (in $A1m.): Road vehicles, parts and accessories, 546·5; machinery, 675·9; petroleum and petroleum products, 346·4.

In 1995–96 the leading suppliers of imports were (in $A1m.): Japan (709·8), USA (439·1), UK (223·5), New Zealand (117·9). Main export markets were Japan (678·5), USA (278·8), New Zealand (374·3), UK (287·6), China (293·1), Hong Kong (201·5).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At 30 June 1996, of the roads customarily used by the public, there were 2,753 km of national highways, 9,560 km of arterial roads and 83,020 km of local roads, totalling 95,333 km. Lengths of road classified by surface were as follows: Sealed, 25,900 km; unsealed, 69,433 km. Costs of construction and maintenance are shared by the State and Commonwealth governments and by the councils of the local areas. Motor vehicles registered at 30 June 1995: Passenger and other motor vehicles, 908,400; motorcycles, 26,600. In 1995 there were 182 fatalities in road accidents.

Rail. At 30 June 1996, Australian National Railways operated 4,415 km of railway in country areas. TransAdelaide operated 120 km of railway in the metropolitan area of Adelaide, which carried 8·4m. passengers in 1994–95.

There is a tramway in Adelaide.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Adelaide. In 1996 it handled 3,653,000 passengers (220,000 on international flights), and in 1995, 21,200 tonnes of freight. In July 1996 there were 27 licensed aerodromes.

Shipping. There are 10 state and 5 private deep-sea ports. In 1995, 770 vessels conducting overseas trade entered South Australia with 3·12m. import tonnes of cargo and left with 4·93m. export tonnes. In 1995–96 the state-owned ports handled 12·5m. tonnes of cargo out of a total of 20·1m. tonnes.

Telecommunications. Telephone services in operation totalled 805,478 at 30 June 1994.

Postal Services. At 30 June 1997, there were 527 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court, which incorporates admiralty, civil, criminal, land and valuation, and testamentary jurisdiction; district criminal courts, which have jurisdiction in many indictable offences, and magistrates courts, which include the Youth Court. Circuit courts are held at several places. In the year ended 31 Dec. 1994, there were 1,456 appearances in the higher criminal courts. In 1,324 of those cases, the defendant was found guilty of the major charge. In 1996 the police force numbered 3,586. There were 4,540 prisoners received under sentence in 1995.

Religion. Religious affiliation at the 1996 census: Catholic, 296,048; Anglican, 228,151; Uniting Church, 180,604; Lutheran, 70,970; Orthodox, 42,053; Baptist, 26,251; Presbyterian, 23,994; other Christians, 74,868; non-Christians, 25,236; indefinite, 4,885; no religion, 310,908; not stated, 138,554.

Education. Education is secular and is compulsory for children 6–15 years of age. Primary and secondary education at government schools is free. In 1995 there were 19,461 children in 421 pre-school centres. In 1995 there were 853 schools operating, of which 193 were non-government and 660 government schools, the latter comprising 60 junior primary, 407 primary, 3 primary-secondary, 84 secondary, 51 area, 21 special, 16 rural, 16 Aboriginal schools; 1 English as Second Language and 1 Open Access College. There were 122,582 children in government and 39,355 in non-government primary schools, and 55,889 children in government and 26,966 in non-government secondary schools. 10 Institutes of Vocational Education were formed in 1993 by a merger of the former 19 TAFE colleges. There were 49,432 students at the 3 universities in 1995.

Welfare. The number of pensioners at 30 June 1995 was: Age, 155,569; disability support, 43,247; wife's/carer's pension, 17,462; widow's, 4,034; sole parent, 27,646; rehabilitation, 33.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Apart from the national services, there were in 1997, 92 radio stations (22 AM and 70 FM) and 4 commercial TV stations.

Tourism. In June 1998 there were 226 hotels, motels, guest houses and serviced apartments with 9,900 rooms.

TASMANIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Abel Janszoon Tasman discovered Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania) on 24 Nov. 1642. The island became a British settlement in 1803 as a dependency of New South Wales; in 1825 its connection with New South Wales was terminated; in 1851 a partially elected Legislative Council was established; and in 1856 responsible government came into operation. On 1 Jan. 1901 Tasmania was federated with the other Australian states into the Commonwealth of Australia.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Tasmania is a group of islands separated from the mainland by Bass Strait with an area (including islands) of 68,049 sq. km, or 6·8m. ha, of which 6,408,600 ha form the area of the main island. The population at 10 consecutive censuses (including full-blood Aboriginals from 1966) was:

	Population		Population
1947	257,078	1976	402,868
1954	308,752	1981	418,957
1961	350,340	1986	436,353
1966	371,435	1991	452,837
1971	390,413	1996	459,659

At the census of 6 Aug. 1996, 23,103 were born in the UK or Ireland, 11,120 in other European countries and 394,774 in Australia. Estimated resident population at 31 Dec. 1997, 471,789 (240,100 females).

The largest cities and towns (with populations at the 1996 census) are: Hobart (189,944), Launceston (95,982), Devonport (23,814) and Burnie (19,283).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

	Marriages	Divorces	Births	Deaths
1994	2,887	1,544	6,844	3,911
1995	2,840	1,279	6,558	3,739
1996	2,654	1,582	6,419	3,884
1997	2,672	1,321	6,007	3,809

CLIMATE

Mostly a temperate maritime climate. The sea, never more than 115 km distant, suppresses temperature extremes. The prevailing westerly airstream leads to a marked variation of cloudiness, rainfall and temperature. The result is a west coast and highlands that are cool, wet and cloudy, and an east coast and lowlands that are milder, drier and sunnier.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Parliament consists of the Governor, the Legislative Council and the House of Assembly. The Council has 19 members, elected by adults with 6 months' residence. Members sit for 6 years, 3 retiring annually and 4 every sixth year. There is no power to dissolve the Council. Vacancies are filled by by-elections. The House of Assembly has 35 members; the maximum term for the House of Assembly is 4 years. Women received the right to vote in 1903. Proportional representation was adopted in 1907, the method now being the single transferable vote in 7-member constituencies. Casual vacancies in the House of Assembly are determined by a transfer of the preference of the vacating member's ballot papers to consenting candidates who were unsuccessful at the last general election.

A Minister must have a seat in one of the two Houses.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of Aug. 1998 the Australian Labor Party won 14 seats in the House of Assembly, the Liberal Party 10 and the Tasmanian Greens 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

The Legislative Council is predominantly independent without formal party allegiance; 4 members are Labor-endorsed and 1 Liberal.

Governor: Sir Guy Stephen Montague Green, AC, KBE.

A majority Labor government was formed in Oct. 1998, which in Jan. 1999 comprised:

Premier, Minister for State Development: James Bacon.

Deputy Premier, Minister for Infrastructure Energy and Resources, Racing and Gaming: Paul Lennon. Chair of Committees: James Cox. Secretary to Cabinet: Fran Bladel. Health and Human Services: Judith Jackson. Primary Industries, Water and Environment, Minister for Police: David Llewellyn. Attorney General, Justice and Industrial Relations: Peter Patmore. Education: Paula Wriedt.

Local Government. The State is divided into 29 municipal areas comprising the cities of Hobart, Launceston, Glenorchy, Clarence, Burnie and Devonport and 23 municipalities. The number of municipalities was reduced from 46 in 1993 because of the amalgamation of smaller into larger municipalities. The cities and municipalities are managed by elected aldermen and councillors, respectively, with reference to local matters such as sanitation and health services, domestic water supplies and roads and bridges within each particular area. The chief sources of revenue are rates (based on assessed annual value) levied on owners of property and government grants.

Tasmanian Islands. Two inhabited Tasmanian islands (King and Flinders) are organized as municipalities. Nearly 1,360 km south-east lies Macquarie Island (123 sq. km), part of the State, and used only as a research base and meteorological station.

ECONOMY

Budget. The revenue is derived chiefly from taxation (pay-roll, motor, lottery and land tax, business franchises and stamp duties), and from grants and reimbursements from the Commonwealth Government. Customs, excise, sales and income tax are levied by the Commonwealth Government, which makes grants to Tasmania for both revenue and capital purposes.

Specific Purpose Grants are mainly used to provide essential services such as hospitals, housing, roads and educational services, while General Purpose Revenue Funds have been paid since 1942 to compensate the State for the loss of income tax to the federal government.

Consolidated Revenue Fund receipts and expenditure, in $A1m., for financial years ending 30 June:

	1994–95	1995–96	1996-97
Revenue	2,157	2,220	2,269
Expenditure	2,228	2,377	2,427

Net State and local government debt, 1996–97, $A3,260m.

In 1996–97 State Government revenue from taxes, fees and fines amounted to $A670m., of which pay-roll tax provided $A148m.; motor tax, $A92m.; taxes on property, $A141m.; taxes on gambling and insurance, $A90m. and franchise taxes, $A150m.

Banking and Finance. Trading bank activity in Tasmania is divided between 3 private banks and the Commonwealth Trading Bank. The 5 savings banks operating in Tasmania are the Commonwealth Savings Bank, the Trust Bank (a trustee savings bank formed by the amalgamation of 2 smaller trustee banks) and 3 private savings banks operated by trading banks. The total value of deposits at 30 June 1997 was $A3,719m. (1996: $A3,615). The value of loans at 30 June 1997 was $A4,500m. (1996: $A4,529m.).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 2,502 MW in 1997–98. Energy generated in 1997–98, 9,675 GWh. Tasmania has good supplies of hydro-electric power because of assured rainfall and high level water storages (natural and artificial). The disaggregation process has created the new Hydro Electric Commission, Aurora Energy and Transend Networks.

Minerals. Output of principal metallic minerals in 1996–97 was (in tonnes): Zinc, 186,406; iron ore pellets, 809,359; copper, 24,759; lead, 37,974; tin, 8,732; tungsten, 2; gold, 2·43; silver, 165. Coal production, 545,820 tonnes. Value of output, 1996–97 (in $A1,000): Metallic minerals, 460,907; non-metallic and fuel minerals, 48,451; construction materials, 26,962.

Agriculture. The estimated gross value of recorded production from agriculture in 1996–97 was (in $A1m.): Livestock products, 225·8; livestock slaughterings and other disposals, 117·1; crops, 317·2; total gross value, 660·1. There were 4,536 agricultural establishments in 1996–97, occupying a total area of 1,920,000 ha. Area (in 1,000 ha) and production (in 1,000 tonnes) of the principal crops:

Livestock at 31 March 1997: Sheep, 3,976,200; cattle, 725,200; pigs, 23,900.

Wool produced during 1996–97 was 18,876 tonnes, valued at $A82·1m.; butter, 10,869 tonnes; cheese, 25,589 tonnes. In 1996–97, 55,649 tonnes of apples and 1,497 tonnes of grapes were produced.

Forestry. Indigenous forests cover a considerable part of the State, and the sawmilling and woodchipping industries are very important. Production of sawn timber in 1997–98 was 344,200 cu. metres. 4,878,300 cu. metres of logs were used for milling and chipping in 1997–98. Newsprint and paper are produced from native hardwoods, principally eucalypts.

Fisheries. Estimated gross value of fisheries production was $A215·3m. in 1996–97. The volume of fisheries production in 1996–97 was 26,426 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

The most important manufactures for export are refined metals, woodchips, newsprint and other paper manufactures, pigments, woollen goods, fruit pulp, confectionery, butter, cheese, preserved and dried vegetables, sawn timber, and processed fish products. The electrolytic-zinc works at Risdon near Hobart treat large quantities of local and imported ore, and produce zinc, sulphuric acid, superphosphate, sulphate of ammonia, cadmium and other by-products. At George Town, large-scale plants produce refined aluminium and manganese alloys. During 1997–98, 4,440,100 tonnes (green weight) of woodchips were produced. In 1996–97 employment in manufacturing establishments was 21,600; wages and salaries totalled $A744m.; turnover, $A4,745m.

Labour. In Nov. 1998, 217,000 persons (58·9% of the civilian population aged 15 and over) were in the workforce, of whom 194,600 were employed.

Trade Unions. In 1998 Tasmania had the highest rate of trade union membership of any Australian State, 34·6%. This compared with 39·3% in Aug. 1996 and 42·9% in Aug. 1994.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 1997–98 exports totalled $A2,134·1m. to overseas countries. The principal countries of destination in 1997–98 (with values in $A1m.) for overseas exports were: Japan, 549·0; USA, 176·3; Taiwan, 150·4; Denmark, 135·7; Hong Kong, 132·6; Thailand, 110·8; Malaysia, 108·7; Indonesia, 82·9. Exports to the European Community totalled $A338·7m. In 1997–98 direct imports into Tasmania totalled $A385·4m. from overseas countries. The principal countries of origin in 1997–98 (with values in $A1m.) for overseas imports were: USA, 70·6; Japan, 45·8; New Zealand, 37·4; UK, 36·5.

The main commodities by value (in $A1m.) exported to overseas countries in 1997–98 were: Non-ferrous metals, 556·0; cork and wood, 311·3; metalliferous ores and metal scrap, 254·4; transport equipment (except road vehicles), 273·1; fish, crustaceans and molluscs, 141·2; dairy products, 133·7; iron and steel, 76·5; meat and meat preparations, 71·9; vegetables and fruit, 55·2. The main imports from overseas countries in 1997–98 (in $A1m.) were: Power generating machinery and equipment, 44·0; road vehicles, 41·6; pulp and waste paper, 28·8; coffee, tea, cocoa and spices, 28·1; general industrial machinery and parts, 24·3.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were approximately 24,000 km of roads open to general traffic, of which 370 km were National Highway and 3,350 km were arterial State roads. Motor vehicles registered at 30 June 1997 comprised 240,460 cars and station wagons, 74,244 commercial vehicles and 7,581 motor cycles.

Rail. A 733 km freight-only rail network services many of the State's principal industries via links with all major ports and cities. 1,942,700 tonnes of freight were carried in 1993–94.

Civil Aviation. Regular passenger and freight services connect the south, north and north-west of the State with the mainland. Air New Zealand provides a direct international service to Christchurch between Oct. and March. For the year ended 30

June 1996 the 6 main airports handled 1,725,000 passengers and 9,004 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. In 1995–96, 10,783,576 mass tonnes of cargo were carried through the 4 major ports. Passenger ferry services connect Tasmania with the mainland and offshore islands.

Telecommunications. At 30 June 1997 there were 34 post offices and 152 licensees. There were 4 TV broadcasters and 27 radio stations.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court of Tasmania, with civil, criminal, ecclesiastical, admiralty and matrimonial jurisdiction, established by Royal Charter on 13 Oct. 1823, is a superior court of record, with both original and appellate jurisdiction, and consists of a Chief Justice and 6 puisne judges. There are also inferior civil courts with limited jurisdiction, licensing courts, mining courts, courts of petty sessions and coroners' courts.

In 1995–96 there were 52,330 recorded offences, of which 47,737 were against property, 2,661 against the person and 1,791 fraud and similar offences. The total police force at June 1995 was 1,049. There is one prison, with 1,138 imprisonments in 1995–96.

Religion. At the census of 1996 the following numbers of adherents of the principal religions were recorded:

Anglican Church	156,192	Other Christian	28,515
Roman Catholic	89,156	Indefinite and not stated	45,606
Uniting Church	34,901	No religion	76,859
Presbyterian	13,977	Non-Christian	3,661
Baptist	9,727
		Total	458,594

Education. Education is controlled by the State and is free, secular and compulsory between the ages of 6 and 16. In 1997, government schools had a total enrolment of 62,921 pupils, including 27,258 at secondary level; 63 private schools had a total enrolment of 21,236 pupils, including 10,428 at secondary level.

Technical and further education is conducted at technical and community colleges in the major centres throughout the state. In 1996 there were 26,588 students enrolled in the Division of Technical and Further Education and almost 30,000 students in the Division of Adult Education.

Tertiary education is offered at the University of Tasmania in Hobart and Launceston and the Australian Maritime College in Launceston. The University (established 1890) had (1996) 12,611 students (68% full-time) and 1,653 academic staff. The Maritime College had 904 student enrolments in June 1995.

Welfare. The number of pensioners in Tasmania on 30 June 1996 was: Age (including wife and carer pensioners), 43,483; disability support, 16,993; war (service), 14,852; widows, 1,061.

CULTURE

Press. There are 3 daily papers with a combined circulation of 117,199. The largest circulation for a Tasmanian daily is for the Saturday edition of The Mercury, with a circulation of 64,067.

Tourism. In 1997, 946,114 passengers arrived (799,108 by air from other Australian states or New Zealand and 147,006 by sea).

Festivals. The Australian Wooden Boat Festival takes place biennially in Nov. Boat owners exhibit craft and maritime skills around Hobart's waterfront. At the inaugural Festival in 1994, 40,000 people attended.

Libraries. The State Library of Tasmania delivers its services through a Statewide network of 49 public libraries; 4 Bookmobiles and 6 reference specialist libraries. These include the Tasmaniana Library, the W. L. Crowther Library, and the Allport Library and Museum of Fine Arts.

National Theatre and Opera. The Theatre Royal in Hobart, established in 1834, has resumed its pre-eminent position in the city's cultural scene following extensive renovation.

Museums and Galleries. The Tasmanian Museum and Art Gallery (TMAG) houses collections in the fields of fine and applied art, zoology, geology, botany, history, anthropology and applied science. The Queen Victoria Museum and Art Gallery was established in 1891.

VICTORIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first permanent settlement in the area was formed at Portland Bay in 1834. Regular government was first established in 1839. Victoria, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was proclaimed a separate colony in 1851 at much the same time as gold was discovered . A new constitution giving responsible government to the colony was proclaimed on 23 Nov. 1855. This event had far-reaching effects, as the population increased from 76,162 in 1850 to 589,160 in 1864. By this time the main impetus behind the search for gold had waned and the new arrivals availed themselves of the opening of the pastoral and agricultural lands to smaller holders and the gradual development of manufacturing industries. Victoria federated with the other Australian states to form the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The State has an area of 227,600 sq. km, and a resident population (estimate) of 4,560,100 at 30 June 1996; density, 20·0 per sq. km. The 1996 census population was 4,373,520. Victoria has the greatest proportion of people from non-English-speaking countries of any State or Territory, with (1996) 2·3% from Italy, 1·4% from Greece and 1·3% from Vietnam.

Estimated population at 30 June 1995, within 11 'Statistical Divisions': Melbourne, 3,218,051; Barwon, 238,767; Western District, 101,550; Central Highlands, 133,969; Wimmera, 52,840; Mallee, 88,932; Loddon, 156,081; Goulburn, 184,731; Ovens-Murray, 88,696; East Gippsland, 82,254; Gippsland, 155,812.

Population of urban centres with over 10,000 inhabitants at the 1996 census: Melbourne, 2,865,329; Geelong, 125,382; Ballarat, 64,831; Bendigo, 59,936; Shepparton-Mooroopna, 31,945; Melton, 30,304; Warrnambool, 26,052; Albury-Wodonga (Wodonga Part), 25,825; Mildura, 24,142; Cranbourne, 24,752; Sunbury,

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Victoria, formerly a portion of New South Wales, was, in 1851, proclaimed a separate colony, with a partially elective Legislative Council. In 1856 responsible government was conferred, the legislative power being vested in a parliament of two Houses, the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. At present the Council consists of 44 members who are elected for 2 terms of the Assembly, one-half retiring at each election. The Assembly consists of 88 members, elected for 4 years from the date of its first meeting unless sooner dissolved by the Governor. Members and electors of both Houses must be aged 18 years and Australian citizens or those British subjects previously enrolled as electors, according to the Constitution Act 1975. No property qualification is required, but judges, members of the Commonwealth Parliament, undischarged bankrupts and persons convicted of an offence which is punishable by life imprisonment, may not be members of either House. Single voting (one elector one vote) and compulsory preferential voting apply to Council and Assembly elections. Enrolment for Council and Assembly electors is compulsory. The Council may not initiate or amend money bills, but may suggest amendments in such bills other than amendments which would increase any charge. A bill shall not become law unless passed by both Houses.

In the exercise of the executive power the Governor is advised by a Cabinet of responsible Ministers. Section 50 of the Constitution Act 1975 provides that the number of Ministers shall not at any one time exceed 22, of whom not more than 6 may sit in the Legislative Council and not more than 17 may sit in the Legislative Assembly.

At the elections of 23 March 1996 the Liberal and National Party coalition was re-elected, with 34 seats in the Legislative Council and 58 in the Legislative Assembly.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Sir James Augustine Gobbo, AC, QC.

The Liberal-National coalition Cabinet was as follows in Feb. 1999:

Premier, Minister for Multicultural Affairs and for the Arts: Jeffrey Gibb Kennett.

Deputy Premier, Minister for Agriculture and Resources: Pat McNamara. Small Business, Tourism: Louise Asher. Industry, Science and Technology: Mark Birrell. Transport: Robin Cooper. Roads and Ports: Geoff Craige. Education: Phil Gude. Finance, Gaming: Roger Hallam. Housing, Minister responsible for Aboriginal Affairs: Ann Henderson. Tertiary Education, Minister assisting the Premier on Multicultural Affairs: Phil Honeywood. Police and Emergency Services, Corrections: Bill McGrath. Planning and Local Government: Rob Maclellan. Youth, Community Services: Dr Denis Napthine. Sport, Rural Development: Tom Reynolds. Treasurer, Minister for Information Technology and Multi-Media: Alan Stockdale. Conservation and Land Management: Marie Tehan. Attorney-General, Fair Trading, Women's Affairs: Jan Wade. Health and the Aged: Rob Knowles.

Local Government. At 30 June 1997 the state was divided into 78 municipal districts, comprising 31 cities (including 4 greater cities), 6 rural cities, 40 shires and 1 borough. The unincorporated areas (not part of a municipality) include French Island (154 sq. km), Lady Julia Percy Island (1·3 sq. km), Bass Strait Islands (3·8 sq. km) and part of the Gippsland Lakes (309 sq. km). The constitution of cities, towns, boroughs and shires is based on statutory requirements concerning population, rate revenue and net annual value of rateable property.

ECONOMY

Budget. State and local government outlays and receipts (excluding financial enterprises, e.g. government savings banks, insurance offices, etc.) in $A1m.:

State 1995–96: Current outlays, 16,606; capital outlays, 7,992. Revenue, 19,026. State expenditure included: Education, 4,884; health, 3,271; general public services, 1,358; transport and communications, 1,380; public order and safety, 1,183. Revenue included: Property taxes, 2,254; payroll taxes, 1,994; taxes on uses of goods and performance of activities, 2,312; taxes on provision of goods and services, 1,864.

Local 1995–96: Outlays, 1,474, including transport and communications, 452; recreation and culture, 416; general public services, 268; housing and community amenities, 317; social security and welfare, 295. Revenue, 1,953, including taxes, fees and fines, 1,287; Commonwealth and State grants, 589.

Banking and Finance. The State Bank of Victoria, the largest bank in the State, provides domestic and international services for business and personal customers and is the largest supplier of housing finance in Victoria. In 1990 it ran into debt and was acquired by the Commonwealth from the Victorian government in Sept. 1990.

The 11 major trading banks in Victoria are the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, the Australia and New Zealand Banking Group, the Westpac Banking Corporation, the National Australia Bank, the Bank of Melbourne, the St George Bank, the Challenge Bank, the Metway Bank, the State Bank of New South Wales, Bendigo Bank and Citibank. Banks had a total of 1,546 branches and 1,785 agencies between them at 30 June 1997.

In June 1997 bank deposits repayable in Australia totalled $A79,483m.; other lending, $A80,783m.

There were 4 permanent building societies in 1995-96 (8 in 1992-93).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Electricity production in 1993-94 was 35,442m. kWh.

In 1993 the State Government began a major restructure of the government-owned electricity industry along competitive lines. The distribution sector was privatized in 1995, and 4 generator companies in 1997.

About 90% of power generated is supplied by 4 brown-coal fired generating stations. There are 2 other thermal stations and 3 hydro-electric stations in north-east Victoria. Victoria is also entitled to approximately 30% of the output of the Snowy Mountains hydro-electric scheme and half the output of the Hume hydro-electric station, both of which are in New South Wales.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil in commercially recoverable quantities was first discovered in 1967 in 2 large fields offshore, in East Gippsland in Bass Strait, between 65 and 80 km from land. These fields, with 10 other fields since discovered, have been assessed as containing initial recoverable reserves of more than 2,930m. bbls. of treated crude oil. Estimated reserves of crude oil (1994) 113,000m. litres; gas, 139,000m. cu. metres.

In 1995-96 Victoria produced 41·4% of Australia's crude oil and 32·9% of its natural gas. Production of crude oil (1995-96), 12,732m. litres.

Natural gas was discovered offshore in East Gippsland in 1965. The initial recoverable reserves of treated gas are 220,400m. cu. metres. Production of natural gas (1995-96) was 6,299bn. litres. Natural gas is distributed to residential and industrial consumers through a network of 23,400 km of mains.

Liquefied petroleum gas is produced after extraction of the propane and butane fractions from the untreated oil and gas. In 1995-96, 1,275m. litres of propane were produced and 1,037m. litres of butane.

Brown Coal. Major deposits of brown coal are located in the Central Gippsland region and comprise approximately 94% of the total resources in Victoria. In 1993 the resource was estimated to be 0·2m. megatonnes, of which about 52,000 megatonnes was economically recoverable. It is young and soft with a water content of 60% to 70%. In the Latrobe Valley section of the region, the thick brown coal seams underlie an area from 10 to 30 km wide extending over approximately 70 km from Yallourn in the west to the south of Sale in the east. It can be won continuously in large quantities and at low cost by specialized mechanical plant.

The primary use of these reserves is to fuel electricity generating stations. Production of brown coal in 1995-96 was 54,281,000 tonnes, value $A465m.

Minerals. Production, 1995-96: Gold, 4,838 kg; (in 1,000 tonnes): Copper concentrate, 8; zinc concentrate, 14; bauxite, 1.

Land Settlement. Of the total area of Victoria (22·76m. ha), 13,973,915 ha on 30 June 1984 were either alienated or in the process of alienation. The remainder (8,786,085) constituted Crown land as follows: Perpetual leases, grazing and other leases and licences, 2,160,352; reservations including forest and timber reserves, water, catchment and drainage purposes, national parks, wildlife reserves, water frontages and other reserves, plus unoccupied and unreserved including areas set aside for roads, 6,625,733.

Agriculture. In 1995-96 there were 36,905 agricultural establishments with a total area of 12,768,000 ha; the gross value of agricultural commodities produced was $A6,388,943,000. The following table shows the area under the principal crops and the produce of each for 2 seasons (in 1,000 units)[1]:

[1]Excluding establishments with an estimated value of agricultural operations less than $A5,000.

In 1995-96 there were 23,104 ha of vineyards with 19,834 ha of bearing vines, yielding 199,325 tonnes of grapes for wine-making and 227,677 tonnes for drying or table use. Other produce (in tonnes), 1995-96: Almonds, 2,907; pears, 141,275; apples, 78,988; oranges, 72,358; kiwi fruit, 2,063; strawberries, 3,279; tobacco (dry), 3,214; tomatoes, 171,805.

Livestock (in 1,000), 1995-96: Beef cattle, 2,714; dairy cattle, 1,682; sheep, 21,944; pigs, 458.

Animal products (in tonnes), 1995-96: Wool clip, 115,672; poultry, 128,000; mutton, 50,910; lamb, 110,172; honey, 4,415; milk, 5,482m. litres; 40·1m. dozen eggs.

Forestry. Of Victoria's 7·3m. ha of native forest (June 1997), 6·2m. ha (85%) were publicly owned and 1·0m. ha (14%) were on private land.

Fisheries. Total live weight production in 1996-97 was 8,438 tonnes with a value of $A78,018,000.

INDUSTRY

The manufacturing industry accounts for 18·7% of production in Victoria with an annual turnover of $A62bn. At 30 June 1996, there were 292,600 persons employed in the manufacturing sector. Selected articles manufactured (in tonnes), 1996–97: Butter and butter oil, 120,041; cheese, 164,079; wheat flour, 227,170; wool yarn, 15,692; wool cloth, 2,674,000 sq. metres; 13,000 vehicles for goods and materials; plastics in primary forms, 825,000; 264m. clay bricks; ready mixed concrete, 3,169,000 cu. metres.

Labour. At May 1997 there were 2,299,200 persons in the labour force (63·3% of the civilian population aged 15 years and over), of whom 2,090,800 were employed: Agriculture, forestry and fishing, 103,400; mining, 3,000; manufacturing, 348,700; electricity, gas and water supply, 14,500; construction, 119,000; wholesale and retail trade, 442,600; transport and storage, 102,300; accommodation, cafes and restaurants, 85,100; communication, 93,100; finance, insurance, property and business services, 309,000; government administration and defence, 75,100; education, 136,800; health and community services, 180,700; culture, recreation, personal and other services, 131,400. There were 208,400 unemployed persons in May 1997 (9·1% of the labour force).

Trade Unions. There were 57 trade unions with a total membership of 680,000 at 30 June 1996.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. The total value of the overseas imports and exports of Victoria, including bullion and specie, was as follows (in $A1m.):

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97

The chief exports in 1996–97 (in $A1m.) were: Dairy products and birds' eggs, 1,427; textile fibres and their wastes, 1,193; non-ferrous metals, 887; meat and meat preparations, 554; petroleum, petroleum products and related materials, 757; road vehicles, 816; cereals and cereal preparations, 589. Exports in 1996–97 (in $A1m.) went mainly to New Zealand, 2,134; Republic of Korea, 2,098; Japan, 1,525; USA, 956; Singapore, 891; Hong Kong, 811; Taiwan, 799; Malaysia, 667.

The chief imports in 1996–97 (in $A1m.) were: Road vehicles, 2,924; general industrial machinery and equipment and machine parts, 1,711; electrical machinery, apparatus and appliances and parts, 1,572; miscellaneous manufactured articles, 1,460; machinery for particular industries, 1,175; telecommunications and sound recording and reproducing apparatus and equipment, 1,052; textile yarns, fabrics, made-up articles and related products, 1,066. Imports in 1996–97 (in $A1m.) came mainly from the USA, 5,945; Japan, 3,097; Germany, 1,922; China, 1,756; the UK, 1,634; New Zealand, 1,247; Italy, 832; Taiwan, 695.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At Jan. 1997 there were 150,468 km of roads open for general traffic, consisting of 1,005 km of National Highways, 6,739 km of state highways and freeways, 14,406 km of main, tourist and forest roads (30 June 1996), and 128,318 km of other roads and streets. The number of registered motor vehicles (other than tractors) at 31 Oct. 1996 was 2,819,174. There were 417 fatalities in road accidents in 1996.

Rail. All the railways are the property of the State and are under the management of the Public Transport Corporation, responsible to the Victorian Government. In 1998 the Victorian Government planned to privatize the V/Line Passenger and V/Line Freight, and Met Trains (providing rail services in metropolitan Victoria) are to be split into 2 separate businesses and offered for sale.

At 30 June 1995, 4,917 km of government railway were open, comprising 3,716 km of 1,600 mm gauge (385 km electrified) and 1,201 km of 1,435 mm gauge. In 1996–97, 8·19m. tonnes of freight were carried and there was a total of 127·2m. passenger boardings (7·3m. non-urban). Melbourne's tramway and light rail network extends to 240 km.

Civil Aviation. There were 11,072,000 domestic and regional passenger movements and 2,421,000 international passenger movements in 1996–97 at Melbourne (Tullamarine) airport. Total freight and mail handled was 340,000 tonnes.

Shipping. The 4 major commercial ports are at Melbourne, Geelong, Portland and Hastings. Together, these ports serviced 3,762 ships with a total trade of 37,329,000 mass tonnes in 1996–97.

Telecommunications. In 1996, almost 97% of households had a telephone connected; 262,000 households used computers to access the Internet.

Postal Services. Postal items handled by Australia Post in Victoria (1996-97): Letters, 1,315·6m.; parcels, 31·1m.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court with a Chief Justice and 21 puisne judges. There are a county court, magistrates' courts, a court of licensing and a bankruptcy court.

The New Prisons Project (NPP) involves replacing the State's ageing prisons with new facilities developed, owned and operated by the private sector. When all 3 private prisons are commissioned, approximately 45% of Victoria's prison population will be accommodated in them.

At March 1997, the average daily number of prisoners was 2,310, with around 85% of these being sentenced prisoners.

Religion. There is no State Church, and no State assistance has been given to religion since 1875. At the 1991 census the following were the enumerated numbers of the principal religions: Catholic, 1,237,399; Anglican, 772,632; Uniting, 342,493 (including Methodist); Orthodox, 199,063; Presbyterian, 193,300; other Christian, 255,375; Moslem, 49,617; Jewish, 33,882; Buddhist, 42,350; no religion, 612,074; not stated, 474,921.

Education. In 1996 there were 1,700 government schools with 517,062 pupils and 34,045 full-time teaching staff plus full-time equivalents of part-time teaching staff: 303,769 pupils were in primary schools and 213,293 in secondary schools. As from 1990 students attending special schools have not been identified separately and have been allocated to either primary or secondary level of education. They are integrated where possible into mainstream education. There were, in 1996, 679 non-government schools, excluding commercial colleges, with 17,295 teaching staff and 259,393 pupils: 130,053 pupils at primary schools and 127,340 pupils at secondary schools.

All higher education institutions, excluding continuing education and technical and further education (TAFE), now fall under the Unified National System, and can no longer be split into universities and colleges of advanced education. In addition, a number of institutional amalgamations and name changes occurred in the 12 months prior to the commencement of the 1992 academic year. In 1996 there were 9 higher education institutions with 175,038 students, and 4 universities: Deakin (founded 1974), La Trobe (1964), Melbourne (1853) and Monash (1958).

Health. In 1995–96 there were 91 public hospitals with 12,332 beds, and 104 private hospitals; 18,147 nurses were employed.

Welfare. Victoria was the first State of Australia to make a statutory provision for the payment of Age Pensions. The Act providing for the payment of such pensions came into operation on 18 Jan. 1901, and continued until 1 July 1909, when the Australian Invalid and Old Age Pension Act came into force. The Social Services Consolidation Act, which came into operation on 1 July 1947, repealed the various legislative enactments relating to age (previously old-age) and invalid pensions, maternity allowances, child endowment, unemployment, and sickness benefits and while following in general the Acts repealed, considerably liberalized many of their provisions; it has since been amended. On 30 June 1996 there were 410,122 age and 115,580 invalid pensioners. In 1994–95, the amounts paid in age and invalid pensions (including payments to 12,177 wives and spouse carers of age pensioners and 31,394 of invalid pensioners) were $A3,035,432,000 and $A1,056,769,000 respectively.

Under the Australian Unemployment and Sickness Benefit Act 1944, payments were made to (1995–96): 205,458 unemployment claimants, 8,796 sickness, 75,144 supporting parents and 5,682 special benefits.

At 30 June 1996, there were 12,982 widow pensioners.

In 1995–96, 441,065 received family allowance and there were 22,730 recipients of child disability allowance.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1993–94 there were 77 businesses providing television services and radio services. There were 3 public broadcasters in radio and 2 in television.

Cinema. During the year ended March 1995, 2,220,200 people attended cinema screenings.

Tourism. In 1996, the number of short-term overseas visitors to Australia who specified Victoria as their main destination was 543,094 (13% of total overseas visitors to Australia), with 379,515 nominating 'holiday' or 'visiting friends' as purpose of their visit. New Zealand represented the major source of international visitors with 19·3%; UK and Ireland (10·7%), USA (9·9%) and Japan (8·5%).

Libraries. During the year ended March 1995, 1,288,700 people visited national, State or local libraries. The largest category of cultural funding for Victorian Local Government was libraries and archives, accounting for 43% of total funding.

Museums and Galleries. In the year to March 1995, 1,679,200 people visited museums and galleries.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1791, the British navigator George Vancouver took formal possession of the country around King George Sound. In 1826 the Government of New South Wales sent 20 convicts and a detachment of soldiers to King George Sound and formed a settlement then called Frederickstown. The following year, Capt. James Stirling surveyed the coast from King George Sound to the Swan River, and in May 1829 Capt. Charles Fremantle took possession of the territory. In June 1829, Capt. Stirling founded the Swan River Settlement (now the Commonwealth State of Western Australia) and the towns of Perth and Fremantle and was appointed Lieut.-Governor.

Large grants of land were made to the early settlers and agricultural and pastoral occupations were pursued by a small population with varying success until, in 1850, with the colony languishing, the inhabitants' petition that it be made a penal settlement was acceded to. Between 1850 and 1868 (in which year transportation ceased), 9,668 convicts were sent out. In 1870, partially representative government was instituted, and in 1890 the administration was vested in the Governor, a legislative council and a legislative assembly. The legislative council was, in the first instance, nominated by the Governor but in 1893 it became elective. Western Australia federated with the other Australian states to form the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901.

In the 1914-18 war, Western Australia provided more volunteers for overseas military service in proportion to population than any other State (possibly because Western Australia had a higher proportion of British migrants and single men).

The worldwide depression of 1929 brought widespread unemployment (30% of trade union membership), and in 1933, over two-thirds voted to leave the Federation. While there were modest improvements in the standard of living through the 1930s, it was the 1939-45 war which brought regular employment for all.

Japanese aircraft attacked the Western Australia coast in 1942. Talk of a 'Brisbane line', which would abandon the West to invasion only served to reinforce Western Australia's sense of isolation from the rest of the nation. The post-war years saw increasing demand for wheat and wool but the 1954-55 decline in farm incomes led to diversification. Work began in the early 1950s on steel production and oil processing. Oil was discovered in 1953 but it was not until 1966 that it was commercially exploited. The discovery of deposits of iron ore in the Pilbara, bauxite in the Darling scarp, nickel in Kambalda and ilmenite from mineral sands led to the State becoming a major world supplier of mineral exports by 1965.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Western Australia lies between 113° 09' and 129° E. long. and 13° 44' and 35° 08' S. lat.; its area is 2,525,500 sq. km.

The population at each census from 1947 was as follows[1]:

	Males	Females	Total		Males	Females	Total
1947	258,076	244,404	502,480	1976	599,959	578,383	1,178,342
1954	330,358	309,413	639,771	1981	659,249	642,807	1,300,056
1961	375,452	361,177	736,629	1986	736,131	722,888	1,459,019
1966	432,569	415,531	848,100	1991	793,626	792,767	1,586,393
1971	539,332	514,502	1,053,834	1996	862,645	863,450	1,726,095

[1]1961 and earlier exclude persons of predominantly Aboriginal descent; from 1966 figures refer to total population (i.e., including Aborigines). Figures from 1971 are based on estimated resident population.

The population at the 1996 census was 1,726,095. Of the total 1996 census population, 1,178,331 were born in Australia. Married persons numbered 710,468 (355,594 males and 354,874 females); widowers, 13,656; widows, 59,635; divorced, 39,624 males and 48,986 females; never married, 233,048 males and 186,081 females. Estimated resident population at 30 June 1997 was 1,798,129 (893,720 females).

Perth, the capital, had an estimated resident population of 1,318,974 at 30 June 1997.

Principal local government areas outside the metropolitan area, with population at 30 June 1997 (estimate): Mandurah, 42,072; Kalgoorlie-Boulder, 30,488; Bunbury, 27,664; Geraldton, 20,295; Busselton, 19,188; Albany, 15,503; Roebourne, 13,985; Port Hedland, 12,823.

CLIMATE

Western Australia is a region of several climate zones, ranging from the tropical north to the semi-arid interior and Mediterranean-style climate of the south west. Most of the State is a plateau between 300 and 600 metres above sea level. Except in the far south west coast, maximum temperatures in excess of 40°C have been recorded throughout the State. The normal average number of sunshine hours per day is 8·0 hours.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In 1870 partially representative government was instituted, and in 1890 the administration was vested in the Governor, a Legislative Council and a Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Council was, in the first instance, nominated by the Governor, but it was provided that in the event of the population of the colony reaching 60,000, it should be elective. In 1893 this limit of population being reached, the Colonial Parliament amended the Constitution accordingly.

The Legislative Council consists of 34 members elected for a term of 4 years. There are 6 electoral regions for Legislative Council elections. 4 return 5 members and 2, 7 members. Each member represents the entire region.

There are 57 members of the Legislative Assembly, each member representing one of the 57 electoral districts of the State. Members are elected for the duration of the Assembly which may be for a period of up to 4 years. The qualifications applying to candidates and electors are identical for the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. A candidate must be at least 18 years of age and free from legal incapacity, be an Australian citizen, and be enrolled, or qualified for enrolment, as an elector. A member of the Commonwealth Parliament or of the legislature of a territory or another state, an undischarged bankrupt or a debtor against whose estate there is a subsisting receiving order in bankruptcy, or a person who has been attainted or convicted of treason or felony is disqualified from membership of the legislature. No person may hold office as a member of the Legislative Assembly and the Legislative Council at the same time. An elector must be at least 18 years of age, be an Australian citizen (or a British subject who was at some time within the 3 months preceding 26 Jan. 1984 an elector of the Assembly or the Commonwealth parliament), be free from legal incapacity, and must have resided in Western Australia for 3 months continuously, and in the electoral district for which he or she claims enrolment for a continuous period of 1 month immediately preceding the date of his or her claim. Enrolment is compulsory for all qualified persons. Voting at elections is on the preferential system and is compulsory for all enrolled persons. A system of proportional representation is used to elect members of the Legislative Council.

Ordinary members of the legislature were paid (1998) a salary of $A82,663 a year with an additional electorate allowance, ranging from $A19,512 to $A36,099 a year according to location of the electorate. All members of Parliament also receive a basic postage and lettergram allowance of $A6,000.

In addition to the basic member's salary, electorate and postage allowances, the Premier receives (1998) a salary and expense of office allowances of $A108,289. On the same basis the Deputy Premier receives $A80,183; the Leader of the Government in the Legislative Council $A74,397; and other ministers $A66,130.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Legislative Assembly representation after the Dec. 1996 election: Liberal Party, 29; Australian Labor Party, 19; National Party of Australia, 6; Independent, 3. Legislative Council: Liberal Party, 14; Australian Labor Party, 12; National Party of Australia, 3; Greens (Western Australia), 3; Australian Democrats, 2.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Maj.-Gen. Philip Michael Jeffery, AC, AO, MC.

Lieut-Governor: David Kingsley Malcolm, AC.

In Feb. 1999 the Cabinet comprised:

Premier, Treasurer, Minister for Public Sector Management, and for Federal Affairs: Richard F. Court.

Deputy Premier, Minister for Commerce and Trade, Regional Development and Small Business: Hendy Cowan. Resources Development and Energy, Education, Leader of the House in the Legislative Assembly: Colin James Barnett. Primary Industry and Fisheries: Monty House. Mines, Tourism, Sport and Recreation: Norman Moore. Transport: Murray Griddle. Environment, Labour Relations: Cheryl Edwardes. Finance, Racing and Gaming: Max Evans. Lands, Fair Trading, Parliamentary and Electoral Affairs: Doug J. Shave. Police, Emergency Services: Kevin Prince. Attorney-General, Justice, the Arts: Peter Foss. Planning, Employment and Training, Heritage: Graham Kierath. Housing, Aboriginal Affairs, Water Resources: Kim D. Hames. Health: John H. Day. Works, Services, Citizenship and Multicultural Interests, Youth: Mike F. Board. Family and Children's Services, Seniors' and Women's Interests: Rhonda K. Parker. Local Government, Disability Services: Paul Omodei.

Local Government. Including the lord mayoralty of the City of Perth, there were 20 cities, 12 towns and 112 shires as at 30 Jan. 1999. The executive body in each of these authorities is an elected council, consisting of councillors and presided over by a mayor (city and town) or a president (shire). The mayor or president can be elected by the people or by their fellow councillors. The Western Australian Local Government Act 1995 prescribes that an elected council, including the mayor or president, cannot be less than 6 members nor more than 15. In extraordinary circumstances, the Governor may appoint commissioners to perform the decision-making functions of a local government. The functions of local government include the provision of community services, sporting and recreation facilities, the upkeep of parks, road construction, town planning, building control and refuse removal. Finance is derived largely from rates levied on property owners. Funds are also derived from Commonwealth Government grants as well as charges for council services.

ECONOMY

Budget. Revenue and expenditure (in $A1m.), as reported in the Consolidated Revenue Fund, in years ended 30 June:

	1995	1996	1997	1998
Revenue	6,020·6	7,152·9	7,023·6	7,095·8
Expenditure	5,998·1	7,152·9	6,864·7	7,613·9

Main items of revenue in 1997–98: Departmental ($A1,339·6m.), taxation ($A2,383·2m.), timber and mining ($A661·5m.), from Commonwealth funds ($A3,069·2m.). Western Australia had a gross operating surplus of $A1,385·4m. on 30 June 1998 (including $A229·3m. from Public Trading Enterprises, $A640·0m. from General Government). The Financial Enterprises Sector had a deficit of $A141·6m.

Banking and Finance. At 30 June 1998, there were 18 banks operating in Western Australia.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The Office of Energy was established to administer energy policy and regulatory functions previously managed by the State Electricity Commission of Western Australia (SECWA), which was split into 2 corporate utilities in 1995 (Western Power and AlintaGas). The Office of Energy reports directly to the Minister of Energy and provides advice on policy and coordinates economic and commercial issues in the Western Australian energy sector. Deregulation of the energy industry was passed by the Office of Energy during 1996-97. The gradual introduction of the Electricity Transmission Open Access Plan commenced on 1 July 1997, allowing independent generators to supply associated loads by utilizing Western Power's transmission system. Electricity users now have the option of obtaining power from Western Power or private sector operators.

Oil and Gas. Petroleum has been the State's most valuable contributor to the resource sector for the second year, with a record production rate for oil, gas and condensate, increasing the value of output by 24% to $A4,693m. in 1996. The State accounted for approximately 51% of Australia's total crude oil and condensate, and 48% of gas production in 1996, making Western Australia the main producer of petroleum in Australia. In 1996, 45% of Western Australia's crude oil production was exported overseas. Of this proportion, most went to Asia.

The value of Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG) output increased just over 0·5% in 1996, to $A1,391m. Almost all LNG was exported to Japan; however, new markets are opening up within other Asian countries. The value of natural gas production increased 11% in 1996 to $A495m. This was due to the commencement of production from the East Spar subsea gas gathering system. The first full year's production from a new $A300m. liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) plant occurred in 1996, with approximately 310,000 tonnes of LPG worth $A41m. produced.

Water. The administration of Western Australia's water resources is the responsibility of the Water and Rivers Commission, and the Water Corporation is the primary provider of services. The operation and activities of the Water Corporation are monitored by the Office of Water Regulation. According to the Water Corporation Annual Report 1997, there were 460,739 metropolitan and 157,121 country services connected to the water supply system.

Minerals. Mining is a significant contributor to the Western Australia economy. Until the mid-1960s the major mineral produced was gold. It was then replaced by iron ore in terms of value, and has at various times fallen behind nickel concentrates, bauxite, oil, mineral sands and salt. In the latter half of the 1980s gold enjoyed a resurgence and has continued to exceed iron ore in value terms (with the exception of 1991-92 and 1992-93).

The total ex-mine value of minerals from mining and quarrying in 1996 was $A15,956m. Principal minerals produced in 1996 were: Gold, 221,033 kg (value $A3,526·3m.); iron ore, 133·7m. tonnes ($A2,924·5m.); crude oil, 16,255 megalitres ($A2,732·5m.); bauxite-alumina, 8·2m. tonnes ($A1,974·4m.); liquefied natural gas, 377,819m. gigajoules ($A1,391·2m.); nickel concentrates, 0·8m. tonnes ($A1,033·9m.); heavy mineral sands concentrates, 2·0m. tonnes ($A598·1m.); natural gas, 6,623 gigalitres ($A494·7m.); diamonds, 47·4m. carats ($A442·0m.); coal, 5·8m. tonnes ($A268·4m.); salt, 7·2m. tonnes ($A143·3m.).

Agriculture.

	1996		1997
Crop	Area 1,000 ha	Production 1,000 tonnes	Area 1,000 ha	Production 1,000 tonnes

Production, 1997 (in tonnes), apples, 38,217·9; pears, 9,931·7; oranges, 5,307·5.

Livestock at 31 March 1997 (in 1,000): Cattle, 1,786·8; sheep and lambs, 27,821·1; pigs, 297·4.

The wool clip in 1997 was 159,981 tonnes.

Forestry. The area of State forests and timber reserves at 30 June 1997 was 1,725,036 ha; production of sawn timber was 1,036,466 cu. metres in 1994-95. Jarrah and Karri hardwoods account for 69·0% and pine accounts for 28·9% of sawn timber production.

Fisheries. The total fisheries production in 1996–97 was 44,673 tonnes and was worth $A568·5m. Of this, over half was from crustaceans, with a total catch of 14,699 tonnes and a value of $A308·3m. Pearling was also a significant contributor, producing $A171·4m. worth of pearls, or 30% of the total value of Western Australia's fishing production.

INDUSTRY

Heavy industry is concentrated in the south-west, and is largely tied to export-orientated mineral processing, especially alumina and nickel. Other significant manufacturing industries include meat and seafood processing, production of timber and wood products, metal fabrication and production of industrial and mining machinery. The North West Shelf development has stimulated recent growth in industries involved in providing materials and equipment during the construction phase, as well as in new and existing industries using gas in processing.

The following table shows manufacturing industry statistics for 1996–97:

Industry sub-division	Number of establishments operating at 30 June	Persons employed[1] 1,000	Wages and salaries $A1m.	Turnover $A1m.

[1]At 30 June. Includes working proprietors.

Labour. The labour force comprised 886,700 employed and 69,600 unemployed persons in June 1998. The average weekly wage in May 1998 was $A572·00 (males $A741·30, females $A406·10).

The Western Australian Industrial Appeal Court consists of 3 Judges, one of whom is the Presiding Judge. The members are nominated by the Chief Justice of Western Australia. An appeal lies to the Court from decisions of the President of the Western Australian Industrial Commission, the Full Bench or the Commission in Court Session. The Western Australian Industrial Commission consists of a President (who must be a judge), a Chief Industrial Commissioner, a Senior Commissioner, and 'such number of other Commissioners as may, from time to time, be necessary'. The President or a Commissioner sitting or acting alone constitutes the Commission and may exercise the appropriate powers of the Commission. The Commission can inquire into any industrial matter and make an award, order or declaration relating to such matter. The Commission may also make inquiries where industrial action has occurred or is likely to occur. The Commission in Court Session is constituted by not less than 3 Commissioners sitting or acting together, and may make General Orders, hear matters referred by the Commission, and hear appeals from decisions of Boards of Reference.

The Full Bench is constituted by not less than 3 members of the Commission, 1 of whom is the President, and may hear matters referred by the Commission on questions of law, and appeals from decisions of the Commission and Industrial Magistrates.

The following table shows details of the number of industrial awards, unions and members registered with the Western Australian Industrial Commission.

At 30 June	1995	1996	1997	1998
Awards in force	887	1,315	1,661	1,899
Employee organizations:

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At 30 June 1997 there were 142,001 km of sealed and unsealed roads comprising 10,780 km of highways, 6,548 km of main roads and 124,672 km of local roads. Of these, 45,459 km are sealed. In addition, there are 29,169 km of unsealed roads in forests and national parks.

New motor vehicles registered during the year ended 30 June 1998 were 81,455.

In 1996 there were 241 fatalities in road accidents.

Rail. At 30 June 1998 the State had 5,369 km of State government railway. In 1997–98 state railways carried 32·8m. tonnes of paying goods and 250,000 passengers on country rail.

Civil Aviation. An extensive system of regular air services operates for passengers, freight and mail. In 1996 Perth International handled 4,448,000 passengers (1,365,000 on international flights), and in 1995, 62,500 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. In 1997–98, the Port of Fremantle handled 1,910 vessels; Port Hedland, 634. The gross weight (in tonnes) of overseas cargo through those ports was: Port of Fremantle, 9,019,000 discharged, 12,606,000 loaded; Port Hedland, 346,484 discharged, 69,486,555 loaded.

Postal Services. In 1995, the Australia Post Corporation had 441 outlets and 722,114 delivery points in Western Australia.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by a Supreme Court, consisting of a Chief Justice, 16 other judges and 2 masters; a District Court comprising a chief judge and 20 other judges; a Magistrates Court, a Chief Stipendiary Magistrate, 37 Stipendiary Magistrates and Justices of the Peace. All courts exercise both civil and criminal jurisdiction except Justices of the Peace who deal with summary criminal matters only. Juvenile offenders are dealt with by the Children's Court. Overall responsibility for the Children's Court is vested in a President, who has the status of a District Court Judge. A children's court may be constituted by a judge, a magistrate or 2 lay members. Each has different sentencing powers. For certain offences involving first offenders under the age of 16 years who have pleaded guilty, such cases may be dealt with by the Children's (suspended Proceedings) Panel which comprises a representative from the Department for Community Services and one from the Police Department. The Family Court also forms part of the justice system and comprises a Chief Judge, 4 other judges, 7 magistrates/registrars, and exercises both State and Federal jurisdictions.

In 1997–98 (1996–97), 254,543 (242,757) crimes were reported and 78,498 (72,593) were cleared.

Religion. At the census, 6 Aug. 1996, the principal denominations were: Catholic, 427,848; Anglican, 410,233; Uniting, 87,549; Presbyterian and Reformed, 45,761; Baptist, 27,618; other Christian, 126,041. There were 48,294 persons practising non-Christian religions and 367,491 persons had no religion.

Education. School attendance is compulsory from the age of 6 until the end of the year in which the child attains 15 years. A non-compulsory year of education is available to children from the beginning of the year in which they reach 5 years of age, at pre-primary centres attached to most government primary schools, or at community-based and privately owned pre-school centres, and at some non-government schools. Children may be enrolled during their fourth year where vacancies exist. In 1997 there were 767 government primary and secondary schools (with 14,335 teaching staff) providing free education to 226,075 students, and 276 non-government primary and secondary schools (with 5,649 teaching staff) providing education, for which fees are charged, to 85,007 students.

Technical and Further Education (TAFE) is offered by the Department of TAFE, a sub-department of the Ministry of Education, and by three independent regional colleges. The latter also provide higher education facilities. Additionally, higher education is available through 4 state universities and 1 private (Notre Dame).

Tertiary education (1996): University of Western Australia (13,132 students); Murdoch University (8,524); Curtin University of Technology (21,240); Edith Cowan University (18,458).

State and local government current outlay on education during the year ended 30 June 1997 amounted to $A1,120,392.

Health. At Jan. 1999 there were 91 acute public hospitals, 28 acute private hospitals and 11 day hospitals.

Welfare. The Department for Community Development is responsible for the provision of welfare and community services throughout the State. Operations and planning are managed through a decentralized structure of 5 regions and 21 districts. There are 8 directorates (2 support, 1 special services and 5 regional).

Direct services provided to the community include emergency financial assistance, family and substitute care, and counselling and psychological services. The Department supervises children's Day Care Centres. There is a 24-hour emergency welfare service provided through the Crisis Care Unit. Specialist units work in the areas of child abuse, adoptions, youth activities and Family Court counselling.

The Department provides residential facilities for the temporary accommodation, care and training of children, is responsible for young offenders recommended for detention or remand by a Court, and also supervises young offenders subject to non-custodial court orders.

Age, invalid, widows', disability and service pensions, and unemployment benefits, are paid by the Federal Government. The number of pensioners in Western Australia at 30 June 1997 was: Age, 135,182; widows, 2,971; disability, 44,160; service, 31,731 (1996); sole parents, 35,316. There were 75,528 recipients of unemployment benefits at 30 June 1997, comprising 4,892 recipients of Mature Age Allowance, 2,723 of Youth Training Allowance and 65,913 of Newstart Allowance.

Funding of $A16·84m. was provided to 108 services throughout the State to assist people in crisis due to domestic violence or youth/adult homelessness. Of this, $A9·9m. was allocated to provide supported accommodation and assistance.

CULTURE

Tourism. In 1997–98 there were 402,400 short-term overseas visitors. Of these, 81,390 were from the UK and Ireland, and 73,140 from Singapore. Nearly a quarter of the 205,550 short-term visitors who arrived by air for holidays were from Singapore. In June 1998, there were 293 hotels, motels, guest houses and serviced apartments.

Festivals. The Festival of Perth is the oldest and largest annual international arts festival in the southern hemisphere. It is held annually for 3½ weeks in Feb. and March.

Libraries. The Libraries and Information Service of Western Australia (LISWA) within the Ministry for Culture and the Arts is responsible for delivering library archival and information services to the people of Western Australia. The State Reference Library is situated in the Alexander Library in the Perth Cultural Centre. Also located in the Alexander Library Building is the J. S. Battye Library of Western Australian History.

The provision of public library services is a partnership between LISWA and local government authorities. Through its Public Library Services Program, LISWA provides and maintains the bookstock and other resource materials for public libraries throughout the State.

Museums and Galleries. The Western Australian Museum was established in the early 1890s, and its headquarters and principal exhibition centre is located in the Perth Cultural Centre, with branches in Fremantle (Fremantle History Museum including Samson House, and the Western Australian Maritime Museum incorporating the Historic Boats Museum), Albany, Geraldton and Kalgoorlie. During 1996, a total of 836,303 visitors, of which 81,984 were school students, visited the various museum sites. The Art Gallery of Western Australia is the oldest visual arts organization in the State, having acquired its first work of art in 1895. The Gallery is located in the Perth Cultural Centre and is housed in 2 buildings: the Main Galleries and the adjoining Centenary Galleries. The Gallery collects for, and maintains, the State Art Collection, comprising Western Australian, Australian and international works, with a particular emphasis on Western Australian and Aboriginal art.

AUSTRALIAN EXTERNAL TERRITORIES

AUSTRALIAN ANTARCTIC TERRITORY

An Imperial Order in Council of 7 Feb. 1933 placed under Australian authority all the islands and territories other than Adélie Land situated south of 60° S. lat. and lying between 160° E. long. and 45° E. long. The Order came into force with a Proclamation issued by the Governor-General on 24 Aug. 1936 after the passage of the Australian Antarctic Territory Acceptance Act 1933. The boundaries of Adélie Land were definitively fixed by a French Decree of 1 April 1938 as the islands and territories south of 60° S. lat. lying between 136° E. long. and 142° E. long. The Australian Antarctic Territory Act 1954 declared that the laws in force in the Australian Capital Territory are, so far as they are applicable and are not inconsistent with any ordinance made under the Act, in force in the Australian Antarctic Territory.

The area of the territory is estimated at 6,119,818 sq. km (2,362,875 sq. miles).

There is a research station on MacRobertson Land at lat. 67° 37' S. and long. 62° 52' E. (Mawson), one on the coast of Princess Elizabeth Land at lat. 68° 34' S. and long. 77° 58' E. (Davis), and one at lat. 66° 17' S. and long. 110° 32' E. (Casey). The Antarctic Division also operates a station on Macquarie Island.

COCOS (KEELING) ISLANDS

GENERAL DETAILS

The Cocos (Keeling) Islands are 2 separate atolls comprising some 27 small coral islands with a total area of about 14·2 sq. km, and are situated in the Indian Ocean at 12° 05' S. lat. and 96° 53' E. long. They lie 2,768 km north-west of Perth and 3,685 km west of Darwin.

The main islands are West Island (the largest, about 10 km from north to south), on which there is an airport and an animal quarantine station, and most of the European community; Hom e Island, occupied by the Cocos Malay community; Direction, South and Horsburgh Islands, and North Keeling Island, 24 km to the north of the group. The islands were discovered in 1609 by Capt. William Keeling but remained uninhabited until 1826. In 1857 the islands were annexed to the Crown; in 1878 responsibility was transferred from the Colonial Office to the Government of Ceylon, and in 1886 to the Government of the Straits Settlement. By indenture in 1886, Queen Victoria granted all land in the islands to George Clunies-Ross and his heirs in perpetuity (with certain rights reserved to the Crown). In 1903 the islands were incorporated in the Settlement of Singapore and in 1942–46 were temporarily placed under the Governor of Ceylon. In 1946 a Resident Administrator, responsible to the Governor of Singapore, was appointed.

On 23 Nov. 1955 the Cocos Islands were placed under the authority of the Australian Government as the Territory of Cocos (Keeling) Islands. An Administrator, appointed by the Governor-General, is the Government's representative in the Territory and is responsible to the Minister for Territories and Local Government. The Cocos (Keeling) Islands Council, established as the elected body of the Cocos Malay community in July 1979, advises the Administrator on all issues affecting the Territory.

In 1978 the Australian Government purchased the Clunies-Ross family's entire interests in the islands, except for the family residence. A Cocos Malay co-operative was established to take over the running of the Clunies-Ross copra plantation and to engage in other business with the Commonwealth in the Territory, including construction projects. In 1993 the Australian Government took control of the Clunies-Ross family residence also.

The population of the Territory (1994) was 670, distributed between Home Island (75%) and West Island (25%).

The islands are low-lying, flat and thickly covered by coconut palms, and surround a lagoon in which ships drawing up to 7 metres may be anchored, but which is extremely difficult for navigation.

There is an equable and pleasant climate, affected for much of the year by the south-east trade winds. Temperatures range over the year from 68° F (20° C) to 88° F (31·1° C) and rainfall averages 80" (2,000 mm) a year.

The Cocos (Keeling) Islands Act 1955 is the basis of the Territory's administrative, legislative and judicial systems. Under section 8 of this Act, those laws which were in force in the Territory immediately before the transfer continued in force there.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Administrator: Bill Taylor.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 15 km of roads.

Civil Aviation. In 1998 National Jet operated scheduled flights to Christmas Island and Perth.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. About 85% are Moslems and 15% Christians.

Education. In 1992 there were 2 primary schools (on Home Island and West Island) with 98 pupils and 7 teachers and 1 teaching assistant, 2 secondary schools with 70 pupils and 9 teachers and 1 teaching assistant, and 29 students in a technical school.

Health. In 1992 there was 1 doctor and 7 nursing personnel, with 5 beds in clinics.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND

GENERAL DETAILS

Christmas Island is an isolated peak in the Indian Ocean, lat. 10° 25' 22" S., long. 105° 39' 59" E. It lies 360 km S. 8° E. of Java Head, and 417 km N. 79° E. from Cocos Islands, 1,310 km from Singapore and 2,623 km from Fremantle. Area about 135 sq. km. The climate is tropical with temperatures varying little over the year at 27° C. The wet season lasts from Nov. to April with an annual total of about 2,673 mm. The island was formally annexed by the UK on 6 June 1888, placed under the administration of the Governor of the Straits Settlements in 1889, and incorporated with the Settlement of Singapore in 1900. Sovereignty was transferred to the Australian Government on 1 Oct. 1958. The population at the 1991 census was 1,275; 1994 estimate, 2,500 of whom 1,300 were of Chinese, 400 of Malay and 800 of Australian/European origin.

The legislative, judicial and administrative systems are regulated by the Christmas Island Act, 1958–73. They are the responsibility of the Commonwealth Government and are operated by an Administrator. The Territory underwent major changes to its legal system when the Federal Parliament passed the Territories Law Reform Bill of 1992; Commonwealth and State laws applying in the state of Western Australia now apply in the Territory as a result, although some laws have been repealed to take into account the unique status of the Territory. The first Island Assembly was elected in Sept. 1985, and is now replaced by the elected members of the Christmas Island Shire Council.

Extraction and export of rock phosphate dust is the main industry. The Government is also encouraging the private sector development of tourism.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Administrator: Bill Taylor.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Production (1994–95) 20m. kWh.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1993 there were 205 km of roads, 917 passenger cars and 362 commercial vehicles.

Civil Aviation. In 1998 National Jet operated scheduled flights to Perth and Cocos Island.

Shipping. In 1991, 40,000 tonnes of cargo were loaded and 45,600 tonnes discharged at the port. 2,000 cu. metres of general cargo were also discharged.

Postal Services. There was one post office in 1992.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. About 50% are Buddhists or Taoists, 16% Moslems and 30% Christians.

Education. In 1995 there was a district high school with 50 pre-primary, 369 primary and 73 secondary level pupils.

Health. In 1994 there were 2 doctors, a visiting dentist, a pharmacist, and 1 hospital with 10 beds.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1992 there were 1,500 radio receivers. A local radio and television station operate 24 hours per day.

NORFOLK ISLAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The island was formerly part of the colony of New South Wales and then of Van Diemen's Land. It was a penal colony between 1788–1814 and 1825–55. In 1856 it received all 194 descendants of the Bounty mutineers from Pitcairn Island. It has been a distinct settlement since 1856, under the jurisdiction of the state of New South Wales; and finally by the passage of the Norfolk Island Act 1913, it was accepted as a Territory of the Australian Government. The Norfolk Island Act 1957 is the basis of the Territory's legislative, administrative and judicial systems.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Situated 29° 02' S. lat. 167° 57' E. long.; area 3,455 ha; population (June 1993), 1,896. Descendants of the Bounty mutineer families constitute the 'original' settlers and are known locally as 'Islanders', while later settlers, mostly from Australia, New Zealand and the UK, are identified as 'mainlanders'. Over the years the Islanders have preserved their own lifestyle and customs, and their language remains a mixture of West Country English, Gaelic and Tahitian.

CLIMATE

Sub-tropical. Summer temperatures (Dec.-March) average about 75°F (25°C), and 65°F (18°C) in winter (June-Sept.). Annual rainfall is approximately 50" (1,200 mm), most of which falls in winter.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

An Administrator, appointed by the Governor-General and responsible to the Minister for Territories and Local Government, is the senior government representative in the Territory. The Norfolk Island Act 1979 gives Norfolk Island responsible legislative and executive government to enable it to run its own affairs to the greatest practicable extent. Wide powers are exercised by the Norfolk Island Legislative Assembly of 9 members, elected for a period of 3 years, and by an Executive Council, comprising the executive members of the Legislative Assembly, who have ministerial-type responsibilities. The seat of administration is Kingston, the only major settlement. The Act preserves the Commonwealth's responsibility for Norfolk Island as a Territory under its authority, indicating Parliament's intention that consideration would be given to an extension of the powers of the Legislative Assembly and the political and administrative institutions of Norfolk Island within 5 years. Some powers were transferred in 1985 and further transfers are being considered.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the last elections, on 30 April 1997, only non-partisans were elected.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor-General: A. J. Messner. Administrator: Alan Gardner Kerr.

ECONOMY

The office of the Administrator is financed from Commonwealth expenditure which in 1991–92 was approximately $A493,000; local revenue for 1990–91 totalled $A6,411,000; expenditure, $A6,222,000. Public revenue is derived mainly from tourism, the sale of postage stamps, customs duties, liquor sales and company registration and licence fees. Residents are not liable for income tax on earnings within the Territory, nor are death and personal stamp duties levied.

Currency. Australian notes and coins are the legal currency.

Banking and Finance. There are 2 banks, Westpac and the Commonwealth Bank of Australia.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are 80 km of roads (53 km paved), some 2,000 passenger cars and 100 commercial vehicles.

Civil Aviation. In 1998 there were scheduled flights to Auckland, Brisbane and Sydney, with Air New Zealand, Ansett Australia, Flight West Airlines and National Jet.

Postal Services. There is one post office located in Burnt Pines.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The island's Supreme Court sits as required and a Court of Petty Sessions exercises both civil and criminal jurisdiction.

Religion. 40% of the population are Anglicans.

Education. A school is run by the New South Wales Department of Education covering pre-school to 10th year. It had 322 pupils at 30 June 1990.

Health. In 1985 there were 2 doctors, a pharmacist and a hospital with 20 beds.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1984 there were 400 television receivers and, in 1987, 1,500 radio receivers.

Press. There is one weekly with a circulation of 1,200.

Tourism. In 1991–92, 27,351 visitors travelled to Norfolk Island.

HEARD AND McDONALD ISLANDS

These islands, about 2,500 miles south-west of Fremantle, were transferred from UK to Australian control as from 26 Dec. 1947. Heard Island is about 43 km long and 21 km wide; Shag Island is about 8 km north of Heard. The total area is 412 sq. km (159 sq. miles). The McDonald Islands are 42 km to the west of Heard. In 1985–88 a major research programme was set up by the Australian National Antarctic Research Expeditions to investigate the wildlife as part of international studies of the Southern Ocean ecosystem. Subsequent expeditions followed from June 1990 through to 1992.

TERRITORY OF ASHMORE AND CARTIER ISLANDS

By Imperial Order in Council of 23 July 1931, Ashmore Islands (known as Middle, East and West Islands) and Cartier Island, situated in the Indian Ocean, some 320 km off the north-west coast of Australia (area, 5 sq. km), were placed under the authority of the Commonwealth. Under the Ashmore and Cartier Islands Acceptance Act, 1933, the islands were accepted by the Commonwealth as the Territory of Ashmore and Cartier Islands. It was the intention that the Territory should be administered by the State of Western Australia but owing to administrative difficulties the Territory was deemed to form part of the Northern Territory of Australia (by amendment to the Act in 1938). On 16 Aug. 1983 Ashmore Reef was declared a National Nature Reserve. The islands are uninhabited but Indonesian fishing boats fish within the Territory and land to collect water in accordance with an agreement between the governments of Australia and Indonesia.

TERRITORY OF CORAL SEA ISLANDS

The Coral Sea Islands which became a Territory of the Commonwealth of Australia under the Coral Sea Islands Act 1969 comprises scattered reefs and islands over a sea area of about 1m. sq. km. The Territory is uninhabited apart from a meteorological station on Willis Island.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Governed by the Hapsburgs from 1282, Austria served thereafter as the centre of their expanding power and empire, an empire which lasted until 1918. At their greatest extent under Charles V (1519-55) the Hapsburg dominions included part of Hungary (wholly conquered from the Turks in 1688), Belgium, Italian territories, Spain and its vast empire. Spain was soon separated, and the Hapsburgs struggled to gain international recognition of their dynastic holdings. The Pragmatic Sanction of 1713 was only partially successful in this, but the Empire survived the War of the Austrian Succession (1740-63). Polish territory was annexed in 1772 and 1795. The Empire, represented by Prince Metternich at the Congress of Vienna, in 1815, recovered the influence in Germany and Italy it had lost during the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars. It remained the major power in Central Europe till defeated in 1866 by Prussia and her German allies, a position confirmed by the unification of Germany in 1870-71 under Prussian leadership. Hungarian nationalism, the main obstacle to the integration of the Empire, was in 1867 appeased by the Ausgleich or Compromise; the state became known as the Dual Monarchy of Austria-Hungary.

As national feeling spread to the other peoples in the Empire, politics turned increasingly on national rivalries and aspirations. Tension was particularly high among the Serbs of Bosnia (annexed 1908) who looked to the independent state of Serbia. It was at Sarajevo in Bosnia on 28 June 1914 that the heir to the throne, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, was assassinated by Serbian nationalists, an event that triggered the First World War. The Empire, allied with Germany, suffered severely in the war, with 1·2m. dead out of a population of 52m. In 1918 the Empire disintegrated into its national units.

The Treaty of St Germain (1919) left substantial populations of German speakers in Italy and Czechoslovakia. The federal constitution of 5 Oct 1920 introduced proportional representation; Christian Socialists dominated the governments (except for 1929-30) until 1938. But the Socialists were strong, and the general strike of July 1927 and the rising of Feb. 1934 induced Chancellor Dolfuss to end parliamentary democracy and introduce Fatherland Front backed by the paramilitary Heimwehr. The Nazis who assassinated Dolfuss on 25 July 1934 helped to bring about the Anschluss or Union with Germany, which was achieved by a German invasion on 12 March 1938. Until 1945 Austria was Ostmark, a province of the Third Reich.

Although the 1943 Moscow Conference of Allied Foreign Ministers regarded Austria as the first victim of German aggression, Austria was occupied by Britain, France, USA and USSR (and paid reparations over a ten-year period). Independence came with the Austrian State Treaty of 15 May 1955.

Austria became a member of the European Union on 1 Jan. 1995.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Austria is bounded in the north by Germany and the Czech Republic, east by Slovakia and Hungary, south by Slovenia and Italy, and west by Switzerland and Liechtenstein. It has an area of 83,858 sq. km (32,378 sq. miles). Population (1997) 8,072,000; density, 96 per sq. km. Previous population censuses: (1923) 6·53m., (1934) 6·76m., (1951) 6·93m., (1971) 7·49m., (1981) 7·56m., (1991) 7·80m. In 1997 an estimated 64·3% of the population lived in urban areas. In 1990 the percentage had been higher, at 64·5%. Austria and Italy are the only European countries to have had a decline in the proportion of the population living in urban areas in the period 1990-95.

In 1991, 93·4% of residents were of Austrian nationality and 94% were German-speaking, with linguistic minorities of Slovenes (29,000), Croats (60,000), Hungarians (33,000) and Czechs (19,000).

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 8·29m.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of 1 Oct. 1920 was restored on 27 April 1945. Austria is a democratic federal republic comprising 9 states (Länder), with a federal President (Bundespräsident) directly elected for not more than 2 successive 6-year terms, and a bicameral National Assembly which comprises a National Council and a Federal Council.

The National Council (Nationalrat) comprises 183 members directly elected for a 4-year term by proportional representation in a 3-tier system by which seats are allocated at the level of 43 regional and 9 state constituencies, and 1 federal constituency. Any party gaining 4% of votes cast nationally is represented in the National Council.

The Federal Council (Bundesrat) has 64 members appointed by the 9 states for the duration of the individual State Assemblies' terms; the number of deputies for each state is proportional to that state's population. In Dec. 1998 the ÖVP held 27 seats, the SPÖ, 22 and the FPÖ, 15.

The head of government is a Federal Chancellor, who is appointed by the President (usually the head of the party winning the most seats in National Council elections). The Vice-Chancellor and Council of Ministers are appointed by the President at the Chancellor's recommendation.

National Anthem. 'Land der Berge, Land am Strome' ('Land of mountains, land on the river'); words by Paula Preradovic; tune attributed to Mozart.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 17 Dec. 1995; in 4 constituencies they had to be repeated on 13 Oct. 1996 which led to the re-allocation of 1 seat. The electorate was 5·8m; turn-out was 86%. The Social Democratic Party (SPÖ) won 71 seats with 31% of votes cast (65 with 34·9% in 1994); the People's Party (ÖVP), 52 with 28·2% (52 with 27·7%); the Freedom Party (FPÖ), 41 with 16·8% (42 with 22·5%); the Liberal Forum (LIF), 10 with 11·4% (11 with 6%); the Greens, 9 with 11·4% (13 with 7·3%). Parliamentary elections are scheduled for Oct. 1999.

In the second round of the presidential elections on 24 May 1992 Thomas Klestil was elected against a single opponent by 56·85% of votes cast. In the presidential election held on 19 April 1998 The was elected to another six-year term, obtaining 63·5% of the votes cast, with his nearest rival, Gertraud Knoll, polling 13·5% of votes cast. There were 5 candidates in total.

In Dec. 1998 the party composition of the National Council was: SPÖ, 71; ÖVP, 52; FPÖ, 41; Greens, 9; LIF, 9; ind, 1.

European Parliament. Austria has 21 representatives. At the Oct. 1996 elections turn-out was 67·21%. The ÖVP won 7 seats with 29·7% of votes cast; the SPÖ, 6 with 29·2%; the FPÖ, 6 with 27·5%; the Greens, 1 with 6·8%; the LIF, 1 with 4·3%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Federal President: Dr Thomas Klestil, b. 1933 (ÖVP; re-elected 19 April 1998; previously elected 24 May 1992 and sworn in 8 July 1992).

Following the Dec. 1995 elections, the SPÖ and ÖVP agreed in March 1996 to form a coalition government, which in March 1999 consisted of the following members:

Chancellor: Dr Viktor Klima (b. 1947; SPÖ).

Vice-Chancellor, Minister of Foreign Affairs: Dr Wolfgang Schüssel (ÖVP). Minister of the Environment, Youth and Family: Martin Bartenstein (ÖVP). Economic Affairs: Johann Farnleitner (ÖVP). Interior: Karl Schlögl (SPÖ). Defence: Werner Fasslabend (ÖVP). Labour, Health and Social Affairs: Lore Hostasch (SPÖ). Education and Culture: Elisabeth Gehrer (ÖVP). Science and Transport: Caspar Einem (SPÖ). Women's Affairs and Consumer Protection: Barbara Prammer (SPÖ). Justice: Nikolaus Michalek (ind). Agriculture and Forestry: Wilhelm Molterer (ÖVP). Finance: Rudolf Edlinger (SPÖ).

The President of the Nationalrat (Speaker) is Heinz Fischer (SPÖ).

Local Government. Each state (Land) has its assembly. Seats gained by parties at the latest state elections:

Burgenland (June 1996): SPÖ, 17; ÖVP, 14; FPÖ, 5.
Carinthia (March 1999): SPÖ, 12; FPÖ, 16; ÖVP, 8.

Vorarlberg (Sept. 1994): ÖVP, 20; FPÖ, 7; SPÖ, 6; Greens, 3.

Every community has a Council, which chooses one of its members to be head of the Community (Mayor) and a committee for the administration and execution of its resolutions. The provincial assemblies of the former Tyrol meet as the Regional Provincial Parliament of North Tyrol, South Tyrol and Trentino.

DEFENCE

The Federal President is C.-in-C. of the armed forces. Conscription is for a 7-month period, with liability for at least another 30 days' reservist refresher training spread over 8 to 10 years. Since 1992 the total 'on mobilization strength' of the forces has been reduced from approximately 200,000 to 110,000 troops. In 1998 approximately 1,000 personnel from so-called 'prepared units' were deployed in peace support operations in places such as Bosnia, the Golan Heights, Cyprus, etc.

Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$1,786m. (US$222 per capita), representing 0·8% of GDP.

Army. The army is structured in 2 corps with combat brigades and battalion- or regimental-sized combat support units. The artillery units are corps-directed. Towed artillery was phased out, and upgraded M-109 armoured self-propelled guns equip the artillery regiments. Corps I in the east of Austria comprises 3 brigades and a number of corps-directed units. A mechanized brigade is equipped with 'Leopard 2/A4' main battle tanks. One of 2 infantry brigades is earmarked for airborne operations, the second is equipped with 'Pandur' wheeled armoured personnel carriers. Corps II in the west comprises a number of corps-directed combat support units, a mechanized brigade with 'Leopard' tanks and an infantry brigade which is specialized in mountain operations. Enhanced armoured fighting vehicles for the 2 mechanized brigades are on the shopping list. In addition, some 20 infantry battalions which are under the direction of the provincial military commands are available on mobilization. Active personnel, 1998, 45,500. Women started to serve in the armed forces on 1 April 1998.

Air Force. The air service (Luftstreitkräfte) actually forms part of the army. The division comprises 3 aviation and 3 air-defence regiments with about 6,500 personnel, more than 150 aircraft and a number of fixed and mobile radar stations. Some 24 Draken interceptors equip a surveillance wing responsible for the defence of the Austrian air space, and a fighter-bomber wing operates SAAB 105s. Helicopters equip 6 squadrons for transport/support, communication, observation, search and rescue duties. Fixed-wing aircraft such as PC–6s, PC–7s and Skyvans are operated as trainers and for transport. The procurement of a fourth generation fighter, armed helicopters and medium-range air-defence missiles is planned for the beginning of the 21st century.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Austria is a member of the UN, EU, Council of Europe, the Central European Initiative, OECD and NATO Partnership for Peace. Austria is a signatory to the Schengen Accord abolishing border controls between Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Policy. In 1991 some 50% of production derived from the state-owned or state-protected sector, but a privatization programme in accordance with EU directives had largely been completed by 1995.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 2·5% in 1997 (2·0% in 1996 and 1·7% in 1995). Growth was projected to be 3·3% in 1998 and 2·8% in 1999.

Budget. The federal budget for calendar years provided revenue and expenditure (ordinary and extraordinary) as follows (in 1m. schilling):

	1993	1994	1995	1996
Revenue	601,445	626,629	646,678	665,422
Expenditure	699,685	731,447	764,581	754,788

VAT is 20% (10% reduced rate).

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Austria and the schilling became a subdivision of it; irrevocable conversion rate 13·7603 schillings to 1 euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, will not be in circulation until 1 Jan. 2002. There will be 7 euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and 8 coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. Even though notes and coins will not be introduced until 1 Jan. 2002 the euro can be used in banking; by means of cheques, travellers' cheques, bank transfers, credit cards and electronic purses. Banking will be possible in both euros and schilling until the schilling is withdrawn from circulation—which must be by 1 July 2002.

The schilling (ATS) consists of 100 groschen. The schilling is linked to the German Mark at DM1 = 7 schillings. Inflation was 0·9% in 1998 and 1·3% in 1997, compared to 4·1% in 1992. In Oct. 1998 it was 0·7%, the lowest rate in 11 years. In Feb. 1998 foreign exchange reserves were US$18,594m. and gold reserves 8·23m.

troy oz. Note circulation in Oct. 1997 amounted to 171,125m. schilling. The schilling has been pegged to the German Mark for 20 years.

Banking and Finance. The National Bank of Austria, opened on 1 Jan. 1923, was taken over by the German Reichsbank on 17 March 1938. It was re-established on 3 July 1945. Its President is Klaus Liebscher. Bank accounts up to 0·2m. schilling are anonymous for Austrians, but foreign depositors must declare their identity.

There were 1,042 banks in June 1996. The 10 principal banks with total assets (in 1m. schilling, June 1996): Bank Austria, 700,052 (merger of Zentralsparkasse and Länderbank in Oct. 1991; the state retains a 21·7% stake); Creditanstalt-Bankverein, 653,714 (the state has a 49·4% stake in it); Girocredit Bank AG der Sparkassen, 321,662; Österreichische Kontrollbank AG, 257,480; Bank für Arbeit und Wirtschaft AG, 237,944; Bank der Österreichischen Postsparkasse, 227,016; Raiffeisen Zentralbank Österreich AG, 230,623; Die Erste Österreichische Spar-Casse-Bank, 223,042; Bank für Oberösterreich und Salzburg (Oberbank), 81,298; Österreichische Volksbanken AG, 72,583.

There is a stock exchange in Vienna (Börse).

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The 'Mussavat' (Nationalist) party, which dominated the National Council or Constituent Assembly of the Tatars, declared the independence of Azerbaijan on 28 May 1918, with a capital first at Ganja (Elizavetpol) and later at Baku. On 28 April 1920 Azerbaijan was proclaimed a Soviet Socialist Republic. From 1922, with Georgia and Armenia, it formed the Transcaucasian Soviet Federal Socialist Republic. In 1936 it assumed the status of one of the Union Republics of the USSR. In 1990 it adopted a declaration of republican sovereignty, and on 18 Aug. 1991 the Supreme Soviet of Azerbaijan passed a constitution act on independence and the Republic re-established its full sovereignty; this was approved by 99·6% of votes at a referendum in Jan. 1992. Under the presidency of Heydar Aliyev, parliament ratified its adhesion to the CIS on 20 Sept. 1993. A treaty of friendship and co-operation was signed with Russia on 3 July 1997.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Azerbaijan is bounded in the west by Armenia, in the north by Georgia and the Russian Federation (Dagestan), in the east by the Caspian sea and in the south by Turkey and Iran. Its area is 86,600 sq. km (33,430 sq. miles), and it includes the Nakhichevan Autonomous Republic and the largely Armenian-inhabited Nagorno-Karabakh.

In 1997 there were 7,625,200 inhabitants of whom 52·4% lived in urban areas. Density, approximately 88 per sq. km. There are 65 towns (1 in each region), 8 of which have over 50,000 people. The population breaks down into 82·7% Azerbaijanis, 5·6% Russians, 5·6% Armenians and 2·4% Lezgis (1989 census).

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 7·83m.

Chief cities: Baku (1997 population, 1·7m.), Gandja (0·3m.) and Sumgait (0·3m.).

The official language is Azeri.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 1997: Births, 132,052 (159,761 in 1994); deaths, 46,962 (54,921 in 1994); marriages, 46,999; divorces, 5,806. Rates, 1997 (per 1,000 population): Births, 17·4 (21·4 in 1994); deaths, 6·2 (7·4 in 1994); infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 19·3 (25·2 in 1994); deaths of children under 1 year, 2,589 (4,180 in 1994). Life expectancy in 1997: 74·0 years for women and 66·5 years for men. Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 0·9%; fertility rate, 2·6 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is almost tropical in summer and the winters slightly warmer than in regions north of the Caucasus. Cold spells do occur, however, both on the high mountains and in the enclosed valleys. Baku, Jan. –6°C, July 25°C. Annual rainfall 318 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Parliament is the 125-member Melli-Majlis. 100 seats are contested on a majority basis, and 25 distributed proportionally among political parties. For the majority seats there is a minimum 50% turn-out requirement. There is an 8% threshold. A constitutional referendum and parliamentary elections were held on 12 Nov. 1995. Turn-out for the referendum was 86%. The new Constitution was approved by 91·9% of votes cast.

National Anthem. 'Azerbaijan! Azerbaijan!'; words by A. Javad, tune by U. Hajibayov.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At elections on 3 Oct. 1993 Heydar Aliyev was elected President unopposed, with 98·8% of votes cast; he was re-elected on 11 Oct. 1998 with 76·1% of votes cast against 5 other candidates.

At the parliamentary elections held on 12 Nov. 1995, 386 candidates from 8 parties and independents stood; turn-out was 79·5%. Run-off elections were held on 26 Nov. The New Azerbaijan Party (NAP) gained 67 of the 125 seats and 70% of votes cast. (The OSCE declared these elections 'not in accordance with international standards.')

The next parliamentary elections are due before Nov. 2000.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Heydar Aliyev (b. 1924; NAP; sworn in 10 Oct. 1993, re-elected Oct. 1998).

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Artur Rasizade (NAP).

Foreign Affairs: Tofiq Zulfiqarov. Interior: Ramil Usubov. Culture: Polad Byulbyulogly. Education: Misir Mardanov. National Security: Namig Abbasov. Defence: Lt-Gen. Safar Abiev. Media and Information: Siruz Tebrizli. Communications: Nadir Ahmedov. Agriculture: Ershad Aliyev. Economy: Namik Nasrullaev. Justice: Sudaba Hasanova. Health: Ali Insanov. Finance: Fikret Usifov. Labour and Social Protection: Ali Nagiyev. Youth and Sport: Abulfaz Karaev.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 17 months. Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$146m. (US$19 per capita), representing 4·0% of GDP.

Army. The Army is organized in 1 tank, 12 motor rifle, 1 air assault, 2 motor rifle training and 2 artillery brigades; and 2 motor rifle, 2 mountain infantry and 1 anti-tank regiment. Equipment includes 325 T-55 and T-72 main battle tanks. Personnel, 1997, 53,300. There is also a paramilitary Ministry of the Interior militia of about 20,000.

Navy. The flotilla is based at Baku on the Caspian Sea and numbered about 2,200 in 1997. It operates 34 miscellaneous vessels, including 2 small frigates, 3 missile craft, 18 fast patrol craft, 14 mine-countermeasure vessels and 1 tank landing craft.

Air Force. How many ex-Soviet aircraft are usable is not known, but MiG-21 fighters, Su-25 close support aircraft and Mi-24 armed helicopters are in use, as well as L-29 Delfin armed trainers. Personnel, 11,200 in 1997.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Total foreign debt in 1997 amounted to US$567m.

Azerbaijan is a member of the UN, CIS, the NATO Partnership for Peace, OSCE, IMO, WB, IMF, EBRD, BSEC and OEC. There is a dispute with Armenia over the status of the chiefly Armenian-populated Azerbaijani enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh. Fighting more or less ended in 1994 with about 16% of Azerbaijan's land in Armenian hands.

ECONOMY

Performance. Total GDP was US$4·1bn. in 1997, up from US$3·4bn. in 1996. Real GDP growth was 5·0% in 1997 compared to 1·3% in 1996. This was largely thanks to foreign investment into the country in anticipation of the forthcoming oil boom. Between 1990 and 1996 the average annual real growth in GNP per capita was –18·7%.

Budget. The 1998 budget envisaged revenue of 3,071,729·8m. manats (of which profits tax accounted for 498,000m. manats and VAT 800,000m. manats), and expenditure of 3,796,847·3m. manats (of which social welfare accounted for 88,275·4m. manats, education 825,842·9m. manats, health 290,143m. manats and social protection 340,000m. manats). In 1997 revenue was 2,525,300m. manats and expenditure was 2,913,700m. manats.

Currency. The manat (AZM) of 100 gyapiks replaced the rouble in Jan. 1994. Inflation was 4·0% in 1997 (19·0% in 1996). Foreign exchange reserves were US$457m. in 1997.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the National Bank (Chairman, Elman Rustamov). In 1996 there were 112 commercial and 4 state-owned banks. With capital requirements increasing, the number of commercial banks is rapidly decreasing.

Reserves, excluding gold, totalled US$457m. in 1997, up from US$214m. in 1996.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Capacity in 1994 was 5·24m. kW. Output was 17,005m. kWh in 1996. Consumption per capita in 1996 was estimated to be 2,200 kWh.

Oil and Gas. The most important industry is crude oil extraction. An estimated average of 9·0m. tonnes of oil and 6·0 bn. cu. metres of gas are produced annually (1997). Baku is at the centre of oil exploration in the Caspian. Partnerships with Turkish, Western European and US companies have been forged.

Minerals. The republic is rich in natural resources: Iron, bauxite, manganese, aluminium, copper ores, lead, zinc, precious metals, sulphur pyrites, nepheline syenites, limestone and salt. In 1991, 1·6m. tonnes of iron ore were produced. Cobalt ore reserves have been discovered in Dashkasan, and Azerbaijan has the largest iodine-bromine ore reserves of the former Soviet Union (the Neftchala region has an iodine-bromine mill).

Agriculture. In 1997, the total area devoted to agriculture was 4·5m. ha, of which 1·7m. ha was under crop and 223,747 ha were orchards and vineyards. In 1997, 34% of the economically active population was engaged in agriculture; in 1996 it accounted for 23% of GDP. In 1994 there were 1·6m. ha of arable land, 400,000 ha of permanent crops and 2·2m. ha of permanent pasture. Principal crops include grain, cotton, rice, grapes, citrus fruit, vegetables, tobacco and silk. The Mexican rubber plant grayule has been acclimatized. A new kind of high-yielding winter wheat has been produced for use in mountainous parts of the republic.

Livestock (1996): Cattle, 1·66m.; sheep, 4·4m.; goats, 182,000 (1995); chickens, 23m. (1995).

Output of main agricultural products (in 1m. tonnes) in 1997: Grain, 1·1; cotton, 0·1; grapes, 0·1; vegetables, 0·5; fruit and berries, 0·3; meat, 0·09; milk, 0·9; and 491m. eggs.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 990,000 ha, or 11·4% of the total land area.

Fisheries. About 10 tonnes of caviar from the Caspian sturgeon are produced annually. Total catches in 1995 came to an estimated 37,000 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

There are oil extraction and refining, oil-related machinery, iron and steel, aluminium, copper, chemical, cement, building materials, timber, synthetic rubber, salt, textiles, food and fishing industries. Output (1993), valued at 123,000m. manats, was (in tonnes): Rolled ferrous metals, 0·2m.; mineral fertilizers, 30,000; cement, 0·6m.; processed meat, 16,500; milk products, 48,000; fabrics, 116m. sq. metres; footwear, 4·1m. pairs; 200 lathes; 90 lorries; 8,700 TV sets; 229,000 refrigerators, freezers and air conditioners.

Labour. In 1997 the population of working age was 4·5m. of whom 2·9m. were employed, 67·5% in the state sector and 17·2% in co-operatives (in 1991). There were 31,900 registered unemployed in 1996 (11% of the labour force), of whom 4,400 were receiving benefits. The average monthly salary in 1997 was 125,500 manats.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 1997 imports were valued at US$794·3m. (1996, US$960·6m.) and exports at US$781·3m. (1996, US$631·2m.).

Fuel and oil accounted for approximately 61% of exports in 1997. Cotton, chemicals, tobacco, beverages, air-conditioners, wool and refrigerators are also important exports. The main imports were power, grain meal, steel tubes, sugar and sweets.

The main export markets in 1997 were Iran (24%), Russia (23%), Georgia (17%) and Turkey (5%). Leading import suppliers were Turkey (23%), Russia (19%), Ukraine (11%) and Iran (6%).

NAKHICHEVAN

This territory, on the borders of Turkey and Iran, forms part of Azerbaijan although separated from it by the territory of Armenia. Its population in 1989 was 95·9% Azerbaijani. It was annexed by Russia in 1828. In June 1923 it was constituted as an Autonomous Region within Azerbaijan. On 9 Feb. 1924 it was elevated to the status of Autonomous Republic. The 1996 Azerbaijani Constitution defines it as an Autonomous State within Azerbaijan.

Area, 5,500 sq. km (2,120 sq. miles); population (Jan. 1994), 315,000. Capital, Nakhichevan (66,800).

70% of the people are engaged in agriculture, of which the main branches are cotton and tobacco growing. Fruit and grapes are also produced.

In 1989–90 there were 219 primary and secondary schools with 60,200 pupils, and 2,200 students in higher educational institutions.

In Jan. 1990 there were 381 doctors and 2,445 junior medical personnel.

NAGORNO-KARABAKH

Established on 7 July 1923 as an Autonomous Region within Azerbaijan, in 1989 the area was placed under a 'special form of administration' subordinate to the USSR government. In Sept. 1991 the regional Soviet and the Shaumyan district Soviet jointly declared a Nagorno-Karabakh republic, which declared itself independent with a 99·9% popular vote (only the Armenian community took part in this vote as the Azeri population had already been expelled from Nagorno-Karabakh) in Dec. 1991. The autonomous status of the region was meanwhile abolished by the Azerbaijan Supreme Soviet in Nov. 1991, and the capital renamed Khankendi. A presidential decree of Jan. 1992 placed the region under direct rule. Azeri-Armenian fighting for possession of the region culminated in its occupation by Armenia in 1993 (and the occupation of 7 other Azerbaijani regions outside it), despite attempts at international mediation. Since May 1994 there has been a ceasefire. Negotiations on settlements are conducted within the OSCE Minsk Group.

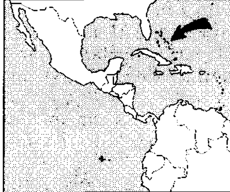
Area, 4,400 sq. km (1,700 sq. miles); population (Jan. 1990), 192,400. Capital, Khankendi (33,000). Populated by Armenians (76·9% at the 1989 census) and Azerbaijanis (21·5%).



Main industries are silk, wine, dairying and building materials. Crop area is 67,200 ha; cotton, grapes and winter wheat are grown. There are 33 collective and 38 state farms.

In 1989–90, 34,200 pupils were studying in primary and secondary schools, 2,400 in colleges and 2,100 in higher educational institutions.

BAHAMAS

Commonwealth of The Bahamas

Capital: Nassau
Population estimate, 2000: 302,000
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 10,180
HDI/world rank: 0·893/32

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bahamas were discovered by Columbus in 1492 but the Spanish did not make a permanent settlement. After British settlers arrived in the 17th century the islands were occupied by Britain, except for a short period in the 18th century, until they gained independence. Internal self-government with cabinet responsibility was introduced on 7 Jan. 1964 and full independence achieved on 10 July 1973.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Commonwealth of The Bahamas consists of over 700 islands and inhabited cays off the south-east coast of Florida extending for about 260,000 sq. miles. Only 22 islands are inhabited. Land area, 5,382 sq. miles (13,939 sq. km).

The areas and populations of the major islands in 1990 were as follows:

	Area (in sq. km)	Population		Area (in sq. km)	Population
Grand Bahama	1,373	40,898	Exuma Islands	290	3,556
Abaco	1,681	10,003	San Salvador	163	465
Bimini Islands	23	1,639	Rum Cay	78	53
Berry Islands	31	628	Long Island	448	2,949
New Providence	207	172,196	Ragged Island	23	89
Andros	5,957	8,177	Crooked Island	238	412
Eleuthera, Harbour Island and Spanish Wells	518	10,584	Acklins Island	389	405
			Mayaguana	285	312
Cat Island	388	1,698	Inagua Islands	1,671	985

1990 census population, 255,049 (130,091 females). 1996 estimate, 284,000; density, 20 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 302,000.

In 1995 an estimated 86·5% of the population were urban. The capital is Nassau on New Providence Island (178,000 in 1996); the other large town is Freeport (45,000) on Grand Bahama.

English is the official language. Creole is spoken among Haitian immigrants.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 estimates: Births, 6,300; deaths, 1,600. Rates, 1997 (per 1,000 population): Birth, 21·47; death, 5·45; marriage (1994), 9·3; infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 1997, 19·6. Expectation of life was 69·3 years for males and 76 for females in 1990–95. Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 1·7%; fertility rate, 2·0 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Winters are mild and summers pleasantly warm. Most rain falls in May, June, Sept. and Oct., and thunderstorms are frequent in summer. Rainfall amounts vary over the islands from 30" (750 mm) to 60" (1,500 mm). Nassau, Jan. 71°F (21·7°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 47" (1,179 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Commonwealth of The Bahamas is a free and democratic sovereign state. Executive power rests with Her Majesty the Queen, who appoints a Governor-General to represent her, advised by a Cabinet whom he appoints. There is a bicameral legislature. The Senate comprises 16 members all appointed by the Governor-General, 9 on the advice of the Prime Minister, 4 on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition, and 3 after consultation with both of them. The House of Assembly consists of 40 members elected from single-member constituencies for a maximum term of 5 years.

National Anthem. 'Lift up your head to the rising sun, Bahamaland'; words and tune by T. Gibson.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the election for the House of Assembly of 14 March 1997, the Free National Movement gained 34 seats and the Progressive Liberal Party, 6. In a subsequent by-election the Free National Movement won a further seat from the Progressive Liberal Party.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor-General: Sir Orville Turnquest, GCMG, QC.

The Cabinet was composed as follows in March 1999:

Prime Minister: Hubert Alexander Ingraham.

Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Security with responsibility for the Public Service and Public Utilities: Frank H. Watson. Agriculture and Fisheries: Earl Deveaux. Attorney General and Justice: Tennyson R. G. Wells. Consumer Welfare and Aviation: Pierre V. Dupuch. Foreign Affairs: Janet Gwenneth Bostwick. Education: Dame Ivy Leona Dumont. Finance and Planning: William C. Allen. Health and Environment: Ronald Knowles. Labour, Immigration and Training: Theresa Moxey-Ingraham. Public Works: O. A. Tommy Turnquest. Social Development and Housing: Algernon S. P. B. Allen. Transport: James F. Knowles. Minister of State for Public Enterprises: Anthony Rolle. Youth, Sports and Culture: Zhivargo Laing. Education: Dion Foulkes. Economic Development: Carl Bethel. Public Service Commission: David Thompson.

Secretary to the Cabinet: Basil O'Brien.

Local Government. The Local Government Act came into effect on 25 June 1996. Elections were held on 26 July 1996. The Act divides the Family Islands into 23 local government districts administered by a popularly elected district council.

DEFENCE

The Royal Defence Force is a primarily maritime force tasked with naval patrols and protection duties in the extensive waters of the archipelago. Equipment comprises 4 coastal defence vessels, 2 auxiliary vessels, 2 Dauntless search and rescue craft, and 10 assorted coastal and inshore patrol craft for harbour and shallow water operations. There are also 2 cabin-class fixed-wing aircraft, a Cessna Golden Eagle 421C and a Cessna Titan 404. Personnel in 1996 numbered 850, and the base is at Coral Harbour on New Providence Island.

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$22m. (US$82 per capita).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The Commonwealth of The Bahamas is a member of the UN, OAS, the Commonwealth, CARICOM, FAO, IBRD, ICAO, ILO, IMF, Intelsat, ITU, UNESCO, UNIDO, WHO, WIPO and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Policy. The Government of the Commonwealth of The Bahamas is committed to building an economic environment in which free enterprise can flourish; where the Government assumes its proper role as regulator and facilitator of economic development; where the ideals of transparency, fair play and equality of treatment are paramount; and a policy that maintains a stable society in which all people are afforded the opportunity to realize their maximum potential. In this regard, the National Investment Policy is designed to support an investment-friendly climate; guarantees the complementarity of Bahamian and overseas investments; fosters appropriate linkages with all sectors of the economy, in particular, the tourism and financial services sectors; encourages the exploitation of the country's natural resources in an environmentally sound and sustainable manner; provides for the maximum level of employment; guarantees an acceptable level of economic security and generally foster the economic growth and development of The Bahamas.

Performance. The Bahamas experienced a recession during the period 1988–94; this was mainly due to the recession in the USA leading to a fall in the number of American tourists. The economy has been growing since, and there are continuing efforts to diversify. Freeport's tax-free status was extended by 25 years in 1995, and import duties were reduced in the 1996–97 budget. 1996 saw an increase in growth; but the budget deficit is increasing; an overall deficit of US$190m. was projected for 1997–98, 3 times the 1996–97 deficit, and 5% of GDP.

Real GDP growth was 1·0% in 1995 (0·3% in 1994).

Budget. (in B$1m.):

BAHRAIN

Dawlat al Bahrayn
(State of Bahrain)

Capital: Manama
Population estimate, 2000: 618,000
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 13,970
HDI/world rank: 0·872/43

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bahrain was controlled by the Portuguese from 1521 until 1602. The Khalifa family gained control in 1783 and has ruled since that date, rejecting claims of suzerainty from Persia (Iran) and the Ottoman Empire. British assistance was sought to retain independence and in 1861 Bahrain and Britain signed a treaty of peace and friendship. From 1861 until 1971 Bahrain was in all but name a British protectorate. Treaties signed in 1882 and in 1892 gave Britain responsibility for defence and foreign policy. In 1970 a Council of State was established, so that the ruling family was no longer the sole executive power.

On 15 Aug. 1971 a new treaty of friendship was signed with Britain. This replaced all earlier treaties, and at the same time Bahrain declared its independence. Shaikh Isa bin Salman Al-Khalifa became the Amir with the Council of State as a cabinet. A constitution was ratified in June 1973 providing for a National Assembly of 30 members, together with all members of the cabinet (appointed by the Amir). Elections took place in Dec. 1973. However, the relationship between the National Assembly and the Khalifa family was not successful and in 1975 the National Assembly was dissolved and the emir began ruling by decree. In 1987 the largest island was joined to the Saudi mainland by a causeway. In 1994, demands for the restoration of democracy led to the arrest and expulsion of prominent dissidents.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The State of Bahrain forms an archipelago of 36 low-lying islands in the Arabian (Persian) Gulf, between the Qatar peninsula and the mainland of Saudi Arabia. The total area is 706·6 sq. km.

The island of Bahrain (578 sq. km) is connected by a 1·5-mile causeway to the second largest island, Muharraq to the north-east, and by a causeway with the island of Sitra to the east. A causeway links Bahrain with Saudi Arabia. From Sitra, oil pipelines and a causeway carrying a road extend out to sea for 3 miles to a deep-water anchorage.

Population (1996 est.) 598,600 (males, 349,100; females, 249,500), of which 369,200 were Bahraini and 229,400 non-Bahraini. 90·3% of the population lived in urban areas and population density was 850 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 618,000.

There are 12 regions: Central, Eastern, Hamad Town, Hidd Town, Isa Town, Jidhafs, Manama, Muharraq, Northern, Rifa'a, Sitra, Western. Manama, the capital and commercial centre, had a 1991 census population of 136,999. Other towns are Muharraq (74,254), Rifa'a (45,596), Jidhafs (44,769), Sitra (36,755) and Isa Town (34,509).

Arabic is the official language. English is widely used in business.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics 1995: births, 13,469 (Bahraini, 10,366); deaths, 1,910 (Bahraini, 1,580). Rates (per 1,000) for Bahrainis in 1994: birth, 29·2; death, 3·4; natural increase, 3·9; infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 20·4. For non-Bahrainis: birth, 15·9; death, 1·5; natural increase, 14·4; infant mortality, 16·3. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, was 69·8 years for men and 74·1 years for women. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 3·4 children per woman. In 1996 there were 3,632 marriages and 730 divorces.

The Shia make up 70% of the national population, half of whom are under 15.

CLIMATE
The climate is pleasantly warm between Dec. and March but from June to Sept. the conditions are very hot and humid. The period June to Nov. is virtually rainless. Bahrain, Jan. 66°F (19°C), July 97°F (36°C). Annual rainfall 5·2" (130 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT
The ruling family is the Al-Khalifa who have been in power since 1783.

A Constitution was ratified in June 1973 providing for a National Assembly of 30 members, popularly elected for a 4-year term, together with a cabinet, appointed by the Amir. Elections took place in Dec. 1973, but in Aug. 1975 the Amir dissolved the Assembly and has since ruled through the cabinet alone.

By decree of the Amir on 20 Dec. 1992 a Consultative Council was set up. It consists of 30 members nominated by the Amir for 4-year terms. Friction between Bahrain's Shia Moslems and their Sunni rulers has been intensified by high unemployment.

National Anthem. 'Bahrain ona, baladolaman' ('Our Bahrain, secure as a country'); words by M. S. Ayyash, tune anonymous.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION
The present Amir, HH Shaikh Hamad bin Isa Al-Khalifa, KCMG (b. 1950) succeeded on 6 March 1999.

In March 1999 the cabinet was composed as follows:

Prime Minister: Shaikh Khalifa bin Salman Al-Khalifa (b. 1935). He is currently the longest-serving Prime Minister of any sovereign country.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In the first half of the 18th century, the eastern territory of the Bengali people was ruled by the Nawab of Bengal. His defeat by the British East India Company in 1757 and the company's assumption of control of the area marked the beginning of the British Empire in India.

The first formal partition of Bengal was made by the Government of India in 1905. East Bengal, which was predominantly Moslem and also rural and poor, was united with Assam to form a new province. The partition was extremely unpopular with Bengali Hindus who claimed that their Bengali nationality was more important than their religious diversity. In 1912 East and West Bengal were reunited—a move unpopular with the Moslems.

Independent India was partitioned according to religion in 1947. West Bengal became part of India while East Bengal elected to join Pakistan as East Pakistan. The province, however, was separated from West Pakistan physically and ethnically; it was still poor and it continued to be neglected. Differences became unmanageable when East Pakistan's Awami League, campaigning for greater autonomy, won the majority of seats in the federal parliament in Dec. 1970. There was civil war from March to Dec. 1971. With the help of Indian troops, the Pakistani forces were defeated and the East broke away as an independent state to become the Republic of Bangladesh. The Awami League leader, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman was its first president. The constitution of 1972 provided parliamentary democracy, but in Jan. 1975 the president banned political parties and began to rule with an advisory parliament. In Aug. 1975, he was murdered and martial law was introduced. His successor as head of state, Maj.-Gen. Ziaur Rahman, was murdered by a group of army officers in May 1981. In March 1982, there was a further army coup after a short period of ineffective civilian government. Lieut.-Gen. Ershad was installed at the head of a military government and assumed the presidency in Dec. 1983. He was re-elected on 15 Oct. 1986. Following popular unrest President Ershad declared a state of emergency on 27 Nov. 1990, but was forced to resign on 4 Dec. and was arrested on 12 Dec. He was later sentenced to 20 years imprisonment.

Democratic parliamentary elections were held in Feb. 1991 and a new President, Abdur Rahman Biswas, was elected on 8 Oct. Continuing unrest reflected the increasing strength of Islamic fundamentalism. Sheikh Hasina Wajed was sworn in as Prime Minister in June 1996 (one of her first acts was the release of former President Ershad) and in July a former Chief Justice, Shahabuddin Ahmed, was elected president.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Bangladesh is bounded in the west and north by India, east by India and Myanmar and south by the Bay of Bengal. The area is 57,295 sq. miles (148,393 sq. km). In 1992 India granted a 999-year lease of the Tin Bigha corridor linking Bangladesh with its enclaves of Angarpota and Dahagram. At the 1991 census the population was 111,455,000 (54,141,000 females). Estimate, July 1997: 125,430,000. Population density, 845 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 128·31m.

In 1995 an estimated 81·7% of the population lived in rural areas. The country is administratively divided into 5 divisions, subdivided into 64 zila. Area (in sq. km) and population (in 1,000) in 1994 of the 5 divisions:

	Area	Population
Barisal division	13,297	7,757
Chittagong division	46,367	29,015

	Area	Population
Dhaka division	31,119	33,940
Khulna division	22,274	13,243
Rajshahi division	34,513	27,500

The populations of the chief cities (1991 Census) were as follows:

Dhaka[1]	3,397,187	Mymensingh	185,517	Nawabganj	121,205
Chittagong[2]	1,363,998	Barisal	163,481	Pabna	104,479

The official language is Bengali. English is also in use for official, legal and commercial purposes.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 3,168,000; deaths, 1,229,000. In 1995 the birth rate was 26·8 per 1,000 population; death rate, 10·4; marriage rate, 1994, 10·7; infant mortality, 1994, 77 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, 55·6 years for both males and females. The annual population growth rate by the late 1990s was almost half the 3·1% of the early 1970s. The fertility rate dropped from 6·2 births per woman in 1980–85 to 3·4 births per woman in 1990–95. No other country saw such a large reduction in its fertility rate over the same period.

CLIMATE

A tropical monsoon climate with heat, extreme humidity and heavy rainfall in the monsoon season, from June to Oct. The short winter season (Nov.–Feb.) is mild and dry. Rainfall varies between 50" (1,250 mm) in the west to 100" (2,500 mm) in the south-east and up to 200" (5,000 mm) in the north-east. Dhaka, Jan. 66°F (19°C), July 84°F (28·9°C). Annual rainfall 81" (2,025 mm). Chittagong, Jan. 66°F (19°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 108" (2,831 mm). In mid-1998 the Ganges and other rivers flowing into Bangladesh burst their banks causing a deluge that covered two-thirds of the country. More than 22m. were made homeless and 700 died in the floods.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Bangladesh is a unitary republic. The Constitution came into force on 16 Dec. 1972 and provides for a parliamentary democracy. The head of state is the President, elected by parliament every 5 years, who appoints a Vice-President. A referendum of Sept. 1991 was in favour of abandoning the executive presidential system and opted for a parliamentary system. Turn-out was low. There is a Council of Ministers to assist and advise the President. The President appoints the government ministers. Presidential elections were held on 23 July 1996; Shahabuddin Ahmed was elected unopposed.

Parliament has one chamber of 300 members directly elected every 5 years by citizens over 18. There are additionally 30 seats reserved for women members elected by Parliament.

National Anthem. 'Amar Sonar Bangla, ami tomay bhalobashi' ('My golden Bengal, I love you'); words and tune by Rabindranath Tagore.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 12 June 1996 the electorate was 57m.; turn-out was 70%. The Awami League gained 146 seats, the Bangladesh National Party (BNP) 116, the Jatiya Party 32. A coalition was formed between the Awami League and the Jatiya Party, but in March 1998 the Jatiya Party quit the 'national consensus' government.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Barbados was settled by the British during the 1620s. In 1627 a Governor was appointed with a legislative council. In 1639 a House of Assembly was created. Barbados was developed as a sugar plantation economy, initially on the basis of slavery until its abolition in the 1840s. In the 19th century an executive council with ministerial powers was established. In 1951 universal suffrage was introduced, followed in 1954 by a complete ministerial system with cabinet government. Full internal self-government was attained in Oct. 1961. From 1958–62 Barbados was a member of the short-lived Federation of the West Indies. On 30 Nov. 1966 Barbados became an independent sovereign state within the Commonwealth.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Barbados lies to the east of the Windward Islands. Area 166 sq. miles (430 sq. km). In 1990 the census population was 260,491; 1997 estimate, 266,100 giving a density of 619 per sq. km.

The projected population for 2000 is 269,000.

In 1995 an estimated 52·7% of the population were urban. Bridgetown is the principal city: Population, 6,720 in 1990.

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 3,800; deaths, 2,300. Birth rate, 1997, 14·3 per 1,000 population; death rate, 8·7; infant mortality, 1997, 13·2 per 1,000 live births. Expectation of life, 1990–95, males 72·9 years and females 77·9. Growth rate, 1997, 0·6%; fertility rate, 1·7 children per woman.

CLIMATE

An equable climate in winter, but the wet season, from June to Nov., is more humid. Rainfall varies from 50" (1,250 mm) on the coast to 75" (1,875 mm) in the higher interior. Bridgetown, Jan. 76°F (24·4°C), July 80°F (26·7°C). Annual rainfall 51" (1,275 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Governor-General is the head of state. Parliament consists of a Senate and a House of Assembly. The Senate comprises 21 members appointed by the Governor-General, 12 being appointed on the advice of the Prime Minister, 2 on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition and 7 in the Governor-General's discretion. The House of Assembly comprises 28 members elected every 5 years. In 1963 the voting age was reduced to 18.

The Privy Council is appointed by the Governor-General after consultation with the Prime Minister. It consists of 12 members and the Governor-General as chairman. It advises the Governor-General in the exercise of the royal prerogative of mercy and in the exercise of his disciplinary powers over members of the public and police services.

Following the victory of the Barbados Labour Party in the Jan. 1999 elections, the severing of links with Britain is expected to proceed, with amendments to the constitution allowing for the replacement of the Queen as head of state by a Barbadian president.

National Anthem. 'In plenty and in time of need'; words by Irvine Burgie, tune by V. R. Edwards.

RECENT ELECTIONS

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Though part of the Russian Empire since the late 18th century, national sentiment remained strong. War with Germany and revolution in Russia provided the opportunity for a declaration of independence (25 March 1918) but with the defeat of Germany, Soviet forces reasserted control. The Belorussian Soviet Socialist Republic was set up on 1 Jan. 1919. Under the Treaty of Riga (18 March 1921), Western Belarus became part of Poland. Integration with Russia was close until the Gorbachev reforms of the mid-1980s encouraged demands for greater freedom. On 25 Aug. 1991, Belarus declared its independence and in Dec. it became a founder member of the CIS. The failure to win compensation for the Chernobyl nuclear disaster on the Ukrainian border caused friction with Moscow. The Communists retained power in Belarus despite formidable opposition and it was not until a new constitution was adopted in March 1994 and the following presidential election which brought Alyaksandr Lukashenka to power that the economic reformers began to influence events. Even so, by 1996 only 11% of state enterprises had been privatized and the government remains pro-Russian.

A referendum held over 9–24 Nov. 1996 extended the President's term of office from 3 to 5 years; increased the President's powers to rule by decree; and created a parliamentary upper house.

In June 1998, the ambassadors of France, USA and Japan were withdrawn after President Lukashenka locked them out of their embassies.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Belarus is situated along the Western Dvina and Dnieper. It is bounded in the west by Poland, north by Latvia and Lithuania, east by Russia and south by Ukraine. The area is 207,600 sq. km (80,134 sq. miles). The capital is Minsk (1·7m. population in 1994). Other important towns are Homel, Vitebsk, Mahilyou, Bobruisk, Hrodno and Brest. On 2 Nov. 1939 western Belorussia was incorporated with an area of over 108,000 sq. km and a population of 4·8m. The total population in 1995 was estimated at 10·3m; density, 50 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 10·28m.

In 1995 an estimated 71·1% of the population lived in urban areas. Major ethnic groups: 78% Belarussians, 13% Russians, 4% Poles, 3% Ukrainians, 1% Jews, 1% others.

Belarus comprises 6 provinces. Areas and populations, Jan. 1991:

Province	Area sq. km	Population 1991	Capital	Population 1991
Brest	32,300	1,483,700	Brest	277,000
Homel	40,400	1,628,400	Homel	503,300
Hrodno	25,000	1,188,700	Hrodno	284,800
Minsk	40,800	3,256,000	Minsk	1,633,600
Mahilyou	29,000	1,269,400	Mahilyou	363,000
Vitebsk	40,100	1,434,200	Vitebsk	369,200

Belarussian is the national language. Russian is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Annual growth rate, 1990–95, –0·2%. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, was 64·4 years for men and 74·8 years for women. 1995 births, 101,444 (rate of 9·8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 133,775 (rate of 13·0 per 1,000 population). Infant mortality, 1990–95, 16 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1·7 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Moderately continental and humid with temperatures averaging 20°F (-6°C) in Jan. and 64°F (18°C) in July. Annual precipitation is 22-28" (550-700mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution was adopted on 15 March 1994. It provides for a President who must be a citizen of at least 35 years of age, have resided for 10 years in Belarus and whose candidacy must be supported by the signatures of 70 deputies or 100,000 electors.

There is an 11-member Constitutional Court. The chief justice and 5 other judges are appointed by the President.

4 referendums held on 14 May 1995 gave the President powers to dissolve parliament; work for closer economic integration with Russia; establish Russian as an official language of equal status with Belorussian; and introduce a new flag.

At the referendum of 9–24 Nov. 1996 turn-out was 84·05%. 79% of votes cast were in favour of the creation of an upper house of parliament nominated by provincial governors and 70% in favour of extending the presidential term of office by 2 years to 5 years. The Supreme Soviet was dissolved and a 110-member lower House of Representatives established.

National Anthem. The music is that of the former Soviet anthem. 2 competitions for a new anthem have been held without a result.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The first 2 rounds of parliamentary elections were held on 14 and 28 May 1995, as a result of which 120 deputies were elected. At the third round on 29 Nov. 1995 for 141 constituencies not elected in May, turn-out was 61·8%; 20 candidates were elected. A fourth round was held on 10 Dec. 1995 when enough deputies were elected to form a quorum. Presidential elections were held on 23 June 1994. The electorate was 7·2m.; turn-out was 79%. Alyaksandr Lukashenka gained 45% of votes cast against 5 opponents, and was elected President at a run-off on 11 July 1994 by 80·1% of votes cast against 1 opponent. Turn-out was 69·9%.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Netherlands became part of the duchy of Burgundy in the late 14th century and through dynastic marriage came under the control of the Spanish Hapsburgs in 1504. When the northern provinces rebelled against Spanish rule in the 1570s, the southern provinces pledged their allegiance to Catholicism and the Spanish crown. The War of the Spanish Succession (1701–14) ended with the cession of Belgium to the Austrian Hapsburgs. Briefly annexed to France during the Napoleonic war, Belgium and Holland were reunited by the Treaty of Paris (1815) to form one state. The Belgians rose in revolt against this arrangement, and the kingdom of Belgium was formed as an independent state in 1830. A National Congress elected Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg as King of the Belgians, and he ascended the throne as Leopold I on 21 July 1831. By the Treaty of London, 15 Nov. 1831, the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by Austria, Russia, Great Britain and Prussia. It was not until after the signing of the Treaty of London, 19 April 1839, which established peace between Leopold I and the King of the Netherlands, that all the states of Europe recognized the kingdom of Belgium.

In 1914 Belgian neutrality was violated by the German invasion. As a consequence, Britain declared war on Germany.

In the Second World War Belgium was again invaded by Germany. On this occasion the king, Leopold III, immediately surrendered, although an exiled Belgian Government operated from Britain during the war. In 1950 Leopold III abdicated in favour of his son, Baudouin.

In the post-war years, linguistic problems have caused persistent quarrelling between the Flemish (Dutch)-speaking north of the country and the French-speaking Walloons of the south. This animosity has been accentuated by increasing industrialization and consequent population movements. Following constitutional reforms voted by Parliament in May 1993, Belgium became a federal state.

Recent events have tarnished central government. Revelations of corruption and incompetence accompanied the arrest of Marc Dutroux, a paedophile murderer in 1996. Then in Sept. 1998, Willy Claes, former NATO secretary general, and others went on trial accused of taking bribes for the allocation of defence contracts. The money was said to have been channelled towards the Socialist party. In Jan. 1999 Claes was found guilty of corruption and given a 3-year suspended prison sentence.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Belgium is bounded in the north by the Netherlands, north-west by the North Sea, west and south by France, and east by Germany and Luxembourg. Its area is 30,528 sq. km. The Belgian exclave of Baarle-Hertog in the Netherlands has an area of 7 sq. km, and a population (1996) of 2,702. Population (1998 estimate) 10,192,264m., (5,209,592 females); density, 333 per sq. km. There were 903,120 resident foreign nationals in 1998. In 1995 an estimated 97% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 10·26m.

Dutch (Flemish) is spoken by the Flemish section of the population in the north, French by the Walloon south. The linguistic frontier passes south of the capital, Brussels, which is bilingual. Some German is spoken in the east. Each language has official status in its own community. (Bracketed names below signify French or Dutch alternatives.)

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

According to the constitution of 1831, Belgium is a constitutional, representative and hereditary monarchy. The legislative power is vested in the King, the federal parliament and the community and regional councils. The King convokes parliament after an election or the resignation of a government, and has the power to dissolve it in accordance with Article 46 of the Constitution.

The reigning King is Albert II, born 6 June 1934, who succeeded his brother, Baudouin, on 9 Aug. 1993. Married on 2 July 1959 to Paola Ruffo di Calabria, daughter of Don Fuleo and Donna Luisa Gazelli de Rossena. Offspring: Prince Philippe, Duke of Brabant, b. 15 April 1960; Princess Astrid, b. 5 June 1962; Prince Laurent, b. 19 Oct. 1963. Princess Astrid married Archduke Lorenz of Austria, 22 Sept. 1984. Offspring: Prince Amedeo, b. 21 Feb. 1986; Princess Maria Laura, b. 26 Aug. 1988; Prince Joachim, b. 9 Dec. 1991; Princess Luisa Maria, b. 11 Oct. 1995.

The Dowager Queen. Queen Fabiola de Mora y Aragón, daughter of the Conde de Mora y Aragón and Marqués de Casa Riera; married to King Baudouin on 15 Dec. 1960. Sister of the King. Josephine Charlotte, Princess of Belgium, b. 11 Oct. 1927; married to Prince Jean of Luxembourg, 9 April 1953. Half-brother and half-sisters of the King. Prince Alexandre, b. 18 July 1942; Princess Marie Christine, b. 6 Feb. 1951; Princess Maria-Esmeralda, b. 30 Sept. 1956. Aunt of the King. Princess Marie-José, b. 4 Aug. 1906; married to Prince Umberto (King Umberto II of Italy in 1946) on 8 Jan. 1930.

A constitutional amendment of June 1991 permits women to accede to the throne.

The King receives an annual tax-free sum from the civil list of BEF244m. for the duration of his reign; Prince Philippe receives BEF13·5m.; Queen Fabiola, BEF45m.

Constitutional reforms begun in Dec. 1970 culminated in May 1993 in the transformation of Belgium from a unitary into a 'federal state, composed of communities and regions'. The communities are 3 in number and based on language: Flemish, French and German. The regions also number 3, and are based territorially: Flemish, Walloon and the Capital Brussels.

Since 1995 the federal parliament has consisted of a 150-member Chamber of Representatives, directly elected by obligatory universal suffrage from 20 constituencies on a proportional representation system for 4-year terms; and a Senate of 71 members (excluding senators by right, i.e. certain members of the Royal Family). 25 senators are elected by a Flemish, and 15 by a French, electoral college; 21 are designated by community councils (10 Flemish, 10 French and 1 German). These senators co-opt a further 10 senators (6 Flemish and 4 French).

The federal parliament's powers relate to constitutional reform, federal finance, foreign affairs, defence, justice, internal security, social security and some areas of public health. The Senate is essentially a revising chamber, though it may initiate certain legislation, and is equally competent with the Chamber of Representatives in matters concerning constitutional reform and the assent to international treaties.

The number of ministers in the federal government is limited to 15. The Council of Ministers, apart from the Prime Minister, must comprise an equal number of Dutch- and French-speakers. Members of parliament, if appointed ministers, are replaced in parliament by the runner-up on the electoral list for the minister's period of office. Community and regional councillors may not be members of the Chamber of Representatives or Senate.

National Anthem. 'La Brabançonne'; words by C. Rogier, tune by F. van Campenhout. The Flemish version is 'O Vaderland, o edel land der Belgen' ('Oh Fatherland, noble land of the Belgians').

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the 150-member Chamber of Representatives were held on 21 May 1995. The electorate was 7,199,440; turn-out was 6,562,149. Flemish Christian Social Party (CVP) won 29 seats with 17·18% of votes cast; Flemish Liberal and Democratic Party (VLD) 21 with 13·15%; Francophone Socialist Party (PS) 21 with 11·87%; Flemish Socialist Party (SP) 20 with 12·56%; Francophone Liberal Reform Party-Democratic Front of Francophones (PRL-FDF) 18 with 10·26%; Francophone Christian Social Party 12 with 7·73%; Vlaams Blok (VB) 11 with 7·83%; Francophone Ecology Party (ECOLO) 6 with 4·01%; Volksunie (VU) 5 with 4·67%; Flemish Ecology Party (AGALEV) 5 with 4·43%; National Front (FN) 2 with 2·28%.

European Parliament. Belgium has 25 representatives. At the June 1994 elections turn-out was 90·7%. The CVP won 4 seats with 17% of votes cast (group in European Parliament: Popular European Party); the Flemish Liberal and Democratic Party, 3 with 11·4% (Liberal, Democratic and Reformist Group); the PS, 3 with 11·4% (European Socialist Party); the SP, 3 with 11% (European Socialist Party); the PRL, 3 with 9% (Liberal, Democratic and Reformist Group); the Vlaams Blok, 2 with 7·8% (Radical European Alliance); the PSC, 2 with 7% (Popular European Party); Agalev, 1 with 6·7% (Greens); the Ecology Party, 1 with 4·8% (Greens); Volksunie, 1 with 4·4% (Europe of Nations); the National Front, 1 with 2·9% (Radical European Alliance); PSC, 1 with 0·2% (Popular European Party).

Elections to the European Parliament, Chamber of Representatives, the Senate, Walloon Council, Flemish Council, Council of the Brussels Capital Region and the German-speaking Community were due to be held on 13 June 1999.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

A 4-party coalition government was formed in June 1995, which in March 1999 comprised:

Prime Minister: Jean-Luc Dehaene (CVP).

4 Deputy Prime Ministers: Elio di Rupo (PS) (Communications, Economic Affairs and Foreign Trade); Luc Van den Bossche (PS) (Interior); Jean-Jacques Viseur (PSC) (Finance); Herman Van Rompuy (CVP) (Budget).

Cabinet Ministers; Science Policy: Yvan Ylieff (PS). Health and Pensions: Marcel Colla (SP). Foreign Affairs: Eric Derycke (SP). Employment and Work, with responsibility for Equality of the Sexes: Miet Smet (CVP). Social Affairs: Magda De Galan (PS). Agriculture and Small Business: Karel Pinxten (CVP). Transport: Michel Daerden (PS). Justice: Tony Van Parys (CVP). Civil Service: André Flahaut (PS). Defence: Jean-Paul Poncelet (PSC).

There are 2 Secretaries of State who are not members of the Council of Ministers: Reginald Moreels (CVP) (Foreign Aid); Jan Peeters (SP) (Security, Social Integration and Environment).

Local Government. Communities and Regions elect parliaments ('councils') which in turn form governments. The Flemish Community and the Flemish Region are represented by a single council, whereas the French Community and the Walloon Region have a council each. There are also councils for the Brussels Capital Region and the German-speaking Region.

The areas of competence of Community Councils are culture, education, the media, medicine, protection of young people, the use of languages, some branches of scientific research, and international relations affecting any of these areas.

Regional Councils have responsibility for land use, town planning, the environment, conservation and rural renewal, housing, water resources, overseeing provincial and local authorities, labour, public works, transport, the economy, credit, foreign trade, agriculture, energy, some branches of scientific research, and international relations affecting any of these areas. Regions raise their own revenues and also have a right to draw upon central government funds in some cases. Grants are available from the federal budget when the regional average product is lower than the national level.

Community and Regional Councils and Governments in 1995:

Community/Region	Seat	No. of Council members	No. of Government members	Chief Minister
Flemish Council	Brussels	124[1]	11[3]	Luc van den Brande
French Community	Brussels	94[2]	4	Laurette Onkelinx
Walloon Region	Namur	75	7	Robert Collignon
Brussels Capital Region	Brussels	75	8	Charles Picqué
German-speaking Community	Eupen	25	3	Joseph Marait

[1]Including 6 representatives of Flemish-speakers in Brussels.
[2]Includes 19 representatives of French-speakers in Brussels.
[3]11 is the maximum number; the actual number in 1998 was 9.

There are 10 provinces and 589 communes, with elected councils under a governor and burgomaster, respectively. The 19 communes of the Brussels Capital Region stand outside the provincial administrative structure. They are administered by a governor appointed by the King. Governors and burgomasters are appointed by the King. Last elections held on 9 Oct. 1994.

DEFENCE

Conscription was abolished in 1995 and the Armed Forces were restructured, with the aim of progressively reducing the size, making more use of civilian personnel. The Interforces Territorial Command is responsible for assignments to assure the safety of the National Territory and for logistic support in those fields which are mutual for the different forces. In 1998 the unit totalled 3,870 personnel, comprising a Staff and three Groups: General Support (including engineers), Infrastructure and Signals.

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$3,769m. (US$373 per capita), representing 1·6% of GDP. The budget for 1999 is BEF100·8bn. (US$2,700m.).

Army. The Army consists of 3 divisions. The first, the Intervention Force, comprises 3 mechanized brigades, 1 paracommando brigade, 1 light aviation group (helicopter battalions) and support troops. The second, the Combat Support Division, comprises 5 branch training schools and 10 schools. The third, the Logistical Support Division, comprises 1 supply group, 1 maintenance group and 1 logistical battalion. Total strength (1998–99) 28,250.

Equipment includes 132 Leopard 1A5 main battle tanks, 211 combat reconnaissance tracked vehicles, 123 howitzers, 1,039 armoured personnel carriers and 28 Epervier remotely-piloted vehicles. Aircraft operated: 10 Islander aircraft, 32 Alouette II helicopters and 46 Agusta A109 helicopters.

Navy. The naval forces, based at Ostend and Zeebrugge, include 3 frigates with 1 in reserve, 2 ocean minehunters, 7 coastal tripartite minehunters, 1 research ship and 1 training sailing vessel. Naval personnel (1998–99) totalled 2,600.

The naval air arm comprises 3 Alouette SA-318 general utility helicopters.

Air Force. The Belgian Royal Air Force has a strength of (1998–99) 11,600 personnel and comprises a Tactical Air Force and a Training and Support Command (schools and logistical units). The Tactical Air Force includes 2 tactical wings (each has 36 F-16s), an operational reserve of 18 F-16s, 1 transport wing (equipped with 11 C-130s, 2 Airbus A310 and 11 smaller passenger aircraft), 1 training wing (equipped with 33 Marchetti, 31 Alpha Jet and 11 Fouga Magister) and 5 Sea King helicopters for search and rescue missions.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Belgium is a member of the UN, EU, Council of Europe, NATO, OECD and WEU. Belgium is a signatory to the Schengen Accord abolishing border controls between Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Performance. The OECD Economic Survey of 1999 reports: 'The Belgian economy has performed fairly well over the past couple of years, with buoyant growth and low inflation... As business fixed investment has remained buoyant and private consumption and residential investment have strengthened, the driving force of the expansion has progressively shifted from net exports to domestic demand. The revival of private consumption has reflected not only stronger job creation and an acceleration in disposable personal income, but also a fall in the saving ratio, as consumer confidence has rebounded, possibly as a result of remarkable progress in fiscal consolidation and better prospects in the labour market.'

Real GDP growth was 2·8% in 1998, with a forecast of 2·5% for 1999. The OECD projects a moderate slowing to around 2·25% in 1999 and 2000.

Wage-price performance has remained relatively good during this upswing. According to the OECD: 'The end of the 1995–96 real wage freeze was followed by modest acceleration in wage increases and compensation per employee. Contributing factors to this include the introduction of the law on employment and competitiveness, which limits on an ex ante basis the maximum increase in compensation per employee in the private sector to the expected weighted average increase in Germany, France and the Netherlands.'

Budget. In 1997 federal revenue (in BEF1,000m.) was 1,444·6 and expenditure 1,619·8; regional and community revenue was 1,037·2, and expenditure 1,039·5.

The budget deficit hit a record low of 1·3% of GDP in 1998, compared with an original target of 1·7% (down from around 7% in the early 1990s). Government debt fell from 121·9% in 1997 to 116·5% in 1998, beating the target of 118%. The projected figure for end 1999 has been revised down from 115 to 113·8%.

VAT is 21% (reduced rate, 6%).

Currency. On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Belgium and the Belgian franc became a subdivision of it; irrevocable conversion rate BEF40·3399 to EUR1. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, will not be in circulation until 1 Jan. 2002. There will be 7 euro notes in different colours and sizes denominated in 500, 200, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 euros, and 8 coins denominated in 2 and 1 euros, then 50, 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 cents. Even though notes and coins will not be introduced until 1 Jan. 2002, the euro can be used in banking, by means of cheques, travellers' cheques, bank transfers, credit cards and electronic purses. Banking will be possible in both euros and Belgian francs until the Belgian franc is withdrawn from circulation—which must be by 1 July 2002. The Belgian franc (BEF) consists of 100 centimes. On 30 June 1997 the notes in circulation totalled BEF482bn. Total money supply in Dec. 1997 was BEF1,510bn. In Feb. 1998 gold reserves were 15·32m. troy oz. and foreign exchange reserves US$15,124m. Inflation in 1998 was 1·1% (1999 forecast, 1·4%).

In 1990 Belgian authorities decided to peg the franc to the EMS currencies considered to be stability anchors. In the present case this is the German mark.

Banking and Finance. The National Bank of Belgium was established in 1850. The governor—in 1998, Alfons Verplaetse—is appointed for a 5-year period. The Bank's independence is guaranteed by the law of 22 March 1993 regarding the status and the supervision of credit institutions. The national Bank of Belgium is in charge of the issue of banknotes, the execution of exchange rate policy and the conduct of monetary policy. Furthermore, it is the Bank of banks and the cashier of the federal state.

The law of 22 March 1993 defines the legal provisions governing banking activity. It transposes into Belgian legislation the European Directive of 15 Dec. 1989 on the co-ordination of laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the taking up and pursuit of the business of credit institutions; and the Directive of 6 April 1992 on the supervision of credit institutions on a consolidated basis.

The term 'credit institutions' covers the Belgian credit institutions and those which come under the law of another country, be it a member of the European Union or not, with a registered office in Belgium. The activity of credit institutions must consist of receiving deposits and other repayable funds from the public, and granting credit on their own account.

The law of 4 Dec. 1990 on financial transactions and financial markets defines the legal framework for collective investment institutions, the sole object of which is the collective investment of capital raised from the public. It transposes into Belgian legislation the European Directive of 20 Dec. 1985 on the co-ordination of laws, regulations and administrative provisions, relating to undertakings for collective investment in transferable securities.

The law of 6 April 1995 relating to secondary markets, status and supervision of investment firms, intermediaries and investment consultants, provides the credit institutions with direct access to securities' stock exchanges. Stock exchange legislation was also subject to an important reform. The law fundamentally modifies the competitive environment and strengthens exercise conditions for securities' dealers.

On 30 June 1998, 129 credit institutions with a balance sheet totalling BEF30,065bn. were established in Belgium: 88 governed by Belgian law and 41 by foreign law. 353 collective investment institutions (109 Belgian and 244 foreign) were marketed and supervised by the Banking and Finance Commission; and 55 investment firms were operating, with the approval of the Banking and Finance Commission.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The production of electricity amounted to 75,079m. kWh in 1997. 59% of production in 1995 was nuclear-produced. Capacity (1994) was 13·59m. kW; consumption per capita (1995 estimate) was 6,823 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Production of gas in 1997 was 372,095m. cu. metres.

Water. Total capacity for 1997 was 1,065·46m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Output (in tonnes) for 4 calendar years:

	1994	1995	1996	1997
Coke	3,735,744	3,696,076	3,549,789	3,401,431

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Length of roads, 1997: Motorways, 1,679 km; other state roads, 12,509 km; provincial roads, 1,326 km; local roads, about 129,400 km. The number of motor vehicles registered on 1 Aug. 1998 was 5,454,056, including 4,491,734 passenger cars, 14,588 buses, 453,122 trucks, 42,342 non-agricultural tractors, 159,993 agricultural tractors, 241,110 motor cycles and 51,167 special vehicles. In 1997 there were 50,078 road accidents, with 1,257 fatalities.

Rail. The main Belgian lines were a State enterprise from their inception in 1834. In 1926 the Société Nationale des Chemins de Fer Belges (SNCB) was formed to take over the railways. The State is sole holder of the ordinary shares of SNCB, which carry the majority vote at General Meetings. The length of railway operated in 1997 was 3,422 km (electrified, 2,507 km). Revenue in 1997 was BEF77,012m.; expenditure, BEF74,248m. In 1997, 59·0m. tonnes of freight and 144m. passengers were carried.

The regional transport undertakings Société Régionale Wallonne de Transport and Vlaamse Vervoermaatschappij operate electrified light railways around Charleroi (19 km) and from De Panne to Knokke (68 km). There is also a metro and tramway in Brussels (165 km), and tramways in Antwerp (180 km) and Ghent (29 km).

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Brussels and Antwerp (Deurne). In 1994, 5·73m. passengers departed and 5·61m. arrived. The national airline SABENA (Société anonyme belge d'exploitation de la navigation aérienne) was set up in 1923. It was announced in Nov. 1990 that it was to be partially privatized, the state retaining a 25% stake. SABENA operates routes to other parts of Europe, North and South America, North, Central and South Africa and to the Near, Middle and Far East. In 1997 its fleet comprised 33 aircraft. In 1997 SABENA flew 73m. km, carrying 6,872,146 passengers and 341 tonne-km of freight. 61 other airlines operate services. In 1996 Brussels National Airport handled 13,359,813 passengers (13,358,163 on international flights) and 450,710 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. On 1 Jan. 1998 the merchant fleet was composed of 27 vessels of 429,554 tonnes. There were 8 shipping companies in 1997. In 1996, 14,628 vessels entered, and 14,653 cleared, the port of Antwerp. In 1994, 33·8m. tonnes of cargo were loaded and 65·5m. tonnes discharged at Belgian ports.

The length of navigable inland waterways was 1,493·3 km in 1995. 107·8m. tonnes of freight were carried on inland waterways in 1996.

Telecommunications. In 1997 telephone main lines numbered 4,768,900 (468·1 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were 235,000 cellular phone subscribers, 165,000 fax machines and 1,400,000 PCs in use in 1995. There were around 558,000 Internet users in Aug. 1998.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 1,635 post offices, with a gross revenue totalling BEF50,540m.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Judges are appointed for life. There is a court of cassation, 5 courts of appea,l and assize courts for political and criminal cases. There are 27 judicial districts, each with a court of first instance. In each of the 222 cantons is a justice and judge of the peace. There are also various special tribunals. There is trial by jury in assize courts. The death penalty, which had been in abeyance for 45 years, was formally abolished in 1991.

The Gendarmerie ceased to be part of the army in Jan. 1992.

Religion. There is full religious liberty, and part of the income of the ministers of all denominations is paid by the State. In 1997 there were 8·96m. Roman Catholics. Numbers of clergy, 1996: Roman Catholic, 3,899; Protestant, 84; Anglican, 9; Jews, 26; Greek Orthodox, 39. There are 8 Roman Catholic dioceses subdivided into 260 deaneries. The Protestant (Evangelical) Church is under a synod. There is also a Central Jewish Consistory, a Central Committee of the Anglican Church and a Free Protestant Church.

Education. Following the constitutional reform of 1988, education is the responsibility of the Flemish and Walloon communities. There were (1996–97) 4,107 pre-primary schools, with 424,521 pupils; 4,401 primary schools, with 737,823 pupils and 82,168 teachers; and 1,727 secondary schools, with 796,945 pupils and 115,262 teachers. In higher education, there were 229,749 students and 38,014 teachers in 17 university and 134 non-university colleges and institutes. There are 5 royal academies of fine arts and 5 royal conservatoires at Brussels, Liège, Ghent, Antwerp and Mons.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A low-lying country on the Central American mainland, Belize was the home of the Mayan civilization, which flourished from about 300 BC to 900 AD. In 1502 Columbus sailed into a bay which he named the Bay of Honduras, although he did not actually visit the area later known as British Honduras. European settlement was established in 1638 by shipwrecked British sailors. These were later joined by British soldiers and sailors disbanded after the capture of Jamaica from Spain in 1655. Spain claimed sovereignty over the entire New World except for certain Portuguese possessions and so there were numerous attacks from nearby Spanish settlements during the next century. Victory was won by the settlers in the Battle of St George's Caye in 1798. In 1862 British Honduras was formally declared a British colony, subordinate to Jamaica.

From an early date the settlers had governed themselves under a system of democracy by public meeting. A constitution was granted in 1765 and, with some modification, continued until 1840 when an executive council was created.

In 1853 the public meeting was replaced by a legislative assembly with the British Superintendent, an office created in 1786 at the settlers' request, as chairman. British settlers began to penetrate the interior as coastal timber became exhausted. The Indians resisted this penetration and the 19th century was punctuated by clashes between the two. When the settlement became a colony in 1862, the Superintendent was replaced by a Lieut.-Governor under the Governor of Jamaica. The frontier with Guatemala was agreed by Convention in 1859 but was declared invalid by Guatemala in 1940.

The Crown Colony system of government was introduced in 1871, and the legislative assembly by its own vote was replaced by a nominated legislative council with an official majority, presided over by the Lieut.-Governor. The administrative connection with Jamaica was severed in 1884 when the title of Lieut.-Governor was changed to that of Governor. Universal suffrage was introduced in 1964 and thereafter the majority of the legislature were elected rather than appointed. The ministerial system was adopted in 1971. In June 1974 British Honduras became Belize. Independence was achieved on 21 Sept. 1981 and a new constitution introduced.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Belize is bounded in the north by Mexico, west and south by Guatemala and east by the Caribbean. Fringing the coast there are 3 atolls and some 400 islets (cays) in the world's second longest barrier reef (140 miles) which was declared a world heritage in 1997. Area, 22,963 sq. km.

There are 6 districts as follows, with area, population at the 1991 census and chief city:

District	Area (in sq. km)	Population	Chief City	Population
Corozal	1,860	28,217	Corozal	7,062
Belize	4,307	56,131	Belize City	44,087
Orange Walk	4,636	29,462	Orange Walk	10,966
Cayo	5,196	35,194	San Ignacio	8,962
Stann Creek	2,554	18,061	Dangriga	6,435
Toledo	4,413	17,275	Punta Gorda	3,458

Population (1996 census, est.), 219,296; density, 10 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 242,000.

In 1995 an estimated 53·5% of the population were rural. The proportion of the population considered as rural had been 52·5% in 1990. No other country saw such a considerable percentage swing away from urbanization in the same 5-year period. In 1995 some 45,000 Belizeans were working abroad.

The capital Belmopan had a population of 3,852 in 1993. Other towns (with 1993 population) are: Belize City (47,724), Orange Walk Town (11,922), San Ignacio (9,701), Corozal Town (7,645), Dangriga (6,966).

English is the official language. Spanish is widely spoken. At the 1996 census (est.) the main ethnic groups were Mestizo (Spanish-Maya), 44%; Creole (African descent), 30%; Mayans, 11%; and Garifuna (Caribs), 7%.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 7,200; deaths, 1,250. In 1996 (est.) the birth rate per 1,000 was 32·8 and the death rate 5·7; infant mortality in 1996 (est.) was 33·9 per 1,000 births and there were 1,138 marriages. Life expectancy was 68·5 years in 1996. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 4·2 children per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate with high rainfall and small annual range of temperature. The driest months are Feb. and March. Belize, Jan. 74°F (23·3°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 76" (1,890 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution, which came into force on 21 Sept. 1981, provided for a National Assembly, with a 5-year term, comprising a 29-member House of Representatives elected by universal suffrage, and a Senate consisting of 8 members, 5 appointed by the Governor-General on the advice of the Prime Minister, 2 on the advice of the Leader of the Opposition and 1 on the advice of the Belize Advisory Council.

National Anthem. 'O, Land of the Free'; words by S. A. Haynes, tune by S. W. Young.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the general election of 27 Aug. 1998 the opposition People's United Party (PUP) won 26 seats with 59·4% of the votes cast against just 3 for the ruling United Democratic Party (UDP). Turn-out was 78·1%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor-General: Sir Colville Young, GCMG.

The cabinet in March 1999 comprised as follows:

Prime Minister and Minister of Finance and Foreign Affairs: Said Musa (PUP).

Senior Minister: George Price.

Deputy Prime Minister, Minister of Natural Resources: John Briceno. Budget Planning and Management: Ralph Fonseca. Economic Development: Manuel Esquivel. Trade and Industry: Alfredo Martinez. Commerce and Public Services: José Coye. Works: Henry Canton. Health: Servulo Baeza. Tourism and the Environment: Mark Espat. Agriculture and Fisheries: Daniel Silva. Energy, Science, Technology and Transport: Joseph Cayetano. Public Utilities and Communications: Maxwell Samuels. Education and Sports: Cordel Hyde. Housing, Urban Development and Co-operatives, Home Affairs and Labour: Hubert Elrington. Rural Development and Culture: Marcel Mes. Youth Development, Women's Affairs and Human Resources: Dolores Balderamos García. National Co-ordination and Mobilization: Ruben Campos. National Security: Jorge Espat. Sugar Industry, Local Government and Latin American Affairs: Florencio Marin.

Local Government. At elections to 7 municipalities in March 1991 the electorate was 23,215 and 19,527 votes were cast. The PUP gained control of 5 town boards and the UDP of 2.

DEFENCE

The Belize Defence Force consists of 1 infantry battalion, with 5 active and 3 reserve companies. The Air Wing operates 2 Islander patrol aircraft and a T.67 Firefly trainer. There is also a Maritime wing. In 1996 it numbered 50 and operated 1 fast patrol craft and 10 boats and support craft. Total personnel (1996) 1,050, with a reserve militia of 700.

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$16m. (US$69 per capita).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

While asserting a longstanding territorial claim on Belize, Guatemala recognized Belize's independence in Sept. 1991. In return Belize reduced its maritime zones to 3 miles in the south, subject to final agreement on a maritime boundary.

Belize is a member of the UN, the Commonwealth, OAS, CARICOM and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Policy. The National Social and Economic Council was set up in 1993 to provide a forum for discussion between the public and private sectors. There are national economic plans.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 3·7% in 1995 (6·0% in 1994).

Budget. The 1997 budget (forecast) had revenues of $B283·36m. and expenditure of $B362·26m.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Belize dollar (BZD) of 100 cents. Since 1976 $B2 has been fixed at US$1. Total money supply was $B170m. in Feb. 1998. The average annual inflation rate over the period 1990–96 was 3·9%. Foreign exchange reserves in Feb. 1998 were US$54m.

Banking and Finance. A Central Bank was established in 1981 (governor, Keith Arnold). There were (1993) 4 commercial banks of which 2 were locally owned, and a Government Savings Bank. The Development Finance Corporation provides long-term credit for development of agriculture and industry. Amendments to the Banking Ordinance permit offshore banking.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity in 1995 was 34,000 kW. Production was 110m. kWh in 1994 and consumption per capita in 1994 was 524 kWh. Supply, 110 and 220 volts; 60 Hz. A rural electrification unit was set up in 1991.

Agriculture. In 1994 there were 45,000 ha of arable land, 12,000 of permanent crops and 48,000 ha of permanent pasture. Agriculture accounted for 21% of GDP in 1996. The main crops are sugar-cane, citrus fruits and bananas. Maize, rice and kidney beans are grown for domestic consumption. Livestock (1996): Cattle, 60,000; pigs, 22,000; horses, 5,000; chickens (1995), 1m.

Forestry. In 1995, 1,962,000 ha (86·1% of the total land area) were under forests, which include mahogany, cedar, Santa Maria, pine and rosewood and many secondary hardwoods, as well as woods suitable for pulp. Timber production in 1995 was 188,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. There were (1995) 13 registered fishing co-operatives. The total catches in 1995 amounted to 2,094 tonnes, mainly from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing is mainly confined to processing agricultural products and timber. There is also a clothing industry. Sugar production was 105,397 tonnes in 1993-94 (100,200 tonnes in 1992-93).

Labour. The labour market alternates between full employment, often accompanied by local shortages in the citrus and sugar-cane harvesting (Jan.–July), and under-employment during the wet season (Aug.–Dec.), aggravated by the seasonal nature of the major industries. In 1996 the labour force totalled 73,000 (78% males), of whom 13% were unemployed.

Trade Unions. There were 14 accredited unions in 1997.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$288m. in 1996.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The People's Republic of Benin is the former Republic of Dahomey. Dahomey was called after the historic kingdom of Dahomey or Abomey, conquered by the French in 1892–94. The new name given to the country on 30 Nov. 1975 came from the Bight of Benin and the former 'French Bight of Benin Settlements', themselves called after the ancient kingdom of Benin in modern Nigeria. The kingdom of Dahomey was a powerful, well-organized state from the 17th century, trading extensively in slaves through the port of Whydah with the Portuguese, British and French. On the coast an educated African elite grew up in the 19th century.

After the defeat of Dahomey, whose monarchy was abolished, the French occupied territory inland up to the River Niger, and created the colony of Dahomey as part of French West Africa. Subsequently, there were several African revolts, a number occurring during the First World War. The African elite protested frequently at French rule and, as African nationalism blossomed after the Second World War, Dahomey saw lively political activity and the formation of several parties.

Dahomey became independent on 1 Aug. 1960 with a coalition of 3 parties in power and Hubert Maga as president. Opposition to his rule led to a military coup by Gen. Christophe Soglo in Oct. 1963. Soglo handed over power to another political leader, Sourou-Migan Apithy, but returned to power in late 1965. Two years later he was deposed and replaced by another military regime, led by Col. Alphonse Alley. Alley handed over in 1968 to a civilian president, Emile Derlin-Zinsou. In Dec. 1969 a 3-man military junta took control; elections were held in early 1970, after which a Presidential Council was installed in power, consisting of Maga, Apithy and Justin Ahomadegbe. Maga chaired the Council until May 1972 when he handed over to Ahomadegbe.

In Oct. 1972 Gen. Mathieu Kérékou seized power and installed a new left-wing regime committed to socialist policies. A constitution was adopted in 1977, based on a single Marxist-Leninist party, the Parti de la Révolution Populaire du Bénin (PRPB). Despite persistent economic problems, factional fighting within its ranks and frequent plots and attempts at its overthrow, the regime has retained power.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Benin is bounded in the east by Nigeria, north by Niger and Burkina Faso, west by Togo and south by the Gulf of Guinea. The area is 112,622 sq. km, and the population, census 1992, 4,855,349. Estimate (1996) 5·71m.; density, 50·7 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 6·22m.

In 1995 an estimated 61·6% of the population were rural.

The areas, populations and capitals of the 6 provinces are as follows:

Province	Sq. km	Census 1992	Capital	Census 1992
Atakora	31,200	648,330	Natitingou	57,535
Borgou	51,000	816,278	Parakou	106,708
Zou	18,700	813,985	Abomey	65,725
Mono	3,800	646,954	Lokossa	52,909
Atlantique	3,200	1,060,310	Cotonou	533,212
Ouéme	4,700	869,492	Porto-Novo	177,660

Other large towns (with 1992 census population): Djougou (132,192), Bohicon (81,121), Kandi (74,169), Ouidah (64,068).

In 1992 the main ethnic groups numbered (in 1,000): Fon, 1,930; Yoruba, 590; Adja, 540; Bariba, 420; Aizo, 420; Somba, 320; Fulani, 270. The official language is French. Over half the people speak Fon.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 (estimates) births , 267,000; deaths, 77,000. Rates, 1996 estimates (per 1,000 population): Births, 46·8; deaths, 13·5. Infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 105·1. Expectation of life in 1996 was 52·7 years (50·7 for males and 54·7 for females). Annual growth rate (1997 est.), 3·3%. Fertility rate, 1990-95, 6·3 children per woman.

CLIMATE

In coastal parts there is an equatorial climate, with a long rainy season from March to July and a short rainy season in Oct. and Nov. The dry season increases in length from the coast, with inland areas having rain only between May and Sept. Porto-Novo, Jan. 82°F (27·8°C), July 78°F (25·6°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,300 mm). Cotonou, Jan. 81°F (27·2°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 53" (1,325 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Benin Party of Popular Revolution (PRPB) held a monopoly of power from 1977 to 1989.

In Feb. 1990 a 'National Conference of the Vital Elements ('Vives forces') of the Nation' proclaimed its sovereignty and appointed Nicéphore Soglo Prime Minister of a provisional government. At a referendum in Dec. 1990, 93·2% of votes cast were in favour of the new constitution, which has introduced a presidential regime. The President is directly elected for renewable 5-year terms. Parliament is the 83-member National Assembly, elected by proportional representation for 4-year terms.

A 30-member advisory Social and Economic Council was set up in 1994. There is a Constitutional Court

BHUTAN

Druk-yul

(Kingdom of Bhutan)

Capital: Thimphu
Population estimate, 2000: 2·03m.
Estimated GDP: $1·3bn.
HDI/world rank: 0·347/155

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A sovereign kingdom in the Himalayas, Bhutan was governed by a spiritual ruler and a temporal ruler—the Dharma and Deb Raja—from the 17th century. The capital was Funakha. The interior was organized into districts for defence. Districts were controlled by governors and each district's central fort (dzhong) by a fort commander. These officials formed the electoral council appointing the Deb Raja. The British East India Company made a treaty with Bhutan in 1774 but relations were uneasy and there were violent incidents. The British annexed a number of borderland areas in an attempt to contain Bhutanese raiders.

During the 19th century civil wars were fought between district governors for the office of the Deb Raja. The governors of Tongsa and Paro were the most frequently chosen because they were the strongest. The appointment of new governors was likewise settled by force. By 1860 the British in India were disturbed by the instability of Bhutan. An attempt to interfere in 1863 resulted in a short frontier war, ending with a treaty in 1865. The British annexed part of Dewangiri and agreed to pay the rulers of Bhutan an annual subsidy.

In 1907 the office of Dharma Raja came to an end. The governor of Tongsa, Ugyen Wangchuk, was then chosen Maharajah of Bhutan, the throne becoming hereditary in his family (the title is now King of Bhutan). He concluded a further treaty with the British in 1910 allowing internal autonomy but British control of foreign policy. The treaty was renewed with the Government of India in 1949; the subsidy was further increased and the annexed area of Dewangiri returned to Bhutan.

India concluded a fresh treaty with Bhutan on 8 Aug. 1949 under which Bhutan continues to be guided by India in its external relations while India undertakes not to interfere in the internal administration of Bhutan. The subsidy paid to Bhutan was increased to Rs 0·5m. In the early 1990s, tens of thousands of 'illegal immigrants', mostly Nepali-speaking Hindus, were forcibly expelled. A decade on, there are still nearly 90,000 people claiming to be Bhutanese refugees in camps set up by UNHCR in eastern Nepal.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Bhutan is situated in the eastern Himalayas, bounded in the north by Tibet and on all other sides by India. In 1949 India retroceded 32 sq. miles of Dewangiri, annexed in 1865. Area about 18,000 sq. miles (46,500 sq. km); population estimate, 1997, 1·87m; density, 40 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 2·03m.

In 1995 an estimated 6·0% of the population lived in urban areas. Only Rwanda has a larger proportion of its population living in rural areas. A Nepalese minority makes up 30–35% of the population, mainly in the south. The capital is Thimphu (1993, 30,340 population).

The official language is Dzongkha.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 (estimates) births, 74,000 (rate of 41·4 per 1,000 population); deaths, 25,000 (rate of 14·4 per 1,000 population). Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, was 49·1 years for men and 52·4 years for women. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 117 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 5·9 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is largely controlled by altitude. The mountainous north is cold, with perpetual snow on the summits, but the centre has a more moderate climate, though winters are cold, with rainfall under 40" (1,000 mm). In the south, the climate is humid sub-tropical and rainfall approaches 200" (5,000 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

There is no formal constitution. The monarchy acts in consultation with a National Assembly (Tshogdu), which was reinstituted in 1953. But King Wangchuck is leaning towards democracy. In July 1998 the National Assembly was given the right to dismiss him. This has 150 members and meets at least once a year. Two-thirds are representatives of the people and are elected for a 3-year term. All Bhutanese over 30 years may be candidates.

The reigning King is Jigme Singye Wangchuck, who succeeded his father Jigme Dorji Wangchuck (died 21 July 1972).

In 1907 the Trongsa Penlop (the governor of the province of Trongsa in central Bhutan), Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, GCIE, KCSI, was elected as the first hereditary Maharaja of Bhutan. The Bhutanese title is Druk Gyalpo, and his successor is now addressed as King of Bhutan. Educated in Britain, King Wangchuk is opposed to certain Western influences such as television and jeans.

12 monastic representatives are elected by the central and regional ecclesiastical bodies, while the remaining members are nominated by the King, and include members of the Council of Ministers (the Cabinet) and the Royal Advisory Council.

National Anthem. 'Druk tsendhen koipi gyelknap na' ('In the Thunder Dragon Kingdom'); words by Dasho Shinkar Lam, tune by A. Tongmi.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Minister of Agriculture, Education and Health: Kinzang Dorji. Finance: Hishey Zimba. Foreign Affairs: Jigme Thinly. Home Affairs: Thinley Gyamtso. Law: Sonam Tobgye. Trade and Industry: Khandu Wangchuck. Chairman, Royal Advisory Council: Kungang Tsangbi. Chairman, Third Committee (Social, Humanitarian, Cultural): Ugyen Tsering.

Local Government. There are 20 districts, each under a district officer (dzongda) responsible to the Royal Civil Service Commission through the Home Ministry.

DEFENCE

Army. There was (1996) an Army of 6,000 men. 3 to 5 weeks militia training was introduced in 1989 for senior students and government officials, and 3 months training for some 10,000 volunteers from the general population in 1990 and 1991. Since 1992 only refresher training has been implemented.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Bhutan is a member of the UN.

ECONOMY

Policy. The 8th development plan (1997–2002) allows for expenditure of Nu35,169m. Hydro-electric power and industries are stressed. The 7th plan (1992–97) emphasized forest and mineral exploitations, education and medical facilities.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 8·0% in 1995 (6·0% in 1994).

Budget. The budget for 1996–97 envisaged current expenditure of Nu2,198m. and internal domestic revenue of Nu1,950m.

Currency. The unit of currency is the ngultrum (BTN) of 100 chetrum, at parity with the Indian rupee. Indian currency is also legal tender. Total money supply in Nov. 1997 was Nu2,078m.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Bhutan was established in 1968. The headquarters are at Phuentsholing with 26 branches throughout the country. The Royal Monetary Authority (founded 1982) acts as the central bank. Deposits (Dec. 1995) Nu2,816·3m. Foreign Exchange reserves: US$120m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity at June 1995 was 342,000 kW (of which 336,000 kW were hydro-electric). Production (1994) was 1,685m. kWh. In 1995, 38 towns and 297 villages had electricity. Consumption per capita in 1995 was estimated to be 79 kWh. Bhutan exports electricity to India.

Minerals. Large deposits of limestone, marble, dolomite, slate, graphite, lead, copper, coal, talc, gypsum, beryl, mica, pyrites and tufa have been found. Most mining activity (principally limestone, coal, slate and dolomite) is small-scale.

Agriculture. Agriculture accounts for approximately 42% of GDP. The area under cultivation in 1996 was 0·36m. ha. The chief products (1990 production in 1,000 tonnes) are rice (43), millet (7), wheat (5), barley (4), maize (40), potatoes (31), oranges (58), apples (5), handloom cloth, timber and cardamom.

Livestock (1996): Cattle, 435,000; pigs, 75,000; sheep, 59,000; goats (1995), 42,000; horses, 30,000.

Forestry. In 1996, 2·98m. ha were forested. Timber production in 1995 was 1·4m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. The total catches in 1995 amounted to an estimated 340 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

In 1995 there were 3,206 licensed industrial establishments, of which 1,785 were service, 1,085 construction and 336 manufacturing industries. Of the latter, 167 were forest-based, 81 agriculture-based and 35 mineral-based.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force totalled 888,000 (60% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The cumulative outstanding convertible currency debt at 30 June 1996 was US$81m. To the same date, cumulative debt service payments totalled US$7m.

Financial support is received from India, the UN and other international aid organizations.

Imports and Exports. Trade with India dominates but oranges and apples, timber, cardamom and liquor are also exported to the Middle East, Singapore and Europe.

Exports in 1994–95 were estimated at US$71m. and imports at US$114m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were about 3,285 km of roads, of which 1,543 km were highways and main roads, and 10,384 cars, buses, coaches, trucks and vans plus 5,959 motor cycles and mopeds. In the entire kingdom there is only one set of traffic lights.

Civil Aviation. In 1998 Druk-Air made 2 weekly flights to Delhi via Káthmandu and 4 weekly services to Bangkok via Dhaka and Rangoon (Yangon) or Calcutta. In 1995 scheduled airline traffic of Bhutan-based carriers flew 300,000 km, carrying 9,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 6,400 telephone main lines (10·4 per 1,000 inhabitants).

An international microwave link connects Thimphu to the Calcutta and Delhi satellite connections. A telecommunications link between Thimphu and London by Intelsat-satellite was inaugurated in 1990. Thimphu and Phuentsholing are connected by telex to Delhi. There were 300 fax machines in 1995.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 103 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The High Court consists of 8 judges appointed by the King. There is a Magistrate's Court in each district, under a Thrimpon, from which appeal is to the High Court at Thimphu.

Religion. Government estimates, 1995: 70% of the population are Mahayana Buddhists, 25% Hindu and 5% Moslem.

Education. In April 1996 there were 9,257 pupils and 225 teachers in community schools, 53,097 pupils and 1,374 teachers in primary schools, 18,762 pupils and 650 teachers in 20 junior high and 10 high schools, and 1,795 pupils and 203 teachers in technical, vocational and tertiary-level schools. There were 1,248 students and 61 teachers in 7 private schools. Many students receive higher technical training in India, as well as under the UN Development Programme and the Colombo Plan, in Australia, Germany, New Zealand, Japan, Singapore, the USA and the UK. In Oct. 1990, 140 students were receiving university education in India. Adult literacy was 42·2% in 1995 (56·2% among males and 28·1% among females).

Health. There were (1996) 27 hospitals, 32 dispensaries, 97 basic health units, 10 indigenous dispensaries, 454 outreach clinics, 19 malaria centres and 3 training institutes. In 1994 beds totalled 970; there were 100 doctors and 578 paramedics in 1994. Free health facilities are available to 90% of the population.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1994 there were 52 radio stations for internal administrative communications, and 13 hydro-met stations. Bhutan Broadcasting Service (autonomous since 1992) broadcasts a daily programme in English, Sharchopkha, Dzongkha and Nepali. There is no local television station. Satellite and cable television are illegal. In 1995 there were 10,000 TV receivers and 30,000 radio receivers.

Cinema. There are 2 in Thimphu and 4 others.

Press. There is 1 weekly newspaper, published in English, Dzongkha and Nepali. Total circulation (1996) about 12,000.

Tourism. Tourism is the largest source of foreign exchange. In 1996, 5,150 tourists visited Bhutan (4,765 in 1995), bringing revenue of US$5m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bolivia was part of the Inca Empire until conquered by the Spanish in the 16th century. In 1776 it became part of the viceroyalty of Buenos Aires. Independence was won and the Republic of Bolivia was proclaimed on 6 Aug. 1825. During the first 154 years of its independence, Bolivia had 189 governments, many of them installed by coups. Largely civilian governments from 1880 gave way to mainly military ones after 1936. In 1952 a revolution led by the MNR (National Revolutionary Movement) brought about agrarian reform and nationalization of the tin mines, Bolivia's chief source of wealth. In the 1960s the Argentinian revolutionary and former minister of the Cuban government, Ernesto 'Che' Guevara, was killed in Bolivia while fighting with a left-wing guerrilla group. In 1971, Bolivian instability reached a peak with the brief establishment of a revolutionary Popular Assembly during the regime of Gen. Torres. Later repression under Gen. Hugo Banzer took a heavy toll on the left-wing parties. An attempt to hold elections in July 1978 led to Gen. Juan Pereda Asbún (supported by the army) carrying out a military coup. In Nov. he was in turn overthrown by Gen. David Padilla Arancibia, the army commander. Elections in July 1979 proved indecisive, and an interim government was formed until it was overthrown in Nov. by yet another army coup, which won power for a mere two weeks.

The 1980 elections were as inconclusive as those of the previous year and a coup followed, led by the army C.-in-C. Gen. Luis Garcia Meza. However in 1981 he was forced to resign in favour of Gen. Celso Torrelio Villa. When the new president tried introducing civilians to the Cabinet and adopting a liberal attitude to trade unions, he was superseded by Gen. Guido Vildoso Calderón. Civilian rule was restored in Oct. 1982 when Dr Siles Zuazo (who had won a small majority in the two previous elections) became president. There followed a period of economic reform embracing free markets and open trade. The minister responsible for economic changes, Gonzalo Sanchez de Lozada, was elected president in 1993. In 1997 he was succeeded by Gen. Hugo Banzer Suarez.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Bolivia is a landlocked state bounded in the north and east by Brazil, south by Paraguay and Argentina, and west by Chile and Peru, with an area of some 424,165 sq. miles (1,098,581 sq. km). A coastal strip of land on the Pacific passed to Chile after a war in 1884. In 1953 Chile declared Arica a free port and Bolivia has certain privileges there.

Population estimate, 1998: 7,949,933 (60·3% urban); density, 6·9 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 8·33m.

Area and population of the departments (capitals in brackets) at the 1992 census and as estimated in 1998:

Departments	Area (sq. km)	Census 1992	Estimate 1998
La Paz (La Paz)	133,98	1,900,786	2,313,877
Cochabamba (Cochabamba)	55,631	1,110,205	1,445,990
Potosí (Potosí)	118,218	645,889	755,895
Santa Cruz (Santa Cruz)	370,621	1,364,389	1,703,901
Chuquisaca (Sucre)	51,524	453,756	562,917
Tarija (Tarija)	37,623	291,407	379,704
Oruro (Oruro)	53,588	340,114	386,980
Beni (Trinidad)	213,564	276,174	346,180
Pando (Cobija)	63,827	38,072	54,489
Total	1,098,581	6,420,792	7,949,933

Population (1992 census) of the principal towns: La Paz, 711,036; Santa Cruz, 694,616; Cochabamba, 404,102; El Alto, 404,367; Oruro, 183,194; Sucre, 130,952; Potosí, 112,291; Tarija, 90,000.

Spanish is the official and commercial language. The Amerindian languages Aymará and Quechua are spoken exclusively by 22% and 5·2% of the population respectively; Tupi Guaraní is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

The population growth rate has been estimated at 2·3% for the years 1995-2000; in 1996 births totalled an estimated 258,000 (birth rate of 34·0 per 1,000 population); deaths totalled an estimated 71,000 (rate, 9·4 per 1,000); infant mortality, 64·6 per 1,000 live births, the highest in South America. Expectation of life was 61·65 years in 1998. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 4·8 children per woman, also the highest in South America.

CLIMATE

The varied geography produces different climates. The low-lying areas in the Amazon Basin are warm and damp throughout the year, with heavy rainfall from Nov. to March; the Altiplano is generally dry between May and Nov. with sunshine but cold nights in June and July, while the months from Dec. to March are the wettest. La Paz, Jan. 53°F (11·7°C), July 47°F (8·3°C). Annual rainfall 23" (574 mm). Sucre, Jan. 55°F (13°C), July 49°F (9·4°C). Annual rainfall 27" (675 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Bolivia's first constitution was adopted on 19 Nov. 1826. The President is elected by universal suffrage for a 5-year term. If 50% of the vote is not obtained, the result is determined by a secret ballot in Congress amongst the leading 2 candidates. The President appoints the members of his Cabinet. There is a bicameral legislature; the Senate comprises 27 members, 3 from each department, and the Chamber of Deputies 130 members, all serving terms of 5 years. A constitutional amendment of 1996 introduced direct elections for 65 deputies; the remainder are nominated by party leaders. Voting is compulsory.

National Anthem. 'Bolivianos, el hado propicio' ('Bolivians, the propitious fate'); words by I. de Sanjinés; tune by B. Vincenti.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential and parliamentary elections were held on 1 June 1997. The electorate was 3·2m. Gen. Hugo Banzer Suarez gained 22·3% of the votes cast, and Juan Carlos Durán 17·7%. As no candidate gained an absolute majority, Congress elected Gen. Hugo Banzer Suarez President on 4 Aug. 1997.

Presidential and parliamentary elections are scheduled for June 2002.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Gen. Hugo Banzer Suarez (ADN; sworn in Aug. 1997).

Vice-President: Jorge Quiroga (ADN).

The Cabinet was composed as follows in March 1999:

Foreign Affairs and Worship: Dr Javier Murillo de la Rocha (ADN). Finance: Herbert Muller Costas. Economic Development: Jorge Pacheco. Sustainable Development and Planning: Erick Alberto Reyes Villa (NFR). Presidency: Carlos Iturralde Ballivian (ADN). Health: Dr Tonchi Marinkovic Uzqueda (MIR). Defence: Fernando Kieffer Guzman (ADN). Government: Guido Nayar Parada (ADN). Labour and Microbusiness: Leopoldo López Cossio (MIR). Justice and Human Rights: Dr Ana Maria Cortes de Soriano (ADN). Education, Culture and Sports: Tito Hoz de Vila (ADN). Housing and Basic Services: Dr Maria Amparo Ballivian. International Trade and Investment: Dr Jorge Crespo Velasco (MIR). Agriculture: Oswaldo Antezana Vaca Diez.

Parties represented: Acción Democrática Nacionalista (ADN), Movimiento de Izquierda Revolucionaria (MIR), Unidad Cívica Solidaridad (UCS), Conciencia de Patria (CONDEPA), Nueva Fuerza Republicana (NFR).

Local Government. The republic is divided into 9 departments, with 94 provinces administered by sub-prefects, and 1,713 cantons administered by corregidores. Each department has a prefect appointed by the President and a legislature elected by municipal councillors. There are 312 municipalities. Elections are held every 5 years.

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription for 12 months at the age of 18 years. There has been optional pre-military training for high school pupils since 1998.

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$155m. (US$18 per capita).

Army. There are 6 military regions. The Army consists of 2 armoured battalions, 1 mechanized cavalry regiment and a Presidential Guard infantry regiment under direct Headquarters command; and 10 divisions comprising altogether 8 cavalry groups, 1 motorized infantry regiment, 22 infantry, 1 artillery, 1 armoured, 1 airborne and 6 engineer battalions. Equipment includes 36 Kuerassier SK-105 light tanks. There are 1 King Air 90, 1 Super King Air 200 and 2 C-212 Aviocar transports. Strength (1997) 25,000 (18,000 conscripts).

Navy. A small force exists for river and lake patrol duties, comprising 9 small patrol craft operating on Lake Titicaca and in the 6,000-mile Beni and Bolivia-Paraguay river systems, and also 1 Cessna 402 transport and 1 Cessna 206 for patrol duties. 1 ocean-going transport for use to and from Bolivian free zones in Argentina and Uruguay and 2 17-tonne hospital craft on Lake Titicaca complete the inventory.

Personnel in 1996 totalled 4,500, including 2,000 marines.

Air Force. The Air Force, established in 1923, has 6 combat-capable Groups, 4 equipped with T-33 armed jet trainers, 1 with armed PC-7s and 1 with Hughes 500 helicopters, for counter-insurgency operations. A search and rescue helicopter Group has 6 Brazilian-assembled Lamas and 20 UH-1 Iroquois. Other types in service include Brazilian T-23 Uirapuru and American T-41 primary trainers and Italian SF-260 basic trainers, 1 Electra transport, 6 Fokker F.27 and 2 Israeli-built Arava twin-turboprop light transports, 5 Convair transports, 2 Learjet VIP aircraft, 11 C-130/L-100 Hercules, 3 C-47s, 15 Turbo-Porters and some single- and twin-engined light aircraft, some confiscated from drug smugglers. Personnel strength (1996) about 4,000 (2,000 conscripts).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Bolivia is a member of the UN, OAS, LAIA, the Andean Group and the Amazon Pact, and is an associate member of Mercosur.

ECONOMY

Policy. Following the collapse of the international tin market in 1985 and severe inflation, a New Economic Policy was introduced de-restricting foreign trade, ending price controls and subsidies and freezing public-sector wages. A privatization programme affecting some 60 state-owned enterprises was instituted in June 1992. A programme of capitalization aims to attract foreign investment into state enterprises in oil, telephones, electricity supply, railways, airlines and smelters, while distributing 50% of the shares to adult citizens, to be held in retirement accounts.

Performance. Real GDP growth was estimated at 4·0% in 1996.

Budget. In 1m. bolivianos:

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Revenue	3,993	4,446	5,256	6,565	7,467
Expenditure	5,876	6,400	6,802	8,720	9,490

Currency. The unit of currency is the boliviano (BOB) of 100 centavos, which replaced the peso on 1 Jan. 1987 at a rate of 1 boliviano = 1m. pesos. Inflation was an annualized 4·4% in 1998. Foreign exchange reserves were US$903m. in Feb. 1998 and gold reserves 940,000 troy oz. Total money supply was 5,692,000 bolivianos in Dec. 1997.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank (governor, Juan Antonio Morales) is the bank of issue. In 1998 there were 14 commercial banks operating, including 5 foreign and 8 specialized development banks.

There are stock exchanges in La Paz and Santa Cruz.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is legal, but the old Spanish system is also employed.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was estimated to be 1,010,520 kW in 1997. Estimated production from all sources (1995), 3·02bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was estimated to be 334 kWh in 1995.

Oil and Gas. There are petroleum and natural gas deposits in the Santa Cruz-Camiri areas. Production of crude oil in 1996 was 10,682,314 bbls. Work has begun on a US$1·9 bn. pipeline from eastern Bolivia to São Paulo in Brazil. National gas output was 117,573 cu. ft in 1996.

Minerals. Mining accounts for 5·76% of GDP (1996 estimate). Tin-mining had been the mainstay of the economy until the collapse of the international tin market in 1985. Production, 1997 (in tonnes): Zinc, 154,491; lead, 18,608; tin, 12,898; antimony, 5,999; wolfram, 647; silver, 387; gold, 13,291 fine kg.

Agriculture. In 1996 agriculture contributed 14·95% of GDP (estimate). The rural population was estimated at 3,012,260 in 1996, 39·70% of total population. Output in 1,000 tonnes in 1996 (estimate) was: Sugar-cane, 4,120; rice, 343; coffee, 22; maize, 613; potatoes, 715; wheat, 98. In 1992, 77,000 tonnes of coca (the source of cocaine) were grown. Since 1987 Bolivia has received international (mainly US) aid to reduce the amount of coca grown, with compensation for farmers who co-operate.

Livestock, 1996: Cattle, 6,118,000; horses, 322,000; asses and mules, 712,000 (1995); pigs, 2,482,000; sheep, 8,039,000; goats (1995), 1,496,000; chickens (1995), 56m.

Forestry. Forests covered 48·3m. ha (44·6% of the land area) in 1995, down from 51·2m. ha in 1990. Tropical forests with woods ranging from the 'iron tree' to the light balsa are exploited. Timber production in 1995 was 2·57m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1995 total catches were 6,308 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

At the 1992 census there were 14,389 factories employing a total of 76,718 persons. The principal manufactures are foodstuffs and tobacco, and textiles.

Labour. Out of 1,256,000 people in employment in 1995, 348,000 were in wholesale and retail, 231,000 in manufacturing, 106,000 in construction and 95,000 in transport, storage and communications. The unemployment rate in 1995 was 3·6%. In 1998 the minimum wage was 300 bolivianos a month.

Trade Unions. Unions are grouped in the Confederación de Obreros Bolivianos.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

An agreement of Jan. 1992 with Peru gives Bolivia duty-free transit for imports and exports through a corridor leading to the Peruvian Pacific port of Ilo from the Bolivian frontier town of Desaguadero, in return for Peruvian access to the Atlantic via Bolivia's roads and railways. The mining code of 1991 gives tax incentives to foreign investors. Foreign debt was US$5,174m. in 1996.

Imports and Exports. The value of imports and exports in US$1m.

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Imports	1,130·50	1,176·95	1,196·35	1,433·59	1,656·61	1,909·36
Exports	742·07	786·71	1,091·00	1,139·07	1,216·19	1,255·64

Main exports, 1996 (in US$1m.): Soya beans, 201; zinc, 151; gold, 119; natural gas, 94; jewellery, 88; timber, 83; tin, 83.

Main export markets, 1996: USA, 26·1%; EU (especially UK, Germany and Belgium), 22·3%; Argentina, Peru and Colombia, 39·3%. Main import suppliers:

Brazil, Argentina and Chile, 36·8%; EU (Germany, Belgium and Italy), 36·8%; Japan, 12%.

Imports and exports pass chiefly through the ports of Arica and Antofagasta in Chile, Mollendo-Matarani in Peru, through La Quiaca on the Bolivian-Argentine border, and through river-ports on the rivers flowing into the Amazon.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The total length of the road system was 53,153 km in 1996, of which 3,200 km were hard-surfaced. Estimated total vehicles in use in 1997 was 397,112.

Rail. In 1994, the state railway ENFE network totalled 3,697 km of metre gauge, comprising unconnected Eastern (1,423 km) and Andina (2,274 km) systems, and carried 0·8m. passengers and 1·4m. tonnes of freight.

Civil Aviation. The 2 international airports are La Paz (El Alto) and Santa Cruz (Viru Viru). The national airlines are the state-owned Aerosur (domestic services only) and Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano (97·5% state-owned), which in 1998 ran scheduled services between La Paz and Arica, Buenos Aires, Guayaquil, Lima, Miami, Montevideo and Trinidad, as well as many internal services. Other airlines serving Bolivia in 1998 were Aerolíneas Argentinas, Aeroperú, American Airlines, Lan-Chile, SAETA and Varig. In 1994 Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano flew 13·8m. km, carrying 1,175,000 passengers (424,000 on international flights).

Shipping. Lake Titicaca and about 19,000 km of rivers are open to navigation.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 535,000 telephone main lines (68·8 per 1,000 inhabitants). In Oct. 1997 there were approximately 8,000 Internet users; in 1995 there were 7,200 cellular phone subscribers.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 159 post offices, or 1 for every 46,600 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Justice is administered by the Supreme Court, superior department courts (of 5 or 7 judges) and courts of local justice. The Supreme Court, with headquarters at Sucre, is divided into two sections, civil and criminal, of 5 justices each, with the Chief Justice presiding over both. Members of the Supreme Court are chosen on a two-thirds vote of Congress.

Religion. The Roman Catholic church was disestablished in 1961. It is under a cardinal (in Sucre), an archbishop (in La Paz), 6 bishops and vicars apostolic. It had 7·16m. adherents in 1992.

Education. Adult literacy was 83·1% in 1995 (male, 90·5%; female, 76%). The female literacy rate is the lowest in South America. Primary instruction is free and obligatory between the ages of 6 and 14 years. In 1993 there were 11,878 schooling facilities; 10,485 public and 1,393 private. The national rate of school attendance (6–19-year-olds) reaches 74·3%.

In 1994-95 there were 7 universities, 2 technical universities, 1 Roman Catholic university, 1 musical conservatory, and colleges in the following fields: Business, 6; teacher training, 4; industry, 1; nursing, 1; technical teacher training, 1; fine arts, 1, rural education, 1; physical education, 1. There were 103,900 university students in 1995-96 and 4,920 academic staff.

In 1994 total expenditure on education came to 5·4% of GNP and represented 11·2% of total government expenditure.

Health. In 1993 there were 3,392 doctors, 1,869 nurses and 336 hospitals.

Welfare. Retirement pensions are funded by the state out of its share of the capitalization of enterprises. Previously established funds covered only some 10% of the workforce, and are being allowed to run down. A second compulsory contributory pension fund was started in 1997 for all workers aged 21 or over.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The broadcasting authority is the Dirección General de Telecomunicaciones. There were (1987) about 85 radio stations, the majority of which were local and commercial. There is a commercial government television service. There are 4 private television stations and 1 university station (educational channel) in La Paz. In 1995 there were 4,980,000 radio and 850,000 TV (colour by NTSC) receivers.

Cinema. In 1993 there were 129 cinemas.

Press. There were 11 daily newspapers in 1995 with a combined circulation of 500,000, at a rate of 67 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. In 1996 there were 375,000 foreign tourists. Receipts totalled US$160m.

BOSNIA-HERCEGOVINA

Republika Bosna i Hercegovina

Capital: Sarajevo
Population estimate, 2000: 4·34m.
Estimated GDP: $1·9bn.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Settled by Slavs in the 7th century, Bosnia was conquered by the Turks in 1463 when much of the population was gradually converted to Islam. At the Congress of Berlin (1878) the territory was assigned to Austro-Hungarian administration under nominal Turkish suzerainty. Austria-Hungary's outright annexation in 1908 generated international tensions which contributed to the outbreak of the First World War.

After 1918, Bosnia Hercegovina became part of a new kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes under the Serbian monarchy. Its name was changed to Yugoslavia in 1929. (See YUGOSLAVIA for developments up to and beyond the Second World War.)

On 15 Oct. 1991 the National Assembly adopted a 'Memorandum on Sovereignty', the Serbian deputies abstaining. This envisaged Bosnian autonomy within a Yugoslav federation. A referendum on independence was held on 29 Feb.–1 March 1992. Turn-out was 63·04%, the Serbian population largely boycotting it; 99·78% of votes cast were in favour. In March 1992 an agreement was reached under EC auspices by Moslems, Serbs and Croats to set up 3 autonomous ethnic communities under a central Bosnian authority.

Bosnia-Hercegovina declared itself independent on 5 April 1992, and was recognized by the EC and USA on 7 April. The 2 Serbian members of the Bosnian collective presidency resigned. Fighting broke out between the Serb, Croat and Moslem communities, with particularly heavy casualties and destruction in Sarajevo, leading to extensive Moslem territorial losses and an exodus of refugees. UN-sponsored ceasefires from June on were repeatedly violated. On 29 June the UN Security Council unanimously voted for the deployment of UN forces to secure the functioning of Sarajevo Airport and protect humanitarian aid missions.

On 13 Aug. 1992 the UN Security Council voted by 12 to nil with 3 abstentions (China, India and Zimbabwe) to authorize the use of force if necessary to ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid to besieged civilians. Internationally sponsored peace talks were held in Geneva in Jan. and at the UN in Feb. 1993, but Serb-Moslem-Croat fighting continued.

A NATO ultimatum of 10 Feb. 1994 gave Bosnian Serbs 10 days to withdraw their artillery from around Sarajevo. NATO forces used air strikes for the first time against Serb forces at Gorazde on 10 April. In Aug. Yugoslavia ceased supplying Bosnian Serbs and sealed the frontier.

An upsurge in fighting began in Oct. with Moslem-Croat attacks in the Bihać area. The Moslem advance was beaten back by Serb forces which bombed Bihać with napalm on 18 Nov. NATO air forces retaliated with a raid on the Serbian airfield, but Serb forces occupied Bihać. On 12 Nov. 1994 the USA ended its embargo on the supply of arms to Bosnian forces.

On 23 Dec. Bosnian Serbs and Moslems signed a countrywide interim ceasefire. Bosnian Croats also signed on 2 Jan. 1995. However, Croatian Serbs and the Moslem secessionist forces under Fikret Abdić did not sign the agreement, and fighting continued.

On 28 May 1995 Bosnian Serb forces took some 400 UN peacekeeping troops hostage. Under pressure from Serbian President Milošević all had been released by 18 June.

On 16 June 1995 Bosnian government forces launched an attack to break the Bosnian Serb siege of Sarajevo. On 11 July Bosnian Serb forces began to occupy UN security zones despite retaliatory NATO air strikes, and on 28 Aug. shelled Sarajevo.

To stop the shelling of UN safe areas, more than 60 NATO aircraft attacked Bosnian Serb military installations on 30-31 Aug. Further air strikes on military targets began on 5 Sept. after Bosnian Serbs failed to comply with demands that they withdraw heavy weapons from around Sarajevo.

On 26 Sept. in Washington the foreign ministers of Bosnia, Croatia and Yugoslavia (the latter negotiating for the Bosnian Serbs) agreed a draft Bosnian constitution under which a central government would handle foreign affairs and commerce and a Serb Zone, and a Moslem-Croat Federation would run their internal affairs. The Bosnian Presidency and Parliament would be elected, one third from the Serb Republic (i.e. the Serb zones of Bosnia) and two thirds from the Moslem-Croat Federation. A ceasefire came into force on 12 Oct. 1995.

In Dayton (Ohio) on 21 Nov. 1995 the prime ministers of Bosnia, Croatia and Yugoslavia initialled a US-brokered agreement to end hostilities in Bosnia, and this was signed by the respective presidents on 14 Dec. in Paris. The Bosnian state was divided into a Serb Republic containing 49% of Bosnian territory and a Croat-Moslem Federation. A central government authority representing all ethnic groups with responsibility for foreign and monetary policy and citizenship issues was established, and free elections held. On 20 Dec. 1995 a 63,000-strong NATO contingent (IFOR) took over from UN peacekeeping forces to enforce the Paris peace agreements and set up a 4-km separation zone between the Serb and Moslem-Croat territories. Some 1,500 advisers were sent by the UN to help in the formation and training of local civil police units.

Following the expiry of the mandate of IFOR on 20 Dec. 1996, a new NATO 30,000-strong Stabilization Force (SFOR) took over peacekeeping duties until mid-1998. Czech, Polish and Russian troops were also attached to SFOR. In Dec. 1997 NATO defence ministers decided that troops would stay on after the 1998 deadline.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The republic is bounded in the north and west by Croatia and in the east and south-east by Yugoslavia. It has a coastline of only 20 km with no harbours. Its area is 51,129 sq. km. The capital is Sarajevo.

Population at the 1991 census: 4,377,033 (34·2% urban), of which the predominating ethnic groups were Moslems (1,905,829), Serbs (1,369,258) and Croats (755,892). Estimate, 1995, 4,484,000; density, 88 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 4·34m.

In 1995 an estimated 58·9% of the population lived in rural areas. By 1996, 1,319,250 Bosnians had taken refuge abroad, including 0·45m. in Yugoslavia, 0·32m. in Germany, 0·17m. in Croatia and 0·12m. in Sweden.

Population (1991 census) of the principal cities: Sarajevo, 415,631 (est. 1993, 383,00); Banja Luka, 142,644; Zenica, 96,238.

In 1998 some 800,000 Bosnians were still displaced in the country following the war.

The official language is Serbo-Croat.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 0·0%. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, was 69·5 years for men and 75·1 years for women. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 15 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1·5 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is generally continental with steady rainfall throughout the year, although in areas nearer the coast it is more Mediterranean.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 18 March 1994, in Washington, Bosnian Moslems and Croats reached an agreement for the creation of a federation of cantons with a central government responsible for foreign affairs, defence and commerce. It is envisaged that there will be a president elected by a 2-house legislature alternating annually between the nationalities.

On 30 March 1994 a 123-member constituent assembly adopted the constitution by 112 votes in favour. On 31 May 1994 the National Assembly approved the creation of the Moslem Croat federation. Alija Izetbegović remained the unitary states' President. An interim government with Hasan Muratović as Prime Minister was formed on 30 Jan. 1996.

Following the Dayton agreement the government structure was established in 1996 as follows:

Heading the state is a 3-member Presidency (1 Croat, 1 Moslem, 1 Serb) with a rotating president. The Presidency is elected by direct universal suffrage, and is responsible for foreign affairs and the nomination of the prime minister. There is a 2-chamber parliament: The Chamber of Representatives (which meets in Sarajevo) comprises 42 directly elected deputies, two-thirds Croat and Moslem and one-third Serb; and the Chamber of Peoples (which meets in Lukavica) comprises 5 Croat, 5 Moslem and 5 Serb delegates.

Below the national level the country is divided into 2 self-governing entities along ethnic lines.

The Croat-Moslem Federation is headed by a President and Vice-President, alternately Croat and Moslem, a 140-member Chamber of Representatives and a 74-member Chamber of Peoples. The Serb Republic is also headed by an elected President and Vice-President, and there is a National Assembly of 140 members, elected by proportional representation.

Central government is conducted by a Council of Ministers, which comprises Moslem and Serb Co-Prime Ministers and a Croat Deputy Prime Minister. The Co-Prime Ministers alternate in office every week.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 12 and 13 Sept. 1998 for all the institutions outlined under 'Constitution and Government' above for a 2-year term of office.

Elected to the national Presidency were Živko Radišić (Serb, Sloga); Alija Izetbegović (Moslem, Party of Democratic Action—SDA); Ante Jelavić (Croat, Croat Democratic Union—HDZ).

Elections in the Serb Republic in Sept. 1998 brought a swing against the moderates and in favour of hardline nationalists. Nikola Poplasen, a Serb nationalist hardliner, defeated Biljana Plavšić, the President of the Serb Republic, who supported co-operation with the West. Milorad Dodik, who had been the prime minister of the Serb Republic under Biljana Plavšić, remained in office. Controlling only 11 of the 83 seats in the Bosnian Serb Parliament, Poplasen tried to oust his western-backed prime minister Milorad Dodik. Instead, Poplasen himself was dismissed by the representative of the international community, Carlos Westendorp.

In the elections to the Chamber of Representatives (Zastupnički dom) on 12 and 13 Sept. 1998, the Coalition for a Unified and Democratic Bosnia-Hercegovina (KCD) obtained 32·7% of the votes cast and 17 of the 42 seats; 6 seats went to the Croation-nationalist Croatian Democratic Community, with other parties winning 4 seats or fewer.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 1999 the government consisted of:

Presidency Chairman: Živko Radišić (Serb, Sloga). Presidency Members: Ante Jelavić (Croat, HDZ). Alija Izetbegović (Moslem, SDA).

Co-Chairmen of the Council of Ministers: Haris Silajdžić (Moslem, SBiH); Svetozar Mihajlović (Serb, Sloga).

Deputy Chairman: Neven Tomić. Chairman, House of Peoples: Momir Tosić. Minister of Foreign Affairs: Jadranko Prlić. Foreign Trade and Economic Relations: Mirsad Kurtović. Civil Affairs and Communications: Marko Asanin. These 3 ministries are also jointly controlled by 2 deputy ministers from each community.

Local Government. In the Croat-Moslem Federation there are 10 cantons with elected local assemblies.

DEFENCE

Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$327m. (US$74 per capita), representing 5·0% of GDP.

BOTSWANA

Republic of Botswana

Capital: Gaborone
Population estimate, 2000: 1·62m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 7,390
HDI/world rank: 0·678/97

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Tswana or Batswana people are the principal inhabitants of the country formerly known as Bechuanaland and now called Botswana. The 8 main communities of the Batswana are the Bakgatla, Bakwena, Bangwaketse, Bamalete, Bamangwato, Barolong, Batawana and Batlokwa.

Dominant in the area from the 17th century, the Batswana were disturbed in the early 19th century by invasions of Nguni peoples fleeing from Shaka in the mass immigration called the Mfecane, and by Boers moving east in the Great Trek. They clashed with the Boers, but obtained the support of British missionaries (including David Livingstone). King Khama III, a Christian who became ruler of the Bamangwato in 1872, appealed with other chiefs to Britain because of the Boer danger. In 1885 Britain took control and the territory was formally declared a protectorate in 1895. Britain ruled through her High Commissioner in South Africa and a Resident Commissioner whose office was at Mafeking. When the post of South African High Commissioner was abolished in 1964, the British representative was restyled Commissioner and placed directly under the Colonial Secretary in London. The seat of government was moved to Gaborone in 1965. Frequent suggestions for the addition of Bechuanaland and the other two High Commission Territories to South Africa were rejected, the Africans being strongly against the idea. Economically, however, the country was very closely tied to that of South Africa and has remained so.

The British left much day-to-day administration in the hands of the Tswana chiefs. They set up an African Advisory Council in 1920 and a European Advisory Council for the (never very numerous) white residents in 1921; a Joint Advisory Council was created in 1950.

Seretse Khama, ruler of the Bamangwato since 1923 when he was 4 years old, was deposed in 1950 because of South African opposition to his marriage to a white woman. He returned in 1956 and joined the African Advisory Council in 1957. In Dec. 1960 Bechuanaland received its first constitution. Elections followed in 1961 for African members of the Legislative Council, of whom Seretse was one. In 1962 he formed the Bechuanaland Democratic Party, now the Botswana Democratic party (BDP). Further constitutional change brought full self-government in 1965 and full independence on 30 Sept. 1966. Sir Seretse Khama became president.

The BDP easily won elections in 1969, 1974 and 1979. President Khama died on 13 July 1980 and was succeeded by Dr Quett Masire, without any change of policy. For years Botswana had great difficulties with the neighbouring settler regime in Rhodesia, until that country became Zimbabwe in 1980. Such difficulties continued with South Africa; Botswana supported African resistance to the Pretoria regime but at the same time it was economically dependent on South Africa. Many border clashes and other incidents between Botswana and South Africa culminated in South African raids on African National Congress offices in Gaborone. Improved relations between the two countries had to wait on the ending of apartheid.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Botswana is bounded in the west and north by Namibia, north-east by Zambia and Zimbabwe, and east and south by South Africa. The area is 581,730 sq. km. Population (1991 census), 1,326,796 (45·7% urban). Estimate, 1996, 1,478,000; density, 2·3 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 1·62m.

In 1995, 60% of the population were urban. Between 1990 and 1995 there was a 10% rise in the urban population every year, the largest percentage increase anywhere in the world in the same period.

The country is divided into 10 districts (Central, Chobe, Ghanzi, Kgalagadi, Kgatleng, Kweneng, Ngamiland, Ngwaketse, North East and South East).
The main towns (with population, 1991 census) are Gaborone (133,468), Francistown (65,244), Selebi-Phikwe (39,772), Molepolole (36,931), Kanye (31,354), Serowe (30,260), Mahalapye (28,079), Maun (26,769), Lobatse (26,052) and Mochudi (25,542).

The official language is English; the national language is Setswana, spoken by 75% of the population. 12% speak Sishona, 3·4% San and 2·5% Hottentot.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 (estimates) births, 49,000; deaths, 25,000. Rates, 1996 estimates (per 1,000 population): Births, 33·3; deaths, 17·0. Infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 54·2. Expectation of life in 1996 was 46·0 years (44·9 for males and 47·1 for females). The impact of AIDS has caused life expectancy to sink back to levels last seen in the mid-1960s. Growth rate, 1990–95, 2·3% per annum. Fertility rate, 1997, 4·3 children per woman.

CLIMATE

In winter, days are warm and nights cold, with occasional frosts. Summer heat is tempered by prevailing north-east winds. Rainfall comes mainly in summer, from Oct. to April, while the rest of the year is almost completely dry with very high sunshine amounts. Gaborone, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 55°F (12·8°C). Annual rainfall varies from 650 mm in the north to 250 mm in the south-east. The country is prone to droughts.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution adopted on 30 Sept. 1966 provides for a republican form of government headed by the President with 3 main organs: The Legislature, the Executive and the Judiciary. The executive rests with the President who is responsible to the National Assembly. The President is elected for 5-year terms by the National Assembly.

The National Assembly consists of 47 members, 40 elected by universal suffrage, and 7 elected by itself. Elections are held every 5 years. Voting is on the first-past-the-post system.

The President is an ex-officio member of the Assembly.

There is also a House of Chiefs to advise the Government. It consists of the Chiefs of the 8 tribes who were autonomous during the days of the British protectorate, plus 4 members elected by and from among the sub-chiefs in 4 districts; these 12 members elect a further 3 politically independent members.

National Anthem. 'Fatshe leno la rona' ('Blessed be this noble land'); words and tune by K. T. Motsete.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 15 Oct. 1994 the Botswana Democratic Party gained 27 seats and the Botswana National Front 13. Presidential and parliamentary elections are scheduled for Oct. 1999.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Festus Mogae (sworn in on 1 April 1998).

In March 1999 the Cabinet was as follows:

Vice-President and Minister for Presidential Affairs and Public Administration: Lieut.-Gen. Seretse Khama Ian Khama. Finance and Development Planning: Hon. Ponatshego Horatius Kedikilwe. Foreign Affairs: Lieut.-Gen. Mompati Merafhe. Health: Chapson Butale. Works, Transport and Communications: Hon. David N. Magang. Commerce and Industry: George Kgoroba. Mineral Resources and Water Affairs: Hon. Margaret N. Nasha. Education: Dr Gaositwe Chiepe. Labour and Home Affairs: Bahiti Temane. Agriculture: Ronald Sebego. Local Government, Land and Housing: Hon. Daniel K. Kwelagobe.

Local Government. Local government is carried out by 10 district, 1 city (Gaborone), 3 town and 3 township councils. Revenue is obtained mainly from sales taxes, from rates in the towns and from central government subventions in the districts.

DEFENCE

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$241m. (US$153 per capita).

Army. The Army is organized in 2 brigades comprising 4 infantry, 2 field artillery and 2 air defence battalions, 1 engineer regiment and 1 commando unit. Personnel (1997), 7,000.

Air Force. Equipment includes 5 BAC Strikemaster light strike aircraft, 5 Britten-Norman Defender armed light transports for border patrol, counter-insurgency and casualty evacuation duties, 13 second-hand CF-5 fighters, 7 PC-7 basic trainers, 2 CN-235 turboprop-powered medium transports, 2 C-212 turboprop passenger/cargo transports, 4 Islander, 5 Ecureuil and 6 Bell 412 helicopters and 2 Cessna 152 light aircraft. Personnel (1997), 500.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Botswana is a member of the UN, the Commonwealth, OAU, SADC and is an ACP state of the EU.

ECONOMY

Policy. The Eighth National Development Plan is running from 1997 to 2003. It is intended to stimulate industries and economic activities that can take over from mines and create jobs.

Performance. In 1997 the economy grew by 7%, compared with a projected 5·7%.

Budget. The fiscal year begins in April. Budgets for recent years (in P1m.):

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96

Currency. The unit of currency is the pula (BWP) of 100 thebe. Inflation was 9·8% in Oct. 1996. Foreign exchange reserves were US$5,906m. in Feb. 1998. Total money supply was P1,042m. in Jan. 1998.

Banking and Finance. There were 4 commercial banks at 1 Jan. 1996 with 46 branches. Total assets were P3,729m. at 30 Nov. 1995. The Bank of Botswana (Governor, H. C. L. Hermans), established in 1976, is the central bank. The National Development Bank, founded in 1964, has 6 regional offices, and agricultural, industrial and commercial development divisions. The Botswana Co-operative Bank is banker to co-operatives and to thrift and loan societies. The government-owned Post Office Savings Bank operates throughout the country.

There is a stock exchange.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 197,000 kW in 1993. Production (1994–95) 916·6m. kWh. Consumption per capita was an estimated 747 kWh in 1993. The coal-fired power station at Morupule supplies cities and major towns.

Water. Surface water resources are about 18,000m. cu. metres a year. Nearly all flows into northern districts from Angola through the Okavango and Kwando river systems. The Zambezi, also in the north, provides irrigation in the Chobe District. In the south-east, there are dams to exploit the ephemeral flow of the tributaries of the Limpopo. 80% of the land has no surface water, and must be served by some 6,000 boreholes.

Minerals. Botswana is the world's biggest diamond producer; in 1997 the total value was estimated to be US$1·82bn. Debswana, a partnership between the government and De Beers, runs 3 mines producing around 17·5m. carats a year, with plans to double the capacity of the largest mine from 6m. to 12m. carats a year. Coal reserves are estimated at 17,000m. tonnes. There is also salt and soda ash. Mineral production, 1994: Diamonds, 15,547,178 carats (value P1,807m.); copper–nickel ore, 3,462,823 tonnes; coal, approximately 0·94m. tonnes.

Agriculture. 70–80% of the total land area is desert. 80% of the population is rural, 71% of all land is 'tribal', protected and allocated to prevent over-grazing, maintain small farmers and foster commercial ranching. Agriculture provides a livelihood for over 80% of the population, but accounts for only 4–5% of GDP.

Cattle-rearing is the chief industry after diamond-mining, and the country is more a pastoral than an agricultural one, crops depending entirely upon the rainfall. In 1995, 258,000 persons were economically active in agriculture. In 1990, 128,000 ha were sown to sorghum. In 1995 there were: Cattle, 1·9m.; goats, 1·9m.; sheep, 250,000; asses, 235,000; chickens, 2m. 80% of the cattle were owned by traditional farmers, about half owning fewer than 20 head. A serious outbreak of cattle lung disease in 1995–96 led to the slaughter of around 300,000 animals.

Production (1993, in 1,000 tonnes): Maize, 4·3; sorghum, 16·5; (1992) millet, 1; roots and tubers, 8; pulses, 12; seed cotton, 3; vegetables, 16; fruit, 11.

17% of the land is set aside for wildlife conservation and 20% for wildlife management areas, with 4 national parks and game reserves.

Forestry. Forests covered 139,000 sq. km, or 24·6% of the total land area, in 1995 (25·2% in 1990). There are forest nurseries and plantations. Concessions have been granted to harvest 7,500 cu. metres in Kasane and Chobe Forestry Reserves, and up to 2,500 cu. metres in the Masame area. In 1995, 1·58m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries. In 1995 total catches were estimated to be 2,000 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Meat is processed, and textiles, foodstuffs and soap manufactured. 565 companies were registered at the end of 1992. Rural technology is being developed and traditional crafts encouraged.

Labour. In March 1994, 321,200 persons were in formal employment. At the 1991 census there were 276,950 paid employees (including informal employment) and 28,764 self-employed. A further 76,101 persons worked on a non-cash basis, e.g. as family helpers. 60,757 were seeking work. In March 1994 there were 12,342 Botswana nationals employed in the mines of South Africa. In 1991 there were 57,001 building workers, 34,322 in trade and 29,325 in domestic service. Average earnings in 1994 in the formal sector were P807 per month. Botswana's biggest individual employer is the Debswana Diamond Company, with a workforce (1997) of nearly 6,000. In April 1998 the unemployment rate was 21%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Botswana is a member of the Southern African Customs Union (SACU) with Lesotho, Namibia, South Africa and Swaziland. There are no foreign exchange restrictions. External debt in 1996 totalled US$613m. in 1996.

Imports and Exports. In 1994 imports totalled P4,392m. More than three-quarters of all imports are from the SACU countries, the main commodities being machinery and electrical equipment, foodstuffs, vehicles and transport equipment, textiles and petroleum products.

In 1994 export earnings totalled P4,962m., including diamonds (P3,727m.), copper and nickel (P266m.) and beef (P215m.).

In addition to the SACU countries, other significant trading partners are Switzerland and the UK; and for imports, the USA.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 some 4,600 km of road were bitumen-surfaced out of a total of 18,327 km. In 1996 there were 66,540 motor vehicles in use (22,540 cars and 44,000 trucks and vans).

Rail. The main line from Mafeking in South Africa to Bulawayo in Zimbabwe traverses Botswana. With 3 branches the total was (1994) 971 km. In 1993–94 railways carried 0·3m. passengers, and in 1995 freight tonne-km came to 687m.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Gaborone (Sir Seretse Khama) and 6 domestic airports. The national carrier is the state-owned Air Botswana. In 1998 services were also operated by Air Zimbabwe, British Airways, South African Airways and Zambian Express. Direct flights are operated to the UK, South Africa and Zimbabwe. In 1995 Air Botswana flew 2·1m. km, carrying 99,900 passengers (70,300 on international flights). In 1996 Gaborone handled 181,629 passengers (135,382 on international flights).

Telecommunications. There were 85,600 main telephone lines in 1997, 3,100 fax machines in 1995, and in Jan. 1998 approximately 500 Internet users.

Postal Services. There are 109 post offices and 65 agencies.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Law is based on the Roman-Dutch law of the former Cape Colony, but judges and magistrates are also qualified in English common law. The Court of Appeal has jurisdiction in respect of criminal and civil appeals emanating from the High Court, and in all criminal and civil cases and proceedings. Magistrates' courts and traditional courts are in each administrative district. As well as a national police force there are local customary law enforcement officers.

Religion. Freedom of worship is guaranteed under the Constitution. About 50% of the population is Christian. Non-Christian religions include Bahais, Moslems and Hindus.

Education. Adult literacy rate (1995) 69·8% (male, 80·5%; female, 59·9%). Basic free education, introduced in 1986, consists of 7 years of primary and 3 years of junior secondary schooling. In 1994 enrolment in 670 primary schools was 310,128 with 11,371 teachers, and 93,250 pupils at secondary level with 5,678 teachers. In 1993 there were 1,261 students in teacher training colleges. 'Brigades' (community-managed private bodies) provide lower-level vocational training. The Department of Non-Formal Education offers secondary-level correspondence courses and is the executing agency for the National Literacy Programme. There is 1 university (6,673 students in 1995–96).

In 1994 total expenditure on education came to 8·5% of GNP.

Health. In 1994 there were 16 general hospitals, a mental hospital, 13 health centres, 200 clinics and 310 health posts. There were also 701 stops for mobile health teams. In 1994 there were 339 doctors and 3,329 nurses. The health facilities are the concern of central and local government, medical missions, mining companies and voluntary organizations.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The government-controlled Radio Botswana broadcasts daily on 2 channels in English and Setswana. A commercial television company transmits on a 50 km-radius from Gaborone (colour by SECAM). There were 190,000 radio and 27,000 TV sets in 1995.

Press. In 1995 there was 1 government newspaper (distributed free) and 5 independent newspapers, with a total circulation of about 100,500, and 6 other periodicals.

Tourism. There were 770,000 foreign visitors in 1997. Receipts totalled US$178m in 1996.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Brazil, South America's largest country, was colonized by the Portuguese following the arrival of Admiral Pedro Alvares Cabral on 22 April 1500. In 1815 the colony was declared 'a kingdom'. When, in 1822, the Portuguese king João VI returned home after using Rio de Janeiro as his capital during the French occupation of Portugal, his eldest surviving son, Dom Pedro, was chosen 'Perpetual Defender' of Brazil by a National Congress. He proclaimed the independence of the country on 7 Sept. 1822, and was chosen 'Constitutional Emperor and Perpetual Defender' on 12 Oct. 1822, with the title Emperor Pedro I. He abdicated in 1831 and was succeeded in 1840 by his son, Pedro II. Pedro ruled for nearly 50 years. His policies were liberal and included the gradual abolition of slavery.

Under the dictatorship of President Vargas from 1930 to 1945, some areas (such as São Paulo) saw considerable economic development. Vargas was succeeded by Presidents Kubitschek and Quadros.

Juscelino Kubitschek, popularly known as JK, was elected president in 1956. Promising '50 years progress in five' he brought 40 years inflation in four. A big spender, he created roads and hydroelectric plants. Brasília, supposed to be the catalyst for development of Brazil's huge interior, was built.

Janio Quadros became the next president in 1961 on a wave of public euphoria. But when he decorated Che Guevara in a public ceremony, he upset the right wing military. A few days later Quadros resigned after only six months in office. João Goulart, his vice-president, took over. His leftist policies led to his overthrow by the military in 1964. This was followed by 20 years of single party rule and censored press.

Brazil's military regime was not as brutal as those of Chile or Argentina, but at its height, around 1968 and 1969, the use of torture was widespread. The generals benefited from the Brazilian economic miracle in the late '60s and '70s when the economy was growing more than 10% every year. Brazil became one of the biggest industrial nations in the world, but uncoordinated growth made bureaucracy, corruption and inflation explode.

In 1980 a militant working-class movement sprung up under the charismatic leadership of a worker called Lula. The popular opposition, together with economic problems, forced the military slowly to announce the so-called 'abertura' (opening)—a slow process of returning the government to democracy.

Tancredo Neves surprised his military opponents by winning the 1985 elections, but tragically died shortly before assuming power. José Sarney, his vice-president, took over. With a new finance minister every three months, the country drifted into economic chaos and foreign debt reached Cr$115,000m.

In 1989 Fernando Collor de Mello, governor of a forgotten state in the north-east, won a hard-fought victory over the Labour Party candidate, Lula. One of the main promises of the incoming government was to cut inflation and attack corruption. When he assumed control in March 1990, Collor took drastic measures. In an attempt to reduce inflation caused by excess liquidity in the market, he confiscated 80% of every bank account worth more than US$1,200, promising to release it 18 months later with interest. He announced the privatization of state-owned companies and the opening of Brazilian markets to foreign competition and capital.

By 1992 few promises had been met, most of the popular goodwill was gone and Collor found his government shaken by scandals and corruption linked directly to his family. Inflation was heading again into astronomical figures. The parliament, under public pressure, forced an impeachment. Itamar Franco, Collor's vice-president, took office for three years.

Fernando Henrique Cardoso, former finance minister responsible for the 'Plano Real', the economic plan to end inflation, was elected president at the end of 1994. He instituted an economic revolution which included a radical privatization programme and a lowering of trade barriers; but in 1997-98 economic turbulence in the Far East spread to Brazil, which had to be kept afloat by IMF loans. In Jan. 1999, the real was devalued, thereafter losing 35% of its value against the dollar in two months.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Brazil is bounded in the east by the Atlantic and on its northern, western and southern borders by all the Latin American countries except Chile and Ecuador. The area is 8,547,403·5 sq. km including 55,457 sq. km of inland water. Population as at censuses of 1991 and 1996:

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1998 estimates: Births, 3,451,000 (rate of 20·9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 1,404,000 (8·5 per 1,000 population). Life expectancy was 66·85 years in 1998 (63·2 years for males and 70·6 for females). 1996 growth rate, 1·4%; infant mortality, 37·5 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2·3 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Because of its latitude, the climate is predominantly tropical, but factors such as altitude, prevailing winds and distance from the sea cause certain variations, though temperatures are not notably extreme. In tropical parts, winters are dry and summers wet, while in Amazonia conditions are constantly warm and humid. The north-east sertão is hot and arid, with frequent droughts. In the south and east, spring and autumn are sunny and warm, summers are hot, but winters can be cold when polar air-masses impinge. Brasília, Jan. 72°F (22·3°C), July 68°F (19·8°C). Annual rainfall 63" (1,603 mm). Belém, Jan. 78°F (25·8°C), July 80°F (26·4°C). Annual rainfall 102" (2,315 mm). Manaus, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 80°F (26·7°C). Annual rainfall 110" (2,842 mm). Porto Alegre, Jan. 75°F (23·9°C), July 62°F (16·7°C). Annual rainfall 67" (1,775 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present Constitution came into force on 5 Oct. 1988, the eighth since independence. The President and Vice-President are elected for a 4-year term and are not immediately re-eligible. To be elected candidates must secure 51% of the votes, otherwise a second round of voting is held to elect the President between the two most voted candidates. Voting is compulsory for men and women between the ages of 18 and 70, and optional for illiterates, persons from 16 to 18 years old and persons over 70. A referendum on constitutional change was held on 21 April 1993. Turn-out was 80%. 66·1% of votes cast were in favour of retaining a republican form of government, and 10·2% for re-establishing a monarchy. 56·4% favoured an executive presidency, 24·7% parliamentary supremacy.

A constitutional amendment of June 1997 authorizes the re-election of the President, state governors and mayors for a second term.

Congress consists of an 81-member Senate (3 Senators per federal unit) and a 513-member Chamber of Deputies. The Senate is two-thirds directly elected (50% of these elected for 8 years in rotation) and one-third indirectly elected. The Chamber of Deputies is elected by universal franchise for 4 years. There is a Council of the Republic which is convened only in national emergencies.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential elections of 4 Oct. 1998, Fernando Henrique Cardoso was re-elected President by 53·1% of votes cast against 4 other candidates, his closest rival, Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva, backed by a coalition of the left, obtaining 31·7%. Cardoso thus became the first Brazilian president to win a second successive term in office. Turn-out was 80%.

Parliamentary elections were also held on 4 Oct. 1998 for both the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate.

In the elections to the Chamber of Deputies the government coalition gained 347 seats (Liberal Front, 106; Brazilian Social Democratic Party, 99; Party of the Brazilian Democratic Movement, 82; Progressive Party, 60); their ally the Brazilian Labour Party gained 31 seats and the opposition gained 135 (Workers' Party, 58; Democratic Labour Party, 25; others, 52).

In the Senate elections the Party of the Brazilian Democratic Movement won 68 of the 81 seats; Liberal Front, 20; Brazilian Social Democratic Party, 16; Progressive Party, 5.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Fernando Henrique Cardoso, b. 1931 (Social Democrat; sworn in 1 Jan. 1995, re-elected 4 Oct. 1998).

Vice-President: Marco Maciel.

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Justice: José Renan Calheiros. Foreign Affairs: Luiz Felipe Lampreia. Finance: Pedro Sampaio Malan. Transport: Eliseu Padilha. Development, Industry and Commerce: Celso Lafer. Agriculture: Francisco Sérgio Turra. Education: Paulo Renato de Souza. Culture: Francisco Corrêa Weffort. Labour and Employment: Francisco Dornelles. Social Security: Waldeck Vieira Ornélas. Health: José Serra. Mines and Energy: Rodolpho Tourinho. Communications: João Pimenta de Veiga. Science and Technology: Luis Carlos Bresser Pereira. Environment: José Sarney Filho. Budget and Administration: Paulo Paiva. Sports and Tourism: Rafael Greca. Defence: Elcio Alvares. Land Policy: Raul Jungmann. Special Programmes: Ronaldo Sardenberg.

Local Government. Brazil consists of 27 federal units (26 states and 1 federal district). Each has its distinct administrative, legislative and judicial authorities, and its own constitution and laws, which must, however, agree with federal constitutional principles. The governors and members of the legislatures are elected for 4-year terms. The country is sub-divided into 5,507 municipalities, each under an elected mayor and municipal council, and then further sub-divided into districts. The Federal District is the national capital, inaugurated in 1960; it is divided into 12 administrative Regions, the first Region being Brasília. Gubernatorial elections were held for all 27 federal units etc. in Oct.–Nov. 1994. Municipal elections were held on 30 Oct. 1996 and, for municipalities with at least 0·2m. electors, on 15 Nov. 1996.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 12 months, extendable by 6 months.

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$13,944m. (US$84 per capita). In 1985 expenditure was US$3,347m.

Army. There are 7 military commands and 11 military regions. The Army consists of 8 divisions, 1 armoured cavalry, 3 armoured infantry, 4 mechanized cavalry, 13 motor infantry, 1 mountain, 4 jungle, 1 frontier, 1 airborne, and 2 coast and air defence brigades, 3 cavalry guard regiments, 28 artillery and 2 engineer groups.

Equipment includes 60 Leopard 1 main battle tanks and 287 light tanks. Strength, 1998, 195,000 (125,000 conscripts). A helicopter brigade has 76 Dauphin, Ecureuil, Fennec and UH-60 helicopters.

There are paramilitary state militias under Army control considered an Army reserve, totalling about 385,000 personnel.

Navy. The principal ship of the Navy is the 20,200-tonne Light Aircraft Carrier Minas Gerais, formerly the British Vengeance, completed in 1945 and purchased in 1956, which normally operates an air group of 8 S-2E Tracker anti-submarine aircraft and 8 ASH-3H anti-submarine Sea King helicopters.

There are also 5 diesel submarines (1 built in Germany, 1 in Brazil and 3 British Oberon-class) and 16 frigates including 4 Type 22 Batch 1 (Broadwood class) bought from the UK in 1995 and 1996. The fleet still includes 1 old ex-US Gearing class destroyer and 2 Sumner class, but these are decommissioning. There are 3 offshore and 6 inshore minesweepers and a patrol force numbering about 30 including 9 tug trawler types, 6 ex-US inshore craft, 2 locally-built and a number for work on the rivers. Major auxiliaries include 2 oilers, 1 repair ship, 4 transports, 4 survey and rescue, 1 training frigate and 5 tugs. There are some 70 minor auxiliaries. Amphibious forces consist of 2 ex-US landing ships (dock) and 1 tank landing ship. A further diesel submarine is being built.

Fleet Air Arm personnel only fly helicopters, the 6 S-2E Tracker anti-submarine aircraft held for carrier operations and the 20 shore-based maritime patrol EMB-111 being operated by the Air Force. Naval aircraft include 7 ASH-3 Sea King for carrier service, 5 Lynx, and 17 Esquilo for embarkation in the smaller ships. Utility and search-and-rescue duties are performed by 16 Bell 206B Sea Ranger and 6 Super Puma helicopters. Naval bases are at Rio de Janeiro, Aratu (Bahia), Belém, Natal, Rio Grande do Sul and Salvador, with river bases at Ladario and Manaus.

Active personnel, 1998, totalled 68,250, including 15,100 well-equipped Marines and 1,200 in Naval Aviation.

The Brazil navy is preparing to buy 20 McDonnell Douglas A-4 Skyhawk fighter-bombers from Kuwait for US$70m. (£43m.) as part of a long-term project to increase its ability to protect military and civilian shipping. The jets will be the Brazilian navy's first fixed-wing aircraft and will be operated from its single aircraft carrier, the Minas Gerais.

Air Force. The Air Force is organized in 6 zones, centred on Belém, Recife, Rio de Janeiro, São Paulo, Porto Alegre and Brasília. The 1a GDA (Air Defence Group) has 12 Mirage IIIE fighters and 4 Mirage IIID trainers, integrated with Roland mobile short-range surface-to-air missile systems deployed by the Army, and a radar/communications/computer network. Two fighter groups have 3 squadrons of F-5E Tiger II supersonic fighter-bombers and two-seat F-5B/Fs; 3 others operate AT-26 (Aermacchi MB 326G) Xavante light jet attack/trainers, licence-built by Embraer in Brazil, and 2 squadrons operate the AM-X fighter-bomber, jointly developed by Italy and Brazil; 79 AM-Xs are being delivered. Counter-insurgency squadrons are equipped with armed Ecureuil helicopters for liaison and observation. 2 air-sea rescue units are equipped with Bandeirantes. Equipment of transport units includes 1 squadron of C-130E/H Hercules transports; 1 squadron of Boeing 707 tanker/transports; 1 group made up of a squadron of HS 748 and a second squadron of Bandeirante turboprop transports; 2 troop-carrier groups with DHC-5 Buffaloes; 1 group with Bandeirantes; 1 group with UH-1 Iroquois and Super Puma helicopters; and 7 independent squadrons with Bandeirantes. Light aircraft for liaison duties include 30 Embraer U-7s (licence-built Piper Senecas), 30 Neiva Regente lightplanes and 7 Cessna Caravans. The VIP transport group has 2 Boeing 737s, 11 HS 125 twin-jet light transports, 4 Embraer Brasilias, 6 Embraer Xingu (VU-9) twin-turboprop pressurized transports, and Ecureuil and JetRanger helicopters. Training is performed primarily on locally built T-25 Universal and turboprop T-27 Tucano (EMB-312) basic trainers, and AT-26 Xavante armed jet basic trainers. Personnel strength (1998) 50,000 (5,000 conscripts).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Brazil is a member of the UN, OAS, LAIA and Mercosur.

ECONOMY

Policy. In 1991 a National Reconstruction Plan was introduced to promote growth and investment and reduce the role of the state. State monopolies in ports, communications and fuels were reduced and agricultural and industrial subsidies ended. A sixth economic plan was introduced in 1993 to cut spending and accelerate privatization. Since Oct. 1994 the government has authorized privatization of the energy, electricity, petrochemicals and telecommunications sectors. The programme is the largest privatization drive in the world. After an initial stage in which steel, petrochemical, fertilizers and mining industries were privatized, the programme was headed by roads, railways, sea ports, electricity and telecommunications in 1997. During 1990–95, 22 state-owned and 19 partly state-owned companies were privatized. The Real Plan (Plano Real), a monetary and economic stability programme, was launched in July 1994. In Nov. 1997 the government announced a package of proposed spending cuts and tax rises worth R$20,000m. to reduce the long-standing fiscal and balance-of-payments deficits.

Revenue from privatization (US$1m.): 1991, 1·99; 1992, 3·38; 1993, 4·19; 1994, 2·32; 1995, 1·63; 1996, 4·75.

In 1997 the Asian financial crisis put the real under pressure, forcing up interest rates to 50%. A US$18bn. package of tax rises and spending cuts was intended to cut the budget deficit by 2·5% of GDP. Even so, Brazil's borrowing requirement had climbed from 4·5% of GDP in 1997 to 7·8% in 1998. In Nov. 1998 the IMF announced a US$41bn. financing package to help shore up the Brazilian economy.

Performance. Real GDP growth was estimated to be 1·5% in 1998, with a forecast of 3·1% in 1999. In March 1999 an IMF agreement introduced a tight monetary policy with an emphasis on reducing the ratio of debt to GDP.

Budget. 1995–96 (in R$1,000): revenue was 229,722,437 and expenditure 173,992,572. Internal federal debt, July 1996, was R$176,478m. Internal states and municipalities (main securities outstanding), R$49,672m.

Currency. The unit of currency is the real (equal to 100 centavos) which was introduced on 1 July 1994 to replace the former cruzeiro real at a rate of 1 real (R$1) = 2,750 cruzeiros reais (CR$2,750). The real was devalued in Sept. 1994, March 1995 and June 1995. Inflation fell from 2,500% in 1993 to 22% in 1995 and 11·1% in 1996, and was forecast to be 2·3% in 1998. In Feb. 1998 foreign exchange reserves were US$56,656m. and gold reserves 3·22m. troy oz. Total money supply in Jan. 1998 was R$45,056m.

Banking and Finance. On 31 Dec. 1964 the Banco Central do Brasil (President, Arminio Fraga Neto) was founded as the national bank of issue.

The Bank of Brazil (founded in 1853 and reorganized in 1906) is a state-owned commercial bank; it had 3,125 branches in 1995 throughout the republic. On 31 Dec. 1996 deposits were R$33,604m. In 1994 there were 6 public-sector banks and 24 banks controlled by state governments.

There are 9 stock exchanges of which Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo are the most important. All except São Paulo are linked in the National Electronic Trading System (Senn).

Weights and Measures. The metric system has been compulsory since 1872.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Hydro-electric potential capacity was estimated at 255,000 MW per year in Dec. 1990, of which 41% belonged to the Amazon hydro-electric basin. Installed capacity (1995) 55,512 MW, of which 50,687 MW were hydro-electric. There is 1 nuclear power plant, supplying some 0·2% of total output. Production (1995) 260,678m. kWh (231,389m. kWh hydro-electric in 1993). Consumption per capita in 1995 was an estimated 1,572 kWh.

Oil and Gas. There are 13 oil refineries, of which 11 are state-owned. Crude oil production (1996), 45,605,631 cu. metres. In 1997 domestic production of 1m. bbls. a day met 55% of demand. The state petroleum company Petrobrás was negotiating joint ventures with up to 70 interested foreign companies to develop some of its oilfields, many off-shore. Crude oil reserves were estimated at 11,600m. bbls. in 1997.

Gas production (1996) 9,167,427,000 cu. metres. The World Bank has approved the financing for the construction of the 3,150-km Bolivia-Brazil gas pipeline, one of Latin America's biggest infrastructure projects. The cost of the project is put at around US$2bn. (£1·2bn.). The pipeline runs from the Bolivian interior across the Brazilian border at Puerto Suarez-Corumbá to the far southern port city of Porto Alegre.

Minerals. The chief minerals are bauxite, gold, iron ore, manganese, nickel, phosphates, platinum, tin and uranium. Brazil is the only source of high-grade quartz crystal in commercial quantities; output, 1992, 38,148 tonnes raw, 27,275 tonnes processed. It is a major producer of chrome ore: Output, 1992, 948,788 tonnes; reserves, 1992, 14·2m tonnes. Other minerals, with 1992 output in tonnes, are mica, 14; zirconium, 15,017; beryllium 1,412; graphite, 685,850; and magnesite, 1,161,200. Along the coasts of the states of Rio de Janeiro, Espírito Santo and Bahia are found monazite sands containing thorium: Output, 1991, 560 tonnes; estimated reserves, 1991, 772,000 tonnes. Manganese ores of high content are important: Output, 1995, 3,395,078 tonnes; estimated reserves, 1992, 81·2m tonnes. Output, 1996 (in tonnes) of bauxite, 11m. Output, 1992 (in tonnes), mineral salt, 1,230,608; tungsten ore, 28,767, unrough, 205; lead, 334,426; asbestos, 3,895,805; coal, 9,241,099. Primary aluminium production in 1989 was 888,000 tonnes. Deposits of coal exist in Rio Grande do Sul, Santa Catarina and Paraná. Total reserves were estimated at 5,190·2m. tonnes in 1988.

Iron is found chiefly in Minas Gerais, notably the Cauê Peak at Itabira. The government is opening up iron-ore deposits in Carajás, in the northern state of Pará, with estimated reserves of 35,000m. tonnes, representing a 66% concentration of high-grade iron ore. Total output of iron ore, 1996, mainly from the Vale do Rio Doce mine at Itabira, was 180m. tonnes. Brazil is the second largest producer of iron ore after China.

Production of tin ore was 20,304 tonnes in 1996; output of barytes, 1992, 72,171 tonnes, and of phosphate rock, 15·5m. tonnes.

Gold is chiefly from Pará (18,837 kg in 1992), Mato Grosso (18,009 kg) and Minas Gerais (23,120 kg); total production (1992), 80,543 kg processed. Silver output (processed in 1992) 20,042 tonnes. Diamond output in 1992 was 1,285,402 carats (157,805 carats from Minas Gerais, 1m. carats from Mato Grosso).

Agriculture. In 1996 agriculture contributed 14% of GDP. In 1995, 30·22m. people depended on agriculture, of whom 13·57m. were economically active. There were 4·86m. farms in 1995. Arable land covered 5% of the total area of the country in 1994, permanent crops just under 1% and meadows and permanent pasture 22%. 3m. ha were irrigated in 1994.

Production (in tonnes):

	1996	1997		1996	1997
Bananas (1,000 bunches)	561,932	595,344	Grapes	733,585	900,979
Beans	2,822,340	2,989,637	Coconut (1,000 fruits)	1,011,705	1,015,359
Cassava	24,583,971	24,310,049	Coffee	2,685,641	2,342,635

Harvested coffee area, 1996, 1,989,890 ha, principally in the states of Minas Gerais, Espírito Santo, São Paulo and Paraná. Harvested cocoa area, 1996, 683,544 ha. Bahia furnished 82% of the output in 1994. 2 crops a year are grown. Harvested castor-bean area, 1996, 121,178 ha. Tobacco output was 470,888 tonnes in 1996, grown chiefly in Rio Grande do Sul and Santa Catarina.

Rubber is produced chiefly in the states of Acre, Amazonas, Rondônia and Pará. Output, 1996 (preliminary), 53,437 tonnes (natural). Brazilian consumption of rubber in 1996 was 150,676 tonnes. Plantations of tung trees were established in 1930; output, 1995, 993 tonnes.

Livestock, 1996: Cattle, 165m.; pigs, 36·6m.; sheep, 18m.; goats (1995), 12·2m.; horses, 6·3m.; mules, 1·95m.; asses, 1·3m.; chickens (1995), 700m. Livestock slaughtered for meat in 1994 (in 1,000): Cattle, 15,512; pigs, 14,575; sheep and lambs, 763; goats, 729; poultry, 1,447,525. Livestock products, 1995: Milk, 16,474m. litres; wool, 24,959 tonnes; honey, 18,123 tonnes; hen's eggs, 18,252m.

Forestry. With forest lands covering 5,511,000 sq. km in 1995, only Russia had a larger area of forests. In 1995, 65·2% of the total land area of Brazil was under forests, down from 66·7% in 1990. In 1990 the total area under forests was 5,639,000 sq. km. The loss of 128,000 sq. km of forests between 1990 and 1995 was the biggest in any country in the world over the same period, and more than twice the area lost in Indonesia, the country with the second biggest reduction in forest area. Nevertheless, an independent study commissioned by NASA found that the rate of deforestation was on the decline and stated that the government had been extremely active since 1990 in reducing the rate of illegal deforestation.

In 1996 the government ruled that Amazonian landowners could log only 20% of their holdings, instead of 50%, as had previously been permitted. Timber production in 1995 was 285·3m. cu. metres.

In 1997 the government's environmental agency, Ibama, levied fines of nearly US$11m. on illicit loggers.

Environment. Brazil has the world's biggest river system and about a quarter of the world's primary rainforest. Current environmental issues are deforestation in the Amazon Basin, air and water pollution in Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo (the world's third-largest city), and land degradation and water pollution caused by improper mining activities. Contaminated drinking water causes 70% of child deaths.

Fisheries. The fishing industry had a 1995 catch of 800,000 tonnes (75% sea fishing and 25% inland).

INDUSTRY

The main industries are textiles, shoes, chemicals, cement, lumber, iron ore, tin, steel, aircraft, motor vehicles and parts, and other machinery and equipment. The National Iron and Steel Co. at Volta Redonda, State of Rio de Janeiro, furnishes a substantial part of Brazil's steel. Total output, 1997: crude steel, 26,154,000 tonnes. Cement output, 1997, was 38,097,000 tonnes. Output of paper, 1994, was 5,653,517 tonnes. Production of rubber tyres for motor vehicles (1994), 33,820,000 units; motor vehicles (1997), 2,058,724.

Labour. The workforce in 1997 numbered 69,331,507, of whom 16,770,675 worked in agriculture and 13,864,785 worked in industry (including the construction industry). A constitutional amendment of Oct. 1996 prohibits the employment of children under 14 years. In 1996 there was a minimum monthly wage of R$120. Unemployment was 5·7% in 1997, against 5·4% in 1996.

Trade Unions. The main union is the United Workers' Centre (CUT).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 1990 Brazil repealed most of its protectionist legislation. Import tariffs on some 13,000 items were reduced in 1995. Since 1991 direct foreign investment on equal terms with domestic has been permitted. Foreign investment nearly tripled in 1996, reaching US$9,900m., much of it as a result of the privatization programme. In 1991 the government permitted an annual US$100m. of foreign debt to be converted into funds for environmental protection. Total foreign debt, 1996, US$173,900m. (the highest of any country in the world).

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	1994	1995	1996	1997
Imports	35,997	53,783	56,947	65,007
Exports	43,558	46,506	47,762	52,987

Estimate for 1997 trade deficit: US$783m.

Principal imports in 1996 were (in US$1m.): Machinery and electrical equipment, 15,671; chemical products, 6,840; transport equipment, 5,512; crude oil, 2,576; foodstuffs, 3,459; coal and coke, 755; fertilizers, 860; cast iron and steel, 792.

Principal exports in 1996 were (in 1,000 tonnes): Soya, 3,646; iron, manganese and other ores, 987; coffee, 833; orange juice, 1,180; sugar, 5,989; tobacco, 282; cocoa beans, 33; (in US$1m.) transport equipment, 3,720; machine tools, 187.

Main export markets, 1995 (in US$1m.): USA, 8,798; Argentina, 4,041; Japan, 3,102; Netherlands, 2,918; Germany, 2,158. Main import suppliers: USA, 11,873; Argentina, 5,446; Germany, 5,139; Italy, 2,725; Japan, 2,543.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were (1994) 1,824,363 km of highways, of which 1,660,352 km were in operation. Less than 10% of roads are paved. In 1997 there were 15m. cars and 1·1m. active trucks. Some 56% of freight is carried by truck.

Rail. Public railways are operated by two administrations: the Federal Railways (RFFSA) formed in 1957, and São Paulo Railways (Fepasa) formed in 1971, which is confined to the state of São Paulo. They are in process of being privatized: all 6 branches of the RFFSA network were under private management by the end of Aug. 1997. RFFSA had a route-length of 22,069 km (65 km electrified) in 1994, and Fepasa 4,344 km (1,044 km electrified). An RFFSA subsidiary, CBTU (the Brazilian Urban Train Company), runs passenger services in some cities, while others are in the hands of the local authorities. Principal gauges are metre (24,720 km) and 1,600 mm (5,419 km). Passenger-km travelled in 1995-96 came to 14·5bn. and freight tonne-km to 136·44bn.

There are several important independent freight railways, including the Vitoria à Minas (898 km in 1993), the Ferroeste (238 km), the Carajas (opened 1985, 1,076 km in 1991) and the Amapa (194 km). There are metros in São Paulo (44 km), Rio de Janeiro (23 km), Belo Horizonte (14 km), Porto Alegre (28 km) and Brasília (38·5 km).

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo (Guarulhos). The 3 main airlines are Viação Aérea Rio Grande do Sul (Varig), with 49% of the domestic market, Transbrasil and Viação Aérea São Paulo (Vasp; 38% state-owned). In 1995 scheduled airline traffic of Brazilian carriers flew 382·8m. km, carrying 19,510,000 passengers (3,703,000 on international flights). In 1998 Brazil was also served by Aeroflot, Aerolíneas Argentinas, Aeromexico, Aeroperú, Air France, Alitalia, American Airlines, Avianca, Brasil Central, British Airways, Canadian Airlines International, Continental Airlines, Cubana, Delta Air Lines, Ecuatoriana, Iberia, JAL, KLM, Korean Air, Lan-Chile, Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano, Lufthansa, MEA, Nordeste, Olympic Airways, Pluna, Rio-Sul Servicos Aereos Regionais, SABENA, SAS, South African Airways, Spanair, Swissair, TAAG, TAP, Transportes Aereos del Mercosur, Transportes Aereos Regionais, United Airlines and Yagon Airways.

Brazil's busiest airport is São Paulo (Guarulhos), which handled 12,205,872 passengers in 1996 (6·45m. in 1992), followed by Rio de Janeiro International, with 5,202,997 passengers in 1996.

Shipping. Inland waterways, mostly rivers, are open to navigation over some 43,000 km. Santos and Rio de Janeiro are the 2 leading ports; there are 19 other large ports. During 1996, 26,387 vessels entered and cleared the Brazilian ports; 336·3m. tonnes of cargo were loaded and unloaded. In 1997 Santos handled 0·85m. container units. In 1995 the merchant fleet comprised 249 vessels totalling 10·22m. DWT, representing 1·55% of the world's total fleet tonnage. 16 vessels (14·67% of tonnage) were registered under foreign flags. Total tonnage registered, 5·3m. GRT, including oil tankers, 2·12m. GRT, and container ships, 192,777 GRT.

Telecommunications. Telephone services are provided by a state-owned company and 27 federally controlled companies operating in individual states. Mobile phone services were opened to the private sector in 1996. There were 17,038,900 telephone main lines in 1997 (106·6 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were approximately 1·3m. Internet users in May 1998. Cellular phone subscribers totalled 1,286,000 in 1995 (8·2 per 1,000 inhabitants), PCs numbered 2m. (13 per 1,000 persons), and there were 200,000 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 10,905 post offices, equivalent to 1 for every 14,300 persons. A total of 6,009,791,111 items were handled in 1996.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Federal Court of Justice at Brasília composed of 11 judges, and a Supreme Court of Justice; all judges are appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate. There are also Regional Federal Courts, Labour Courts, Electoral Courts and Military Courts. Each state organizes its own courts and judicial system in accordance with the federal Constitution.

The prison population was 0·13m. in 1996. In 1995 there were 511 prisons. In 1997 a further 55 were under construction.

Religion. In 1997 there were estimated to be 115,500,000 Roman Catholics (including syncretic Afro-Catholic cults having spiritualist beliefs and rituals) and 37,000,000 Evangelical Protestants, with 7,200,000 followers of other religions. Roman Catholic estimates in 1991 suggest that 90% were baptized Roman Catholic but only 35% were regular attenders. In 1991 there were 338 bishops and some 14,000 priests. There are numerous sects, some evangelical, some African-derived (e.g. Candomble).

Education. Elementary education is compulsory from 7 to 14. Adult literacy was 85·3% in 1996 (male, 85·5%; female, 85·2%). There were 50,646 literacy classes in 1993 with 1,584,147 students and 75,413 teachers. In 1996 there were 77,740 pre-primary schools with 4,270,376 pupils and 219,517 teachers; 195,767 primary schools, with 33,131,270 pupils and 1,388,247 teachers; 15,213 secondary schools, with 5,739,077 pupils and 326,827 teachers; and 851 higher education institutions, with 1,661,034 students and 141,482 teachers.

The tertiary education sector includes 114 universities (53 private, 37 federal, 20 state and 4 municipal), 85 private and 3 municipal college faculty federations, and 671 other higher education institutions (514 private, 80 municipal, 57 state and 20 federal).

Extensive education reforms are under way to increase the average length of schooling, which in 1997 was 5½ years.

In 1995 total expenditure on education came to 5·2% of GNP.

Health. In 1992 there were 49,676 hospitals and clinics (22,584 private), of which 7,430 were for in-patients (5,316 private). In 1993 there were 222,658 doctors, 160,000 dentists and (1992) 57,047 pharmacists.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1995 there were 2,033 radio and 119 television stations (colour by PAL). In 1996 there were 70m. radio and 36m. television receivers.

Cinema. There were 3,737 cinemas in 1988.

Press. Daily sale of newspapers in 1996 was 6·5m.

Tourism. In 1996, 1,991,416 tourists visited Brazil. 657,942 were Argentinian, 224,577 US citizens, 200,423 Uruguayan, 102,106 German, 90,716 Paraguayan, 84,001 Italian, 63,900 Chilean, 59,502 Spanish, 55,257 French, 52,183 Portuguese, 38,520 UK citizens, 33,505 Swiss and 30,219 Japanese. Receipts totalled US$2·47bn.

Festivals. New Year's Eve in Rio de Janeiro is always marked with special celebrations, with a major fireworks display over the bay at Copacabana Beach. On 31 Dec. 1999 there are proposals for a spectacular laser show too. Immediately afterwards, preparations start for Carnival, which in 2000 will be held in the week leading up to 5 March, when the parade of samba schools take place.

Libraries. In 1993 Brazil had a National Library with 5·28m. volumes, and in 1994 a total of 2,739 public libraries.

Negara Brunei Darussalam—
State of Brunei Darussalam

Capital: Bandar Seri Begawan
Population estimate, 2000: 326,000
Estimated GDP: $4·6bn.
HDI/world rank: 0·889/35

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Situated on the northern coast of Borneo, Brunei was trading with China during the 6th century, and through allegiance to the Javanese Majapahit Kingdom in the 13th-15th centuries, it came under Hindu influence. In the early 15th century, with the decline of the Majapahit Kingdom and widespread conversion to Islam, Brunei became an independent Sultanate.

When Magellan anchored his ships off Brunei in 1521, Bolkiah (the fifth Sultan) controlled most of Borneo, its neighbouring islands and the Suhi Archipelago. By the end of the 16th century, however, the power of Brunei was on the wane. Cessions were made to Great Britain, the Rajah of Sarawak and the British North Borneo Company until by the middle of the 19th century the State had been reduced to its present limits.

Brunei became a British protectorate in 1888 and in 1906 accepted a British Resident, who exercised control over all matters except the Islamic faith and Malay custom. The discovery of major oilfields in the western end of the State in the 1920s brought economic stability to Brunei and created a new style of life for the population. Brunei was occupied by the Japanese in 1941 and liberated by the Australians in 1945.

Self-government was introduced in 1959 but Britain retained responsibility for foreign affairs. In 1962 an attempt was made by a section of the community to overthrow the Sultan, Sir Omar Ali Saifuddin. In 1965 constitutional changes were made which led to direct elections for a new Legislative Council. In 1967 Sultan Sir Omar Ali Saifuddin abdicated in favour of his eldest son, Sultan Sir Muda Hassanal Bolkiah, who was crowned in 1968.

The sultan negotiated a new treaty with the British in 1979, and full independence and sovereignty was gained on 1 Jan. 1984.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Brunei, on the coast of Borneo, is bounded in the north-west by the South China Sea and on all other sides by Sarawak (Malaysia), which splits it into two parts, the smaller portion forming the Temburong district. Area, 2,226 sq. miles (5,765 sq. km). Population (1991 census) 260,482; 1996 estimate, 299,900, giving a density of 52 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 326,000.

In 1995 an estimated 69·2% of the population lived in urban areas. The 4 districts are Brunei/Muara (1993: 181,600), Belait (56,000), Tutong (30,700), Temburong (about 8,000). The capital is Bandar Seri Begawan (census 1991: 45,867); other large towns are Seria (1991: 21,082) and Kuala Belait (21,163). Ethnic groups include Malays 64%, and Chinese, 20%.

The official language is Malay but English is in use.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 7,600; deaths, 1,500. Rates, 1996: Birth per 1,000 population, 25·5; death, 5·1. There were 1,874 marriages in 1993. Life expectancy in 1996: Males, 69·8 years; females, 73·1. CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Sultan and Yang Di Pertuan of Brunei Darussalam is HM Paduka Seri Baginda Sultan Haji Hassanal Bolkiah Mu'izzadin Waddaulah. He succeeded on 5 Oct. 1967 at his father's abdication and was crowned on 1 Aug. 1968. On 10 Aug. 1998 his son, Oxford-graduate Prince Al-Muhtadee Billah, was inaugurated as Crown Prince and heir apparent.

On 29 Sept. 1959 the Sultan promulgated a Constitution, but parts of it have been in abeyance since Dec. 1962. There is no legislature and supreme power is vested in the Sultan.

National Anthem. 'Ya Allah, lanjutkan lah usia' ('O God, long live His Majesty'); words by P. Rahim, tune by I. Sagap.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

The Council of Ministers was composed as follows in March 1999:

Prime Minister, Minister of Defence and of Finance: The Sultan.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Brunei is a member of the UN, the Commonwealth, APEC and ASEAN.

ECONOMY

The fall in oil prices in 1997-98 led to the setting up of an Economic Council to advise the Sultan on reforms. An investigation was mounted into the affairs of the Amedeo Corporation, Brunei's largest private company run by Prince Jefri, the Sultan's brother.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 1·8% in 1995 and 1994.

Budget. Revenues in 1995 were an estimated US$2·5bn. and expenditure US$2·6bn.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Brunei dollar (BND) of 100 cents, which is at parity with the Singapore dollar (also legal tender).

Banking and Finance. The Brunei Currency Board is the note-issuing monetary authority. In 1993 there were 7 banks (1 incorporated in Brunei), with a total of 33 branches. Savings deposits totalled B$999·3m. in 1993 and fixed time deposits B$1,935·4m. Total bank assets in 1993 were B$6,567·7m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 344,000 kW in 1995. Production in 1995 was 1·56bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was an estimated 4,003 kWh in 1995.

Oil and Gas. The Seria oilfield, discovered in 1929, has passed its peak production. The high level of crude oil production is maintained through the increase of offshore oilfields production. There were 735 producing wells at 31 Dec. 1993. Production was 8·85m. tonnes in 1992. The crude oil is exported directly, and only a small amount is refined at Seria for domestic uses.

Natural gas is produced (9,789m. cu. metres in 1993) at one of the largest liquefied natural gas plants in the world and is exported to Japan.

Agriculture. In 1994 there were 3,000 ha of arable land, 4,000 ha of permanent crops and 6,000 ha of permanent pasture.The main crops produced in 1994 were (estimates) rice (1,000 tonnes), vegetables (8,000 tonnes), cassava (1,000 tonnes) and fruit (5,000 tonnes).

Livestock in 1996: Cattle, 2,000; pigs, 4,000; buffaloes, 5,000 (1995); chickens, 3m. (1995).

Forestry. Forests covered 448,000 ha, or 82·4% of the total land area, in 1995 (down from 85% in 1990). Most of the interior is under forest, containing large potential supplies of serviceable timber. Timber production in 1995 was 295,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. The 1995 catch totalled 4,812 tonnes, of which 4,786 tonnes were from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Brunei depends primarily on its oil industry. Other minor products are rubber, pepper, sawn timber, gravel and animal hides. Local industries include boatbuilding, cloth weaving and the manufacture of brass- and silverware.

Labour. The labour force totalled 131,000 in 1996 (66% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 1995 (and 1994) imports totalled US$1,915m. (US$1,695m.); exports US$2,273m. (US$2,296m.). Crude oil accounts for approximately 48% of revenue from exports, and liquefied natural gas 43%. In 1994 Singapore supplied 29% of imports, the UK 19% and the USA 13%. Japan took 50% of all exports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were in 1996 approximately 1,150 km of roads, of which 400 km are surfaced. The main road connects Bandar Seri Begawan with Kuala Belait and Seria. In 1996 there were 149,738 private cars, 15,797 vans and trucks, and 4,366 road tractors. There were 65 fatalities in road accidents in 1996.

Civil Aviation. Brunei International Airport serves 0·8m. passengers annually. The national carrier is the state-owned Royal Brunei Airlines (RBA). In 1998 RBA operated services to Abu Dhabi, Balikpapan, Bangkok, Beijing, Brisbane, Calcutta, Darwin, Denpasar Bali, Dubai, Frankfurt, Hong Kong, Jakarta, Jeddah, Kota Kinabalu, Kuala Lumpur, Kuching, Labuan, London, Manila, Miri, Mulu, Osaka, Perth, Singapore, Surabaya and Taipei. Other airlines operating to Brunei in 1998 were Bouraq Indonesia, Lufthansa, Malaysia Airlines, Philippine Airlines, Singapore Airlines and Thai Airways International. In 1995 RBA flew 22·1m. km, carrying 916,200 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping. Regular shipping services operate from Singapore, Hong Kong, Sarawak and Sabah to Bandar Seri Begawan, and there is a daily passenger ferry between Bandar Seri Begawan and Labuan. 97 sea-going vessels were licensed in 1993. In 1995, merchant shipping totalled 366,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. There is a telephone network (78,800 telephone main lines in 1996) linking the main centres. In 1996 there were 36,000 cellular phone subscribers (126 per 1,000 persons), 8,000 PCs and 2,000 fax machines.

Postal Services. There were 17 post offices in 1993.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court comprises a High Court and a Court of Appeal and the Magistrates' Courts. The High Court receives appeals from subordinate courts in the districts and is itself a court of first instance for criminal and civil cases. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in London is the final court of appeal. Shariah Courts deal with Islamic law. 25,310 crimes were reported in 1993.

The Royal Brunei Police numbers 1,750 officers and men (1997). In addition, there are 500 additional police officers mostly employed on static guard duties.

Religion. The official religion is Islam. In 1991, 67% of the population were Moslem (mostly Malays), 13% Buddhists and 10% Christian.

Education. The government provides free education to all citizens from pre-school up to the highest level at local and overseas universities and institutions. In 1994 there were 165 kindergartens and schools, with 10,717 children and 506 teachers in kindergartens. In 1994 there were 158 primary schools with 42,270 pupils and 2,772 teachers. There were 2,413 teachers in secondary schools for 28,851 pupils. In 1993 there were 7 technical and vocational colleges with 1,593 students and 371 teachers, and a teacher training college with 418 students and 28 teachers.

In 1993 the University of Brunei Darussalam (founded 1985) had 1,138 students and 207 teachers. An institute of advanced education had 310 students and 71 teachers.

Adult literacy rate, 1995, 88·2% (male, 92·6%; female, 83·4%).

Health. Medical and health services are free to citizens and those in government service and their dependants. Citizens are sent overseas, at government expense, for medical care not available in Brunei. Flying medical services are provided to remote areas. In 1995 there were 10 hospitals; there were 251 doctors, 38 dentists, 15 pharmacists, 278 midwives and 1,228 nursing personnel.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio Television Brunei operates on medium- and shortwaves in Malay, English, Chinese and Nepali. Number of receivers (1995): Radio 80,000 and television 70,000 (colour by PAL).

Press. In 1995 there was 1 local newspaper with a circulation of 20,000.

Tourism. In 1996 there were 837,000 foreign tourists. Receipts totalled US$38m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bulgarians take their name from an invading Asiatic horde (Bulgars) and their language from the Slav population, with whom they merged after 680. From 681 to 1018 and 1185 to 1389 the Bulgarians carved out empires against a background of conflict with Byzantium and Serbia, establishing a civilization of which the Orthodox missionaries Cyril and Methodius, credited with the invention of the Slavonic alphabet, are noteworthy exemplars.

After the Serb-Bulgarian defeat at Kosovo in 1389 Bulgaria finally succumbed to Ottoman encroachment. The Bulgar landowners were replaced by military and civil officials who held land in return for state service. The Ottoman empire's decline, however, engendered corruption and exactions, uprisings and reprisals.

The 1876 rebellion met with brutal repression which provoked great power intervention. Russia invaded Turkey in 1877 and imposed the Treaty of San Stefano (March 1878) which established a 'big Bulgaria' extending into Macedonia and Thrace. Conceiving this as a threat to the balance of power, Britain and Austria-Hungary pressurized Russia into revising these boundaries by the Treaty of Berlin (July 1878): Macedonia and Thrace reverted to Turkey, Eastern Rumelia became semi-autonomous and Bulgaria proper became a principality under Turkish suzerainty.

Under the Treaty, a constituent assembly at Turnovo voted a liberal constitution which provided for a single-chamber parliament elected by male suffrage. The throne was offered to the German Prince Alexander of Battenberg. In 1885 Eastern Rumelia was united to Bulgaria by a coup d'état. Alexander accepted the unification against the wishes of Russia, who forced his abdication in 1886. He was replaced by Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who did not gain Russian recognition until 1896. Prime Minister Stefan Stambolov achieved a period of prosperity but Ferdinand engineered his resignation in 1894, and thenceforth ruled personally through manipulation of the political parties.

After Austria annexed Bosnia in 1908, Bulgaria declared itself independent. To block Austrian expansion into the Balkans, Russia encouraged Greece, Serbia, Montenegro and Bulgaria to form a Balkan League in 1912. The League successfully attacked Turkey (First Balkan War, 1912), but in the dispute which followed over the territorial spoils (principally in Macedonia) Bulgaria failed to secure her claims against her formal allies by force (Second Balkan War, 1913). Territorial aspirations led Bulgaria to join the First World War on the German side in Oct. 1915 and the peace settlement (Neuilly, 1919) left her with little gained.

Economic decline caused by the war produced social unrest. Ferdinand was forced to abdicate in favour of his son, Boris III, in Oct. 1918, and the radical Agrarian Party took office, headed by Alexander Stamboliiski. The latter's reformism, friendship with Yugoslavia (a contender for Macedonia) and high-handed behaviour generated various currents of opposition and he was assassinated after a coup in June 1923. The Communist Party launched an abortive rising in Sept. 1923, and bombed Sofia cathedral in April 1925, killing 120 people. This led to a reign of government terror against all radicals. Bedevilled by Macedonian terrorism and the effects of the world economic depression, parliamentary government was ended by a military coup in May 1934. In 1935 Boris established a royal dictatorship under which political parties were banned. Boris died in 1943 and was succeeded by a regency.

Increasingly drawn into the German economic orbit, and in pursuit of the San Stefano territories, Bulgaria joined the Nazis against Britain in March 1941, but retained diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. In Sept. 1944 the Soviet Union declared war and sent its troops across the frontiers. Wartime opposition to the government had centred round the Communist-dominated Fatherland Front, which formed a government on 9 Sept. A referendum abolished the monarchy and a people's republic was proclaimed in Sept.1946. In 1947 the Soviet-type 'Dimitrov' constitution replaced the Turnovo constitution of 1879. Georgi Dimitrov, a veteran Communist leader who had secured acquittal from a Nazi court after charges of complicity in the arson of the Reichstag, was Prime Minister until his death in 1949. The 'Titoist' purges of late Stalinism were presided over by Vulko Chervenkov, but he was soon eclipsed by Todor Zhivkov, who became leader of the BCP in 1954 and Prime Minister in 1962.

In May 1971 a new constitution led to Zhivkov's election as first President of the newly formed State Council. He was re-elected in 1976, 1981 and 1986. When demonstrations in Sofia in Nov. 1989, occasioned by the Helsinki Agreement ecological conference, broadened into demands for political reform, Todor Zhivkov was replaced as Communist Party leader and head of state by the foreign minister Petur Mladenov. In Dec. the National Assembly approved 21 measures of constitutional reform, including the abolition of the Communist Party's sole right to govern. The government was succeeded in Feb. 1990 by the Communist government of Andrei Lukanov. Attempts at economic reform led to demonstrations and a general strike. Lukanov's government was replaced by a caretaker government in Nov. 1990. A new constitution and fresh elections produced a non-Communist government in Oct. 1991 but strikes and unrest continued, while political divisions virtually paralyzed government. Elections in Dec. 1994 were won by an alliance led by Zhan Videnov, a former Communist-turned-Socialist, who failed to deliver on his promise of painless reform. In 1996 Petar Stoyanov was elected as an anti-Communist pro-reform President. In the election the following April the anti-Communist Union of Democratic Forces (UDF) coalition, led by Ivan Kostov and Alexander Bozhkov, swept back to power.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of Bulgaria is 110,993 sq. km (42,855 sq. miles). It is bounded in the north by Romania, east by the Black Sea, south by Turkey and Greece, and west by Yugoslavia and the Republic of Macedonia. The country is divided into 9 regions.

Area and population in 1996:

Region	Area (sq. km)	Pop. (1,000)	Region	Area (sq. km)	Pop. (1,000)
Bourgas	14,724	847	Rousse	10,843	760
Haskovo	13,824	889	Sofia (city)	1,311	1,192
Lovech	15,150	990	Sofia (region)	19,021	967
Montana	10,607	616	Varna	11,929	901
Plovdiv	13,585	1,214

The capital, Sofia, has regional status.

The population of Bulgaria at the census of 1992 was 8,472,724 (females, 4,515,936); population density 76·3 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 8·31m.

Population of principal towns (1996 estimate): Sofia, 1,141,712; Plovdiv, 344,326; Varna, 301,421; Bourgas, 199,470; Rousse, 168,051; Stara Zagora, 151,218; Pleven, 127,945; Sliven, 107,267; Dobrich, 104,074; Shumen, 97,126; Pernik, 90,460; Yambol, 90,239; Pazardzhik, 82,295; Khaskovo, 80,972; Vratsa, 77,069; Gabrovo, 75,220.

Ethnic groups at the 1992 census: Bulgarians, 7,271,185; Turks, 800,052; Gypsies, 313,396.

Bulgarian is the official language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996: Live births, 72,743; deaths, 117,056. Rates per 1,000 population, 1996: Birth, 8·6; death, 14·0; marriage, 4·3; infant deaths, 15·6; growth per 1,000 live births, –5·4. Abortions, 1996, 93,540, of which 9,389 were spontaneous. In 1994 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Expectation of life in 1996 was 70·6 years (males, 67·1; females, 74·9). Fertility rate, 1990–95, 1·5 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The southern parts have a Mediterranean climate, with winters mild and moist and summers hot and dry, but further north the conditions become more Continental, with a larger range of temperature and greater amounts of rainfall in summer and early autumn. Sofia, Jan. 28°F (–2·2°C), July 69°F (20·6°C). Annual rainfall 25·4" (635 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was adopted at Turnovo in July 1991. The President is directly elected for not more than two 5-year terms. Candidates for the presidency must be at least 40 years old and have lived for the last 5 years in Bulgaria. American-style primary elections were introduced in 1996; voting is open to all the electorate.

The 240-member National Assembly is directly elected by proportional representation. The President nominates a candidate from the largest parliamentary party as Prime Minister.

National Anthem. 'Gorda stara planina' ('Proud and ancient mountains'); words and tune by T. Radoslavov.

RECENT ELECTIONS

A primary was held on 11 June 1996 for the opposition presidential candidate; turn-out was 12%. There were 2 candidates. Presidential elections were held in 2 rounds on 27 Oct. and 3 Nov. 1996. Petar Stoyanov won the first round against 12 opponents with 44·1% of votes cast; turn-out was 62·7%. He also won the run-off round with 59·7% of votes cast; turn-out was 61·5%.

At the elections of 19 April 1997 a United Democratic Forces coalition was elected, obtaining 137 seats with 52·26% of votes cast; the BSP, 58 with 22·07%; the Union of National Salvation (a coalition of the Turkish Movement for Rights and Freedom and monarchists), 19 with 8%; Euroleft, 14 with 6%; the Bulgarian Business Bloc, 12 with 5%. On 14 May 1997 Ivan Kostov (UDF) became Prime Minister.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Petar Stoyanov (b. 1948; Union of Democratic Forces; sworn in 19 Jan. 1997).

Vice-President: Todor Kavaldjiev.

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Local Government. Local authorities for the 9 regions and 278 districts within them are elected for 30 months. Elections were held for mayors and councillors on 29 Oct. and 12 Nov. 1995. Turn-out was 54·7% for the former and 53·1% for the latter. A large majority of mayorships were won by the BSP and its allies. In the elections for councillors, the BSP and its allies won 41% of votes cast, the UDF 24·1%, the PU 12·3%, the Movement for Rights and Freedom 8·2% and the Bulgarian Business Bloc 5%.

DEFENCE

Conscription was reduced from 18 to 12 months in 1992.

Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$339m. (US$41 per capita), representing 3·4% of GDP. In 1985 the total had been US$2,331m., equivalent to US$276 per capita and representing 14·0% of GDP.

Army. There are 3 military districts based on Sofia, Plovdiv and Sliven. In 1997 the Army had a strength of 51,600, including 33,300 conscripts, and is organized in 4 tank, 1 mechanized, 1 surface-to-air missile and 1 airborne brigade, 3 motor rifle divisions and 3 artillery, 3 anti-tank, 1 surface-to-air missile and 3 air defence brigades. Equipment includes 177 T-34, 1,276 T-55 and 333 T-72 main battle tanks. There are 12 regiments of border guards numbering 12,000.

Navy. The Navy, all ex-Soviet or Soviet-built, comprises 2 'Romeo' class old diesel submarines, 1 Koni class small frigate, 4 'Poti', 1 'Tarantul' and 2 'Pauk' class corvettes, 6 'Osa' class missile craft, 10 patrol vessels, 4 coastal and 16 inshore minesweepers. There are 2 medium landing ships and 20 craft. Major auxiliaries include 2 oilers, 2 research ships, 1 electronic intelligence gatherer, 2 training ships and 1 tug. There are some 20 minor auxiliaries and service craft. There are 2 regiments of coastal artillery including some missile-armed, and some 10 shore-based Ka-25 and Mi-14 helicopters. The naval headquarters is at Varna, and there are bases at Atiya and at Vidin on the Danube. Personnel in 1996 totalled 6,000.

Air Force. The Air Force had (1996) 20,100 personnel (16,000 conscripts). There are 3 wings of MiG-21/23/29 interceptors; 3 wings of fighter/ground attack MiG-23s and Su-20/25s; 1 regiment of Mi-24 helicopter gunships; a total of about 20 Tu-134, L-410, An-2 and An-24/26 transport aircraft; some 45 Mi-2 and Mi-8/17 helicopters; and Yak-18T, L-29 Delfin and L-39 Albatros trainers. Soviet-built 'Guideline', 'Goa' and 'Ganef' surface-to-air missiles have also been supplied to Bulgaria.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Talks began with international financial institutions in Feb. 1998 on the question of a 3-year recovery and restructuring programme, and in Oct. 1998 the International Monetary Fund approved a US$850m. loan to help cover the balance of payments deficit and support market reforms.

Bulgaria is a member of the UN, the Council of Europe, the Central European Initiative and the NATO Partnership for Peace, and is an Associate Member of the EU and an Associate Partner of the WEU.

ECONOMY

Policy. At the beginning of 1992, 95% of enterprises were still in state ownership. A plan to privatize a further 500 large and medium-sized firms was introduced in 1993. Mining, energy, oil processing, railways and munitions production remain in state hands. A law of April 1992 allocates 10% of the proceeds of privatization to agricultural development, 20% to the compensation of former owners, 30% to social funds and 40% to local management councils to cover irrecoverable debts. A Centre for Mass Privatization was set up in 1994 to supervise a new stage of privatization in an attempt to speed it up.

Privatized firms enjoy a 5-year tax exemption. 67 loss-making public enterprises were wound up in 1996.

Performance. In 1996 GDP was 1,660,237m. leva. Real GDP growth in 1997 was –7·5% (–10·7% in 1996), but was estimated to be 4·5% in 1998. In 1997–98 the country pulled itself back from the abyss of economic and financial disaster. Its success in stabilizing the economy, in the wake of the collapse of the banking system and the lurch into hyperinflation in early 1997, has exceeded most expectations.

Budget. The fiscal year is the calendar year. In 1998 budget revenue was envisaged at 4,416,000m. leva, and expenditure at 5,411,000m. leva. VAT was first introduced in 1995. In 1996 there was an increase in VAT from 18% to 22%. The current account deficit was estimated to be US$–161m. in 1998.

Currency. The unit of currency is the lev (BGL) of 100 stotinki. Foreign exchange reserves were estimated to be US$2·65bn. in 1998. Gold reserves were 36·5m. tonnes. Runaway inflation (123·0% in 1996 rising to 1,082·6% in 1997) forced the closure of 14 banks in 1996. However, by the end of 1998 it was forecast to drop to 9%. In June 1997 the new government introduced a currency board financial system which stabilized the lev and renewed economic growth. Under it, the lev is pegged to the German mark at DM1 = 1,000 leva. In May 1996 the lev was devalued by 68%.

Banking and Finance. The National Bank (Governor, Svetoslav Gavriiski, b. 1948) is the central bank and bank of issue. There is a commercial bank, Bulbank (founded 1964) and a State Savings Bank, the latter serving local enterprises as well as the public. In 1996, there were savings accounts totalling 81,606m. leva. There were 41 commercial banks in 1996.

There is a stock exchange in Sofia.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in general use. On 1 April 1916 the Gregorian calendar came into force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Bulgaria has little oil, gas or high-grade coal, and energy policy is based on the exploitation of its low-grade coal and hydro-electric resources. But the country is a major distribution centre for energy in the Black Sea region, a fact underlined by the 1997 deal with Russia which guarantees gas supplies to Bulgaria, while clearing the way for the construction of a transit gas pipeline between Russia and western Turkey. There is 1 nuclear power station. Installed capacity was 12·09m. kW in 1994. Output, 1996, 42,710m. kWh (thermal, 21,714m. kWh; nuclear, 18,082m. kWh; hydro-electric, 2,914m. kWh). Consumption per capita: 4,491 kWh (1995 est.)

Oil and Gas. Oil is extracted in the Balchik district on the Black Sea, in an area 100 km north of Varna, and at Dolni Dubnik near Pleven. There are refineries at Bourgas (annual capacity 5m. tonnes) and Dolni Dubnik (7m. tonnes). Crude oil production (1996) was 32,000 tonnes; gas, 18·75m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Production in 1996: Manganese ore, 13,100 tonnes; iron ore, 282,000 tonnes; lignite, 28·10m. tonnes; brown coal, 3·06m. tonnes; hard coal, 31·30m. tonnes.

Agriculture. Agriculture accounted for around 23·4% of GDP in 1997. Agricultural land covered 6,164,000 ha in 1996, of which 4,693,000 ha were arable. In 1996 sown area was 2,902,000 ha; there were 277,000 ha of meadows and 1,471,000 ha of commons and pastures. By 1999, 60% of Bulgarian households worked a plot of land, often on a part-time basis.

Legislation of 1991 and 1992 provided for the redistribution of collectivized land to its former owners up to 30 ha. Landless peasants received state land or compensation in lieu. Bulgarians resident abroad may acquire such land, as may legal bodies with up to 50% foreign ownership. It may be rented out, but not sold for 3 years. There were 2,073 agricultural collectives and firms in 1992; and 2,435 private farms in 1996.

Production in 1996 (in 1,000 tonnes, with percentage from private holdings): Wheat, 1,786 (27·2%); maize, 1,089 (67·3%); barley, 456 (27·6%); sugar beet, 87 (35·6%); sunflower seed, 530 (15·5%); seed cotton, 11 (4·5%); tobacco, 31 (96·8%); tomatoes, 325 (90·2%); potatoes, 320 (96·6%); grapes, 660 (63·9%). Bulgaria is a leading producer of attar of roses (rose oil). In 1993 an estimated 3,000 ha were under rose cultivation, with an annual output of over 1,500 kg. Other products (in 1,000 tonnes, with percentage from private holdings) in 1996: Meat, 578 (86·8%); wool, 9 (92·1%); honey, 4·60 (98·0%); eggs, 1,734m. (74·8%); litres of milk 1,387m. (88·0%)

Livestock (1996, in 1,000): Cattle, 582 (milch cows, 358) (in private holdings, 473 and 309); sheep, 3,020 (2,843); pigs, 1,500 (1,173); poultry, 16,227 (13,478).

There were 24,293 tractors in use in 1995.

Forestry. Forest area, 1996, was 3,878,000 ha, or nearly 35% of the total land area (1·29m. ha coniferous, 2·58m. ha broad-leaved). 16,000 ha were afforested in 1996 and 1·931m. cu. metres of building timber were cut.

Fisheries. In 1996 total catches were 15,300 tonnes. As recently as 1988 the catch amounted to 118,000 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

In 1996 there were 342,261 registered economic units. Units by ownership: State, 9,682; municipal, 9,820; joint-stock companies, 3,588; co-operatives; 5,410; social organizations, 6,306; associations, 2,483; foreign ventures, 9,005; resident, 307,448. In 1996 the private sector accounted for 45·9% of production.

Production, 1996 (in 1,000 tonnes): Pig iron and ferro-alloys, 1,513; steel, 2,457; rolled steel, 1,898; artificial fertilizers, 559; sulphuric acid, 518; cement, 2,132; paper, 174; cotton fabric, 69·2m. metres; woollen fabric, 12m. metres. 10,000 TV sets (5,900 colour) and 36,200 refrigerators.

Labour. In Nov. 1996, 646,600 employees worked in the private sector. There is a 42½-hour 5-day working week. Retirement is at 55 for women and 60 for men, or 52 and 57 after 25 years in the last employment. The average wage (excluding peasantry) was 13,269 leva per month in 1996; minimum wage was 1,200 leva per month. Population of working age (males 16–59; females 16–54), 1996, 4,746,790 (47·6% females). At the end of 1996 the economically active population was 3,576,200 (1,681,000 females), of whom 3,085,400 were employed. Unemployment was around 11% in Dec. 1998.

Trade Unions. An independent white-collar trade union movement, Podkrepa, was formed in 1989. It claimed 100,000 members in July 1990. The former official Central Council of Trade Unions reconstituted itself in 1990 as the Confederation of Independent Trade Unions.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Legislation in force as of Feb. 1992 abolished restrictions imposed in 1990 on the repatriation of profits and allows foreign nationals to own and set up companies in Bulgaria. Western share participation in joint ventures may exceed 50%. Total foreign debt was US$10,500m. in Jan. 1996.

Imports and Exports. In 1996 exports totalled US$4·6bn. and imports, US$4·3bn. Principal exports in 1996 (in tonnes): meat, (pork and poultry), 6,700; tomatoes, 22,500; cheese, 5,700; wine, 214,500; tobacco, 21,200; soda ash, 631,200; carbamide, 733,000; ammonium nitrate, 746,800; polyethylene, 49,800; footwear, 5·51m. pairs; rolled iron and steel products, 819,600 (1994); zinc, 57,800 (1994); electric motors, 486,800 items. Principal imports: Pepper, 397,000; newsprint, 32,600; cotton, 18,500; wool, 4,700,000; iron and steel tubes, 22,800; buses, 743 items; motor cars, 35,100 items; lorries, 3,000 items; sugar, 312,700; coal, 231,300; anthracite, 2,006,100; crude oil, 5·9m. (1994); petrol, 107,100 (1992); natural gas, 5,261·5m. cu. metres (1994).

Main export markets in 1996 (trade in 1m. leva): Russian Federation, 76,938; Germany, 74,722; Greece, 61,384; Italy, 78,951. Main import suppliers: Russian Federation, 337,121; Germany, 98,418; Italy, 53,352; Greece, 30,793.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 37,300 km of hard-surfaced roads, including (1994) 277 km of motorways and 2,935 km of main roads. 817m. passengers and 40·67m. tonnes of freight were carried in 1996. Vehicles in use in 1996 numbered 1,955,716, of which 1,707,023 were passenger cars (204 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were 6,351 road accidents in 1996 with 1,014 fatalities.

Rail. In 1996 there were 4,293 km of 1,435 mm gauge railway (2,655 km electrified). 66·1m. passengers and 30·1m. tonnes of freight were carried.

There is a tramway in Sofia.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Sofia (Vrazhdebna). The state-owned Balkan is the national carrier. In 1996 it carried 1·22m. passengers and 10,000 tonnes of freight. BURKINA FASO

République Démocratique du Burkina Faso

Capital: Ouagadougou
Population estimate, 2000: 12·06m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 950
HDI/world rank: 0·219/172

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Formerly known as Upper Volta, the country's name was changed in 1984 to Burkina Faso, meaning 'the land of honest men'. The area it covers was settled by farming communities until their invasion by the Mossi people in the 11th century, who set up several powerful kingdoms—Ouagadougou, Yatenga and Tenkogodo. These successfully resisted Islamic crusades and attacks by neighbouring empires for seven centuries until conquered by the French between 1895 and 1903.

France made Upper Volta a separate colony in 1919, only to abolish it as such in 1932, dividing its territory between the Ivory Coast (now Côte d'Ivoire), French Sudan (now Mali) and Niger. In 1947 the territory of Upper Volta was reconstituted. For much of the colonial era the people of Upper Volta suffered from military and labour conscription, forced labourers being often sent to the Ivory Coast. After the abolition of forced labour in 1946, Voltaic men continued to emigrate to the Ivory Coast and Ghana, this time voluntarily. Upper Volta remained a desperately poor country often hit by drought, particularly in 1972-74 and again in 1982-84.

After independence, President Maurice Hameogo and his Union Démocratique Voltaique (UDV) ruled until 3 Jan. 1966 when the army took power under Gen. Sangoule Lamizana. His régime surrendered some power to civilians in 1971 under a new constitution allowing for an elected assembly and with a government consisting of two-thirds civilians and one-third military officers. But after three years Lamizana, who had remained president, and his military colleagues again took power.

Their régime created a new governmental political party in 1975. A new constitution was drawn up and approved by referendum in 1977, and elections were held to a new national assembly in 1978. Joseph Conombo, as prime minister, formed a coalition government. Gen. Lamizana was elected president.

In 1980 a coup d'état overthrew this new régime and Col. Saye Zerbo, at the head of a Comité Militaire de Redressement pour le Progrés National (CMRPN), held power for two years. Then, on 7 Nov. 1982, the CMRPN was overthrown in another coup and replaced by the Conseil du Salut de Peuple (CSP), headed by Jean-Baptiste Ouedraogo. Younger and more radical officers now came to the fore, but there was serious tension within the CSP, leading to the arrest of the leading radical Capt. Thomas Sankara on 17 May 1983, and then, on 4 Aug. 1983, to a new coup d'état which put him in power.

Sankara and his radical military colleagues formed a Conseil National de la Révolution (CNR) and installed a left-wing régime, with Revolutionary Defence Committees (Comités de Défense de la Révolution, CDR) operating at local level. The régime aimed at ending exploitation, and sought to curb food traders. Although it established close relations with the similar régime in Ghana, and with Libya, it also maintained fairly normal relations with France and remains in the franc zone.

A border dispute between Burkina Faso and Mali led to fighting in 1974 and again in Dec. 1985. A year later, on 22 Dec. 1986, the International Court of Justice ruled on the dispute, dividing the contested area into roughly equal shares for each; both countries accepted the judgement. Sankara was overthrown and killed in a coup on 15 Oct. 1987, the fifth since 1960, led by his friend Capt. Blaise Compaoré.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Burkina Faso is bounded in the north and west by Mali, east by Niger and south by Benin, Togo, Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire. Area: 274,122 sq. km; population (census, 1985) 7,967,019 (3,846,518 males). 1996 estimate, 10,623,300 (15·9% urban in 1995); density, 38·8 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 12·06m.

The largest cities (1985 census) are Ouagadougou, the capital (442,223), Bobo-Dioulasso (231,162), Koudougou (51,670), Ouahigouya (38,604), Banfora (35,204), Kaya (25,799), Fada N'Gourma and Tenkodogo.

The principal ethnic groups are the Mossi (49%), Fulani (8%), Mandé (7%), Bobo (7%), Gourounsi (7%), Gourmantché (7%), Bissa (4%), Lobi-Dagari (4%), Sénoufo (2%).

French is the official language.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Burkina Faso is a member of the UN, OAU and is an ACP state of the EU.

ECONOMY

Policy. A development programme for 1994–96, based mainly on agriculture and costing 62,000m. francs CFA, was being financed largely by foreign aid. It is proposed to privatize and restructure the banking and industrial sectors. 11 enterprises had been privatized by Nov. 1994. A second phase of privatization was then initiated.

Price controls were imposed on basic items following the devaluation of the franc CFA in Jan. 1994.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 4·5% in 1995 (1·2% in 1994).

Budget. Total revenues in 1995 were an estimated US$277m. and expenditure US$492m.

Currency. The unit of currency is the franc CFA (XOF) with a parity rate of 100 francs CFA to 1 French franc. Total money supply was 269bn. francs CFA in Dec. 1997. Foreign exchange reserves were US$333m. in Dec. 1997; gold reserves were 11,000 troy oz. in 1993. The average annual inflation rate during the period 1990–96 was 7·1%.

Banking and Finance. The bank of issue which functions as the central bank is the regional West African Central Bank (BCEAO; Governor, Boukary Ouédraogo). There are 3 commercial banks, 4 specialized development institutions, a savings bank, 5 non-bank credit institutions and an investment company.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Production of electricity (1994) was 216m. kWh. There are 5 thermal power stations with a total capacity in 1995 of 38·9 MW. Hydro-electric capacity in 1994 was 15 MW. Consumption per capita was 22 kWh in 1994.

Minerals. There are deposits of manganese, zinc, limestone, phosphate and diamonds. Gold production was 1·8 tonnes in 1992.

Agriculture. In 1996 agriculture accounted for 35% of GDP. In 1994 there were 3·55m. ha of arable land and 6m. ha of permanent pasture. 24,000 ha were irrigated in 1994. 9·54m. persons depended on agriculture in 1994, of whom 5m. were economically active. Production (1992, in 1,000 tonnes): Sorghum, 1,292; millet, 784; sugar-cane, 340; maize, 341; groundnuts, 143; rice, 47; cotton, 172; sesame, 8. Rice and groundnuts are of increasing importance.

Livestock (1996): Cattle, 4·35m.; sheep, 5·8m.; goats (1995), 7·24m.; pigs, 560,000; asses, 455,000; chickens (1995), 19m.

Forestry. In 1995 forests covered 42,700 sq. km. or 15·6% of the total land area (down from 16·2% in 1990). Timber production in 1995 was 10·03m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. In 1995 total catches were approximately 8,000 tonnes, exclusively from inland waters. There is some fish farming.

INDUSTRY

In 1994 manufacturing contributed 14% of GDP, mainly food-processing and textiles. Plant is primitive, and employs only about 1% of the workforce. There are about 100 firms, most publicly owned.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 5,419,000 (53% males). Over 80% of the economically active population are engaged in agriculture, fishing and forestry.

Trade Unions. There were (1998) 4 federations: the CGTB, USTB, CNTB and ONSL.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$1,294m. in 1996.

Imports and Exports. In 1996 imports totalled US$545m. and exports US$305m. Value of main exports (in US$1m.), 1994: Cotton, 59; gold, 22. Principal export markets, 1994: France, 13·2%; Côte d'Ivoire, 10·8%; Thailand, 10·2%; Italy, 7·8%; Taiwan, 7·2%. Principal import suppliers: Côte d'Ivoire, 25·6%; France, 15·6%; Niger, 3·5%; Nigeria, 3%; Japan, 2·3%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The road system comprised an estimated 12,100 km in 1996, of which 5,720 km were national, 3,030 km regional and 3,350 km other roads. Only 1,900 km are asphalted. There were an estimated 56,430 vehicles in use in 1996, including 38,220 passenger cars (3·6 per 1,000 inhabitants).

Rail. The railway from Abidjan in Côte d'Ivoire to Kaya (622 km of metre gauge within Burkina Faso) is operated by the mixed public-private company Sitarail, a concessionaire to both governments. The railways carried 0·6m. passengers and 0·2m. tonnes of freight in 1993.

Civil Aviation. The international airports are Ouagadougou and Bobo-Dioulasso. The national carrier is Air Burkina (66% state-owned) which in 1998 flew to Abidjan, Bamako, Cotonou, Lomé and Niamtougou in addition to operating on domestic routes. In 1998 services were also operated by Air Afrique, Air Algérie, Air France, Air Ivoire, Ghana Airways and SABENA. In 1995 scheduled airline traffic of Burkina Faso-based carriers flew 3·4m. km, carrying 137,000 passengers (111,000 on international flights).

Telecommunications. There were about 36,300 telephone main lines in 1997, or 3·3 per 1,000 inhabitants. Approximately 700 people were Internet users in Jan. 1998.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Civilian courts replaced revolutionary tribunals in 1993. There is a Supreme Court in Ouagadougou and Courts of Appeal at Ouagadougou and Bobo-Dioulasso.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Tradition recounts the establishment of a Tutsi kingdom in the 16th century. German military occupation in 1890 incorporated the territory into German East Africa. From 1919 Burundi formed part of Ruanda-Urundi administered by the Belgians, first as a League of Nations mandate and then as a UN trust territory. Internal self-government was granted on 1 Jan. 1962, followed by independence on 1 July 1962.

On 8 July 1966 Prince Charles Ndizeye deposed his father Mwami Mwambutsa IV, suspended the constitution and made Capt. Michel Micombero Prime Minister. On 1 Sept. Prince Charles was enthroned as Mwami Ntare V. On 28 Nov., while the Mwami was attending a Head of States Conference in incorporated Kinshasa (Congo), Micombero declared Burundi a republic with himself as president.

On 31 March 1972 Prince Charles returned to Burundi from Uganda and was placed under house arrest. On 29 April 1972 President Micombero dissolved the Council of Ministers and took full power; that night heavy fighting broke out between rebels from both Burundi and neighbouring countries and the ruling Tutsi, apparently with the intention of destroying the Tutsi hegemony. Prince Charles was killed during the fighting in which it was estimated that up to 120,000 died. On 14 July 1972 President Micombero reinstated a Government with a Prime Minister. On 1 Nov. 1976 President Micombero was deposed by the Army, as was President Bagaza on 3 Sept. 1987. Pierre Buyoya assumed the presidency on 1 Oct. 1987.

On 1 June 1993 President Buyoya was defeated in elections by Melchior Ndadaye, who thus became the country's first elected president and the first Hutu president, but on 21 Oct. President Ndadaye and 6 ministers were killed in an attempted military coup. A wave of Tutsi-Hutu massacres broke out, and it is generally accepted that over 100,000 people have been killed since then. On 6 April 1994 the new president, Cyprien Ntaryamira, was also killed, possibly assassinated, together with the President of Rwanda.

On 25 July 1996 the army seized power, installing Maj. Pierre Buyoya as president for the second time, after deposing President Sylvestre Ntibantunganya, dissolving parliament and prohibiting political parties. Parties were permitted to function again in Sept. 1996, but the rebel movement has grown in strength and the civil war between Tutsi and Hutu groups shows no sign of ending. A single attack in Jan. 1998 by a group of rebels left more than 280 Hutus dead.

In June 1998 Maj. Buyoya drew up a settlement for a power-sharing transitional government with 11 opposition ministers in a 22-strong government and the replacement of the prime minister by two vice-presidents, one Hutu and one Tutsi. The National Assembly was to be enlarged from 81 members to 121. Extremists on both sides denounced the agreement which is still under negotiation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Burundi is bounded in the north by Rwanda, east and south by Tanzania and west by the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and has an area of 27,834 sq. km (10,759 sq. miles). The population at the 1990 census was 5,292,793; estimate (1996) 5,356,000; population density, 192·4 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 6·97m.

Since 1994 there have also been some 0·3m. Rwandan refugees, mainly Hutu. Only 7·5% of the population was urban in 1996.

There are 15 regions, all named after their chief towns. Area and population:

Region	Area (in sq. km.)	Population (1990 census)
Bubanza	1,093	222,953
Bujumbura	1,334	608,931
Bururi	2,515	385,490

Region	Area (in sq. km.)	Population (1990 census)
Cankuzo	1,940	142,707
Cibitoke	1,639	279,843
Karuzi	1,459	287,905
Kayanza	1,229	443,116
Kirundo	1,711	401,103
Kitega	1,989	596,174
Makamba	1,972	223,799
Muhinga	1,825	373,382
Muramuya	1,530	441,653
Ngozi	1,468	482,246
Rutana	1,898	195,834
Ruyigi	2,365	238,567

The capital, Bujumbura, had an estimated population of 0·3m. in 1996.

There are 3 ethnic groups—Hutu (Bantu, forming over 83% of the total); Tutsi (Nilotic, less than 15%); Twa (pygmoids, less than 1%). The local language is Kirundi. French is also an official language. Kiswahili is spoken in the commercial centres.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 268,000; deaths, 111,000. Rates, 1995 (per 1,000 population): Birth, 44·2; death, 18·3. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, was 43·0 years for men and 46·1 years for women. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 120 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 6·8 children per woman.

CLIMATE

An equatorial climate, modified by altitude. The eastern plateau is generally cool, the easternmost savanna several degrees hotter. The wet seasons are from March to May and Sept. to Dec. Bujumbura, Jan. 73°F (22·8°C), July 73°F (22·8°C). Annual rainfall 33" (825 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of 1981 provided for a one-party state. In Jan. 1991 the government of President Buyoya, leader of the sole party, the Party of Unity and National Progress (Uprona), proposed a new constitution which was approved by a referendum in March 1992 (with 89% of votes cast in favour), legalizing parties not based on ethnic group, region or religion and providing for presidential elections by direct universal suffrage.

There used to be a National Assembly with 81 members elected from 16 constituencies by proportional representation. There was a 5% threshold. On 16 July 1998 the National Assembly was reformed into a National Transition Assembly, whereby 40 additional members were appointed from a mix of political parties and civil society. Government activities are overseen by a 10-member National Security Council, of which the President and Prime Minister are members.

National Anthem. 'Uburundi Bwacu' ('Dear Burundi'); words by a committee, tune by M. Barengayabo.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential elections of 1 June 1993 the electorate was 2·36m.; turn-out was 97·18%. Melchior Ndadaye was elected against former President Buyoya and one other opponent with 64·79% of votes cast, and was sworn in on 10 July 1993.

Following his assassination Cyprien Ntaryamira was elected President by the National Assembly on 13 Jan. 1994 to serve out President Ndadaye's 5-year term of office. After the latter's death and possible assassination, Sylvestre Ntibantunganya (b. 1956; Frodebu) was elected President by the National Assembly on 5 Sept. 1994 against 5 opponents.

At the parliamentary elections of 29 June 1993, 740 candidates stood representing 6 parties. The Front for Democracy in Burundi (Frodebu) gained 65 seats with 71·4% of votes cast, and Uprona, 16 with 21·4%. A number of Frodebu MPs elected in June 1993 have been killed in the meantime.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

On 25 July 1996 Maj. Pierre Buyoya (b. 1950; Uprona) was installed as Interim President after a military coup, and sworn in as President on 27 Sept. The First Vice-President is Frederic Bamvuginyumvira; the Second Vice-President is Mathias Sinamenye.

Pascal-Firmin Ndimira became Prime Minister and formed a 'transitional government of national unity'.

Most countries do not recognize either Maj. Pierre Buyoya as President or the government that was formed, which in March 1999 comprised:

Prime Minister: Pascal-Firmin Ndimira.

Minister of Agriculture and Livestock: Salvator Ntihabose. Civil Service, Labour and Vocational Training: Emmanuel Tungamwese. Commerce, Industry and Tourism: Nestor Nyabenda. Communal Development and Handicrafts: Gaspard Ntirampeba. Defence: Lt.-Col. Alfred Nkurunziza. Development and Reconstruction: Leon Nimbona. Education: Prosper Mpawenayo. Energy and Mines: Bernard Barandereka. External Relations and Co-operation: Severin Ntahomvukiye. Finance: Astere Girukwigomba. Health: Dr Juma Mohamed Kariburyo. Human Rights, Institutional Reform and Relations with the National Assembly: Eugene Nindorera. Information and Government Spokesman: Dr Luc Rukingama. Internal Affairs and Security: Col. KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The recorded history of Cambodia starts at the beginning of the Christian era with the Kingdom of Fou-Nan, whose territories at one time included parts of Thailand, Malaya, Cochin-China and Laos. The kingdom was absorbed at the end of the 6th century by the Khmers. Attacked on either side by the Vietnamese and the Thai from the 15th century onwards, Cambodia was saved from annihilation by the establishment of a French protectorate in 1863. Thailand eventually recognized the protectorate and renounced all claims to suzerainty in exchange for Cambodia's north-western provinces of Battambang and Siem Reap, which were, however, returned under a Franco–Thai convention of 1907, confirmed in the Franco–Thai treaty of 1937. In 1904 the province of Stung Treng, formerly administered as part of Laos, was attached to Cambodia.

A nationalist movement began in the 1930s, and anti-French feeling strengthened in 1940–41 when the French submitted to Japanese demands for bases in Cambodia and allowed Thailand to annex Cambodian territory. On 9 March 1945 the Japanese suppressed the French administration and King Norodom Sihanouk proclaimed Cambodia's independence. British troops occupied Phnom Penh in Oct. 1945, and the re-establishment of French authority was followed by a Franco–Cambodian modus vivendi of 7 Jan. 1946, which promised a constitution embodying a constitutional monarchy. Elections for a National Consultative Assembly were held on 1 Sept. 1946 and a Franco–Thai agreement of 17 Nov. 1946 ensured the return to Cambodia of provinces annexed by Thailand in 1941.

In 1949 Cambodia was granted independence as an Associate State of the French Union. The transfer of the French military powers to the Cambodian government on 9 Nov. 1953 is considered in Cambodia as the attainment of sovereign independence. In Jan. 1955 Cambodia became financially and economically independent, both of France and the other two former Associate States of French Indo-China, Vietnam and Laos.

Anti-French guerrilla bands had operated in the jungle from 1945, the most important being a nationalist group known as the Khmer Issarak led by Son Ngoc Thanh. By 1953 Communist bands drawn from the Vietnamese minority and controlled by the Vietminh were active, and in 1954 regular Vietminh forces invaded Cambodia.

Fighting came to an end on 21 July 1954, with the Geneva Agreement. This led to the withdrawal of French and Vietminh troops. Most of the Khmer Issarak bands then surrendered. The International Control Commission responsible for the implementation of the Geneva Agreements was withdrawn in Dec. 1969 at the request of Prince Sihanouk.

Cambodia gained independence in 1953 and in 1967 the Khmer Rouge took up arms to support peasants against a rice tax. An American-backed coup ousted King Sihanouk in 1970 and there followed a five-year civil war with the Khmer Rouge who aimed to establish a communist rice-growing dynasty, a combination of Maoism and ancient xenophobic nationalism. From 1970 hostilities extended throughout most of the country involving North and South Vietnamese and US forces as well as republican and anti-republican Khmer troops. During 1973 direct US and North Vietnamese participation in the fighting came to an end, leaving a civil war situation which continued during 1974 with large-scale fighting between the Khmer Republic, supported by US arms and economic aid, and the United National Cambodian Front including 'Khmer Rouge' communists, supported by North Vietnam and China.

After unsuccessful attempts to capture Phnom Penh in 1973 and 1974, the Khmer Rouge defeated the American backed leader Lon Nol in April 1975, when the remnants of the republican forces surrendered the city.

From April 1975 the Khmer Rouge instituted a harsh and highly centralized regime. They cut the country off from normal contact with the world and expelled all foreigners. All cities and towns were forcibly evacuated and the population were set to work in the fields.

In late 1978, in response to repeated border attacks, Vietnam invaded Cambodia. On 7 Jan. 1979 Phnom Penh was captured by the Vietnamese, and the Prime Minister, Pol Pot, fled. Over 2m. Cambodian lives were lost from 1975 to 1979. In Dec. 1985 the Khmer Rouge still had 30,000 guerrillas fighting the Vietnamese in Cambodia.

In June 1982 the Khmer Rouge (who claimed to have abandoned their Communist ideology and to have disbanded their Communist party) entered into a coalition with Son Sann's Kampuchean People's National Liberation Front and Prince Sihanouk's group.

On 23 Oct. 1991 the warring factions and 19 countries signed an agreement in Paris instituting a ceasefire in Cambodia to be monitored by UN troops. On 31 Oct. the UN Security Council unanimously agreed to establish a UN Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC), and on 28 Feb. 1992 the Security Council voted to send a force of 22,000 soldiers, police and officials to disarm the factions and organize elections. Following the election of a constituent assembly in May 1993, a new constitution was promulgated on 23 Sept. 1993 restoring parliamentary monarchy.

During 1993–94 the Khmer Rouge continued hostilities against the government in disregard of the 1991 Paris Agreement, refusing to take part in the 1993 elections. They were formally banned by the National Assembly in June 1994. By 1996 the Khmer Rouge had split into two warring factions. The leader of one, Ieng Sary, who had been sentenced to death in his absence for genocide, was pardoned by the King in Sept. 1996. In early Nov. 1996 Ieng Sary and some 4,000 of his forces threw in their lot with government forces.

In July 1997 Hun Sen, the second prime minister, engineered a coup which led to the ousting of first prime minister, Prince Norodom Ranariddh. Prince Ranariddh went into exile and was later convicted in his absence by 2 military courts of security crimes. However, on 30 March 1998 he returned as guest of a Japanese-brokered plan to ensure 'fair and free' elections. These took place on 26 July 1998 against a background of violence and general intimidation. Hun Sen's Cambodian People's Party declared victory but the opposition parties alleged fraud and threatened to boycott the new National Assembly. King Norodom Sihanouk offered to mediate while Hun Sen tightened his grip on the country. Cambodian refugees in Thailand total 87,000 according to the UN. Other after-effects of war include the clearing of landmines which take their daily toll on innocent civilians.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Cambodia is bounded in the north by Laos and Thailand, west by Thailand, east by Vietnam and south by the Gulf of Thailand. It has an area of about 181,035 sq. km (69,898 sq. miles).

Population, 5,756,141 (census, 1981), of whom 93% were Khmer, 4% Vietnamese and 3% Chinese. Estimate, based on the UN's electoral roll (1996), 9,857,000; density, 54 per sq. km. Approximately 20% of the population in 1995 lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 11·21m.

The capital, Phnom Penh, had an estimated population of 0·92m. in 1994. Other cities are Kompong Cham and Battambang. Ethnic composition, 1994: Khmer, 89%; Vietnamese, 6%; Chinese, 3%; Cham, 2%; Lao-Thai, 1%.

Khmer is the official language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 estimated births, 429,000; deaths, 156,000. Rates, 1996 estimates (per 1,000 population): Births, 43·5; deaths, 15·8. Infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 107·8. Expectation of life in 1996 was 49·9 years (48·4 for males and 51·4 for females).

Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 2·8%. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 4·9 children per woman.

In the Human Development Index, or HDI (measuring progress in countries in longevity, knowledge and standard of living), Cambodia and Namibia were the countries which made the most progress in 1995 compared to 1994—both recording increases of 0·074. Cambodia's HDI value was 0·422 out of a maximum of 1·0 in 1995, up from 0·348 in 1994, resulting in a rise from 153rd in the world to 140th.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, with high temperatures all the year. Phnom Penh, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 84°F (28·9°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,308 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A parliamentary monarchy was re-established by the 1993 constitution. Prince Norodom Sihanouk (b. 31 Oct. 1922) regained the throne (which had been abolished in 1955) as King on 23 Sept. 1993. He had previously reigned from 1941 to 1955. The protocol of succession is to be determined by a Throne Council consisting of the Speaker and 2 Deputy Speakers, the First and Second Prime Ministers and 2 Buddhist patriarchs. In Jan. 1996 King Sihanouk's wife, Queen Monineath, was dubbed 'First Lady'.

There is a 122-member constituent assembly, which on 14 June 1993 elected Prince Sihanouk head of state. On 21 Sept. it adopted a constitution (promulgated on 23 Sept.) by 113 votes to 5 with 2 abstentions making him monarch of a parliamentary democracy. The constitution converted the constituent assembly into a legislature sitting for a 5-year term.

National Anthem. 'Jham kraham cral' ('Bright red blood was spilt'); words and tune anonymous.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 27 July 1998. Under the UN-brokered constitution, a party had to win two-thirds of seats in the 122-member Parliament in order to form a government. With a 90% turn-out, the Cambodian People's Party (KPK) won 64 seats with 41·4% of the vote, the royalist FUNCINPEC party of Prince Norodom Ranariddh won 43 seats with 31·7%, and the party of the government critic Sam Rainsy won 15 seats with 14·1%. Opposition parties claimed a wide range of irregularities and there were re-counts in a number of districts.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

The Cabinet comprised in March 1999:

Prime Minister: Hun Sen, b. 1951 (KPK; sworn in on 30 Nov. 1998).

Deputy Prime Ministers: Sar Kheng, Tol Lah. National Defence, Co-ministers: Tea Banh, Sisowath Sirirath. Interior, Co-ministers: Sar Kheng, You Hockry. Parliamentary Affairs and Inspection: Khun Hang. Foreign Affairs and International Co-operation: Hor Nam Hong. Economy and Finance: Keat Chhon. Information and Press: Lu Lay Sreng. Health: Hong Sun Huot. Industry, Mines and Energy: Suy Sem. Planning: Chhay Than. Commerce: Cham Prasidh. Education, Youth and Sports: Tol Lah. Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries: Chhea Song. Culture and Fine Arts: Norodom Bopha Devi. Environment: Dr Mok Mareth. Rural Development: Chhim Seak Leng. Social Affairs, Labour, Vocational Training and Youth Rehabilitation: Ith Sam Heng. Post and Telecommunications: So Khun. Religions and Cults: Chea Savoeurn. Women's Affairs and Veterans: Mov Sok Huor. Public Works and Transport: Khy Taing Lim. Justice: Uk Vithun. Tourism: Veng Sereyvuth. Territorial Organization, Urbanization and Construction: Im Chhun Lim. Water Resources and Meteorology: Lim Kean Hor.

Local Government. There are 21 provinces administered by governors.

DEFENCE

The King is C.-in-C. of the armed forces. Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$254m. (US$25 per capita).

Army. Conscription is for 5 years. Strength (1997) 36,000, including 7 infantry divisions, 3 independent infantry brigades, and 9 independent infantry and 3 armoured regiments. Equipment includes 250 T-54/-55/-59 main battle tanks. There are also provincial (50,000) forces and paramilitary local forces.

Navy. The navy is believed to include 2 ex-Soviet hydrofoil patrol craft, 10 inshore patrol craft and a miscellany of riverine and support craft. Naval personnel in 1996 totalled about 1,200.

Air Force. Aviation operations were resumed in 1988 under the aegis of the Army; equipment includes a squadron of 10 MiG-21 fighters being refurbished with Israeli help, 15 Mil Mi-8/17 transport helicopters and 2 Ecureuil helicopters. At least 4 An-24 and 2 Yak-40 transports are in use as well as 6 L-39 trainers. Personnel (1996), 500.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In Jan. 1998 the European Union agreed to provide the Cambodian government with over US$11m., primarily to fund voter registration for the election which was held in July 1998.

Cambodia has failed to secure a seat at the UN or membership of ASEAN (deferred because of the coup in July 1997).

ECONOMY

Performance. In 1997, GDP was US$3,177m. Real GDP growth was 7·6% in 1995 (5·3% in 1994).

Budget. In 1995 revenues were estimated to be US$261m. and expenditures US$496m.

Currency. The unit of currency is the riel (KHR) of 100 sen. Inflation was 6% in 1995. Foreign exchange reserves were US$293m. in Feb. 1998. Total money supply in Dec. 1997 was 384,761m. riels. Inflation in 1997 stood at 11·8%.

Banking and Finance. The banking system consists of the National Bank of Cambodia, which is the bank of issue; the Central Bank and 28 commercial banks (2 state-owned; 17 privately-owned; 6 foreign and 3 joint venture banks). The National Bank of Cambodia is studying the possibility of setting up a stock market and a capital market for stimulating the flow of capital from foreign countries.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 100,000 kW in 1995. Production (1994) was 180m. kWh. Consumption per capita in 1995 was estimated to be 17 kWh. A long-term plan for hydro electricity has been issued by the government.

Water. In 1995, 65% of the urban and 26% of the rural population had access to safe water.

Minerals. There are phosphates and high-grade iron-ore deposits. Some small-scale gold panning and gem (mainly zircon) mining is carried out.

Agriculture. The majority of the population is engaged in agriculture, fishing or forestry. In 1996 agriculture accounted for 51% of GDP. In 1994 there were 3·82m. ha of arable land, 19,000 ha of permanent crops and 1·5m. ha of permanent pasture. Before the spread of war, the high productivity provided for a low but well-fed standard of living for the peasant farmers, the majority of whom owned the land they worked before agriculture was collectivized. A relatively small proportion of the food production entered the cash economy. The war and unwise pricing policies led to a disastrous reduction in production so much so that the country became a net importer of rice. Private ownership of land was restored by the 1989 Constitution.

A crop of 1·8m. tonnes of rice was produced in 1994. Production of other crops, 1994 (in tonnes): Maize, 64,000; dry beans, 14,000; soybeans, 40,000.

Livestock (1996): Cattle, 2·8m.; pigs, 2·05m.; buffaloes, 839,000 (1995); poultry, 11m. (1995).

Forestry. Some 9·8m. ha, or 55·7% of the land area, were covered by forests in 1995, nearly half of which is reserved by the Government to be awarded to concessionaires. Such areas are not at present worked to any extent. The remainder is available for exploitation by the local residents, and as a result some areas are over-exploited and conservation is not practised. Timber exports have been banned since Dec. 1996. In 1990 the area under forests was 10·65m. ha. There are substantial reserves of pitch pine. Rubber plantations are a valuable asset with production at around 40,000 tons per year. There are plans to expand the area under rubber cultivation from 50,000 ha to 800,000 ha. Timber production in 1995 was 7·76m. cu. metres. In 1997 forestry represented 43% of foreign trade.

Fisheries. 1995 catch, 112,510 tonnes (81,279 tonnes from inland waters).

INDUSTRY

Some development of industry had taken place before the spread of open warfare in 1970, but little was in operation by the 1990s except for rubber processing, sea-food processing, jute sack making and cigarette manufacture. In the private sector small family concerns produce a wide range of goods. Apart from rice mills, about 70 factories were functioning in 1994. Light industry is generally better developed than heavy industry.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 5,322,000. Females constituted 53% of the labour force in 1996—the highest proportion of women in the workforce anywhere in the world. More than 60% of the economically active population are engaged in agriculture, fishing and forestry.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign investment has been encouraged since 1989. Legislation of 1994 exempts profits from taxation for 8 years, removes duties from various raw and semi-finished materials and offers tax incentives to investors in tourism, energy, the infrastructure and labour-intensive industries. External debt was US$2,111m. in 1996.

Imports and Exports. Imports in 1995, $630·5m.; exports, $240·7m. The main exports are timber, rubber, soybeans and sesame. Main imports include cigarettes, construction materials, petroleum products, machinery and motor vehicles. The principal partners for exports are Singapore, Japan, Thailand, China (in particular Hong Kong), Indonesia and Malaysia; and for imports, Singapore, Vietnam, Japan, Australia, China (again, in particular Hong Kong) and Indonesia.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were an estimated 35,800 km of roads in 1996, of which 2,700 km were paved. 46,800 passenger cars were in use in 1996 (up from 20,085 in 1992) and 397,800 motor cycles and mopeds.

Rail. Main lines link Phnom Penh with Sisophon near the Thai border and the port of Kompong Som (total 603 km, metre gauge). After a long period of disruption due to political unrest, limited services were restored on both lines in 1992, when 1·2m. passengers and 0·1m. tonnes of freight were carried.

Civil Aviation. Pochentong airport is 8 km from Phnom Penh. Royal Air Cambodge was reconstituted in Jan. 1995 with 60% of the equity government-owned. There are regular domestic services, and in 1998 there were international flights to Bangkok, Chongqing, Guangzhou, Ho Chi Minh City, Kuala Lumpur, Singapore, Taipei and Vientiane. Services were also operated in 1998 by Angkor Airlines, Bangkok Airways, DRAGONAIR, Kampuchea Airlines, Lao Aviation, Malaysia Airlines, President Airlines, Silk Air, Thai Airways International and Vietnam Airlines.

Shipping. There is an ocean port at Kompong Som; the port of Phnom Penh can be reached by the Mekong (through Vietnam) by ships of between 3,000 and 4,000 tonnes. In 1995, merchant shipping totalled 60,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. There are telephone exchanges in all the main towns. Number of telephone main lines in 1997 totalled 19,000 (1·8 per 1,000 persons). In 1995 cellular phone subscribers numbered 15,000 and there were 600 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 30 post offices, or 1 for every 328,000 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. The Constitution of 1989 reinstated Buddhism as the state religion; it had 8·2m. adherents in 1994. About 2,800 monasteries were active in 1994. There are small Roman Catholic and Moslem minorities.

Education. In 1994–95 there were 1,703,316 pupils and 37,827 teachers in 4,617 (1990–91) primary schools, and in general secondary education 16,349 teachers for 297,555 pupils. In 1990–91 there were 8,095 students in vocational establishments. There is a university (with 8,400 students and 350 academic staff in 1995–96) and a fine arts university. Adult literacy rate was 66% in 1994 (80% among males and 54% among females).

Health. In 1993 there were 5,642 doctors, 9,950 nurses and 3,235 midwives.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is provided by the state-owned Voice of the People of Cambodia and Cambodian Television (colour by PAL). In 1995 there were an estimated 85,000 TV and 1·1m. radio sets.

Press. There are 21 newspapers, 2 of which are in English.

Tourism. In 1997 there were 218,000 foreign visitors, up from 25,000 in 1991. Of these, 28,116 were from Taiwan; Japan, 25,362; USA, 20,291; France, 17,538; China, 17,282; Australia, 7,237; UK, 9,193. Tourist numbers in the 1990s have increased at a faster rate in Cambodia than in any other country. Receipts in 1996 totalled US$118m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The name Cameroon is derived from the Portuguese camarões (prawns), introduced by Portuguese navigators who from 1472 came for the crayfish in the Wouri river estuary. Called Kamerun in German and Cameroun in French, the estuary was later called the Cameroons River by British navigators. The Duala people living there were important traders, selling slaves and later palm oil to Europeans. On 12 July 1884 they signed a treaty establishing German rule over Kamerun. Originally covering the Duala's territory on the Wouri, this German colony later expanded to cover a large area inland, to which the name Kamerun was also applied.

The area occupied was home to a large number of African peoples; Betis, Bassas, Bamilekes, Bamouns, Tikars, Fulanis and many others. Some, like the Betis and Bassas, had only small traditional states; others had larger ones notably, in the 19th century, the kingdom of Bamoun and the Moslem Fulani state of Adamawa. Their territory was largely incorporated in German Kamerun although the capital, Yola, was included in Nigeria. Resistance to German colonization was strong, and it was about 20 years before German rule was established over the whole territory. In 1911, France ceded large adjoining areas of its neighbouring colonies (Chad, Ubangi-Shari, Middle-Congo and Gabon) to the Germans, who called this new territory Neu-Kamerun. The Duala people, advanced in education and important traders, planters and junior government officials, became increasingly critical of German rule, especially when many were evicted from their homes in Douala City in 1914 and one Duala paramount chief, Rudolf Duala Manga Bell, was executed.

In the First World War Allied forces rapidly occupied Douala and then fought the Germans over a wide area, until the last Germans left in early 1916. The occupied territory was provisionally partitioned between France and Britain in 1916, a division confirmed in 1919 when each obtained a League of Nations mandate over its section. British Cameroons consisted of 2 areas, British Southern Cameroons and British Northern Cameroons, adjoining Nigeria. France's mandated territory of Cameroun occupied most of the former German colony. Its capital was at first at Douala, and then, from 1921, at Yaoundé. The Dualas continued to take the lead in anti-colonial protest and in 1929 their paramount chiefs signed a petition calling for self-government.

In the Second World War French Cameroun was occupied at an early stage by the Free French. From 1944, reforms in the French colonial empire allowed African trade unions and parties and nationalism spread rapidly. In 1946, the French and British territories became Trust Territories of the UN. Africans in British Cameroons joined in the nationalist politics of Nigeria and for some years British Southern Cameroons was represented in the parliament and government of Nigeria's Eastern Region. In French Cameroun the Union des Populations du Cameroun (UPC), founded in 1948, became the major nationalist party, calling for independence and 'reunification' with British Cameroons and appealing for UN support.

In the 1950s other parties emerged, encouraged by the French to rival the radical UPC, notably the Bloc des Democrates Camerounais led by André Mbida. In 1955, after rioting, the UPC was banned. In Dec. 1956, when elections were held prior to self-government, the UPC began guerilla war but other parties took part in the elections and Mbida became prime minister in 1957. In Feb. 1958, Ahmadou Ahidjo, leader of the northern-based Union Camerounais (UC), became prime minister, while the UPC remained illegal and fought against the French and the new Cameroonian government. On 1 Jan. 1960 French Cameroun gained independence; elections were held, and Ahidjo became president. The UPC guerillas were largely defeated by 1963.

On 11 Feb. 1961, British Southern Cameroons voted in a referendum to join ex-French Cameroun, while British Northern Cameroons chose to join Nigeria. On 1 Oct. 1961, the Republic of Cameroon and British Southern Cameroons were united to form the Federal Republic of Cameroon. On 2 June 1972, the limited powers of the West and East Cameroon governments were ended when the country became the United Republic of Cameroon. Ahidjo resigned on 6 Nov. 1982 and was succeeded as president by Paul Biya, previously prime minister. After a crisis between Biya and his predecessor in 1983, and a coup attempt on 6 April 1984, Biya was confirmed in power. He was elected without opposition early in 1984 when the country's name was changed to the Republic of Cameroon.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Cameroon is bounded in the west by the Gulf of Guinea, north-west by Nigeria, east by Chad and the Central African Republic, and south by the Republic of the Congo, Gabon and Equatorial Guinea. The total area is 475,440 sq. km. On 29 March 1994 Cameroon asked the International Court of Justice to confirm its sovereignty over the Bakassi Peninsula, occupied by Nigerian troops. Population (1987 census) 10,494,000. Estimate (July 1996) 14,261,600 (7,150,400 females); density, 30·0 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 15·13m.

In 1995, 44·7% of the population were urban.

The areas, populations and chief towns of the 10 provinces were:

Province	Sq. km	Census 1987	Chief town	Estimate 1981
Adamaoua	63,691	495,185	Ngaoundéré	47,508
Centre	68,926	1,651,600	Yaoundé	649,000[1]
Est	109,011	517,198	Bertoua	18,254
Extrême-Nord	34,246	1,855,695	Maroua	124,000[1]

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European in Canada was John Cabot in 1497. France claimed possession in 1534. The territories which now constitute Canada came under British power at various times by settlement, conquest or cession. For the most part such efforts were directed at gaining advantage over the indigenous Indian and Eskimo communities as well as displacing French colonial rule. Conflict also broke out, however, with the fledgling United States in the Anglo-American war of 1812–14. Since then, Canada and the USAhave maintained the world's longest undefended border. Nova Scotia was occupied in 1628 by settlement at Port Royal, was ceded back to France in 1632 and was finally ceded by France in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht. The Hudson's Bay Company's charter, conferring rights over all the territory draining into Hudson Bay, was granted in 1670. Canada, with all its dependencies, including New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, was formally ceded to Great Britain by France in 1763; Vancouver Island was acknowledged to be British by the Oregon Boundary Treaty of 1846; and British Columbia was established as a separate colony in 1858. As originally constituted, Canada was composed of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada (now Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. They were united under the British North America Act, 1867. The Act provided that the constitution of Canada should be 'similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom'; that the executive authority should be vested in the Sovereign and carried out by a Governor-General and Privy Council; and that the legislative power should be exercised by a Parliament of two Houses: the Senate, membership of which is by appointment, and the House of Commons, whose members are elected.

In 1931 the Statute of Westminster emancipated the Provinces as well as the Dominion from the operation of the Colonial Laws Validity Act, thus removing any remaining limitations on Canada's legislative autonomy.

Provision was made in the British North America Act for the admission of British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, the Northwest Territories and Newfoundland into the Union. In 1869 Rupert's Land, or the Northwest Territories, was purchased from the Hudson's Bay Company; the province of Manitoba was erected from this territory and admitted into the confederation on 15 July 1870. On 20 July 1871 the province of British Columbia was admitted and Prince Edward Island on 1 July 1873. The provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were formed from the provisional districts of Alberta, Athabaska, Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, and were admitted on 1 Sept. 1905. Newfoundland formally joined Canada as its 10th province on 31 March 1949.

In Feb. 1931 Norway formally recognized the Canadian title to the Sverdrup group of Arctic islands. Canada thus holds sovereignty in the whole Arctic sector north of the Canadian mainland.

In 1982 an amended constitution replaced the British North America Act to give Canada prerogative over all future constitutional changes. At the same time a charter of Rights and Freedoms was introduced recognizing the nation's multi-cultural heritage, affirming the existing rights of native peoples and the principle of equality of benefits to the provinces.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Canada is bounded in the north-west by the Beaufort Sea, north by the Arctic Ocean, north-east by Baffin Bay, east by the Davis Strait, Labrador Sea and Atlantic Ocean, south by the USA and west by the Pacific Ocean and USA (Alaska). The area is 9,970,610 sq. km, of which 755,180 sq. km are fresh water. Census population, 1996, 28,846,761. Estimate, July 1997, 30,286,596 (15,286,919 females), giving a density of 3 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 30·68m.

An estimated 76·7% of the population were urban in 1995.

Population at previous censuses:

1851	2,436,297	1901	5,371,315	1951	14,009,429

Infant mortality, 1995, 6·1 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1·7 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate ranges from polar conditions in the north to cool temperate in the south, but with considerable differences between east coast, west coast and the interior, affecting temperatures, rainfall amounts and seasonal distribution. Winters are very severe over much of the country, but summers can be very hot inland. See individual provinces for climatic details.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In Nov. 1981 the Canadian government agreed on the provisions of an amended constitution, to the end that it should replace the British North America Act and that its future amendment should be the prerogative of Canada. These proposals were adopted by the Parliament of Canada and were enacted by the UK Parliament as the Canada Act of 1982. This was the final act of the UK Parliament in Canadian constitutional development. The Act gave to Canada the power to amend the Constitution according to procedures determined by the Constitutional Act 1982. The latter added to the Canadian Constitution a charter of Rights and Freedoms, and provisions which recognize the nation's multi-cultural heritage, affirm the existing rights of native peoples, confirm the principle of equalization of benefits among the provinces, and strengthen provincial ownership of natural resources.

Under the Constitution legislative power is vested in Parliament, consisting of the Queen, represented by a Governor-General, a Senate and a House of Commons. The members of the Senate are appointed until age 75 by summons of the Governor-General under the Great Seal of Canada. Members appointed before 2 June 1965 may remain in office for life. The Senate consists of 104 senators: 24 from Ontario, 24 from Quebec, 10 from Nova Scotia, 10 from New Brunswick, 4 from Prince Edward Island, 6 from Manitoba, 6 from British Columbia, 6 from Alberta, 6 from Saskatchewan, 6 from Newfoundland, 1 from the Yukon Territory and 1 from the Northwest Territories. Each senator must be at least 30 years of age and reside in the province for which he or she is appointed. The House of Commons is elected by universal secret suffrage, by a first-past-the-post system, for 5-year terms. Representation is based on the population of all the provinces taken as a whole with readjustments made after each census.

The Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on a Renewed Canada released a unanimous report on 28 Feb. 1992 (Beaudoin-Dobbie Report). Another constitutional document was released on 16 July 1992 by the provincial premiers which summarized the multilateral meetings on the Constitution. A final constitutional accord was arrived at by the provinces and the federal government in Aug. 1992. At a national referendum on 26 Oct. 1992 proposed constitutional reforms were rejected by 54·4% of votes cast.

Indians have representation in the Assembly of First Nations (Chief, Ovide Mercredi).

The office and appointment of the Governor-General are regulated by letters patent of 1947. In 1977 the Queen approved the transfer to the Governor-General of functions discharged by the Sovereign. The Governor-General is assisted by a Privy Council composed of Cabinet Ministers.

DEFENCE

The armed forces are unified and organized in functional commands: Mobile Command (land forces), Air Command (air forces) and Maritime Command (naval and naval air forces). There is a Tactical Air Group under the control of Mobile Command. In 1997 the armed forces numbered 61,600 (6,500 women); reserves, 72,100.

Military expenditure totalled US$7,757m. in 1997 (US$270 per capita), representing 1·3% of GDP.

Army. The Land Forces numbered 21,900 in 1997 and were organized in 1 Task Force Headquarters, 3 mechanized infantry brigade groups (each with 1 Armoured regiment, 2 infantry battalions, 1 mechanized infantry battalion, 1 artillery regiment, 1 engineer regiment and 1 air defence battery), 1 Independent air defence regiment and 1 independent engineer support regiment. Reserves comprise a Militia of 20,100 and the Canadian Rangers, 3,250. Equipment includes 114 Leopard C-1 main battle tanks and 130 surface-to-air missiles.

Navy. The naval combatant force, which forms part of the Maritime Command of the unified armed forces, is headquartered at Halifax (Nova Scotia), and comprises 3 diesel submarines, 4 guided-missile destroyers and 16 helicopter-carrying frigates. Major auxiliaries include 3 helicopter-carrying replenishment tankers, 2 survey research ships, 2 tugs and a diver support ship, and there are some 40 Minor auxiliaries, tenders and service craft. The Maritime Air Group includes 28 Sea King for embarked service. Naval personnel in 1997 numbered about 9,400, with 4,000 reserves. The main bases are Halifax, where about two-thirds of the fleet is based, and Esquimault (British Columbia).

The Coast Guard numbers 4,000, and operates 17 icebreakers, numerous search-and-rescue and support craft, together with 2 fixed-wing aircraft, 37 helicopters and 5 hovercraft.

Air Force. The air forces numbered 17,600 in 1997 (825 women) with 190 combat aircraft and 150 helicopters. They are organized in the Air Combat and Mobility Group, the Maritime Air Group and Air Command HQ. The first controls air defence, tactical transport and helicopter units; the second oversees patrol, search-and-rescue and electronic countermeasures units; the third is responsible for training and logistics transports. Combat units include 5 squadrons of F-18 Hornet fighters, 4 of P-3 Orion patrol aircraft and 3 with Sea King anti-submarine helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Canada is a member of the UN, the Commonwealth, OAS, OECD, OSCE, APEC and NATO.

ECONOMY

Performance. GDP at market prices was $830,828m. in 1998 ($806,737m. in 1997). Real GDP growth was 3·8% in 1997 and 2·98% in 1998.

Budget. Federal government revenue and expenditure for fiscal years ending 31 March (in $1m.):

	1994-95	1995-96	1996-97	1997-98
Revenue	137,269	143,498	153,875	166,051
Expenditure	173,403	175,388	167,538	162,866

In 1997-98 revenue included (in $1m.): Income taxes, 100,275; consumption taxes, 33,789; contributions to Social Insurance Plans, 18,882; sales of goods and income, 6,171. Expenditure included social services, 48,632; debt charges, 43,971; and general purpose transfers, 20,101.

On 31 March 1994 the net public debt was $409,100m.

On 1 Jan. 1991 a 7% Goods and Services Tax (GST) was introduced, superseding a 13·5% manufacturers' sales tax.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Canadian dollar (CAD) of 100 cents. In Feb. 1998 gold reserves were 3·09m. troy oz., and foreign exchange reserves totalled US$18,451m. Total money supply was $170bn. in Jan. 1998. Inflation was 0·9% in 1998.

Banking and Finance. The Bank of Canada (established 1935) is the central bank and bank of issue. The governor (in 1997, Gordon G. Thiessen) is appointed by the Bank's directors for 7-year terms. The Minister of Finance owns the capital stock of the Bank on behalf of Canada. Banks in Canada are chartered under the terms of the Bank Act, which imposes strict conditions on capital reserves, returns to the federal government, types of lending operations, ownership and other matters. In Aug. 1994 there were 60 chartered banks—7 domestic and 53 foreign. The 6 biggest domestic banks had 7,971 branches serving over 1,600 communities in all provinces and both territories in Canada, and 259 branches in 56 other countries. The foreign bank subsidiaries operate 269 offices in Canada. The First Nations Bank was founded in Dec. 1996 to provide finance to Inuit and Indian entrepreneurs.

Bank charters expire every 10 years which gives the federal government an opportunity to review and amend sections of the Bank Act. Extensive changes were brought into force in June 1992. As a result of the substantial revision, bank charters were only renewed for 5 years. The chartered banks make regular detailed returns to and are subject to periodic inspection by the Superintendent of Financial Institutions, an official appointed by the Government.

The Bank Act of 1980 required chartered banks to maintain a statutory primary reserve of 10% on demand deposits, 3% on foreign-currency deposits and 2% on notice deposits, with an additional 1% on the portion of notice deposits exceeding $500m. This reserve is required to be maintained in the form of notes and deposits with the Bank of Canada. A secondary reserve of 4% in the form of treasury bills, government bonds, etc., is also required.

There are stock exchanges at Calgary (Alberta Stock Exchange), Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver and Winnipeg.

Weights and Measures. The legal weights and measures are in transition from the Imperial to the International system of units. The Metric Commission, established in June 1971, co-ordinates Canada's conversion to the metric system.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Generating capacity, 1995, 113m. kW. Net electricity generation in 1995 was 544m. MWh. 503m. MWh was to meet domestic demand. Of the total generated, 62% was from hydrogeneration, 21% from thermal generation and 17% from nuclear generation. Production, 1996, 440·06m. MWh. Consumption per capita was an estimated 16,137 kWh in 1995.

Oil and Gas. Oil reserves at the beginning of 1995 were 656·1m. cu. metres (4,100m. bbls.); gas, 1,898,000m. cu. metres. Production of petroleum crude and equivalent, 1996, 318,600 cu. metres a day; natural gas (1995), 149,600m. cu. metres. Canada's first off-shore field, 250 km off Nova Scotia, began producing in June 1992.

Minerals. Mineral production in 1995 (in 1,000 tonnes): Coal (1996), 75,675; iron ore (1996), 36,000; copper, 705; lead, 203; zinc, 1,094; nickel, 167; uranium, 10·09; silver, 1·19; gold, 149,027 kg; salt, 10,772; asbestos, 511; cobalt, 2; lime, 2,516; gypsum, 7,974; peat, 1,010; sand and gravel, 239,871.

Agriculture. According to the census of 1991 the total land area was 2,278·6m. acres of which 167·4m. acres was agricultural.

Grain growing, dairy farming, fruit farming, ranching and fur farming are all practised. In 1995, 2·5% of the economically active population was engaged in agriculture. Total farm cash receipts (1997) $29,585,697.

The following table shows the value of farm cash receipts for 1997, for selected agricultural commodities, in $1m.:

Crops	13,933	Livestock and products	14,581
Wheat	3,593	Beef	5,222
Barley	732	Hogs	2,985

Livestock. 1996: Cattle, 13,186,000; pigs, 12,097,000; sheep, 677,000; horses, 350,000; chickens, 1995, 132m.; turkeys, 6m. In parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta, stockraising is still carried on as a primary industry, but the livestock industry of the country at large is mainly a subsidiary of mixed farming. The following table shows the numbers of livestock (in 1,000) by provinces in July 1992:

Provinces	Milch cows	Total cattle and calves	Sheep and lambs	Pigs
Newfoundland	4·9	8·6	8·9	15·0
Prince Edward Island	18·5	94·0	3·2	103·0
Nova Scotia	28·3	128·0	30·0	126·0
New Brunswick	22·8	104·0	8·5	83·0
Quebec	505·0	1,430·0	116·0	3,068·0
Ontario	433·0	2,175·0	250·0	3,092·0

Saskatchewan	45·0	2,442·0	92·0	879·0
Alberta	105·0	4,866·0	311·0	1,868·0
British Columbia	75·0	773·5	72·5	213·5
Total	1,292·5	13,197·1	927·1	10,900·0

Livestock products. Slaughterings in 1993: Cattle, 3·37m.; sheep, 0·53m.; pigs, 15·4m. Production, 1993 (in 1,000 tonnes): Beef, 930; pork, 1,200; mutton, 11; horsemeat, 22; poultry meat, 735; cow's milk, 7,045; hens' eggs, 315; honey, 31; greasy wool, 1·52; rinsed wool, 0·96; hides, 85·84.

Fruit production in 1993 (and 1992), in 1,000 tonnes: Apples, 482 (553); pears, 16 (21); peaches and nectarines, 43 (40); plums, 3 (3); strawberries, 28 (29); raspberries, 15 (15).

Forestry. Forestry is of great economic importance, and forestry products (pulp, newsprint, building timber) constitute Canada's most valuable exports. As of 1986, the total area of land covered by forests was estimated at 453·3m. ha. In 1995, the area classed as productive forest land was estimated at 2,446 sq. km, or 26·5% of the total land area, up from 2,437 sq. km in 1990 as a result of afforestation.

In 1995 the net merchantable volume (in 1,000 cu. metres) of roundwood harvested was 188,433; logs and bolts, 148,837; plywood, 31,089; fuelwood and firewood, 5,319; other industrial roundwood, 3,189.

Fur Trade. In 1996, 1,467,500 wildlife pelts valued at $34,541,000, and 948,800 ranch-raised pelts valued at $41,265,300 were produced.

Fisheries. In 1993, the fishing fleet comprised 432 vessels totalling 169,900 GRT.

In 1995 total catches were 880,891 tonnes (877,238 tonnes from sea fishing). Atlantic landings totalled 633,413 tonnes; Pacific landings totalled 243,852 tonnes. Value of sea fisheries landed in 1996 totalled $1,536m.

INDUSTRY

Principal manufactures in 1993 (in 1,000 tonnes): Cement, 9,396; crude iron and alloys, 9,391; crude steel, 14,387; aluminium, 2,309; copper, 562; lead, 220; nickel, 141; zinc, 662; cadmium, 2; synthetic rubber, 199; passenger cars, 1·17m. units; lorries, 0·84m. Other products, 1992 (in 1,000 tonnes unless otherwise stated): Petroleum products, 31,293; heating oil, 28,336; mechanical wood pulp, 22,830; paper and cardboard, 16,585; newsprint, 8,931; sugar, 114; sawn timber, 56·3m. cu. metres; plywood, 1·84m. cu. metres; chipboard, 3·26m. cu. metres.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was (in 1,000) 15,145·4 (6,844 females), of whom 13,676·2 (6,197·3) were in employment (2,589 part-time), distributed as follows: Business and personal services, 2,786·4; trade, 2,361·2; manufacturing, 2,082·5; health and social services, 1,425·7; educational services, 929; transport, storage and communication, 872·6; public administration, 820·1; finance, insurance and real estate, 799·9; primary industries, 733·2 (including agriculture, 453·3); construction, 718·6; utilities, 147. Unemployed, 1996, 1,469·2 (646·7 females). Unemployment rate, 1997, 9·2% (1996, 9·7%). By Sept. 1998 the rate had fallen to 8·1%, the lowest for 8 years.

Average weekly earnings in industry in Oct. 1996 were $592·64.

In 1995, 1,607,000 working days were lost in industrial disputes.

Trade Unions. Union membership in 1994 was 4,077,987, 29·2% of the workforce. 60·8% of the membership was affiliated to the Canadian Labour Congress, 6·3% to the Confédération des Syndicats Nationaux and 4·9% to the Canadian Confederation of Labour. 19·4% of unions were unaffiliated.

It is generally established by legislation, both federal and provincial, that a trade union to which the majority of employees in a unit suitable for collective bargaining belong, is given certain rights and duties. An employer is required to meet and negotiate with such a trade union to determine wage rates and other working conditions of employees. The employer, the trade union and the employees affected are bound by the resulting agreement. If an impasse is reached in negotiation, conciliation services provided by the appropriate government board are available. Generally, work stoppages do not take place until an established conciliation or mediation procedure has been carried out, and are prohibited while an agreement is in effect.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

A North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) between Canada, Mexico and the USA was signed on 7 Oct. 1992 and came into force on 1 Jan. 1994.

Imports and Exports. In 1998 exports totalled $323,400·3m.; merchandise imports totalled $303,983·8m.

Main export markets, 1998 (in $1m.): USA, 270,560·5; Japan, 9,635·5; EU, 17,837·3; other OECD countries, 7,487·0; other countries, 17,879·9. Main import suppliers: USA, 234,177·3; Japan, 9,657·0; EU, 25,424·0; other OECD countries, 11,377·3; other countries, 23,348·2.

Main categories of exports, 1998 (in $1m.): Vehicles and parts, 79,246·8 (of which passenger cars and chassis, 43,599·9; motor vehicle parts, 21,621·4); machinery and equipment, 78,770·2 (industrial and agricultural machinery, 16,598·1; aircraft and other transport equipment, 16,245·6); industrial goods and materials, 57,356·1 (metals and alloys, 19,720·2; chemicals, plastics and fertilizers, 17,513·7); forestry products, 35,464·6 (lumber and sawmill products, 16,569·6; newsprint and other paper and paperboard products, 12,761·9). Imports (in $1m.): Machinery and equipment, 101,599·2 (of which industrial and agricultural machinery, 28,200·9; office machines and equipment, 16,037·9); vehicles and parts, 66,753·0 (motor vehicle parts, 39,459·5); industrial goods and materials, 60,295·6 (chemicals and plastics, 21,502·0; metals and metal ores, 15,344·6).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1995 there were 912,200 km of roads, of which 16,600 km were motorways, 15,000 km highways and main roads, 224,800 km secondary roads and 655,800 km other roads.

In general, highways are controlled and maintained by the provinces who also have the responsibility of providing assistance to their municipalities and townships. Federal expenditures are directed largely to the maintenance of national park highways, Indian Reserve roads and designated provincial/territorial highway construction projects. The Alaska Highway is part of the Canadian highway system.

In 1991 intercity and rural bus services carried 15·3m. passengers 163·6m. vehicle-km, earning $408·2m.

Registered motor vehicles totalled 17,794,703 in 1994; they included 13,639,358 passenger cars and taxis, 3,697,792 trucks and truck tractors, 65,138 buses and 329,809 motor cycles and mopeds.

There were 3,347 fatalities in road accidents in 1995.

Rail. Canada has 2 great trans continental systems: The Canadian National Railway system (CN), a body privatized in 1995 which operated 32,500 km (1994) of routes, and the Canadian Pacific Railway (CP), a joint-stock corporation operating 30,039 km (1994). A government-funded organization, VIA Rail, operates passenger services; 3·6m. passengers were carried in 1995. There are several provincial and private railways.

There are metros in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, and tram/light rail systems in Calgary, Edmonton and Toronto.

Civil Aviation. Civil aviation is under the jurisdiction of the federal government. The technical and administrative aspects are supervised by Transport Canada, while the economic functions are assigned to the National Transportation Agency.

In 1996 the 8 principal Canadian airports handled 52,923,000 passengers (40,876,000 in 1992) and 729,700 tonnes of freight, with Toronto (Lester B. Pearson International) handling 20,922,000 passengers and 336,600 tonnes of freight, and Vancouver International 11,947,000 passengers and 190,800 tonnes of freight.

The 2 major airlines are Air Canada (privatized in July 1989) and Canadian Airlines International. In 1995 Air Canada flew 261·1m. km and carried 12,569,000 passengers, and Canadian Airlines International flew 188m. km and carried 7,722,000 passengers.

Shipping. In 1993 the merchant marine comprised 1,049 vessels over 100 GRT, including 31 oil tankers. Total tonnage, 1995, 0·66m. GRT, including oil tankers, 0·2m. GRT and container ships, 1,910 GRT. In 1994 vessels totalling 60,417,000 net registered tons entered ports and vessels totalling 116,279,000 NRT cleared.

The major canals are those of the St Lawrence–Great Lakes waterway. In 1992, traffic on the Montreal–Lake Ontario Section of the Seaway numbered 2,493 transits carrying 31·4m. cargo tonnes; on the Welland Canal Section, 3,140 transits with 33·2m. cargo tonnes.

Telecommunications. In Oct. 1996 there were 18,459,500 telephone main lines in use (609·5 per 1,000 persons); telephone provision was delivered in 1996 by about 100 companies to 98·7% of households. There were 0·5m. fax machines in 1997. There were approximately 6·3m. Internet users in Nov. 1998, or nearly 21% of the population. In 1995 there were 2,590,000 cellular phone subscribers (88 for every 1,000 persons), 5,700,000 PCs (193 for every 1,000 persons) and 525,000 fax machines.

Postal Services. At the end of the fiscal year 1995–96 Canada Post Corporation's retail network consisted of 18,500 retail locations. During fiscal year 1995–96, 11,800m. pieces of mail were processed. Total revenue (1995–96) was $4,900m.; income after expenditure, $28m.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court in Ottawa, having general appellate jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases throughout Canada. The Exchequer Court (established in 1875) was replaced by the Federal Court in 1971. This has a Trial Division, consisting of the Associate Chief Justice and 9 other judges, and an Appeal Division, consisting of the Chief Justice and 3 other judges. Its seat is in Ottawa, but each Division may sit in any place in Canada. Decisions of the Trial Division may be appealed to the Appeal Division, those of the latter to the Supreme Court. There is a Superior Court in each province and county courts, with limited jurisdiction, in most of the provinces, all the judges in these courts being appointed by the Governor-General. Police, magistrates and justices of the peace are appointed by the provincial governments.

For the year ended 31 Dec. 1997, 2,632,082 Criminal Code Offences (excluding traffic) were reported, including 517 homicides. 203,900 cases were heard in Youth Courts in 1995. By the end of 1996 there were 14,143 inmates in federal custody.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP). The RCMP is a civil force maintained by the federal government. Established in 1873 as the North-West Mounted Police, it became 'Royal' in 1904. Its sphere of operations was expanded in 1918 to include all of Canada west of Thunder Bay. In 1920 the force absorbed the Dominion Police, its headquarters was transferred from Regina to Ottawa, and its title was changed to Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The force is responsible to the Solicitor-General of Canada and is controlled by a Commissioner who holds the rank of Deputy Minister. The Commissioner is empowered to appoint peace officers in all the provinces and territories of Canada.

The responsibilities of the RCMP are national in scope. The administration of justice within the provinces, including the enforcement of the Criminal Code of Canada, is the responsibility of provincial governments, but all the provinces except Ontario and Quebec have entered into contracts with the RCMP to enforce criminal and provincial laws under the direction of the respective Attorneys-General. In addition, in these 8 provinces the RCMP is under agreement to provide police services to municipalities. The RCMP is also responsible for all police work in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, enforcing federal law and territorial ordinances. The 13 Divisions, alphabetically designated, make up the strength of the RCMP across Canada; they comprise 52 sub-divisions which include 723 detachments. Headquarters Division, as well as the Office of the Commissioner, is located in Ottawa.

Assisting the criminal investigation work of the RCMP is the Directorate of Identification Services; its services, together with those of divisional and sub-divisional units, and of 8 Crime Detection Laboratories, are available to police forces throughout Canada. The Canadian Police Information Centre at RCMP Headquarters, a national computer network, is staffed and operated by the RCMP. Law Enforcement agencies throughout Canada have access via remote terminals to information on stolen vehicles, licences and wanted persons.

In Feb. 1993 the Force had a total strength of 21,311 including regular members, special constables, civilian members and public service employees. It maintained 6,992 motor vehicles, 92 police service dogs and 156 horses.

The Force has 13 divisions actively engaged in law enforcement, 1 Headquarters Division and 1 training division. Marine services are divisional responsibilities and the Force currently has 402 boats at various points across Canada. The Air Directorate has stations throughout the country and maintains a fleet of 21 fixed-wing aircraft and 8 helicopters.

Total police personnel in Canada at the end of 1994 numbered 74,902. Apart from the RCMP, Ontario and Quebec have police forces, as do most municipal centres. In 1995, 9% of police officers were women.

Religion. The most recent statistics available in 1997:

Religious body	Inclusive membership	Number of churches	Number of clergy
Anglican Church of Canada	780,897	2,499	3,240

Membership of other denominations: Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 146,000; Jehovah's Witnesses (1996), 110,659; Mennonites (1995), 114,000; Moslems (1996), 0·35m.; Jews (1996), 0·35m; Salvation Army (1996), 92,330.

Education. Under the Constitution the provincial legislatures have powers over education. These are subject to certain qualifications respecting the rights of denominational and minority language schools. School board revenues derive from local taxation on real property, and government grants from general provincial revenue.

In 1996–97 there were 16,096 elementary and secondary public and private schools and 198 community colleges. There were 541,650 children in pre-elementary institutions; 4,969,317 children in elementary and secondary schools with 306,498 teachers; and 388,976 students in community colleges.

Enrolment for Indian and Inuit children, 1992–93: Federal schools, 5,096; band-operated schools, 49,426; provincial schools, 44,418; private schools, 1,950.

In 1995–96 there were 48 universities, 1 technical university, 4 university colleges, 10 colleges, 1 Dominican college, 1 college of agriculture, 1 college of art and design, 2 open universities, 2 polytechnics, higher schools of business, public administration, and technology, and institutes of education, microbiology and virology, and scientific research. In 1996–97 there were 572,179 full-time and 248,231 part-time university students with 36,035 teachers.

The adult literacy rate in 1995 was 98·8% (99% among males and 98·7% among females). In 1994, total public education expenditure was $49,932m.

Health. Constitutional responsibility for healthcare services rests with the provinces and territories. Accordingly, Canada's national health insurance system consists of an interlocking set of provincial and territorial hospital and medical insurance plans conforming to certain national standards rather than a single national programme. These national standards, which are set out in the Canada Health Act, include: Provision of a comprehensive range of hospital and medical benefits; universal population coverage; access to necessary services on uniform terms and conditions; portability of benefits; and public administration of provincial and territorial insurance plans.

Provinces and territories satisfying these national standards are eligible for federal financial transfer payments. The provinces and territories are entitled to receive equal-per-capita federal health contributions escalated annually by the 3-year average increase in nominal GNP. These federal contributions, estimated at $3,734m. in 1993–94, are paid in the form of a combination of tax point and cash transfers. Over and above these health transfers, the federal government also provides financial support for such provincial and territorial extended healthcare service programmes as nursing-home care, certain home care services, ambulatory healthcare services and adult residential care services. These supplementary equal-per-capita cash payments were estimated at $1,475m. in 1993–94.

The national health insurance programmes were introduced in stages. The Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act was passed in 1957, providing prepaid coverage to all Canadians for in-patient and, at the option of each province and territory, out-patient hospital services. The Medical Care Act was introduced in 1968 to extend universal coverage to all medically equipped services provided by medical practitioners. The Canada Health Act, which took effect on 1 April 1984, consolidated the original federal health insurance legislation and clarified the national standards provinces and territories are required to meet in order to qualify for full federal health contributions.

The approach taken by Canada is one of state-sponsored health insurance. Accordingly, the advent of insurance programmes produced little change in the ownership of hospitals, almost all of which are owned by non-government non-profit corporations, or in the rights and privileges of private medical practice. Patients are free to choose their own general practitioner. Except for a small percentage of the population whose care is provided for under other legislation (such as serving members of the Canadian Armed Forces and inmates of federal penitentiaries), all residents are eligible, regardless of whether they are in the workforce. Benefits are available without upper limit so long as they are medically necessary, provided any registration obligations are met.

In addition to the benefits qualifying for federal contributions, provinces and territories provide additional benefits at their own discretion. Most fund their portion of health costs out of general provincial and territorial revenues. There are no co-charges for medically necessary short-term hospital care or medical care. Most provinces and territories have charges for long-term chronic hospital care geared, approximately, to the room and board portion of this OAS–GIS payment mentioned under Social Welfare. In 1991, total health expenditures were about $66·77m., representing 10·2% of GNP. Public sector spending accounts for about 72·2% of total national health expenditure.

In 1995 there were estimated to be 63,700 doctors, giving a rate of 465 persons per doctor.

Welfare. The social security system provides financial benefits and social services to individuals and their families through a variety of programmes administered by federal, provincial and municipal governments, and voluntary organizations. Federally, Human Resources and Labour is responsible for research into the areas of social issues, provision of grants and contributions for various social services, and the administration of several income security programmes. These services are: The Old Age Security programme, introduced in 1952 and to which were added the Guaranteed Income Supplement in 1967 and the Spouse's Allowance in 1975; and the Canada Pension Plan and Canada Assistance Plan which came into being in 1966.

The Old Age Security (OAS) pension is payable to persons 65 years of age and over who satisfy the residence requirements stipulated in the Old Age Security Act. The amount payable, whether full or partial, is also governed by stipulated conditions, as is the payment of an OAS pension to a recipient who absents himself from Canada. OAS pensioners with little or no income apart from OAS may, upon application, receive a full or partial supplement known as the Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS). Entitlement is normally based on the pensioner's income in the preceding year, calculated in accordance with the Income Tax Act. The spouse of an OAS pensioner, aged 60 to 64, meeting the same residence requirements as those stipulated for OAS, may be eligible for a full or partial Spouse's Allowance (SPA). SPA is payable, on application, depending on the annual combined income of the couple (not including the pensioner spouse's basic OAS pension or GIS). In 1979, the SPA programme was expanded to include a spouse, who is eligible for SPA in the month the pensioner spouse dies, until the age of 65 or until remarriage (Extended Spouse's Allowance). Since Sept. 1985, SPA has also been available to low income widow(er)s aged 60–64 regardless of the age of their spouse at death. For the third quarter of 1993, the basic OAS pension was $383·51 monthly; the maximum Guaranteed Income Supplement was $455·76 monthly for a single pensioner or a married pensioner whose spouse was not receiving a pension or a Spouse's Allowance, and $296·87 monthly for each spouse of a married couple where both were pensioners. The maximum Spouse's Allowance for the same quarter was $680·38 monthly (equal to the basic pension plus the maximum GIS married rate), and $751·13 for widow(er)s. Total OAS/GIS/SPA benefit expenditures for 1991–92 were $18,921m.; in July 1992, over 3m. Canadians received benefits through these programmes.

The Canada Pension Plan (CPP) is designed to provide workers with a basic level of income protection in the event of retirement, disability or death. Benefits may be payable to a contributor, a surviving spouse or an eligible child. As of 1 Jan. 1992, payment of actuarially adjusted retirement benefits may begin as early as age 60 or as late as age 70. Benefits are determined by the contributor's earnings and contributions made to the Plan. Contribution is compulsory for most employed and self-employed Canadians 18 to 65 years of age. The CPP does not operate in Quebec, which has exercised its constitutional prerogative to establish a similar plan. In 1993, the maximum retirement pension payable under CPP was $667·36; the maximum disability pension was $812·85; and the maximum surviving spouse's pension was $400·42 (for survivors 65 years of age and over). For survivors under 65 years of age CPP pays a reduced flat rate. In 1993 CPP was funded by equal contributions of 2·5% of pensionable earnings from the employer and 2·5% from the employee (self-employed persons contribute the full 5%), in addition to the interest on the investment of excess funds. In 1993, the range of yearly pensionable earnings was from $3,300 to $33,400; a person who earned and contributed at less than the maximum level receives monthly benefits at rates lower than the maximum allowable under CPP. In July 1993, over 3·8m. Canadians received Canada or Quebec Pension Plan benefits. Total expenditure in 1992–93 for CPP was about $13,100m.

Social security agreements co-ordinate the operation of the Old Age Security and the CPP with the comparable social security programmes of certain other countries.

The Federal Government passed legislation in Nov. 1992 which replaced the Family Allowances programme with a new Child Tax Benefit, administered jointly by Human Resources and Labour and Revenue Canada. The programme delivered Canada its first payments in Jan. 1993.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission is an independent authority established by parliament in 1968 to regulate public and private radio and television. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation operates 2 national TV networks, one in English and one in French, and there are 3 private TV networks. In 1995, there were 2,245 cable TV systems, and in 1997 there were 7,867,000 subscribers to cable television. In 1996 there were 21,200,000 TV receivers and 32,000,000 radio receivers (714 and 1,078 per 1,000 population).

There were 841 originating radio stations operating in 1996, of which 333 were AM and 508 FM. There were also 968 radio re-broadcasters.

Cinema. There were 620 cinemas and 103 drive-in theatres in 1991–92.

Press. In 1996 there were 107 daily papers (total circulation, 4·72m., giving a rate of 159 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were 1,071 non-daily papers with a circulation of 21,235,000 or 715 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Tourism. In 1996 there were 17,286,000 foreign tourists, around 90% of whom were from the USA. Revenue from visitors was US$8,868m.

Festivals. There are numerous festivals planned for the Millenium including a Millenium Eve Vigil and Music Canada 2000, which will showcase Canadian artistic and cultural resources.

Libraries. In 1995 there was 1 National Library and 3,672 public libraries with 76,464,000 volumes.

Museums and Galleries. In 1994 there were 1,347 museums with over 27m. visitors.

CANADIAN PROVINCES

GENERAL DETAILS

The 10 provinces each have a separate parliament and administration, with a Lieut.-Governor, appointed by the Governor-General in Council at the head of the executive. They have full powers to regulate their own local affairs and dispose of their revenues, provided only that they do not interfere with the action and policy of the central administration. Among the subjects assigned exclusively to the provincial legislatures are: The amendment of the provincial constitution, except as regards the office of the Lieut.-Governor; property and civil rights; direct taxation for revenue purposes; borrowing; management and sale of Crown lands; provincial hospitals, reformatories, etc.; shop, saloon, tavern, auctioneer and other licences for local or provincial purposes; local works and undertakings, except lines of ships, railways, canals, telegraphs, etc., extending beyond the province or connecting with other provinces, and excepting also such works as the Canadian Parliament declares are for the general good; marriages, administration of justice within the province; education. On 18 July 1994 the federal and provincial governments signed an agreement easing inter-provincial barriers on government procurement, labour mobility, transport licences and product standards. Federal legislation of Dec. 1995 grants provinces a right of constitutional veto.

For the administration of the 2 territories see Northwest Territories, Yukon Territory below.

[2]Comparison of the 1991 census data with data from earlier censuses is affected by a change in the definition of the 1991 census population. Persons in Canada on student authorizations, Minister's permits, and as refugee claimants were enumerated in the 1991 census but not in previous censuses. These persons are referred to as non-permanent residents.

Local Government. Under the terms of the British North America Act the provinces are given full powers over local government. All local government institutions are, therefore, supervised by the provinces, and are incorporated and function under provincial acts.

The acts under which municipalities operate vary from province to province. A municipal corporation is usually administered by an elected council headed by a mayor or reeve, whose powers to administer affairs and to raise funds by taxation and other methods are set forth in provincial laws, as is the scope of its obligations to, and on behalf of, the citizens. Similarly, the types of municipal corporations, their official designations and the requirements for their incorporation vary between provinces. The following table sets out the classifications as at the 1991 census:

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The administration of justice within the provinces, including the enforcement of the Criminal Code of Canada, is the responsibility of provincial governments, but all the provinces except Ontario and Quebec have entered into contracts with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) to enforce criminal and provincial law. In addition, in these 8 provinces the RCMP is under agreement to provide police services to municipalities.

ALBERTA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The southern half of Alberta was administered from 1670 as part of Rupert's land by the Hudson's Bay Company. Trading posts were set up after 1783 when the North West Company took a share in the fur trade. In 1869 Rupert's land was transferred from the Hudson's Bay Company (which had absorbed its rival in 1821) to the new Dominion and in the following year this land was combined with the former Crown land of the North Western Territories to form the Northwest Territories. In 1882 'Alberta' first appeared as a provisional 'district', consisting of the southern half of the present province. In 1905 the Athabasca district to the north was added when provincial status was granted to Alberta.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the province is 661,185 sq. km; 644,389 sq. km being land area and 16,796 sq. km water area. The population at the 1996 census was 2,696,826; estimate, July 1997, 2,847,006. The urban population (1996), centres of 1,000 or over, was 79·5% and the rural 20·5%. Population (14 May 1996) of the 14 cities, as well as the 2 specialized municipalities (see below under Local Government for definition): Calgary, 768,082; Edmonton, 616,306; Lethbridge, 63,053; Red Deer, 60,075; St Albert, 46,888; Medicine Hat, 46,783; Grande Prairie, 31,140; Airdrie, 15,946; Leduc, 14,305; Spruce Grove, 14,271; Camrose, 13,728; Fort Saskatchewan, 12,408; Lloydminster (Alberta portion), 11,317; Wetaskiwin, 10,959; Specialized Municipality of Wood Buffalo (Fort McMurray), 35,213; Specialized Municipality of Strathcona County (Sherwood Park), 64,176.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social Statistics.

CLIMATE

A continental climate: long, cold winters and mild summers. Rainfall amounts are greatest between May and Sept. Edmonton, Jan. 5°F (–15°C), July 63°F (17°C). Annual rainfall 13·6" (345·6 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution of Alberta is contained in the British North America Act of 1867, and amending Acts; also in the Alberta Act of 1905, passed by the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, which created the province out of the then Northwest Territories. All the provisions of the British North America Act, except those with respect to school lands and the public domain, were made to apply to Alberta as they apply to the older provinces of Canada. On 1 Oct. 1930 the natural resources were transferred from the Dominion to provincial government control. The province is represented by 6 members in the Senate and 26 in the House of Commons of Canada.

The executive is vested nominally in the Lieut.-Governor, who is appointed by the federal government, but actually in the Executive Council or the Cabinet of the legislature. Legislative power is vested in the Assembly in the name of the Queen.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are elected by the universal vote of adults over the age of 18 years.

RECENT ELECTIONS

There are 83 members in the legislature (elected 11 March 1997): 63 Progressive Conservative, 18 Liberal and 2 New Democrat.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: H. A. Olson.

The members of the Ministry were as follows in March 1999:

Premier, President of Executive Council: Ralph Klein (b. 1942; Progressive Conservative).

Minister of Advanced Education and Career Development: Clint Dunford. Energy: Stephen C. West. Family and Social Services: Dr Lyle Oberg. Provincial Treasurer: Stockwell Day. Science, Research and Information Technology: Lorne Taylor. Environmental Protection: Ty Lund. Health: Halvar Jonson. Community Development: Shirley McClellan. Agriculture, Food and Rural Development: Ed Stelmach. Intergovernmental and Aboriginal Affairs: David Hancock, QC. Municipal Affairs: Iris Evans. Transportation and Utilities: Walter Paszkowski. Economic Development and Tourism: Patricia Nelson. Justice and Attorney General, Government House Leader: Jon Havelock. Education: Gary G. Mar, QC. Labour: Murray Smith. Public Works, Supply and Services: Stan Woloshyn. Without Portfolio responsible for Children's Services: Pearl Calahasen.

Local Government. The local government units are City, Town, New Town, Village, Summer Village, County, Municipal District and Improvement District.

There are 14 cities (see TERRITORY AND POPULATION, above). These cities operate under the Municipal Government Act. The governing body consists of a mayor and a council of from 6 to 20 members. A city can be incorporated by order of the Lieut.-Governor-in-Council. A population of 10,000 is required on incorporation.

There are no limits of area specified in the statutes for any of the different local government units. The population requirement for a Town as specified in the Municipal Government Act is 1,000 people, and the area at incorporation is that of the original village.

A Village must contain 75 separate and occupied dwellings. The Municipal Government Act requires each dwelling to have been occupied continuously for a period of at least 6 months. A Summer Village must contain 50 separate dwellings.

A rural county area is an area incorporated through an order of the Lieut.-Governor-in-Council under the provisions of the County Act. One board of councillors deals with both municipal and school affairs.

A rural Municipal District is an area which has been incorporated under the Municipal Government Act. In Municipal Districts separate boards control municipal and school affairs.

Areas not incorporated as counties or Municipal Districts are termed Improvement Districts or Special Areas. Sparsely populated, such districts are administered and taxed by the Department of Municipal Affairs of the provincial government. There are no requirements as to the minimum number of residents of a County or Municipal District.

ECONOMY

Banking and Finance. The budgetary revenue and expenditure (in $1m.) for years ending 31 March were as follows:

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Revenue	14,173	15,308	16,082	15,504	16,651
Expenditure	17,497	16,679	15,144	14,353	14,162

Personal income per capita (1996), $23,511.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas. In 1996, 90,353,000 cu. metres of crude oil were produced with gross sales value of $14,914,615,000. Alberta produced 76·8% of Canada's crude petroleum output in 1996.

Oil sands underlie some 60,000 sq. km of Alberta, the 4 major deposits being: The Athabasca, Cold Lake, Peace River and Buffalo Head Hills deposits. Some 7% (3,250 sq. km) of the Athabasca deposit can be exploited through open-pit mining. The rest of the Athabasca, and all the deposits in the other areas, are deeper reserves which must be developed through in situ techniques. These reserves reach depths of 760 metres. Oil sands mining plants produced 16,317,500 cu. metres of synthetic crude oil in 1996.

Natural gas is found in abundance in numerous localities. In 1996, 127,903,000 cu. metres valued at $7,533,487,000 were produced. Production of natural gas by-products was 25,960,600 cu. metres, valued at $2,747·95m.

Minerals. Coal reserves are estimated at 2,300,000m. tonnes, of which 720,000m. tonnes are recoverable. Production in 1996 was 41·93m. tonnes.

Value of total mineral production increased from $20,700m. in 1995 to $26,000m. in 1996.

Agriculture. Total area of farms (1996), 51,964,360 acres; improved land, 35,617,109 acres (under crops, 23,590,033; improved pasture, 4,731,087; summer fallow, 3,550,265; other improved land, 3,745,724); unimproved land, 16,347,251 acres. Number of farms (1996), 59,007.

For particulars of agricultural production and livestock see CANADA: Agriculture. Farm cash receipts in 1996 totalled $6,391·74m., of which crops contributed $2,921·85m., livestock and products, $3,318·32m. and direct payments $151·57m.

Forestry. Forest land in 1991 covered some 203,000 sq. km. In Jan. 1995, 22,750,434 cu. metres was the net allowable cut from land managed by the Crown.

Fisheries. The largest catch in commercial fishing is whitefish. Perch, tullibee, walley, pike and lake trout are also caught in smaller quantities. In 1984 a provincial fish marketing policy was implemented, and a new commercial fishery licensing system was implemented in 1987. Commercial fish production in 1990–91 was 2,210 tonnes, value $2·49m.

INDUSTRY

The leading manufacturing industries are food and beverages, petroleum refining, metal fabricating, wood industries, primary metal, chemical and chemical products and non-metallic mineral products. In 1995 there were 2,509 manufacturing establishments, in which were employed 99,225 persons who earned salaries and wages of $3,702,100,000.

Manufacturing shipments had a total value of $30,771·9m. in 1996. Chief among these shipments were (in $1m.): Food, 6,257·6; beverages, 584·2; chemicals and chemical products, 5,392·8; refined petroleum and coal products, 5,268·4; primary metals, 938·2; fabricated metal products, 1,578·4; wood, 1,915·1; printing, publishing and allied products, 882; machinery, 1,709; paper and allied products, 1,678·1; non-metal mineral products, 1,709; furniture and fixtures, 396·6; other, 350·7.

Total retail sales (1996) $23,141m.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 1,519,700 (681,000 females), of whom 1,412,700 (633,200) were employed.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1997 there were 158,388 km of roads and highways, including 110,891 km gravelled and 23,146 km paved.

At 31 March 1997 there were 1,962,789 motor vehicles registered, including 1,549,662 passenger vehicles.

Rail. In 1997 the length of main railway lines was 8,395 km. There are light rail networks in Edmonton (12·8 km) and Calgary (29·3 km).

Telecommunications. The telephone system is owned and operated by the Telus Corporation (in which the Alberta Government holds 44% of the shares), except in the city of Edmonton (owned and operated by the City Council). There were 1,904,038 telephone subscriber lines in service in 1997.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Judicial authority of the province is the Court of Appeal. Judges of the Court of Appeal and Court of Queen's Bench are appointed by the Federal Government and hold office until retirement at the age of 75. There are courts of lesser jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters. The Court of Queen's Bench has full jurisdiction over civil proceedings. A Provincial Court which has jurisdiction in civil matters up to $2,000 is presided over by provincially appointed judges. Youth Courts have power to try boys and girls 12–17 years old inclusive for offences against the Young Offenders Act.

The jurisdiction of all criminal courts in Alberta is enacted in the provisions of the Criminal Code. The system of procedure in civil and criminal cases conforms as nearly as possible to the English system. In 1996, 248,296 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 46 homicides.

Education. Schools of all grades are included under the term of public school (including those in the separate school system which are publicly supported). The same board of trustees controls the schools from kindergarten to university entrance. In 1996–97 there were about 0·56m. pupils enrolled in grades 1-12, including private schools and special education programmes.

In 1998 Alberta had 35 post secondary institutions, 4 universities and 2 technical colleges with a total of approximately 80,000 students. The University of Alberta (in Edmonton), founded in 1907, had, in 1996–97, 26,130 full-time students; the University of Calgary, formerly part of the University of Alberta and autonomous from April 1966, had 19,714; and the University of Lethbridge, founded in 1966, had 5,160. The Athabasca University had in 1996–97, 11,689 part-time students.

CULTURE

Tourism. Tourism is important and in 1996 contributed an estimated $3,000m. to the economy.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

British Columbia, formerly known as New Caledonia, was first administered by the Hudson's Bay Company. In 1849 Vancouver Island was given crown colony status and in 1853 the Queen Charlotte Islands became a dependency. The discovery of gold on the Fraser river and the following influx of population resulted in the creation in 1858 of the mainland crown colony of British Columbia, to which the Strikine Territory (established 1862) was later added. In 1866 the two colonies were united.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

British Columbia has land area of 892,677 sq. km. The capital is Victoria. The province is bordered westerly by the Pacific Ocean and Alaska Panhandle, northerly by the Yukon and Northwest Territories, easterly by the Province of Alberta and southerly by the USA along the 49th parallel. A chain of islands, the largest of which are Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte Islands, affords protection to the mainland coast.

The 1996 census population was 3,724,500; estimate, July 1998, 4,014,329.

The principal cities and their 1996 census populations are as follows: Metropolitan Vancouver, 1,831,665; Metropolitan Victoria, 304,290; Abbotsford (amalgamated with Matsqui), 105,403; Kelowna, 89,442; Kamloops, 76,394; Prince George, 75,150; Nanaimo, 70,130; Chilliwack, 60,186; Vernon, 31,817; Penticton, 30,987; Mission, 30,519; Campbell River, 28,851; North Cowichan, 25,305; Port Alberni, 18,468; Cranbrook, 18,131.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social Statistics.

CLIMATE
The climate is cool temperate, but mountain influences affect temperatures and rainfall very considerably. Driest months occur in summer. Vancouver, Jan. 36°F (2·2°C), July 64°F (17·8°C). Annual rainfall 58" (1,458 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT
The British North America Act of 1867 provided for eventual admission into Canadian Confederation, and on 20 July 1871 British Columbia became the sixth province of the Dominion.

British Columbia has a unicameral legislature of 75 elected members. Government policy is determined by the Executive Council responsible to the Legislature. The Lieut.-Governor is appointed by the Governor-General of Canada, usually for a term of 5 years, and is the head of the executive government of the province.

The Legislative Assembly is elected for a maximum term of 5 years. There are 75 electoral districts. Every Canadian citizen 18 years and over, having resided a minimum of 6 months in the province, duly registered, is entitled to vote. The province is represented in the Federal Parliament by 33 members in the House of Commons, and 6 Senators.

RECENT ELECTIONS
At the Legislative Assembly elections of 28 May 1996 the New Democratic Party (NDP) gained 39% of votes cast and 39 seats, the Liberal Party gained 34 seats, the Progressive Democratic Alliance 1 and independents 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION
Lieut.-Governor: His Honour the Hon. Garde B. Gardom, QC.

The NDP Executive Council comprised in Jan. 1999:

Premier, Minister Responsible for Youth: Glen Clark.

Deputy Premier, Minister of Energy and Mines and Minister Responsible for Northern Development: Dan Miller. Aboriginal Affairs and Labour: Dale Lovick. Advanced Education, Training and Technology and Intergovernmental Relations: Andrew Petter. Agriculture and Food: Corky Evans. Attorney General and Minister responsible for Multiculturalism, Human Rights and Immigration: Ujjal Dosanjh. Children and Families: Lois Boone. Education: Paul Ramsey. Employment and Investment and Minister responsible for Housing: Michael Farnworth. Environment, Lands and Parks: Cathy McGregor. Finance and Corporate Relations: Joy K. McPhail. Fisheries: Dennis Streifel. Forests: David G. Zirnhelt. Health and Minister responsible for Seniors: Penny Priddy. Human Resources: Jan Pullinger. Municipal Affairs: Jenny Kwan. Public Service: Moe Sihota. Small Business, Tourism and Culture: Ian Waddell. Transportation and Highways: Harry Lali. Women's Equality: Sue Hammell.

Local Government. Vancouver City was incorporated by statute and operates under the provisions of the Vancouver Charter of 1953 and amendments. This is the only incorporated area in British Columbia not operating under the provisions of the Municipal Act. Under this Act municipalities are divided into the following classes: (a) a village with a population between 500 and 2,500, governed by a council consisting of a mayor and 4 aldermen; (b) a town with a population between 2,500 and 5,000, governed by a council consisting of a mayor and 4 aldermen; (c) a city where the population exceeds 5,000, governed by a council consisting of a mayor and 6 or 8 aldermen depending on population; (d) a district where the area exceeds 810 hectares and the average density is less than 5 persons per hectare, governed by a council consisting of a mayor and 6 or 8 aldermen depending on population; (e) an Indian government district.

There are 2 other forms of local government: the Regional District covering a number of areas both incorporated and unincorporated, governed by a board of directors; and the improvement district governed by a board of 3 trustees.

Revenue for municipal services is derived mainly from real-property taxation, although additional revenue is derived from licence fees, business taxes, fines, public utility projects and grants-in-aid from the provincial government.

ECONOMY

Budget. Current provincial revenue and expenditure in $1m. for fiscal years ending 31 March:

	1995-96	1996-97	1997-98	1998-99[1]
Revenue	20,401·6	20,209·0	20,285·0	20,441·0
Expenditure	20,170·0	20,546·0	20,437·0	20,536·0

[1]Estimate.

The main sources of current revenue are income taxes, sales taxes, contributions from the federal government, licences and fees, and natural resource taxes and royalties.

The main items of expenditure in 1998 (estimate) were as follows: Health, $7,271·3m.; education, $5,774·2m.; transportation, $789·9m.; natural resources and economic development, $866·5m.; protection of persons and property, $1,030·6m.; general government, $232·0m.

Banking and Finance. At Oct. 1997, Canadian chartered banks maintained 925 branches and had total assets of $146·3bn. in British Columbia. In 1997, credit unions at 96 locations had total assets of $20·4bn. Several foreign banks have Canadian head offices in Vancouver and several others have branches.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Generation in 1998 totalled 66,693m. kWh, of which 12,114m. kWh were exported. Available within the province was 71,009m. kWh (with imports 4,316m. kWh).

Minerals. Copper, coal, natural gas, crude oil, gold and molybdenum are the most important minerals produced. The 1997 value of mineral production was estimated at $4,695m. Total value of mineral fuels produced in 1997 was estimated at: Coal, $1,191m.; oil and gas, $1,533m.

Agriculture. Only 2·4m. ha, or 4% of the total land area, is arable or potentially arable. Farm cash receipts, in 1997, were $1,765m., of which livestock and products $992m.; crops, $773m.

Forestry. About 55% of British Columbia's land is productive forest land, with 51·8m. ha bearing commercial forest. Over 90% of the forest area is owned or administered by the provincial government. The total timber harvest in 1997 was 68·8m. cu. metres. Output of forest-based products, 1997: Lumber, 31·6m. cu. metres; plywood, 1·48m. cu. metres; pulp, 7·1m. tonnes; newsprint, paper and paperboard, 2·57m. tonnes.

Fisheries. In 1997 the total landed value of the catch was $594m.; wholesale value $982m.

INDUSTRY

The value of shipments from all manufacturing industries reached $34,672m. in 1997.

Labour. In 1997 the labour force averaged 2,012,400 persons (913,300 females) with 1,837,700 (836,300) employed, of whom 754,000 were in service industries, 323,000 in trade, 201,000 in manufacturing, 146,000 in transportation and communications, 106,000 in finance, insurance and real estate, 91,000 in public administration, 129,000 in construction, 33,000 in agriculture, 30,000 in forestry, 17,000 in mining and 7,000 in fishing and trapping.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Exports in 1997 totalled $26,748m. in value, while imports amounted to $23,236·4m. The USA is the largest market for products exported through British Columbia customs ports ($14,865m. in 1997), followed by Japan ($6,005m.) and South Korea ($953m.).

The leading exports in 1997 were: Wood products, $9,759m.; pulp, $3,099m.; machinery and equipment, $2,638m.; coal, $2,016m.; metallic minerals, $1,790m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 42,500 km of provincial roads and rights of way in the province, of which 21,500 km were paved. At 31 Dec. 1997, 1·651m. passenger cars and 573,166 commercial vehicles were registered.

Rail. The province is served by two transcontinental railways, the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian National Railway. Passenger service is provided by VIA Rail, a Crown Corporation and the publicly owned British Columbia Railway. In 1995 the American company Amtrak began operating a service between Seattle and Vancouver after a 14-year hiatus. British Columbia is also served by the freight trains of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, the Northern Alberta Railways Company and the Burlington Northern and Southern Railways Inc. The combined route-mileage of mainline track operated by the CPR, CNR and BCR totals 6,800 km. The system also includes CPR and CNR wagon ferry connections to Vancouver Island, between Prince Rupert and Alaska, and interchanges with American railways at southern border points. A metro line was opened in Vancouver in 1986 (29 km). A commuter rail service linking Vancouver and the Fraser Valley was established in 1995 (69 km).

Civil Aviation. International airports are located at Vancouver and Victoria. In 1997, total passenger arrivals and departures on scheduled services at Vancouver were 14·82m., and at Victoria 1·1m. Daily interprovincial and intraprovincial flights serve all main population centres. Small public and private airstrips are located throughout the province.

Shipping. The major ports are Vancouver, Prince Rupert and the Fraser River. Other coastal harbours include Nanaimo, Port Alberni, Campbell River, Powell River, Kitimat, Stewart and Squamish. Total cargo shipped through the port of Vancouver during 1996 was 71·7m. tonnes; from the port of Prince Rupert (1997), 12·5m. tonnes. 289 cruise ship voyages with 0·7m. passengers visited Vancouver in 1996.

The British Columbia Ferries connect Vancouver Island with the mainland and also provide service to other coastal points; in 1997, 22·0m. passengers and 8·1m. vehicles were carried. Service by other ferry systems is also provided between Vancouver Island and the USA. The Alaska State Ferries connect Prince Rupert with centres in Alaska.

Telecommunications. The British Columbia Telephone Company had (1997) approximately 2·5m. customers. In July 1997 there were 130 radio and 12 television stations originating in British Columbia. In addition there were 218 radio and 35 television re-broadcasting stations in the province.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judicial system is composed of the Court of Appeal, the Supreme Court, County Courts, and various Provincial Courts, including Magistrates' Courts and Small Claims Courts. The federal courts include the Supreme Court of Canada and the Federal Court of Canada.

In 1997, 504,703 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 114 homicides.

Education. Education, free up to Grade XII levels, is financed jointly from municipal and provincial government revenues. Attendance is compulsory from the age of 5 to 16. There were approximately 623,317 pupils enrolled in 1,733 public schools from kindergarten to Grade 12 in the 1996-97 school year.

The universities had a full-time enrolment of approximately 53,012 for 1997-98. As of 1 Nov. 1996 they were: the University of British Columbia, Vancouver; University of Victoria, Saanich; Simon Fraser University, Burnaby, and the University of Northern British Columbia, Prince George. The regional colleges in 1996 were: Camosun College, Victoria; Capilano College, North Vancouver; Cariboo College, Kamloops; College of New Caledonia, Prince George; Douglas College, New Westminister; East Kootenay Community College, Cranbrook; Fraser Valley College, Chilliwack/Abbotsford; Kwantlen College, Surrey; Malaspina College, Nanaimo; North Island College, Comox; Northern Lights College, Dawson Creek/Fort St John; Northwest Community College, Terrace/Prince Rupert; Okanagan College, Kelowna with branches at Salmon Arm and Vernon; Selkirk College, Castlegar; Vancouver Community College, Vancouver; Langara College, Vancouver.

There are also the British Columbia Institute of Technology, Burnaby; Emily Carr College of Art and Design, Vancouver; Open Learning Institute, Richmond. A televised distance education and special programmes through KNOW, the Knowledge Network of the West, is provided.

Health. The Government operates a hospital insurance scheme giving universal coverage after a qualifying period of 3 months' residence in the province. The province has come under a national medicare scheme which is partially subsidized by the provincial government and partially by the federal government.

CULTURE

Tourism. In 1997, 21·3m. tourists spent $8,499m.

MANITOBA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Manitoba was known as the Red River Settlement before it entered the dominion in 1870. During the 18th century its only inhabitants were fur-trappers, but a more settled colonization began in the 19th century. The area was administered by the Hudson's Bay Company until 1869 when it was purchased by the new dominion. In 1870 it was given provincial status. It was enlarged in 1881 and again in 1912 by the addition of part of the Northwest Territories.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the province is 250,946 sq. miles (649,947 sq. km), of which 211,721 sq. miles are land and 39,225 sq. miles water. From north to south it is 1,225 km, and at the widest point it is 793 km.

The 1996 census population was 1,113,898; estimate, July 1997, 1,142,100. Population (estimate 1996) of Winnipeg, the capital, 667,209; other municipalities with over 10,000 inhabitants: Brandon, 39,175; Thompson, 14,385; Portage la Prairie, 13,077; Springfield, 12,162; St Andrews, 10,144.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social statistics.

CLIMATE

The climate is cold continental, with very severe winters but pleasantly warm summers. Rainfall amounts are greatest in the months May to Sept. Winnipeg, Jan. -3°F (-19·3°C), July 67°F (19·6°C). Annual rainfall 21" (539 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The provincial government is administered by a Lieut.-Governor assisted by an Executive Council (Cabinet), which is appointed from and responsible to a Legislative Assembly of 57 members elected for 5 years. Women were enfranchised in 1916. The Electoral Division Act, 1955, created 57 single-member constituencies and abolished the transferable vote. There are 26 rural electoral divisions, and 31 urban electoral divisions. The province is represented by 6 members in the Senate and 14 in the House of Commons of Canada.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the Legislative Assembly were held on 25 April 1995. Party standings in late 1998: Progressive Conservative Party, 31 seats; New Democratic Party, 23; Liberal Party, 3.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Yvon Dumont (appointed 1993).

The members of the Progressive Conservative Ministry in Jan. 1999 were:

Premier, President of the Executive Council, Minister of Federal-Provincial Relations: Gary Albert Filmon.

Deputy-Premier, Minister of Industry, Trade and Tourism: Merv Tweed. Family Services: Bonnie Mitchelson. Natural Resources: Glen Cummings. Education and Training: James McCrae. Culture, Heritage and Citizenship: Rosemary Vodrey. Finance: Eric Stefanson. Highways and Transportation: Glen Findlay. Justice and Attorney General: Victor Eric Toews, QC. Consumer and Corporate Affairs: Michael Radcliffe. Agriculture: Harry Enns. Rural Development: Leonard Derkach. Health: Eric Stefanson. Environment: Linda McIntosh. Labour: Harold Gilleshammer. Urban Affairs and Housing: Jack F. Reimer. Energy and Mines and Northern Affairs: David Newman. Emergency Management Organization: Franklin Pitura.

Local Government. Rural Manitoba is organized into rural municipalities which vary widely in size. Some have only 4 townships (a township is 6 sq. miles), while the largest has 22 townships. The province has 116 rural municipalities, as well as 49 incorporated towns, 26 incorporated villages and 8 incorporated cities.

On 1 Jan. 1972, the cities and towns comprising the metropolitan area of Winnipeg were amalgamated to form the City of Winnipeg. A mayor and council are elected to a central government, but councillors also sit on 'community committees' which represent the areas or wards they serve. These committees are advised by non-elected residents of the area on provision of municipal services within the community committee jurisdiction. Taxing powers and overall budgeting rest with the central council. The mayor is elected at the same time as the councillors in a city-wide vote. Revisions to the City of Winnipeg Act came into effect with the municipal elections held in Oct. 1977.

Since Jan. 1945, 17 Local Government Districts were formed in the less densely populated areas of the province. In 1997, only two remained. They are administered by a provincially appointed person, who acts on the advice of locally elected councils.

In the extreme north, many communities have locally elected councils, while others are administered directly by the Department of Northern Affairs. This department provides most of the funding in all these northern settlements.

ECONOMY

Performance. Real GDP growth was 3% in 1998, and was forecast at 2·7% for 1999.

Banking and Finance. Provincial revenue and expenditure (current account, excluding capital expenditures) for fiscal years ending 31 March (in Canadian $1m.):

	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98[1]	1998–99[2]
Revenue	5,517	5,499	5,602	5,600
Expenditure	5,505	5,408	5,448	5,502

[1]Forecast. [2]Budgeted figure.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In the year ending 31 March 1998, almost 35,000m. kWh of electricity was generated. The Manitoba Hydro System (generating capacity about 5m. kW), owned by the province, produced 34,000m. kWh, of which 19,100m. kWh was delivered to its 394,328 customers throughout the province. The city-owned Winnipeg Hydro (generating capacity about 140,000 kW) generated about 930m. kWh in 1997. It also bought about 1,582 kWh of power from Manitoba Hydro to serve its 102,984 customers. Total sales of Manitoba electricity in 1997 were more than $1,100m. Exports accounted for 26% of total sales. In the year ending 31 March 1998 about 13,600 kWh was exported, primarily to the USA.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil production in 1997 was valued at $103m.

Minerals. Total value of mineral production in 1997 was about $1,129m, a 12·6% increase on 1996. Principal minerals mined are nickel, copper, zinc, gold, and small quantities of silver. It was predicted that the value would decline in 1998.

Agriculture. Rich farmland is the main primary resource, although the area in farms is only about 14% of the total land area. In 1997 the total value of agricultural production was $3,029m., with more than $1,720m. from crops and more than $1,179m. from livestock, and the rest coming from direct payments. These figures represented a 9·9% increase on 1996. Wheat was the most important crop with canola the 2nd most valuable. Hogs were the most valuable livestock, then cattle and calves. 22,456 census farms reported total gross farm receipts of $2,500 or more in 1996.

Forestry. About 51% of the land area is wooded, of which 334,460 sq. km is productive forest land. In 1997–98 there were about 184 primary wood producers with 2,800 direct employees. In 1995–96 primary wood producers were responsible for $440m. in shipments, including $300m. in export sales.

Fur Trade. The value of fur production to the trapper was $3·3m. in the year ending 31 Aug. 1998; the estimated overall contribution of trapping to the provincial economy was about $18m.

Fisheries. From 57,000 sq. km of rivers and lakes, the value of fisheries production to fishers was about $17m. in 1996–97. Whitefish, sauger, pickeral and pike are the principal varieties of fish caught.

INDUSTRY

Goods-producing industries accounted for about 25% of GDP in 1996. In 1997, the value of Manitoba's manufacturing shipments grew to a record $10,000m. Of this, food and beverages was the largest sector, followed by transport equipment (primarily aerospace parts and buses) and machinery (mainly farm equipment). Other industries with strong growth in 1997 included electrical equipment, furniture and fixtures, and clothing and textiles.

Labour. In 1997 the labour force was 576,400, of whom 538,300 were employed. This 6·6% unemployment rate was the lowest since 1981.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Products grown and manufactured in Manitoba find ready markets in other parts of Canada, in the USA, particularly the upper Midwest region, and in other countries. Export shipments to foreign countries from Manitoba in 1997 were valued at $7,000m.

Imports and Exports. Exports rose by 13·6% in 1997 to around $7·08bn. Motor vehicles and parts were the main export commodity, followed by cereal grains and oil seeds. The major export markets were the USA, Japan, Belgium and China.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. Highways and provincial roads totalled 18,500 km, with 2,800 bridges and other structures, in 1997. In 1998 there were 777,222 motor vehicles registered, including 446,415 passenger cars.

Rail. The province has about 5,650 km of commercial track, not including industrial track, yards and sidings. Most of the track belongs to the country's 2 national railways. Canadian Pacific owns about 1,950 km and Canadian National about 2,400 km. The Hudson Bay Railway, operated by Denver-based Omnitrax, has about 1,300 km of track. Fort Worth-based Burlington Northern's railcars are moved in Manitoba on CN and CP tracks and trains.

Civil Aviation. There are 64 domestic commercial aviation operators flying from bases in Manitoba. 5 are designated private; 50 air taxi companies are licensed to carry less than 10 passengers; and 5 computer operations are licensed to carry up to 19 passengers. 4 airlines are licensed to carry more than 19 passengers, and 9 foreign airlines land in the province. In addition, 37 aerial services are licensed (largely for agricultural chemical spraying).

Telecommunications. The Manitoba System provided service to over 450,000 residential customers in Sept. 1998.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1997, 125,043 Criminal Code offences were reported (a ratio of 10,948 per 100,000 people), including 30 homicides (a ratio of 2·63 per 100,000 people).

Education. Education is controlled through locally elected school divisions. There were 209,718 children enrolled in the province's nursery, kindergarten, elementary, secondary, independent (private) and home school system in the 1997–98 school year. Public school operating cost expenditure per pupil for 1997–98 was expected to be about $6,033. The ratio of teachers to students in Sept. 1997 averaged 1:18·9. Manitoba has 4 universities with an enrolment (full- and part-time) of about 30,000 for the 1998–99 year: they are the University of Manitoba, founded in 1877, in Winnipeg; the University of Winnipeg; Brandon University; and the Collegiate University of Saint Boniface.

Community colleges in Brandon, The Pas and Winnipeg offer 2-year diploma courses in a number of fields, as well as specialized training in many trades. They also give a large number and variety of shorter courses, both at their campuses and in many communities throughout the province. Expenditure (estimate) on education in the 1997–98 fiscal year was $1,076m.

CULTURE

Tourism. In 1997, tourists staying 1 or more nights in Manitoba numbered an estimated 1m. Tourism contributed an estimated $1,121m. to the economy.

Festivals. Folklorama is a celebration of Canadian culture that takes place in over 40 multicultural pavillions each July. The Festival du Voyageur takes place in St Boniface each Feb. and is Western Canada's biggest winter festival. Canada's National Ukrainian Festival takes place over a long weekend each August, and in mid-July there is the 4-day Manitoba Stampede and Exhibition, one of Canada's largest rodeos.

National Theatre and Opera. The Royal Winnipeg Ballet is Canada's oldest ballet company.

Museums and Galleries. The Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature has 7 galleries showing the inter-relationship between man and the environment.

NEW BRUNSWICK

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Visited by Jacques Cartier in 1534, New Brunswick was first explored by Samuel de Champlain in 1604. With Nova Scotia, it originally formed one French colony called Acadia. It was ceded by the French in the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713 and became a permanent British possession in 1759. It was first settled by British colonists in 1764 but was separated from Nova Scotia, and became a province in June 1784 as a result of the great influx of United Empire Loyalists. Responsible government came into being in 1848 and consisted of an executive council, a legislative council (later abolished) and a House of Assembly. In 1867 New Brunswick entered the Confederation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the province is 28,354 sq. miles (73,440 sq. km), of which 27,834 sq. miles (72.090 sq. km) is land area. The population at the 1996 census was 738,133; estimate, Oct. 1998, 752,486. Based on the 1996 census, 25% of New Brunswick's total population were of British Isles only ancestry, 24% were of 'Canadian' origin and 17% had French only ancestry. Other significant ethnic groups were German, Dutch and Scandinavian. In 1996 there were 10,250 North American Indian, Métis or Inuit people in New Brunswick. Census 1996 population of urban centres: Saint John, 125,705; Moncton, 113,491; Fredericton (capital), 78,950; Bathurst, 25,415; Edmundston, 22,624; Campbellton, 16,867. The official languages are English and French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social Statistics.

CLIMATE

A cool temperate climate, with rain at all seasons but temperatures modified by the influence of the Gulf Stream. Precipitation ranges from 889 mm in the north to 1,143 mm in the south. The average summer temperature for Saint John is 22°C, -3·9°C in the winter.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The government is vested in a Lieut.-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 55 members, each of whom is individually elected to represent the voters in one constituency or riding. A simultaneous translation system is used in the Assembly. Any Canadian subject of full age and 6 months' residence is entitled to vote.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The last provincial election was held on 11 Sept. 1995. As of Oct. 1998, the Legislative Assembly consisted of 45 Liberals, 9 Progressive Conservatives and 1 from the New Democratic Party. The province has 10 members in the Canadian Senate and 10 members in the federal House of Commons.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Dr Marilyn Trenholme Counsell (appointed April 1997).

The members of the Liberal government were as follows in Jan. 1999:

Premier, President of Executive Council: Camille H. Thériault.

Minister of Justice, Attorney General, Services NB: Greg Byrne. Finance, Quality: Edmond Blanchard. Supply and Services: Gregory O'Donnell. Transportation: Sheldon Lee. Natural Resources and Energy: Doug Tyler. Agriculture and Rural Development: Stuart Jamieson. Health and Community Services: Ann Breault. Human Resources Development: Georgie Day. Labour: Joan Kingston. Education: Bernard Richard. Municipalities and Housing, Status of Women: Marcelle Mersereau. Environment: Gene Devereux. Economic Development, Culture and Tourism: Roland MacIntyre. Fisheries and Aquaculture: Danny Gay. Solicitor General: James Lockyer. Regional Development Corporation and Northern Development: Jean-Paul Savoie. Minister of State for Seniors: Reginald MacDonald. Minister of State for Tourism and Culture: Jean-Camille DeGrâce. Minister of State for Intergovernmental and Aboriginal Affairs: Bernard Thériault. Minister of State for Youth and Literacy: Harry Doyle.

Local Government. Under the reforms introduced in 1967 the Province has assumed complete administrative and financial responsibility for education, health, welfare and administration of justice. Local government is now restricted to provision of services of a strictly local nature. Under the new municipal structure, units include existing and new cities, towns and villages. Counties have disappeared as municipal units. Areas with limited populations have become local service districts. The former local improvement districts have become towns, villages or local service districts depending on their size.

ECONOMY

Banking and Finance. The ordinary budget (in Canadian $1m.) is shown as follows (financial years ended 31 March):

	1995	1996	1997	1998
Gross revenue	4,300·0	4,426·3	4,470·5	4,459·4
Gross expenditure	4,368·6	4,375·1	4,355·8	4,397·7

Funded debt and capital loans outstanding (exclusive of Treasury Bills) as of 31 March 1998 was $6,685·1m. Sinking funds held by the province at 31 March 1998, $2,440·0m. The ordinary budget excludes capital spending.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Hydro-electric, thermal and nuclear generating stations of NB Power had an installed capacity of 4,116 MW at 31 March 1998, consisting of 15 generating stations. The Mactaquac hydro-electric development near Fredericton has a name plate capacity of 672 MW. The largest thermal generating station, Coleson Cove, near Saint John, has 1,006 MW of installed capacity. Atlantic Canada's first nuclear generating station, a 635 MW plant on a promontory in the Bay of Fundy, near Saint John, went into operation in 1982. New Brunswick is electrically interconnected with utilities in neighbouring provinces of Quebec, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, as well as the New England States of the USA. The sale of out-of-province power accounted for 21% of revenue in 1997–98. Total revenue amounted to $1,140·4m. A 350 MW power plant at Belledune is planned.

Minerals. In 1997 approximately 15 different metals, minerals and commodities were produced. These included lead, zinc, copper, cadmium, bismuth, gold, silver, antimony, potash, salt, lime, stone, gas, coal, sand and gravel, clay, peat and marl. The total value of minerals produced in 1997 reached $936·6m. The top 3 contributors to mineral production are zinc, silver and lead, accounting for 65·4% of total value in 1997. In Canada, in 1997, New Brunswick ranked first in the production of zinc, bismuth and lead, second in silver, and fifth in the production of copper. Not all of the province's minerals have been explored sufficiently and research continues.

Agriculture. The total area under crops is estimated at 135,008 ha. Farms numbered 3,405 and averaged 129 ha each (census 1996). Potatoes accounted for 20·9% of total farm cash income in 1997. Mixed farming is common throughout the province. Dairy farming is centred around the larger urban areas, and is located mainly along the Saint John River Valley and in the south-eastern sections of the province. Income from dairy products provides 21·0% of farm cash income. New Brunswick is self-sufficient in fluid milk and supplies a processing industry. For particulars of agricultural production and livestock, see CANADA: Agriculture. Farm cash receipts in 1997 were $301·2m.

Forestry. New Brunswick contains some 61,000 sq. km of productive forest lands. The value of manufacturing shipments for the wood-related industries in 1997 was $3,115·7m., representing 37·4% of total shipments in the province. The paper and allied industry group is the largest component of the industry, contributing 62·6% of forestry output. In 1997 wood industries employed about 16,929 people for all aspects of the forest industry, including harvesting, processing and transportation. Practically all forest products are exported from the province's numerous ports and harbours, near which many of the mills are located, or sent by road or rail to the USA.

Fisheries. Commercial fishing is one of the most important primary industries of the province, employing 7,233 in 1997. Nearly 50 commercial species of fish and shellfish are landed, including scallop, shrimp, crab, herring and cod. Landings in 1997 (101,572 tonnes) amounted to $124·1m. In 1998 there were 107 fish processing plants, employing an average of 6,570 people. In 1997 molluscs and crustaceans ranked first with a value of $107·4m., 86·5% of the total landed value; pelagic fish second, 10·9%; and groundfish third, 2·0%. Exports (1997) $435·6m., mainly to the USA and Japan.

INDUSTRY

In 1998 there were 1,417 manufacturing and processing establishments, employing on average 43,300 persons. New Brunswick's location, with deepwater harbours open throughout the year and container facilities at Saint John, makes it ideal for exporting. Industries include food and beverages, paper and allied industries, and timber products. Nearly 20% of the industrial labour force work in Saint John.

Labour. New Brunswick's labour force increased 2·4% in 1997 to 362,400 (163,400 females). Of the 316,100 employed, 144,100 were females. The participation rate rose to 60·1% (67·4% for males and 53·1% for females).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. The main exports of New Brunswick are forest products, such as lumber, woodpulp, newsprint, and energy products which include petroleum oils, other than crude, and electricity. In 1997, the major trading partners of the province were the USA with 78·1% of total exports, followed by Brazil with 4·4% and Japan with 3·9% of total exports. Exports reached $5,463·7m. while imports totalled $3,894·1m. in 1997.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There are over 15,000 km of collector and local roads which provide access to most areas. The main highway system, including 596·4 km of the Trans-Canada Highway, links the province with the principal roads in Quebec, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, as well as the Interstate Highway System in the eastern seaboard states of the USA. A new 4-lane access highway is under construction between Fredericton and Moncton. At 31 March 1998, total road motor vehicle registrations numbered 442,283 of which 299,367 were passenger automobiles, 131,841 were truck and truck tractors, 10,519 motor cycles and mopeds, and 556 other vehicles.

Rail. New Brunswick is served by main lines of both Canadian Pacific and Canadian National railways.

Telecommunications. In 1996 the New Brunswick Telephone Co. Ltd had 542,887 access lines in service.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1997, 54,060 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 8 homicides.

Education. Public education is free and non-sectarian.

There were, in Sept. 1997, 131,586 students (including kindergarten) and 7,772 full-time equivalent/professional educational staff in the province's 356 schools. There are 18 school districts.

There are 4 universities. The University of New Brunswick at Fredericton (founded 13 Dec. 1785 by the Loyalists, elevated to university status in 1823, reorganized as the University of New Brunswick in 1859) had 7,569 full-time students at the Fredericton campus and 2,040 full-time students at the Saint John campus (1997–98); Mount Allison University at Sackville had 2,146 full-time students; the Université de Moncton at Moncton, 3,565 full-time students, with 380 and 648 full-time students respectively at its satellite campuses at Shippagan and Edmundston; St Thomas University at Fredericton, 1,970 full-time students.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The province is served by 28 radio stations, of which 3 are owned by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, 10 broadcast in French, and 3 are bilingual. The province is served by 7 television stations, 2 of which broadcast in French.

Press. New Brunswick had (1998) 5 daily newspapers, 1 in French, and 16 weekly newspapers, 3 in French and 2 bilingual.

Tourism. Tourism is one of the leading contributors to the economy. In 1997, tourism revenues reached $790m. Popular attractions include Magnetic Hill (Moncton), the Reversing Falls (Saint John) and the Rocks formation. There are 2 national parks as well as a number of provincial parks.

Libraries. The Harriet Irving Library and Legislative Library are in Fredericton.

National Theatre and Opera. Theatre New Brunswick is based at the Playhouse in Fredericton, and Symphony New Brunswick are at Saint John.

Museums and Galleries. The Beaverbrook Art Gallery and the Provincial Archives are 2 of the most notable galleries and museums.

NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Archaeological finds at L'Anse-au-Meadow in northern Newfoundland show that the Vikings established a colony here in about AD 1000. This site is the only known Viking colony in North America. Newfoundland was discovered by John Cabot on 24 June 1497, and was soon frequented in the summer months by the Portuguese, Spanish and French for its fisheries. It was formally occupied in Aug. 1583 by Sir Humphrey Gilbert on behalf of the English Crown but various attempts to colonize the island remained unsuccessful. Although British sovereignty was recognized in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, disputes over fishing rights with the French were not finally settled till 1904. By the Anglo-French Convention of 1904, France renounced her exclusive fishing rights along part of the coast, granted under the Treaty of Utrecht, but retained sovereignty of the offshore islands of St Pierre and Miquelon. Self-governing from 1855, the colony remained outside of the Canadian confederation in 1867 and continued to govern itself until 1934, when a commission of government appointed by the British Crown assumed responsibility for governing the colony and Labrador. This body controlled the country until union with Canada in 1949.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Area, 143,501 sq. miles (371,690 sq. km), of which freshwater, 13,139 sq. miles (34,030 sq. km). In March 1927 the Privy Council decided the boundary between Canada and Newfoundland in Labrador. This area, now part of the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador, is 102,699 sq. miles. The coastline is extremely irregular. Bays, fiords and inlets are numerous, and there are many good harbours with deep water close to shore. The coast is rugged with bold rocky cliffs from 200 to 400 ft high; in the Bay of Islands some of the islands rise 500 ft, with the adjacent shore 1,000 ft above tide level. The interior is a plateau of moderate elevation, and the chief relief features trend north-east and south-west. Long Range, the most notable of these, begins at Cape Ray and extends north-east for 200 miles, the highest peak reaching 2,673 ft. Approximately one-third of the area is covered by water. Grand Lake, the largest body of water, has an area of about 200 sq. miles. The principal rivers flow towards the north-east. On the borders of the lakes and water-courses, good land is generally found, particularly in the valleys of the Terra Nova River, the Gander River, the Exploits River and the Humber River, which are also heavily timbered.

Census population, 1996, was 551,792; estimate, July 1997, 563,641.

The capital of Newfoundland is the City of St John's (1991 population, 171,859, metropolitan area). The other cities are Mt Pearl (23,689) and Corner Brook

(22,410); important towns are Conception Bay South (17,590), Grand Falls-Windsor (14,693), Gander (10,339), Labrador City (9,061), Happy Valley-Goose Bay (8,610), Stephenville (7,621), Marystown (6,739), Channel-Port aux Basques (5,644), Bay Roberts (5,474), Carbonear (5,259).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social Statistics.

CLIMATE

The cool temperate climate is marked by heavy precipitation, distributed evenly over the year, a cool summer and frequent fogs in spring. St. John's, Jan. –4°C, July 15·8°C. Annual rainfall 1,240 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Until 1832 Newfoundland was ruled by the Governor under instructions of the Colonial Office. In that year a Legislature was brought into existence, but the Governor and his Executive Council were not responsible to it. Under the constitution of 1855, which lasted until its suspension in 1934, the government was administered by the Governor appointed by the Crown with an Executive Council responsible to the House of Assembly of 27 elected members, and a Legislative Council of 24 members nominated for life by the Governor in Council. Women were enfranchised in 1925. At the Imperial Conference of 1917 Newfoundland was constituted as a Dominion.

In 1933 the financial situation had become so critical that the Government of Newfoundland asked the Government of the UK to appoint a Royal Commission to investigate conditions. On the strength of their recommendations, the parliamentary form of government was suspended and Government by Commission was inaugurated on 16 Feb. 1934.

A National Convention, elected in 1946, made recommendations to H. M. Government in Great Britain in 1948 as to the possible forms of future government to be submitted to the people at a national referendum. Two referenda were held. In the first referendum (June 1948) the three forms of government submitted to the people were: Commission of government for 5 years; confederation with Canada; and responsible government as it existed in 1933. No one form of government received a clear majority of the votes polled, and commission of government, receiving the fewest votes, was eliminated. In the second referendum (July 1948) confederation with Canada received 78,408 and responsible government 71,464 votes.

In the Canadian Senate on 18 Feb. 1949 Royal assent was given to the terms of union of Newfoundland and Labrador with Canada, and on 23 March 1949, in the House of Lords, London, Royal assent was given to an amendment to the British North America Act, made necessary by the inclusion of Newfoundland and Labrador as the tenth Province of Canada.

Under the terms of union of Newfoundland and Labrador with Canada, which was signed at Ottawa on 11 Dec. 1948, the constitution of the Legislature of Newfoundland and Labrador as it existed immediately prior to 16 Feb. 1934 shall, subject to the terms of the British North America Acts, 1867 to 1946, continue as the constitution of the Legislature of the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador until altered under the authority of the said Acts.

The franchise was in 1965 extended to all male and female residents who have attained the age of 19 years and are otherwise qualified as electors.

The House of Assembly (Amendment) Act, 1979, established 52 electoral districts and 52 members of the Legislature.

The province is represented by 6 members in the Senate and by 7 members in the House of Commons of Canada.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 9 Feb. 1999. In March 1999 there were 32 Liberals, 14 Progressive Conservatives and 2 New Democrats.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Arthur Maxwell House (assumed office 5 Feb. 1997).

The Liberal Executive Council was, in March 1999, composed as follows:
Premier: Brian Tobin.

Development and Rural Renewal (Acting): John Efford. Education: Judy Foote. Environment and Labour: Oliver Langdon. Finance, and Justice and Attorney General: Paul Dicks. Fisheries and Aquaculture: John Efford. Forest Resources and Agrifoods: Kevin Aylward. Government Services and Lands: Ernest McLean. Health: Joan Aylward. Human Resources and Employment: Julie Bettney. Industry, Trade and Technology: Sandra Kelly. Mines and Energy: Roger Grimes. Municipal and Provincial Affairs: Lloyd Matthews. Tourism, Culture and Recreation: Charles Furey. Works, Services and Transportation: Rick Woodford.

Public debenture debt as at 31 March 1995 (estimate) was $5,623m.; sinking fund, $1,538m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. The electrical energy requirements of the province are met mainly by hydro-electric power, with petroleum fuels being utilized to provide the balance. The total amount of energy generated in the province in 1993 was 40,849,949 MWh, of which 96% was derived from hydro-electric facilities. The greater part of the energy produced in 1993 came from Churchill Falls, of which 29,942,214 MWh was sold to Hydro-Quebec under the terms of a long-term contract. Energy consumed in the province during 1993 totalled 10,907,775 MWh, with 9,251,443 MWh, or 85%, coming from hydro-electric facilities. At Dec. 1994 total electrical generating capacity in the province was 7,343 MW, with hydro-electric plants accounting for 6,601 MW, or 90%. It is estimated that potential additional hydro-electric generating capacity of up to 4·5m. kW can be developed at various sites in Labrador.

Oil and Gas. Since 1965, 140 wells have been drilled on the Continental Margin of the Province. Only the Hibernia discovery had commercial capability with production starting in the early 1990s. In Sept. 1990 the governments of Canada and Newfoundland and a development consortium signed an agreement to start developing the Hibernia discovery from Oct. 1990.

Minerals. The mineral resources are vast but only partially documented. Large deposits of iron ore, with an ore reserve of over 5,000m. tonnes at Labrador City, Wabush City and in the Knob Lake area are supplying approximately half of Canada's production. Other large deposits of iron ore are known to exist in the Julienne Lake area. There are a variety of other minerals being produced in more limited amounts. The Central Mineral Belt, which extends from the Smallwood Reservoir to the Atlantic coast near Makkovik, holds uranium, copper, beryllium and molybdenite potential.

There is a gold mine at Hope Brook on the south coast, east of Port aux Basques.

In 1994 a rich nickel, copper and cobalt discovery was made at Voisey's Bay, Labrador, with defined reserves of 31·7m. tonnes. Production in 1994 (preliminary): Iron ore, 20·9m. tonnes ($747,038,000); gold, 2,799,360 grammes ($47,219,000); sand and gravel, 3,128,000 tonnes ($14,202,000); stone ($5,939,000); cement, 56,882 tonnes ($7,395,000); dolomite, 267,145 tonnes ($2,885,000).

Agriculture. The estimated value of agricultural products sold, including livestock, 1994, was $62·2m. In 1996, 573 census farms reported total gross farm receipts of $2,500 or more.

Forestry. The forestry economy in the province is mainly dependent on the operation of 3 newsprint mills. In 1994 the gross value of newsprint exported from these 3 mills totalled $472m. Lumber mills and saw-log operations produced 57m. flat bd ft in 1994–95.

Fisheries. The principal fish landings are cod, flounder, redfish, Queen crabs, lobster, salmon and herring. In 1994 (preliminary) a yearly average of some 2,800 persons were employed by the fish-processing industry, and there were 22,045 licensed full-, part-time and casual fishermen engaged in harvesting operations. 207 processing operations were licensed in 1994. The production of fresh and frozen fish products was $490m. in 1994.

The total catch in 1993 was 245,942 tonnes valued at $197,125,873, including (in tonnes): Cod, 37,177 ($24,771,725); flounder and sole, 22,128 ($8,863,274); herring, 21,355 ($3,012,684); redfish, 26,284 ($7,253,497); capelin, 48,469 ($19,298,947); crab, 23,160 ($32,058,472); other, 41,612 ($31,499,911).

INDUSTRY

The total value of manufacturing shipments in 1993 was $1,324m. This consists largely of first-stage processing of primary resource products, with two of the largest components being paper and fish products.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 235,500 (102,900 females), of whom 189,700 (85,600) were employed.

Trade Unions. There were 35 unions in 1993 representing 75,627 members of international and national unions, and government employee associations.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1993 there were 8,895 km of roads, of which 6,356 were paved. In 1994 there were 322,652 motor vehicles registered, including 216,760 passenger cars.

Rail. In 1993 the Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway operated 576 km of standard-gauge main railway track. The route runs from Sept-Iles, Quebec, to Shefferville, Quebec, with a branch at Ross Bay Junction to Wabush, Labrador. In 1995, 22m. tonnes of freight were carried.

Civil Aviation. The province is linked to the rest of Canada by regular air services provided by Air Canada, Canadian Airlines International, Quebecair and a number of smaller air carriers.

Shipping. At 21 Dec. 1995 there were 1,624 ships on register in Newfoundland. In 1993 Marine Atlantic provided a freight and passenger service all year round to the south of the island and during the ice-free season as far north as Nain. There is a year-round ferry from Port-aux-Basques to North Sydney, Nova Scotia; and seasonal ferries connect Argentia with North Sydney, and Lewisporte with Goosebay, Labrador.

Telecommunications. There were 430 post offices in 1995. Telephone access lines numbered 262,856 in 1993 (193,987 private). There were 3,384 public pay phones.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1996, 33,828 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 7 homicides.

Education. The number of schools in 1994–95 was 479. The enrolment was 114,010; full-time teachers numbered 7,331. The Memorial University, offering courses in arts, science, engineering, education, nursing and medicine, had 17,226 full- and part-time students in 1994 (calendar year). Total expenditure for education by the government in 1995–96 (estimate) was $716m.

NOVA SCOTIA

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Nova Scotia was visited by John and Sebastian Cabot in 1497-98. In 1605 a number of French colonists settled at Port Royal. The old name of the colony, Acadia, was changed in 1621 to Nova Scotia. The French were granted possession of the colony by the Treaty of St-Germain-en-Laye (1632). In 1654 Oliver Cromwell sent a force to occupy the settlement. Charles II, by the Treaty of Breda (1667), restored Nova Scotia to the French. It was finally ceded to the British by the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713. In the Treaty of Paris (1763) France resigned all claims and in 1820 Cape Breton Island united with Nova Scotia. Representative government was granted as early as 1758 and a fully responsible legislative assembly was established in 1848. In 1867 the province entered the dominion of Canada.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the province is 21,425 sq. miles (55,000 sq. km), of which 20,401 sq. miles are land area, 1,024 sq. miles water area. The population (census 1996) was 909,282; estimate (Oct. 1998) 937,000.

Population of the principal cities (census 1996): Halifax, 113,910; Dartmouth, 65,629. Principal towns (census 1996): Bedford, 13,638; Truro, 11,938; New Glasgow, 9,812; Amherst, 9,669; Yarmouth, 7,568; Bridgewater, 7,351; Kentville, 5,551.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social Statistics.

CLIMATE

A cool temperate climate, with rainfall occurring evenly over the year. The Gulf Stream moderates the temperatures in winter so that ports remain ice-free. Halifax, Jan. 23·7°F (–4·6°C), July 63·5°F (17·5°C). Annual rainfall 54" (1,371 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the British North America Act of 1867 the legislature of Nova Scotia may exclusively make laws in relation to local matters, including direct taxation within the province, education and the administration of justice. The legislature of Nova Scotia consists of a Lieut.-Governor, appointed and paid by the federal government, and holding office for 5 years, and a House of Assembly of 52 members, chosen by popular vote at least every 5 years. The province is represented in the Canadian Senate by 10 members, and in the House of Commons by 11.

The franchise and eligibility to the legislature are granted to every person, male or female, if of age (19 years), a British subject or Canadian citizen, and a resident in the province for 1 year and 2 months before the date of the writ of election in the county or electoral district of which the polling district forms part, and if not by law otherwise disqualified.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the provincial elections of 24 March 1998, Premier Russell MacLellan's Liberals won 19 seats (35·3% of the vote), the New Democratic Party 19 seats (34·7%), and the Progressive Conservatives 14 (29·7%). Turn-out was 69·2%. State of the parties in Dec. 1998: 19 Liberals, 13 Progressive Conservatives, 19 New Democrats and 1 Independent.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: John James Kinley.

The members of the Liberal Ministry were as follows in Jan. 1999:

Local Government. In 1995 the new Cape Breton Regional Municipality was formed to amalgamate the former City of Sydney, the rural municipality of Cape Breton and 6 towns within the county. On 1 April 1996 a new Regional Municipality of Halifax incorporated the cities of Halifax and Dartmouth, the town of Bedford and the rural municipality of Halifax County. The other main divisions of the province for governmental purposes are 32 towns and 22 rural municipalities, each governed by a council and a mayor or warden. The cities have independent charters; and the various towns take their powers from and are limited by The Towns Act, while the various municipalities take their powers from and are limited by The Municipal Act as revised in 1967. The majority of municipalities comprise 1 county, but 6 counties are divided into 2 municipalities each. In no case do the boundaries of any municipality overlap county lines. The 18 counties as such have no administrative function.

Any incorporated town (of which there are 32) that lies within the boundaries of a municipality is excluded from any jurisdiction by the municipal council and has its own government.

ECONOMY

Performance. GDP (factor cost) was $16,495m. in 1997, an increase of just under 2% on 1996.

Budget. Revenue, expenditure and debt (in $1,000) for fiscal years ending 31 March:

	1996-97[1]	1997-98[2]	1998-99[3]

[1]Actual. [2]Estimate. [3]Forecast.

Banking and Finance. Revenue is derived from provincial sources, payments from the federal government under the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Established Programs Financing Act. Recoveries consist generally of amounts received under various federal cost-shared programmes. Main sources of provincial revenues include income and sales taxes.

In the fourth quarter of 1995 total deposits with chartered banks totalled $7,951m.

Weights and Measures. The metric system was officially adopted in 1983, but measurement in the imperial system is still widespread.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In 1997, production was 10,175,370 kWh, of which 88% came from thermal sources and the rest from hydroelectric, wind and tidal sources.

Oil and Gas. Significant finds of offshore natural gas are currently under development. A gas pipeline to serve markets in Canada and the USA is scheduled for completion in late 1999.

Minerals. Principal minerals in 1997 were: Coal, 2·6m. tonnes, valued at $152m.; gypsum, 6·9m. tonnes, valued at $73·7m.; sand and gravel, 4·2m. tonnes, valued at $16·1m. Total value of mineral production in 1997 was $487·7m.

Agriculture. Dairying, poultry and egg production, livestock and fruit growing are the most important branches. Farm cash receipts for 1997 were estimated at $374·2m., with an additional $4·3m. going to persons on farms as income in kind. Cash receipts from sale of dairy products were $86·3m., with total milk and cream sales of 171,689,000 litres. The production of poultry meat in 1997 was 30,904 tonnes, of which 27,555 tonnes were chickens and 3,349 tonnes were turkeys. Egg production was 16·8m. dozen.

The main 1997 fruit crops were apples, 45,042 tonnes; blueberries, 10,385 tonnes; strawberries, 1,721 tonnes.

Forestry. The estimated forest area of Nova Scotia is 15,830 sq. miles (40,990 sq. km), of which about 28% is owned by the province. The principal trees are spruce, balsam fir, hemlock, pine, larch, birch, oak, maple, poplar and ash. 6,568,223 cu. metres of roundforest products were produced in 1997.

Fisheries. The fisheries of the province in 1997 had a landed value of $479m. of sea fish; including scallop fishery, $66·4m., and lobster fishery, $206·1m. In 1997 there were 8,700 employees in the fish-processing industry; the value of shipment of goods was $804m.

INDUSTRY

The number of manufacturing establishments was 748 in 1996; the number of employees was 34,402; wages and salaries, $1,110m. The value of shipments in 1996 was $6,894·4m., and the leading industries were food, paper and allied products, and beverage production.

Labour. In 1997 the labour force was 446,600 (205,400 females), of whom 391,900 (183,000) were employed.

Trade Unions. Total union membership in 1997 was 102,352, belonging to 78 unions comprised of 653 individual locals. The largest union membership was in the service sector, followed by public administration and defence.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Total of imports and exports to and from Nova Scotia (in $1m.):

	1995	1996	1997
Imports	4,130	3,932	5,218
Exports	2,977	3,117	3,160

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1997 there were 26,000 km of highways, of which 13,600 km were paved. The Trans Canada and 100 series highways are limited access, all-weather, rapid transit routes. The province's first toll road opened in Dec. 1997. Acadian Lines provides a bus link to most major communities in the province and there are also a number of regional and local bus services. In the fiscal year 1996–97, vehicle registrations numbered 363,534 passenger cars and 169,746 trucks and truck tractors. Over 550,000 persons had road motor vehicle operators licences.

Rail. The province has a 700 km network of mainline track operated predominantly by Canadian National Railways. The Cape Breton and Central Nova Scotia Railway operates between Truro and Cape Breton Island. The Windsor and Hantsport Railway operates in the Annapolis Valley region. VIA Rail operates the Ocean for 6 days a week, a transcontinental service between Halifax and Montreal.

Civil Aviation. There is direct air service to all major Canadian points, and international scheduled services to Boston, New York, Bermuda, London, Glasgow and Amsterdam. There are winter charter services to Florida and the Caribbean. In 1997, airlines providing national and international service from the major airports included Air Canada, Canadian Airlines International, Icelandair, Air Nova, Air Atlantic, Air St Pierre and Business Express. Charter air service is provided by Canada 3000, Air Transat, Royal Airlines, Air Europa and Can Air. Halifax International Airport is the largest airport, and there are also major airports at Yarmouth and Sydney.

Shipping. Ferry services connect Nova Scotia to the provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick as well as to the USA. The deep-water Port of Halifax handles about 14m. tonnes of cargo annually. Direct container service is provided to the USA, Europe, Asia, Australia/New Zealand and the Caribbean. There are numerous smaller ports.

Telecommunications. In 1996 there were 565,874 access lines (372,794 residential and 193,080 business). There were 59·8 access lines per 100 population and 98·3% of households had telephones.

Postal Services. The postal service is provided by the Federal Crown Corporation Canada Post.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court (Trial Division and Appeal Division) is the superior court of Nova Scotia and has original and appellate jurisdiction in all civil and criminal matters unless they have been specifically assigned to another court by Statute. An appeal from the Supreme Court, Appeal Division, is to the Supreme Court of Canada. The other courts in the Province are the Provincial Court, which hears criminal matters only, the Small Claims Court, which has limited monetary jurisdiction, Probate Court, County Court, which has jurisdiction in criminal matters as well as original jurisdiction over actions not exceeding $50,000, and Family Court. Young offenders are tried in the Family Court or the Provincial Court.

For the year ending 31 March 1997 there were 3,932 adult admissions to provincial custody; of these, 2,113 were sentenced. In 1997, 80,848 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 24 homicides.

Religion. The population is predominantly Christian. In 1991, 37·2% were Roman Catholic, 17·2% were United Church, 14·4% Anglicans, 11·1% Baptist and 3·5% Presbyterian.

Education. Public education in Nova Scotia is free, compulsory and undenominational through elementary and high school. Attendance is compulsory to the age of 16.

There were 522 elementary-secondary public schools, with 9,333 full-time teachers and 169,194 pupils, in 1997–98, plus the Nova Scotia Youth Centres for young offenders in Shelburne and in Waterville; and the Nova Scotia Youth Training Centre in Truro for mentally handicapped children. The province has 12 degree-granting institutions, of which the largest is Dalhousie University in Halifax. The Nova Scotia Agricultural College is located at Truro. The Technical University of Nova Scotia at Halifax grants degrees in engineering and architecture. Through the Nova Scotia Community College, the Department of Education administers 19 college campuses, including 2 adult vocational training centres, 2 institutes of technology, a nautical institute, plus the College de l'Acadie, the French component of the Nova Scotia Community College. There are also 7 teaching hospitals.

The Nova Scotia government offers financial support and organizational assistance to local school boards for provision of weekend and evening courses in academic and vocational subjects, and citizenship for new Canadians. It also provides local authorities with specialist support services to assist them in providing community workshops, and it operates a correspondence study service for children and adults.

Health. A provincial retail sales tax of 8% provides funds for free hospital in-patient care up to ward level and free medically required services of physicians. Health service programmes in the province are administered by the Department of Health and operated in conjunction with Maritime Medical Care Inc. Prescription service is available to those over 65 years for a minimum fee. The Queen Elizabeth II Hospital in Halifax is the overall referral hospital for the province and, in many instances, for the Atlantic region. The Izaak Walton Killam Hospital provides similar regional specialization for children.

Welfare. General and specialized welfare services in the province are under the jurisdiction of the Department of Community Services. The provincial government funds all of the costs. The Family Benefit Act provides financial assistance to individuals or families in need where the cause of need is likely to be of a prolonged nature. Qualifying groups include the aged, disabled, unemployable, foster parents and disabled parents.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1996 there were 12 business organizations with licences for stations. There were 5 television stations, 16 AM radio stations and 8 FM radio stations. There were a further 85 operating cable television systems with 243,683 subscribers.

Tourism. Tourism revenues exceeded $1bn. for the first time in 1997. This figure translated into employment for 33,000 with a payroll of $400m.

ONTARIO

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The French explorer Samuel de Champlain explored the Ottawa River from 1613. The area was governed by the French, first under a joint stock company and then as a royal province, from 1627 and was ceded to Great Britain in 1763. A constitutional act of 1791 created there the province of Upper Canada, largely to accommodate loyalists of English descent who had immigrated after the United States war of independence. Upper Canada entered the Confederation as Ontario in 1867.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 412,580 sq. miles (1,068,580 sq. km), of which some 344,100 sq. miles (891,190 sq. km) are land area and some 68,480 sq. miles (177,390 sq. km) are lakes and fresh water rivers. The province extends 1,050 miles (1,690 km) from east to west and 1,075 miles (1,730 km) from north to south. It is bounded in the north by the Hudson and James Bays, in the east by Quebec, in the west by Manitoba, and in the south by the USA, the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence Seaway.

The census population, 1996, was 10,753,573; estimate, July 1998, 11,404,750. Population of the principal cities (1996 census):

Toronto[1]	653,734	Windsor	197,694	Thunder Bay	113,662

There are over 1m. French-speaking people and 0·25m. native Indians. An agreement with the Ontario government of Aug. 1991 recognized Indians' right to self-government.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social Statistics.

CLIMATE

A temperate continental climate, but conditions can be quite severe in winter, though proximity to the Great Lakes has a moderating influence on temperatures. Ottawa, Jan. −10·8°C, July 20·8°C. Annual rainfall (including snow) 911 mm. Toronto, Jan. −4·5°C, July 22·1°C. Annual rainfall (including snow) 818 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The provincial government is administered by a Lieut.-Governor, a cabinet and a single-chamber 130-member Legislative Assembly elected by a general franchise for a period of no longer than 5 years. The minimum voting age is 18 years.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections on 8 June 1995 to the Legislative Assembly, the Progressive Conservative Party won 82 seats (20 in 1990), the Liberal Party, 31 (36), the New Democratic Party (NDP), 16 (74) and Independents, 1. At 3 by-elections on 4 Sept. 1997, the Liberals won 2 seats and the NDP won 1 seat. At 1 by-election on 1 Oct. 1998, the Liberals won 1 seat. 1 Liberal member joined the NDP. The Party standings are currently: Progressive Conservative Party, 82; Liberals, 30; NDP, 17; Independents, 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Right Hon. Hilary Weston (b. 1942; appointed Dec. 1996).

In Feb. 1999 the Executive Council comprised:

Premier and President of the Council: Michael Harris.

Deputy Premier, Minister of Finance: Ernie Eves. Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs, Minister responsible for Francophone Affairs: Noble Villeneuve. Consumer and Commercial Relations: David Tsubouchi. Environment and Government House Leader: Norman Sterling. Correctional Services and Solicitor-General: Robert Runciman. Education and Training: David Johnson. Attorney-General, Minister responsible for Native Affairs: Charles Harnick. Energy, Science and Technology: Jim Wilson. Northern Development and Mines, Chair of the Management Board of Cabinet: Chris Hodgson. Health: Elizabeth Witmer. Intergovernmental Affairs, Minister responsible for Women's Issues: Dianne Cunningham. Natural Resources: John Snobelen. Economic Development, Trade and Tourism: Al Palladini. Community and Social Services: Janet Ecker. Transportation: Tony Clement. Labour: James Flaherty. Long-Term Care (responsible for Seniors): Cameron Jackson. Municipal Affairs and Housing: Allan Leach. Citizenship, Culture and Recreation: Isabel Bassett. Ministers without portfolio: Rob Sampson (responsible for Privatization); Margaret Marland (responsible for Children); David Turnbull (Chief Government Whip).

Local Government. There are 2 levels of municipal government in the southern, settled part of Ontario. The upper level consists of 23 counties plus 10 regional municipalities, 1 district municipality and 1 restructured county. In addition, there are 5 single-tier governments. As of 1 Jan. 1998, metropolitan Toronto and its area municipalities became the City of Toronto, a single-tier municipality. The local level comprises more than 600 cities, towns and townships. Cities with one exception in the traditional county system function independently of the county in which they lie, as do 4 towns and 1 township which have been separated for municipal purposes. There are no separated municipal units in regional governments.

Ontario's local municipalities are governed by councils elected by popular vote.

Lower-tier municipal councils are composed of a head of council (mayor or reeve) and councillors. In the case of regional municipalities, one or more regional councillors represent the area municipalities on the regional council. Niagara and Ottawa-Carleton have their own directly elected upper-level councils. Waterloo, Hamilton-Wentworth, Ottawa-Carleton and Sudbury have directly elected regional chairs.

County councils are federations. A county council consists of at least 1 representative of each local municipality. The head of the county council is the warden, who is elected by the council from among its own members.

A regional council may include the heads of council of the local municipalities, as well as a varying number of regional councillors, who are elected on the basis of representation, either directly or indirectly.

No municipality may incur long-term debts over a reasonable level without the sanction of the tribunal created by the Provincial Legislature and known as the Ontario Municipal Board. Debenture obligations incurred by municipalities for utility undertakings are discharged out of revenues derived from the sale of utility services and do not fall upon the general property tax rate.

Municipal councils have no jurisdiction for education beyond the collection of taxes for school purposes. Responsibility for providing, operating and maintaining school facilities, and for the supply of teachers, rests with elected local education authorities known as Boards of Education or School Boards. These Boards are now generally organized on a large regional basis.

Municipal institutions come under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing. One of the principal functions of the Ministry is to ensure municipalities have the legislative authority to respond to local needs and offer management and administrative support along with financial assistance to Ontario's 586 municipalities. Educational support and guidance at the provincial level is the responsibility of the Ministry of Education and Training, which deals with the training of teachers and the formulation of curriculum.

There are areas in the north where there is little or no settlement of population. Administration of such areas, for the most part, remains in the hands of the Provincial Government. Where there are municipalities in the north they are single lower tier, with the exception of the regional municipality of Sudbury.

ECONOMY

Banking and Finance. Provincial revenue and expenditure (in $1m.) for years ending 31 March:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Gross revenue	43,674	46,039	49,473	49,450	52,488
Gross expenditure	54,876	56,168	58,273	56,355	56,454

Direct employment in the mining industry was 18,500 in 1997.

Agriculture. In 1996, 67,118 census farms operated on 5,617,059 ha, with total farm receipts of $7·78bn.

Forestry. In 1996 the total area of productive forest was 60·9m. ha, of which the inventoried area was 40·3m. ha, comprising: Softwoods, 27·1m. ha; hardwoods, 13·1m. ha. The growing stock equals 5·34m. cu. metres.

INDUSTRY

Ontario is Canada's most industrialized province, with GDP in 1997 at $346,871m., or 40·6% of the Canadian total. Manufacturing accounts for 23·6% of Ontario's GDP.

Leading manufacturing industries include: Motor vehicles and parts; office and industrial electrical equipment; food processing; chemicals; and steel.

In 1997 Ontario was responsible for about 52% ($154,442m.) of Canada's merchandise exports; motor vehicles and parts accounted for about 45·1%.

Labour. In 1997 the labour force was 5,914,900 (2,692,700 females), of whom 5,412,900 (2,450,200) were employed. Total labour income was $185,099m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. There were, in 1998, 159,456 km of roads (municipal, 143,000; provincial MTO, 16,456). Motor licences (on the road) numbered (1997) 8,324,830, of which 5,222,698 were passenger cars, 1,127,015 commercial vehicles, 27,293 buses, 1,490,377 trailers, 94,886 motor cycles and 362,561 snow vehicles.

Rail. In 1998 there were 14 provincial short lines plus the provincially owned Ontario Northland Railway and 12 federal railways. The Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways operate in Ontario. Total track miles, approximately 12,500 km. There is a metro and tramway network in Toronto.

Telecommunications. The telephone service in 1998 was provided by 30 independent systems and Bell Canada.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1996, 893,824 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 174 homicides.

Education. There is a provincial system of publicly financed elementary and secondary schools as well as private schools. In 1997–98 publicly financed elementary and secondary schools had a total enrolment of 2,103,586 pupils.

There are 18 universities (Brock, Carleton, Dominicain, Guelph, Lakehead, Laurentian, McMaster, Nipissing, Ottawa, Queen's, Ryerson, Toronto, Trent, Waterloo, Western Ontario, Wilfred Laurier, Windsor and York) and 1 institute of equivalent status (Ontario College of Art and Design) with full-time enrolment for 1997–98 of 226,886. All receive operating grants from the Ontario government. There are also 25 publicly financed Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology (CAAT), with a full-time enrolment of 136,170 in 1997–98.

Operating expense (including capital expense) by the Ontario government on education for 1997–98 was $9,470m.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first recorded European visit was by Jacques Cartier in 1534, who named it Isle St-Jean. In 1719 it was settled by the French, but was taken from them by the English in 1758, annexed to Nova Scotia in 1763, and constituted a separate colony in 1769. Named Prince Edward Island in honour of Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, in 1799, it joined the Canadian Confederation on 1 July 1873.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The province lies in the Gulf of St Lawrence, and is separated from the mainland of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia by Northumberland Strait. The area of the island is 2,185 sq. miles (5,660 sq. km). Total population (census, 1996), 134,557; estimate, July 1997, 137,244. Population of the principal cities (1991): Charlottetown (capital), 15,396; Summerside, 7,474.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social Statistics.

CLIMATE

The cool temperate climate is affected in winter by the freezing of the St. Lawrence, which reduces winter temperatures. Charlottetown, Jan. 3·4°C, July 23°C. Annual rainfall 869 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The provincial government is administered by a Lieut.-Governor-in-Council (Cabinet) and a Legislative Assembly of 27 members who are elected for up to 5 years.

RECENT ELECTIONS

As of Dec. 5 1997 parties in the Legislative Assembly were: Progressive Conservatives, 18; Liberals, 8; Island New Democrats, 1.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Gilbert R. Clements (sworn in 30 Aug. 1995).

The Executive Council was composed as follows in Jan. 1999:

Premier and President of the Executive Council, Minister Responsible for Intergovernmental Affairs: Patrick G. Binns.

Agriculture and Forestry: J. Eric Hammill. Community Services and Attorney-General: J. Weston MacAleer. Development: Donald G. MacKinnon. Education: J. Chester Gillan. Fisheries and Tourism: Kevin J. MacAdam. Health and Social Services: Mildred A. Dover. Provincial Treasurer: Patricia J. Mella. Technology and Environment: P. Mitchell Murphy. Transportation and Public Works: Michael F. Currie.

Local Government. The Municipalities Act provides for the incorporation of Towns and Communities. The City of Charlottetown, the Town of Cornwall and the Town of Stratford are incorporated under the Charlottetown Area Municipalities Act. The City of Summerside is incorporated under the City of Summerside Act.

ECONOMY

Banking and Finance. Revenue and expenditure (in Canadian $1,000) for 5 financial years ending 31 March:

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Revenue	676,028	738,855	812,461	802,579	801,143
Expenditure	793,328	810,199	821,422	797,937	818,747

Per capita personal income was $18,708 in 1996.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In 1996, Prince Edward Island received 73,867 MWh of electricity from other provinces via an underwater cable which spans the Northumberland Strait. Net generation on Prince Edward Island was 483 MWh.

Agriculture. Total area of farmland occupies approximately half of the total land area of 566,177 ha. Farm cash receipts in 1996 were $294m., with cash receipts from potatoes accounting for about 50% of the total. Cash receipts from dairy products, cattle and hogs followed in importance. For particulars of agricultural production and livestock, see CANADA: Agriculture.

Forestry. Forests cover some 280,000 ha. or 48·6% of Prince Edward Island. In 1996 the forest produced 557,000 cu. metres of products, with the commercial softwood component being 379,000 cu. metres. Sawlogs accounted for 65·2% of the commercial softwood harvest, with pulpwood the other component. 70% of the sawlogs were processed on Prince Edward Island. The pulpwood shipments were to Quebec (40%), Newfoundland (26%), New Brunswick (20%), Nova Scotia (9%) and a small quantity was exported internationally. The rest of the forest products were primarily firewood (144,000 cu. metres) and wood chips for energy.

Fisheries. The total catch of 107m. lbs in 1996 had a landed value of $118m. Lobsters accounted for $79m., over two-thirds of the total value; other shellfish, $32m.; pelagic and estuarial, $5·2m.; groundfish, $0·8m.; seaplants, $1·7m.

INDUSTRY

Value of manufacturing shipments for all industries in 1996 was $641·6m.

In 1996, provincial GDP in constant prices for manufacturing was $166·0m.; construction, $133·0m. In 1996 the total value of retail trade was $956·0m.

Labour. The average weekly wage (industrial aggregate) rose from $466·91 in 1995 to $491·04 in 1996. The labour force averaged 70,400 in 1995, while employment averaged 60,100.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. At the end of 1995 there were 5,308 km of road, including 3,806 km of paved highway. A bus service operates twice daily to the mainland.

Civil Aviation. In 1998 Air Canada provided daily services between Charlottetown and Boston, Fredericton, Halifax and Toronto. Canadian Airlines International operated daily sevices to Boston and Halifax, and there were also services to Moncton, Montreal and St John.

Shipping. Modern car ferries link the Island to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Service is provided year-round to New Brunswick on schedules which vary from 14 to 20 return crossings daily, with ice-breaking ferries maintaining the service during the winter months. Ferry service is operated to Nova Scotia from late April to mid-Dec. on schedules ranging from 9 to 19 return crossings daily. A third ferry service, to the Magdalen Islands (Quebec), operates from 1 April to 31 Jan. There is also a substantial water movement of certain commodities, primarily through the ports of Summerside and Charlottetown.

Telecommunications. At the end of 1995 there were 83,104 telephone lines in service.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1996, 10,247 Criminal Code offences were reported, including no homicides.

Education. Under the regional school boards there were in 1995-96 a total of 65 public schools, 1,434 teaching positions and 24,422 students. There is one undergraduate university (2,401 full-time and 7,477 part-time students), a veterinary college (197 students), and a Master of Science programme (25 students), all in Charlottetown. Holland College provides training for employment in business, applied arts and technology, with approximately 2,300 full-time students in post-secondary and vocational career programmes. The college offers extensive academic and career preparation programmes for adults.

Government expenditure on education, 1994–95, $174·7m.

CULTURE

Tourism. The value of the tourist industry was estimated at $150·8m. in 1996, with 298,693 tourist parties.

QUEBEC—QUÉBEC

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Quebec was known as New France from 1534 to 1763; as the province of Quebec from 1763 to 1790; as Lower Canada from 1791 to 1846; as Canada East from 1846 to 1867, and when, by the union of the four original provinces, the Confederation of the Dominion of Canada was formed, it again became known as the province of Quebec (Québec).

The Quebec Act, passed by the British Parliament in 1774, guaranteed to the people of the newly conquered French territory in North America security in their religion and language, their customs and tenures, under their own civil laws.

In a referendum on 20 May 1980, 59·5% voted against 'separatism'. At a further referendum on 30 Oct. 1995, 50·6% of votes cast were against Quebec becoming 'sovereign in a new economic and political partnership' with Canada. The electorate was 5m.; turn-out was 93%.

On 20 Aug. 1998 Canada's supreme court ruled that Quebec was prohibited by both the constitution and international law from seceding unilaterally from the rest of the country, but that a clear majority in a referendum would impose a duty on the Canadian government to negotiate. Both sides claimed victory.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of Quebec (as amended by the Labrador Boundary Award) is 1,667,926 sq. km (594,860 sq. miles), of which 1,315,134 sq. km is land area and 352,792 sq. km water. Of this extent, 911,106 sq. km represent the Territory of Ungava, annexed in 1912 under the Quebec Boundaries Extension Act. The population (census 1996) was 7,138,795; estimate, July 1997, 7,419,890.

Principal cities: (1991 census populations): Quebec (capital), 167,517; Montreal, 1,017,666; Laval, 314,398; Longueuil, 129,874; Montreal North, 85,516; Sherbrooke, 76,429; Saint-Hubert, 74,027; LaSalle, 73,804; Sainte-Foy, 73,133; Saint-Laurent, 72,402, Charlesbourg, 70,788; Beauport, 69,158; Chicoutimi, 62,670; Verdun, 61,307; Hull, 60,707; Jonquière, 57,933.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social statistics.

CLIMATE

Cool temperate in the south, but conditions are more extreme towards the north. Winters are severe and snowfall considerable, but summer temperatures are quite warm. Quebec, Jan. –12·5°C, July 19·1°C. Annual rainfall 1,123 mm. Montreal, Jan. –10·7°C, July 20·2°C. Annual rainfall 936 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

There is a Legislative Assembly consisting of 125 members, elected in 125 electoral districts for 4 years.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 30 Nov. 1998, the Parti Québécois won 75 seats with 42·7% of votes cast, the Liberal Party 48 with 43·7%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: The Hon. Lise Thibault.

ECONOMY

Budget. Ordinary revenue and expenditure (in Canadian $1,000) for fiscal years ending 31 March:

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Revenue	34,457,600	35,445,600	36,056,000	36,437,000	38,254,000
Expenditure	38,649,000	40,377,000	40,953,000	42,236,000	42,220,000

The total net debt at 31 March 1996 was $60,842m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Water power is one of the most important natural resources of Quebec. Its turbine installation represents about 40% of the aggregate of Canada. At the end of 1994 the installed generating capacity was 38,909 MW. Production, 1994, was 193,000 GWh.

Minerals. For 1995 the value of mineral production (metal only) was $2,158,132,564. Chief minerals: Iron ore (confidential); copper, $458,756,897; gold, $681,547,351; zinc, $242,782,635.

Non-metallic minerals produced include: Asbestos ($233,747,031; about 97% of Canadian production), titanium-dioxide (confidential), industrial lime, dolomite and brucite, quartz and pyrite. Among the building materials produced were: Stone, $197,833,920; cement, $172,687,663; sand and gravel, $82,735,967; lime (confidential).

Agriculture. In 1995 the agricultural area was 3,445,000 ha. The yield of the principal crops was (1995 in 1,000 tonnes):

Crops	Yield	Crops	Yield
Tame hay	5,800	Fodder corn	760
Oats for grain	173	Corn for grain	2,000
Potatoes	429	Barley	350
Mixed grains	92	Buckwheat	88

About 38,000 farms were operating in 1995. Cash receipts, 1995, $4,382m. (dairy products, 31·9%; livestock, 30·1%; crops, 26·3%; poultry and eggs, 10·8%). In 1996, 33,906 census farms reported total gross farm receipts of $2,500 or more.

Forestry. Forests cover an area of 757,900 sq. km. 516,601 sq. km are classified as productive forests, of which 447,541 sq. km are provincial forest land and 65,991 sq. km are privately owned. Quebec leads the Canadian provinces in pulp and paper production, having nearly half of the Canadian estimated total.

In 1995 production of lumber was: Softwood and hardwood, 13,688,000 cu. metres; pulp and paper, 9,097,000 tonnes.

Fisheries. The principal fish are cod, herring, red fish, lobster and salmon. Total catch of sea fish, 1996, 47,070 tonnes, valued at $122,747m.

INDUSTRY

In 1994 there were 10,164 industrial establishments in the province; employees, 461,056; salaries and wages, $15,717·9m.; cost of materials, $51,774·34m.; value of shipments, $94,458·3m. Among the leading industries are petroleum refining, pulp and paper mills, smelting and refining, dairy products, slaughtering and meat processing, motor vehicle manufacturing, women's clothing, sawmills and planing mills, iron and steel mills, commercial printing.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 3,642,500 (1,614,000 females), of whom 3,212,600 (1,434,000) were employed.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. In 1996 the value of Canadian exports through Quebec custom ports was $34,417·72m.; value of imports, $27,583·15m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1995 there were 28,898 km of roads and 4,275,429 registered motor vehicles.

Rail. There were (1996) 6,570 km of railway. There is a metro system in Montreal (64 km).

Civil Aviation. There are 2 international airports, Dorval (Montreal) and Mirabel (Montreal).

Telecommunications. Telephones numbered 4·1m. in 1994.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1996, 510,375 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 143 homicides.

Education. Education is compulsory for children aged 6-16. Pre-school education and elementary and secondary training are free in some 2,670 public schools, which were managed by 156 school boards (135 Catholic, 18 Protestant and 3 serving mainly Native students) in 1996–97. Instruction is given in French only in 100 school boards, in French and English in 46, in English only in 7, and in French, English and aboriginal languages in 3. Just under 10% of the student population attends private schools: In 1996–97, 286 establishments were authorized to provide pre-school, elementary and secondary education. After 6 years of elementary and 5 years of secondary school education, students enter Cegeps, a post-secondary educational institution. In 1996–97, college, pre-university and technical training for young and adult students was provided by 47 Cegeps, 11 government schools and 70 private establishments.

In 1994–95, in pre-kindergartens, there were 14,023 pupils; in kindergartens, 89,912; in primary schools, 547,395; in secondary schools, 498,105; in colleges (post-secondary, non-university), 180,977; and in classes for children with special needs, 134,621. The school boards had a total of 65,541 teachers.

Expenditure of the Departments of Education for 1995–96, $9,176·41m. net. This included $1,709·01m. for universities, $5,329·95m. for public primary and secondary schools, $302·57m. for private primary and secondary schools and $1,190·99m. for colleges.

In 1994–95 the province had 10 universities: 3 English-language universities, McGill (Montreal, founded 1821), Bishop (Lennoxville, founded 1845) and the Concordia University (Montreal, granted a charter 1975); 6 French-language universities: Laval (Quebec, founded 1852), Montreal University (opened 1876 as a branch of Laval, independent 1920), Sherbrooke University (founded 1954), University of Quebec (founded 1968) and 2 others; 1 French- and English-language university. In 1994 there were 134,933 full-time university students and 109,792 part-time students.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1994 there were 29 television and 171 radio stations.

Press. In 1996 there were 11 French- and 2 English-language daily newspapers.

SASKATCHEWAN

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Saskatchewan derives its name from its major river system, which the Cree Indians called 'Kis-is-ska-tche-wan', meaning 'swift flowing'. It officially became a province when it joined the Confederation on 1 Sept. 1905.

In 1670 King Charles II granted to Prince Rupert and his friends a charter covering exclusive trading rights in 'all the land drained by streams finding their outlet in the Hudson Bay'. This included what is now Saskatchewan. The trading company was first known as The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England; later as the Hudson's Bay Company. In 1869 the Northwest Territories was formed, and this included Saskatchewan. In 1882 the District of Saskatchewan was formed. By 1885 the North-West Mounted Police had been inaugurated, with headquarters in Regina (now the capital), and the Canadian Pacific Railway's transcontinental line had been completed, bringing a stream of immigrants to southern Saskatchewan. The Hudson's Bay Company surrendered its claim to territory in return for cash and land around the existing trading posts. Legislative government was introduced.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Saskatchewan is bounded in the west by Alberta, in the east by Manitoba, in the north by the Northwest Territories and in the south by the USA. The area of the province is 251,700 sq. miles (570,113 sq. km), of which 220,182 sq. miles is land area and 31,518 sq. miles is water. The population, 1996 census, was 990,237; estimate, July 1998, 1,025,595. Population of cities, 1996 census: Regina (capital), 180,400; Saskatoon, 193,647; Prince Albert, 34,777; Moose Jaw, 32,973; Yorkton, 15,154; Swift Current, 14,890; North Battleford, 14,051; Estevan, 10,752; Weyburn, 9,723; Lloydminster, 7,636; Melfort, 5,759; Melville, 4,646.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social Statistics.

CLIMATE

A cold continental climate, with severe winters and warm summers. Rainfall amounts are greatest from May to Aug. Regina, Jan. 0°F (–17·8°C), July 65°F (18·3°C). Annual rainfall 15" (373 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The provincial government is vested in a Lieut.-Governor, an Executive Council and a Legislative Assembly, elected for 5 years by universal suffrage.

RECENT ELECTIONS

State of parties in Jan. 1998: New Democratic Party, 42; Saskatchewan Party, 8; Liberal Party, 6; Independent, 3.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Lieut.-Governor: Jack Wiebe.

The New Democratic Party Ministry in Jan. 1999 comprised as follows:

Premier, President of the Executive Council: Roy Romanow, QC (b. 1939).

Deputy Premier, Minister of Crown Investment Corporation: Dwain Lingenfelter. Intergovernmental and Aboriginal Affairs, Provincial Secretary: Bernhard Wiens. Labour, Minister responsible for Women's Secretariat: Joanne Crofford. Economic and Co-operative Development, Minister responsible for Information Highway: Janice MacKinnon. Education: Clay Serby. Social Services, Minister responsible for Seniors and for Disabilities Directorate: Harry Van Mulligan. Energy and Mines: Eldon Lautermilch. Northern Affairs: Keith Goulet. Post-Secondary Education and Skills Training: Maynard Sonntag. Municipal Government: Carol Teichrob. Agriculture and Food: Eric Upshall. Finance: Eric Cline. Environment and Resource Management: Lorne Scott. Justice and Attorney General: John Nilson, QC. Health: Pat Atkinson. Highways and Transportation: Judy Bradley. Public Service Commission, Minister responsible for Gaming, for SPMC: Doreen Hamilton.

Local Government. The organization of a city requires a minimum population of 5,000 persons; that of a town, 500; that of a village, 100 people. No requirements as to population exist for the rural municipality. Cities, towns, villages and rural municipalities are governed by elected councils, which consist of a mayor and 6–20 aldermen in a city; a mayor and 6 councillors in a town; a mayor and 2 other members in a village; a reeve and a councillor for each division in a rural municipality (usually 6).

ECONOMY

Budget. Budget and net assets (years ending 31 March) in Canadian $1,000:

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Budgetary revenue	4,841,700	5,165,200	5,345,400	5,073,400
Budgetary expenditure	5,030,424	5,140,849	4,987,602	5,049,267

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Agriculture used to dominate the history and economics of Saskatchewan, but the 'prairie province' is now a rapidly developing mining and manufacturing area. It is a major supplier of oil, has the world's largest deposits of potash and the net value of its non-agricultural production accounted for (1997 estimate) 88·0% of the provincial economy.

Electricity. The Saskatchewan Power Corporation generated 16,383m. kWh in 1997.

Minerals. 1997 mineral sales were valued at $5,584m., including (in $1m.): Petroleum, 2,896·4; natural gas, 283·5; coal and others, 757·4; potash, 1,504·8; salt, 29·7; uranium (1996), 666·2; sodium sulphate, 31·9. Other major minerals included potassium sulphate, ammonium sulphate, bentonite, coal, gold and base metals.

Agriculture. Saskatchewan produces normally about two-thirds of Canada's wheat. Wheat production in 1997 (in 1,000 tonnes) was 12,236 from 16m. acres; oats, 1,743 from 2·3m. acres; barley, 4,180 from 4·0m. acres; rye, 156 from 0·23m. acres; canola, 3,175 from 6m. acres; flax, 686 from 1·4m. acres. Livestock (1 July 1998): Cattle and calves, 2·7m.; swine, 924,700; sheep and lambs, 79,500. Poultry in 1997: Chickens, 12·5m.; turkeys, 719,000. Cash income from the sale of farm products in 1997 was $5,902m. At the June 1996 census there were 56,995 farms in the province, each being a holding of 1 acre or more with sales of $250 or more during the previous year.

The South Saskatchewan River irrigation project, whose main feature is the Gardiner Dam, was completed in 1967. It will ultimately provide for an area of 0·2m. to 0·5m. acres of irrigated cultivation in Central Saskatchewan. As of 1997, 226,430 acres were intensively irrigated. Total irrigated land in the province, 322,091 acres.

Forestry. Half of Saskatchewan's area is forested, but only 115,000 sq. km are of commercial value at present. Forest products valued at $655m. were produced in 1997–98.

Fur Production. In 1996–97 wild fur production was estimated at $2,990,893 ($1,947,951 in 1995–96). Ranch-raised fur production amounted to $42,244 in 1996 and $44,834 in 1997.

Fisheries. The lakeside value of the 1996–97 commercial fish catch of 3·1m. kg was $4·1m.

INDUSTRY

In 1996 there were 800 manufacturing establishments, employing 16,998 persons. Manufacturing contributed $1,390·4m. and construction $1,512·2m. to total GDP at factor cost of $23,199·3m. in 1997.

Labour. In 1997 the labour force was 504,200 (224,600 females), of whom 474,200 (211,900) were employed.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1997 there were 25,477 km of provincial highways and 195,930 km of municipal roads (including prairie trails). Motor vehicles registered totalled (1996) 779,801. Bus services are provided by 2 major lines.

Rail. There were (1997) approximately 10,057 km of railway track.

Civil Aviation. There were 2 major airports, 176 airports and landing strips in 1997.

Telecommunications. There were 626,924 telephone network access services to the Saskatchewan Telecommunications system in 1997.

Postal Services. In 1996 there were 458 post offices (excluding sub-post offices).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. In 1996, 118,961 Criminal Code offences were reported, including 27 homicides.

Education. The Saskatchewan education system in 1997–98 consisted of 107 school divisions and 5 comprehensive school boards, of which 21 were Roman Catholic Separate School Divisions, serving 130,587 elementary pupils, 58,580 high-school students and 3,341 students enrolled in special classes. In addition, the Saskatchewan Institute of Applied Science and Technology (SIAST), established on 1 Jan. 1988, had 11,890 full-time and 34,255 part-time students in 1997–98. There are also 9 regional colleges with an enrolment of approximately 37,830 students in 1997–98.

The University of Saskatchewan was established at Saskatoon in 1907. In 1997–98 it had 14,849 full-time students, 3,565 part-time students and 967 full-time academic staff. The University of Regina was established in 1974; in 1997–98 it had 8,413 full-time and 3,169 part-time students and 317 full-time academic staff.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1997 there were 51 TV and re-broadcasting stations, and 33 AM and FM radio stations.

Tourism. An estimated 1·7m. out-of-province tourists spent $325m. in 1997.

THE NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Territory was developed by the Hudson's Bay Company and the North West Company (of Montreal) from the 17th century. The Canadian Government bought out the Hudson's Bay Company in 1869 and the Territory was annexed to Canada in 1870. The Arctic Islands lying north of the Canadian mainland were annexed to Canada in 1880.

A plebiscite held in March 1992 approved the division of the Northwest Territories into 2 separate territories. (For the new territory of Nunavut see CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT, below).

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The total area of the Territories is 3,426,320 sq. km, divided into 5 administrative regions: Fort Smith, Inuvik, Kitikmeot, Keewatin and Baffin. The population at the 1991 census was 57,649, 37% of whom were Inuit (Eskimo), 16% Dene (Indian) and 7% Metis. The population at the 1996 census was 64,402; estimate, July 1997, 67,528. The capital is Yellowknife, population (1991): 15,179. Other main centres (with population in 1991): Iqaluit (3,552), Hay River (3,206), Inuvik (3,206), Fort Smith (2,480), Rankin Inlet (1,706), Rae-Edzo (1,521) and Arviat (1,323).

CLIMATE

Conditions range from cold continental to polar, with long hard winters and short cool summers. Precipitation is low. Yellowknife, Jan. mean high −24·7°C, low −33°C; July mean high 20·7°C, low 11·8°C. Annual rainfall 26·7 cm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Northwest Territories comprises all that portion of Canada lying north of the 60th parallel of N. lat. except those portions within the Yukon Territory and the provinces of Quebec and Newfoundland. It also includes the islands in Hudson Bay, James Bay and Ungava Bay except those within the provinces of Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec.

The Northwest Territories is governed by a Premier, with a cabinet (the Executive Council) of 8 members including the Speaker, and a Legislative Assembly. The Assembly is composed of 24 members elected for a 4-year term of office. A Commissioner of the Northwest Territories acts as a lieutenant-governor and is the federal government's senior representative in the Territorial government. The seat of government was transferred from Ottawa to Yellowknife when it was named Territorial Capital on 18 Jan. 1967. On 10 Nov. 1997 the Governments of Canada and the Northwest Territories signed an agreement so that the territorial government could assume full responsibility to manage its elections.

Legislative powers are exercised by the Executive Council on such matters as taxation within the Territories in order to raise revenue, maintenance of justice, licences, solemnization of marriages, education, public health, property, civil rights and generally all matters of a local nature.

The Territorial Government has assumed most of the responsibility for the administration of the Northwest Territories but political control of Crown lands and non-renewable resources still rests with the Federal Government. On 6 Sept. 1988, the Federal and Territorial Governments signed an agreement for the transfer of management responsibilities for oil and gas resources, located on- and off-shore, in the Northwest Territories to the Territorial Government. In a Territory-wide plebiscite in April 1982, a majority of residents voted in favour of dividing the Northwest Territories into two jurisdictions, east and west. In a plebiscite held in March 1992 residents voted in favour of an east-west boundary line. Constitutions for an eastern and western government have been under discussion since 1992. A referendum was held in Nov. 1992 among the Inuit on the formation of a third territory, Nunavut ('Our Land'), in the eastern Arctic, and comprising the present administrative regions of Kitikmeot, Keewatin and Baffin. The electorate was 9,648; turn-out was 80%. 69% of votes cast were in favour. An agreement was signed on 25 May 1993 by the federal Prime Minister beginning the process of establishing this territory. It was scheduled to become Canada's 3rd territory on 1 April 1999. Its area of 2,201,400 sq. km was to be made over to the population of 22,000, of which some 80% are Inuit. The remainder will remain federal property. The capital is Iqaluit (formerly Frobisher Bay) with a 1991 population of 3,552. Rankin Inlet had 1,706 inhabitants in 1991.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Commissioner: Helen Maksagak.

Premier: Don Morin.

Executive Council ministers in Jan. 1999:

Education: Charles Dent. Finance, Intergovernmental Affairs: John Todd. Health and Social Services: Kelvin Ng. Justice: Goo Arlooktoo. Municipal and Community Affairs: Manitok Thompson. Transportation, Public Works and Services: Floyd Roland. Aboriginal Affairs: Jim Antoine. Resources, Wildlife and Economic Development: Stephen Kakfwi.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas. As of July 1993, 13 licences for oil and gas exploration were held for 1·4m. ha, 20 production licences were held for 64,578 ha and 108 significant discovery licences were retained on 695,473 ha.

Crude oil is produced at Norman Wells and piped to Alberta. Value of crude oil production in 1992 was $142·5m.

Minerals. Mineral production in 1992 was valued at $476·2m., 4·7% of Canada's total. The Northwest Territories yielded 12·3% of lead, 15·1% of zinc, 8·8% of gold, and 2% of silver produced in Canada in 1992.

Forestry. Forest land area in the NWT consists of 61·4m. ha, about 18% of the total land area. The principal trees are white and black spruce, jack-pine, tamarack, balsam poplar, aspen and birch. In 1990–91, 56,000 cu. metres of timber, valued at $1·83m., was produced.

Trapping and Game. The 39,629 pelts, furs and hides sold by 1,838 Northwest Territories hunters and trappers in the 1991–92 season were valued at $2,325,814. The pelts of highest value are those of the polar bear, black and brown bear, wolf, wolverine and lynx. There are some 1·3m. barren-ground caribou, 113,000 muskox and 12,700 polar bears. There are 2 protected herds of wood bison.

Fisheries. Commercial fishing, principally on Great Slave Lake, in 1991–92 produced 1,431,000 kg of fish valued at $912,000, principally trout, whitefish and pickerel.

INDUSTRY

Co-operatives. There are 39 active co-operatives, including 2 housing co-operatives and one central organization to service local co-operatives, in the Northwest Territories. They are active in handicrafts, furs, fisheries, retail stores, hotels and print shops. Total revenue in 1991 was about $41m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The Mackenzie Route connects Grimshaw, Alberta, with Hay River, Pine Point, Fort Smith, Fort Providence, Rae-Edzo and Yellowknife. The Mackenzie

Highway extension to Fort Simpson and a road between Pine Point and Fort Resolution have both been opened.

Highway service to Inuvik in the Mackenzie Delta was opened in spring 1980, extending north from Dawson, Yukon as the Dempster Highway. The Liard Highway connecting the communities of the Liard River valley to British Columbia opened in 1984.

In 1994 there were 26,721 motor vehicles registered, including 9,582 passenger cars and 14,890 trucks and truck tractors.

Rail. There is one small railway system in the north which runs from Hay River, on the south shore of Great Slave Lake, 435 miles south to Grimshaw, Alberta, where it connects with the Canadian National Railways, but it is not in use.

Civil Aviation. In 1993 there were 9 certified airports operated by the federal Department of Transport and 33 certified and 9 uncertified airports operated by the Government of the Northwest Territories. Numerous certified and uncertified airports are operated privately in support of military operations, mining and resource exploration, and tourism. There are also privately owned float plane bases. Major communities receive daily jet service to southern points. Most smaller communities are served by scheduled turboprop air service several times weekly.

Shipping. A direct inland-water transportation route for about 1,700 miles is provided by the Mackenzie River and its tributaries, the Athabasca and Slave rivers. Subsidiary routes on Lake Athabasca, Great Slave Lake and Great Bear Lake total more than 800 miles.

Communities in the eastern Arctic are resupplied by ship each summer via the Atlantic and Arctic Oceans or Hudson Bay.

Telecommunications. Telephone service is provided to nearly all communities in the Northwest Territories. Those few communities without service have high frequency or very high frequency radios for emergency use.

Postal Services. There is a postal service in all communities.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education. In 1993–94 there were 8 divisional boards of education, which provide for more local and regional control of education. There were also 3 boards of education operating in Yellowknife: A separate school board, a public school board and a board of secondary education.

In 1993–94 there were 80 schools operating with 1,091 teachers for 16,089 enrolled students. Residences in regional larger communities provide accommodation for students from smaller communities that cannot provide all education services up to grade 12. There is a full range of courses available in the school system: Academic, French immersion, native language and culture, commercial, technical and occupational training, post-secondary programmes, along with a first-year general arts university programme. Financial assistance (from the territorial government) is available to qualifying students for post-secondary studies.

Health. In 1988 complete responsibility for health services was transferred to the Territorial Government by the Government of Canada. There are (1993) 8 Boards of Management established to operate, manage and control the health services and programmes in their respective service regions. The health system is comprised of: 6 hospitals, providing both acute and long-term care; 6 public health clinics; 43 community health centres; 8 lay dispensaries; 6 boarding homes for patients and escorts travelling.

Welfare. Welfare services are provided by professional social workers. Facilities included (1993) for children: 7 group homes and 2 residential treatment centres.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1993 the CBC northern service operated radio stations at Yellowknife, Inuvik, Iqaluit and Rankin Inlet. All communities receive television via satellite.

YUKON TERRITORY

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The territory owes its fame to the discovery of gold in the Klondike at the end of the 19th century. Formerly part of the Northwest Territories, the Yukon was joined to the Dominion as a separate territory on 13 June 1898.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Yukon is situated in the extreme north-western section of Canada and comprises 483,450 sq. km. of which 4,480 sq. km is fresh water. The census population in 1996 was 30,766; estimate, June 1997, 33,586. Principal centres (with 1997 populations) are Whitehorse, the capital, 24,031; Watson Lake, 1,791; Dawson City, 2,151; Faro, 1,266; Haines Junction, 862.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

See CANADA: Social Statistics.

CLIMATE

A cold climate in winter with moderate temperatures in summer provide a considerable annual range of temperature and moderate rainfall. Whitehorse, Jan. -5°F (-20°C), July 56°F (14·1°C). Annual rainfall 10" (261 mm). Dawson City, Jan. -22°F (-30°C), July 57°F (15·6°C). Annual rainfall 13" (306·1 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Yukon was constituted a separate territory in June 1898. It is governed by a Cabinet (Executive Council) appointed from the majority party in the 17-member elected Legislative Assembly. The members are elected for terms not to exceed 4 years.

The seat of government is at Whitehorse. A federally appointed Commissioner serves in a similar capacity to the provincial lieutenant governors.

The Yukon government consists of 12 departments, as well as a Women's Directorate and 4 Crown corporations, each taking direction from a responsible Cabinet Minister and generally from Cabinet. Government departments and agencies are responsible for a similar range of activities as found in Canadian provinces, including education, economic development, municipal affairs, housing, social services, transportation, tourism, justice, renewable resources, and finance. The administration of certain programmes, mostly in the natural resources field, remains under federal control. The Yukon government is, however, involved in negotiations with the federal government on the transfer of further responsibilities to its jurisdiction.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the territorial elections on 30 Sept. 1996 the New Democratic Party gained 11 seats, the Yukon Party 3 and the Liberal Party 3.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Commissioner: Judy Gingell (appointed 12 June 1995).

Government Leader: Piers McDonald.

ECONOMY

Performance. GDP at market prices increased by 9·6% in 1996 to $1,037m. The key sectors of the economy are mining, tourism and government. Renewable resource industries' production was estimated at $9m. in 1995. Processing of renewable resources is an important source of economic diversification. In the manufacturing sector, manufacturers' shipments were valued at $47m. in 1995.

Banking and Finance. The Territorial Government's revenue and expenditure (in $1,000) for years ended 31 March was:

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97[1]	1997–98[1]
Revenue	489,894	509,570	466,732	447,431
Expenditure	481,388	480,780	501,272	457,385

[1]Projected.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Hydro-generated power is supplied through plants at Whitehorse Rapids, Aishihik Lake, Fish Lake and Mayo. Diesel-generated power is supplied from plants at several communities (including Whitehorse, Faro, Haines Junction, Ross River, Dawson City, Mayo and Watson Lake). Current capacity is 78 MW hydro and 52 MW diesel-generated power. Production, 1995, 390,035 MWh, of which 319,399 MWh hydro-electric.

Oil and Gas. In 1997, the Yukon Oil and Gas Act was passed, replacing the federal legislation. This Act provides for the transfer of responsibility for oil and gas resources to Yukon jurisdiction.

Minerals. Mining is the main industry. Lead, zinc and gold are the chief minerals. Production in tonnes (and value) in 1996 (preliminary): Gold, 5 ($76·9m.); zinc, 145,335 ($202·2m.); lead, 90,019 ($95·7m.); silver, 112 ($25·6m.).

Agriculture. Many areas have suitable soils and climate for the production of forages, cereal grains and vegetables, domestic livestock and game farming. In 1996 there were 160 farms operating full- and part-time. There were about 24,000 acres associated with farm operations, of which 13,000 acres were in production or under development. Farm receipts in 1996 were estimated at $3·5m. Total farm capital, 1996, was $45m.

Forestry. The forests, which cover 281,030 sq. km of the territory, are part of the great Boreal forest region of Canada, which stretches from the east coast of Canada into Alaska and north well above the Arctic Circle. Vast areas are covered by coniferous stands in the southern portion of Yukon, with white spruce and lodgepole pine forming pure stands on wet sites, and in northern aspects. Deciduous species form pure stands or occur mixed with conifers throughout forest areas.

Production from forestry was 420,600 cu. metres in 1994–95.

Game and Furs. The country abounds with big game, such as moose, goat, caribou, mountain sheep and bear (grizzly and black). The fur-trapping industry is considered vital to rural and remote residents and especially First Nations people wishing to maintain a traditional lifestyle. Fur production in 1996 (mostly beaver, lynx, marten, wolf and wolverine) was valued at $274,540.

Fisheries. Commercial fishing concentrates on chinook salmon, chum salmon, lake trout and whitefish.

Environment. The Yukon is recognized as a critical habitat for many species of rare and endangered flowers, big game animals, birds of prey and migratory birds. Three national parks (total area 36,572 sq. km), 3 territorial parks (297 sq. km), 3 protected areas (7,917 sq. km) and 2 wildlife sanctuaries (8,150 sq. km) had been established by 1996 to protect fragile and significant areas for the future.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. The Alaska Highway and branch highway systems connect Yukon's main communities with Alaska and the provinces, and with adjacent mining centres. Interior roads connect the mining communities of Elsa (silver–lead), Faro (lead–zinc–silver) and Dawson City (gold) and mineral exploration properties (lead–zinc and tungsten) north of Ross River. The 735-km Dempster Highway north of Dawson

City connects with Inuvik, on the Arctic coast; this highway, the first public road to be built to the Arctic Ocean, was opened in Aug. 1979. The South Klondike Highway links the tidewater port of Skagway, Alaska with the Yukon. It was opened in May 1979, providing a new access to the Pacific Ocean. In 1996-97 there were 4,680 km of roads maintained by the Yukon Territorial Government, of which 260 km were paved. The other major roads, including the Alaska Highway, have received a new surface treatment which resembles pavement, and the rest are all-weather gravel, of which 700 km are accessible during the summer months only. Vehicles registered in 1996 totalled 42,228, including 11,035 passenger cars and 21,027 trucks and truck tractors.

Rail. The 176-km White Pass and Yukon Railway connected Whitehorse with year-round ocean shipping at Skagway, Alaska, but was closed in 1982. A modified passenger service was restarted in 1988 to take cruise ship tourists from Skagway to Carcross, Yukon, over the White Pass summit.

Civil Aviation. In 1997, Canadian International Airlines provided regular daily service between Whitehorse and Vancouver. Regular air service also extended beyond the Yukon to Yellowknife and Inuvik, Northwest Territories, and Juneau and Fairbanks, Alaska, with connecting service to other points in Alaska and other states in the USA. Regularly scheduled air services extend from Whitehorse to the Yukon communities of Dawson City, Old Crow and Watson Lake, with limited air service to Mayo. Commercial operations offering charter services are located throughout the Territory.

Shipping. The majority of goods are shipped into the Territory by truck over the Alaska and Stewart–Cassiar Highways. Some goods are shipped through the ports of Skagway and Haines, Alaska, and then trucked to Whitehorse for distribution throughout the Territory. The majority of goods are transported by road within the Territory, while a modest amount is shipped by air. Although navigable, the rivers are no longer used for shipping.

Telecommunications. All telephone and telecommunications are provided by Northwestel, a subsidiary of Bell Canada Enterprises. Microwave stations, satellite ground stations and radio-telephone facilities provide most of the telephone transmission services to the communities.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education. The Yukon Department of Education operates (with the assistance of elected school councils) the Territory's 27 schools, both public and separate, from kindergarten to grade 12. There is also 1 private school and 1 French First Language school, which is under the governance of a school board. In Dec. 1996 there were 457 teachers and 6,241 pupils. French immersion is offered from kindergarten through grade 12. Yukon College provides adult education for young and mature students, 26% of whom are of First Nations ancestry. Ayamdigut Campus in Whitehorse is the administrative and programme centre for 13 other campuses located throughout the territory. In 1996–97 a total of 758 full-time and 4,318 part-time students enrolled in programmes and courses. The Yukon government provides financial assistance to students for post-secondary education whether they study at Yukon College or outside the Territory. Financial assistance is provided to First Nations students by the federal Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Health. In Dec. 1996 there were 2 hospitals with 69 staffed beds, 4 nursing stations, 8 health treatment centres, 3 public health centres, 112 doctors and 18 dentists. The territorial government operates a medical travel programme to send patients to Edmonton or Vancouver for specialized treatment not available in the Territory.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are 3 radio stations in Whitehorse and 15 low-power relay radio transmitters operated by CBC, and 6 operated by the Yukon Government. CHON-FM, operated by Northern Native Broadcasting, is broadcast to virtually all Yukon communities by satellite. Dawson City has its own community-run radio station, CFYT-FM. There are also 27 basic and 36 extended pay-cable TV channels in Whitehorse, and private cable operations in Faro and Watson Lake. Live CBC national television and TVNC is provided by satellite and relayed to all communities.

Press. In 1997 there were 1 daily and 1 semi-weekly newspaper in Whitehorse, and semi-weekly and monthly papers in Dawson City. Other communities with local newspapers include Stewart Crossing, Haines Junction and Faro. There is also a monthly newspaper for francophones.

Tourism. In 1996 there were 244,960 foreign visitors.

CAPE VERDE

República de Cabo Verde

Capital: Praia
Population estimate, 2000: 437,000
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 2,640
HDI/world rank: 0·591/117

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Cape Verde Islands were uninhabited, except perhaps by some Lebou fishermen from Senegal, when first visited by the Portuguese in 1456. During centuries of Portuguese rule the islands were gradually peopled with Portuguese, slaves from Africa, and people of mixed African-European descent who became the majority. While retaining some African culture, the Cape Verdians came to speak Portuguese or the Portuguese-derived Crioulo (Creole) language, and became Catholics.

Cape Verde included Portuguese Guinea until 1879, when that mainland territory was separated. Ruled as a colony and then, from 1951 to 1974, as an Overseas Territory of Portugal, Cape Verde had a governor, a government council, and latterly a partly elected legislative council. While many Cape Verdians were taken to São Tomé as labourers on cocoa plantations, because of their Portuguese culture and some degree of education, Cape Verdians were in some ways privileged among Portuguese-ruled Africans; they held subordinate government positions in other colonies, such as Portuguese Guinea.

In 1956 nationalists from Cape Verde and Portuguese Guinea formed the Partido Africano da Independência da Guiné e Cabo Verde (PAIGC). In the 1960s the PAIGC led by Amilcar Cabral waged a successful guerilla war. While armed resistance was not possible in the Cape Verde Islands, the PAIGC won control there after the Portuguese revolution of 1974. On 5 July 1975 Cape Verde became independent, ruled by the PAIGC, which was already the ruling party in ex-Portuguese Guinea-Bissau. Aristides Pereira became president of the new republic.

On 14 Nov. 1980 Luis Cabral, brother of the PAIGC's founder and president of Guinea-Bissau since 1974, was overthrown in a coup d'état caused partly by resentment at Cape Verdians' privileged position in Guinea-Bissau. Ensuing tension led to the end of the ties between the two countries' ruling parties. Although the PAIGC retained its name in Guinea-Bissau, in Jan. 1981 it was renamed the Partido Africano da Independência do Cabo Verde (PAICV), in Cape Verde. The Constitution of 1981 made the PAICV the sole legal party, but in Sept. 1990 the National Assembly abolished its monopoly and free elections were permitted.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Cape Verde is situated in the Atlantic Ocean 620 km off West Africa and consists of 10 islands (Boa Vista, Brava, Fogo, Maio, Sal, Santa Luzia, Santo Antão, São Tiago and São Vicente) and 5 islets. The islands are divided into 2 groups, named Barlavento (windward) and Sotavento (leeward). The total area is 4,033 sq. km (1,557 sq. miles). The population was 341,491 at the census of 1990. Estimate (1996) 417,000; density, 103·3 per sq. km; 54·2% urban, 1995.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 437,000.

About 600,000 Cape Verdeans live abroad.

Areas and populations of the islands:

Island	Area (sq. km)	Population Census 1980	Population Census 1990
Santo Antão	779	43,321	43,845
São Vicente[1]	227	41,594	51,277
São Nicolau	388	13,572	13,665
Sal	216	5,826	7,715
Boa Vista	620	3,372	3,452
Barlavento	2,230	107,685	119,954

Brava	67	6,985	6,975
Sotavento	1,803	188,018	221,537

[1]Including Santa Luzia island, which is uninhabited.

The main towns (1990 census) are Praia, the capital, on São Tiago (61,644) and Mindelo on São Vicente (47,109). Ethnic groups: Mixed, 71%; Black, 28%; White, 1%. The official language is Portuguese; a creole (Crioulo) is in ordinary use.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 13,000; deaths, 3,000. 1995 birth rate, 32·8 per 1,000 population; death rate, 7·8. Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 2·8%. Annual emigration varies between 2,000 and 10,000. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, was 63·5 years for men and 65·5 years for women. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 50 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 3·9 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is arid, with a cool dry season from Dec. to June and warm dry conditions for the rest of the year. Rainfall is sparse, rarely exceeding 5" (127 mm) in the northern islands or 12" (304 mm) in the southern ones. There are periodic severe droughts. Praia, Jan. 72°F (22·2°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 10" (250 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was adopted in Sept. 1992.

A constitutional referendum was held on 28 Dec. 1994; turn-out was 45%. 82·06% of votes cast favoured a reform extending the powers of the presidency and strengthening the autonomy of local authorities. The President is elected for 5-year terms by universal suffrage.

The National Assembly is elected for 5-year terms.

National Anthem. 'Sol, suor, o verde e mar' ('Sun, sweat, the green and the sea'); words and tune by A. Lopes Cabral.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections for the National Assembly of 72 members elected domestically and 3 from Cape Verdeans living abroad were held on 17 Dec. 1995. The electorate was 190,000; turn-out was 70%. 5 parties stood. The Movement for Democracy (MPD) won 50 seats with 61·3% of votes cast, the PAICV 21 with 29·8% and the Party of Democratic Convergence 1 with 6·7%.

In the presidential elections which took place on 17 Feb. 1991, Antonio Mascarenhas Monteiro (b. 1943; MPD) was elected by 72% of votes cast, defeating the incumbent President Pereira. On 18 Feb. 1996 he was re-elected unopposed.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Antonio Mascarenhas Monteiro, b. 1943 (MPD; sworn in 22 March 1991).

An MPD government was formed in Dec. 1995, which in March 1999 comprised:

Prime Minister: Carlos Wahnon Veiga (b. 1949).

Local Government. There are 16 municipal councils. Local elections were held in Jan. 1996.

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription. Defence expenditure totalled US$4m. in 1997 (US$9 per capita).

Army. The Army is composed of 2 battalions and had a strength of 1,000 in 1997.

Navy. The coast guard numbered 50 in 1997 and has 2 inshore patrol craft.

Air Force. The Air Force has 2 An-26 transport and 1 DO228 patrol aircraft and fewer than 100 personnel.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Cape Verde is a member of the UN, OAU, ECOWAS and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Policy. The third National Development Plan (1992–95) emphasized rural development, balanced regional development and promoted private enterprise.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 3·5% in 1995 (2·6% in 1994).

Budget. The budget for 1996 envisaged revenue of 21,110m. escudos and expenditure of 21,020m. escudos.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Cape Verde escudo (CVE) of 100 centavos. Foreign exchange reserves were US$42m. in Nov. 1997. The average annual inflation rate during the period 1990–96 was 3·6%. Total money supply was 14,117m. escudos in Nov. 1997.

Banking and Finance. The Banco de Cabo Verde is the central bank (Governor, Amaro Alexandre da Luz) and bank of issue, and was also previously a commercial bank. Its latter functions have been taken over by the Banco Comercial do Atlántico, mainly financed by public funds. Another bank has been opened recently in Cape Verde (Tota Acores) and the Caixa Economica has been upgraded into a Bank. Two foreign banks have also been established there.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity is 17,000 kW. Production was 63·6m. kWh in 1994. Consumption per capita in 1994 was 102 kWh.

Minerals. Salt is obtained on the islands of Sal, Boa Vista and Maio. Volcanic rock (pozzolana) is mined for export. There are also deposits of kaolin, clay, gypsum and basalt.

Agriculture. In 1996 agriculture contributed 7% of GDP. Some 10–15% of the land area is suitable for farming. Approximately 37,000 ha are cultivated, mainly confined to inland valleys. About 2,500 ha are irrigated. The chief crops (production, 1993, in 1,000 tonnes) are: Coconuts, 10; sugar-cane, 19; bananas, 6; potatoes, 3; cassava, 2; sweet potatoes, 4; maize, 6; beans, groundnuts and coffee. Bananas and coffee are mainly for export.

CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

République Centrafricaine

Capital: Bangui
Population estimate, 2000: 3·64m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 1,430
HDI/world rank: 0·347/154

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Central African Republic became independent on 13 Aug. 1960, after having been one of the 4 territories of French Equatorial Africa (under the name of Ubangi Shari) and from 1 Dec. 1958 a member state of the French Community. A Constitution of 1976 provided for the country to be a parliamentary democracy to be known as the Central African Empire. President Bokassa became Emperor Bokassa I. He was overthrown in a coup on 20–21 Sept. 1979 and the empire was abolished. On 15 March 1981 David Dacko was re-elected President, but Army Chief General André Kolingba took power in a bloodless coup on 1 Sept. 1981 at the head of a Military Committee for National Recovery (CMRN), which held supreme power until 21 Sept. 1985 when President Kolingba dissolved it and initiated a return towards constitutional rule.

On 5 June 1996 following a mutiny in the army, President Patassé accepted an agreement brokered by France which amnestied the mutineers and led to the formation of a government of national unity. In Jan. 1997 mutineers demanded the replacement of President Patassé and killed 2 French soldiers. French forces retaliated, taking prisoner some 50 mutineers. France chaired a mediation committee of various neighbouring French-speaking states, and an agreement to end the mutiny was signed on 24 Jan. 1997 in Bangui and a peacekeeping force of neighbouring states, MISAB, was set up. Conflicts between the mutineers and MISAB continued well into 1997 despite a ceasefire concluded on 21 June 1997. A further ceasefire was concluded on 2 July 1997.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The republic is bounded in the north by Chad, east by Sudan, south by the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Republic of the Congo, and west by Cameroon. The area covers 622,436 sq. km (240,324 sq. miles). The population at the 1988 census was 2,568,426; estimate, 1996, 3,274,000, giving a density of 5 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 3·64m.

In 1995 an estimated 39·1% of the population were urban.

The areas, populations and capitals of the prefectures are as follows:

HDI/world rank: 0·318/163

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

France proclaimed a protectorate over Chad on 5 Sept. 1900, and in July 1908 the territory was incorporated into French Equatorial Africa. It became a separate colony in 1920, and in 1946 one of the 4 constituent territories of French Equatorial Africa. On 28 Nov. 1958 it became an autonomous republic within the French Community and achieved full independence on 11 Aug. 1960.

Conflicts between the government and secessionist groups, particularly in the Moslem north and centre, began in 1965 and developed into civil war. In 1982 forces led by Hissène Habré gained control of the country. In June 1983 the Libyan-backed forces of former President Goukouni Oueddei re-occupied some territory, but by April 1987 they were forced back into the Aozou Strip in the north, occupied by Libyan forces since 1973. A ceasefire took effect in Sept. 1987. There was an attempted coup on 1 April 1989.

Rebel forces of the Popular Salvation Movement led by Idriss Déby entered Chad from Sudan in Nov. 1990 and, meeting little resistance, overcame the government forces of President Hissène Habré, who took refuge in Cameroon. On 4 Dec. 1990 Déby declared himself President.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Chad is bounded in the west by Cameroon, Nigeria and Niger, north by Libya, east by Sudan and south by the Central African Republic. In Feb. 1994 the International Court of Justice ruled that the Aozou Strip along the Libyan border, occupied by Libya since 1973, was part of Chad. Area, 1,284,000 sq. km. At the 1993 census the population was 6,279,931 (5,929,192 settled, of whom 1,327,570 were urban and 359,069 nomadic). 1996 population estimate, 6,977,000; density, 5 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 7·27m.

In 1995 an estimated 77·8% of the population were rural. The capital is N'Djaména with 530,965 inhabitants (1993 census), other large towns being Moundou (282,103), Sarh (193,753), Bongor (196,713), Abéché (187,936) and Doba (185,461).

The areas, populations and chief towns of the 14 prefectures were:

Prefecture	Area sq. km	Population (1993 census)	Capital
Borkou-Ennedi-Tibesti	600,350	73,185	Faya (Largeau)
Biltine	46,850	184,807	Biltine

República de Chile

Capital: Santiago
Population estimate, 2000: 15·21m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 11,700
HDI/world rank: 0·893/31

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Magellan sighted what is now Chile in 1520. Subsequently Spaniards colonized the land in the 1530s and 1540s, defeating the Incas in the north and subjugating the Araucanian Indians in the South. Santiago, the capital, was founded in 1541, and Chile, as a colony, was attached to the viceroyalty of Peru.

In 1810 the Republic of Chile threw off allegiance to the Spanish crown, establishing a national government on 18 Sept. 1810. However, there were seven years of fighting before Chile was recognized as an independent republic in 1818. A constitution was adopted in 1883, and the country enjoyed stable government. Peru and Bolivia, which had been in dispute with Chile over their boundaries, were defeated in the War of the Pacific, 1879–84. In 1925 the constitution was amended so as to strengthen the executive at the expense of the legislature.

1964 saw the election of the first Christian Democrat president, Eduardo Frei Montlava; but in 1970 Dr Salvador Allende Gossens was elected president as the Marxist leader of five left-wing parties which formed a coalition, the Popular Unity, to speed up social reform. This government was overthrown in 1973 by a coup of the three armed services and the cabineros (paramilitary police). These forces formed a government headed by a four-man junta. Gen. Augusto Pinochet Ugarte, C.-in-C. of the Army took over the presidency. President Allende died in the course of the coup. Tens of thousands of Popular Unity supporters were massacred and all political activities banned. The new government assumed wide-ranging powers, but the 'state of siege' ended in March 1978. A new constitution came into force on 11 March 1981 and provided for a return to democracy after a minimum period of eight years. Anti-government protests increased over the years while relations with the Roman Catholic church deteriorated. However, Gen. Pinochet continued as head of state until 1989 when elections brought victory for the opposition. He remained army commander until March 1998 when he claimed his right, under the constitution, to become a senator for life (and hence immune from prosecution). While clearing the way for much-needed economic reforms, the Pinochet regime was responsible for wholesale human right abuses, a legacy which had its consequences in 1999 when Augusto Pinochet, in Britain for medical treatment, was held on human rights charges instigated by Spain.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Chile is bounded in the north by Peru, east by Bolivia and Argentina, and south and west by the Pacific Ocean. The area is 736,905 sq. km (284,520 sq. miles) excluding the claimed Antarctic territory. Many islands to the west and south belong to Chile: The Islas Juan Fernández (179 sq. km with 516 inhabitants in 1982) lie about 600 km west of Valparaíso, and the volcanic Isla de Pascua (Easter Island or Rapa Nui, 118 sq. km with 1,867 inhabitants in 1982), lies about 3,000 km west-northwest of Valparaíso. Small uninhabited dependencies include Sala y Goméz (400 km east of Easter Is.), San Ambrosio and San Félix (1,000 km north-west of Valparaíso, and 20 km apart) and Islas Diego Ramírez (100 km south-west of Cape Horn).

In 1940 Chile declared, and in each subsequent year has reaffirmed, its ownership of the sector of the Antarctic lying between 53° and 90° W. long., and asserted that the British claim to the sector between the meridians 20° and 80° W. long. overlapped the Chilean by 27°. Seven Chilean bases exist in Antarctica. A law of 1955 put the governor of Magallanes in charge of the 'Chilean Antarctic Territory' which has an area of 1,269,723 sq. km. and a population (1982) of 1,368.

The population at the census of 1992 was 13,231,803 (6,730,478 females). Estimate, 1997, 14,656,200 (83·9% urban in 1995; 7,416,500 females in 1997); density, 20 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 15·21m.

Other large towns (1992 census population) are: Viña del Mar (302,765), Puente Alto (254,534), Talcahuano (246,566), San Bernardo (188,850), Arica (169,217), Chillán (158,731), Los Angeles (142,136), Osorno (128,709), Coquimbo (122,872), Valdívia (122,436), Calama (120,602), Curicó (103,919) and Quilpué (102,824). 79% of the population is mixed or mestizo, 20% are of European descent and 1% are indigenous Amerindians of the Araucanian, Fuegian and Chango groups. Language and culture remain of European origin, with the 675,000 Araucanian-speaking (mainly Mapuche) Indians the only sizeable minority.

The official language is Spanish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 253,000; deaths, 80,000; 1995 marriages, 87,205. Rates, 1996 (per 1,000 population): Birth, 18·1; death, 5·7; infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 13·6. Growth rate, 1996, 1·24%. In 1995 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Expectation of life at birth (1996), 74·59 years; males 71·3 years, females 77·8 years. Chile has the highest life expectancy in South America. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 2·5 children per woman.

CLIMATE

With its enormous range of latitude and the influence of the Andean Cordillera, the climate of Chile is very complex, ranging from extreme aridity in the north, through a Mediterranean climate in Central Chile, where winters are wet and summers dry, to a cool temperate zone in the south, with rain at all seasons. In the extreme south, conditions are very wet and stormy. Santiago, Jan. 67°F (19·5°C), July 46°F (8°C). Annual rainfall 15" (375 mm). Antofagasta, Jan. 69°F (20·6°C), July 57°F (14°C). Annual rainfall 0·5" (12·7 mm). Valparaíso, Jan. 64°F (17·8°C), July 53°F (11·7°C). Annual rainfall 20" (505 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution was approved by 67·5% of the voters on 11 Sept. 1980 and came into force on 11 March 1981. It provided for a return to democracy after a minimum period of 8 years. Gen. Pinochet would remain in office during this period after which the Government would nominate a single candidate for President. At a plebiscite on 5 Oct. 1988 President Pinochet was rejected as a presidential candidate by 54·6% of votes cast.

The President is directly elected for a non-renewable 6-year term. Parliament consists of a 120-member Chamber of Deputies and a Senate of 48 members.

National Anthem. 'Dulce patria, recibe los votos' ('Sweet Fatherland, receive the vows'); words by E. Lillo, tune by Ramón Carnicer.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 12 Dec. 1993 for the presidency. Eduardo Frei Ruiz-Tagle was elected President by 58% of votes cast against 5 other candidates. In elections to the Chamber of Deputies on 11 Dec. 1997 the Christian Democratic Party (PDC) won 39 seats, National Renewal 23 (RN), the Independent Democratic Union (UDI) 17, Party for Democracy 16 (PPD), the Socialist Party (PS) 11, the Radical Social Democratic Party (PRSD) 4 and ind 8. 2 other parties won 1 single seat each. Member parties of Eduardo Frei's Concertación alliance (PDC, PPD, PS and PRSD) won 70 of the 120 seats.

The next presidential elections are due in Dec. 1999.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In March 1999 the government comprised:

President: Eduardo Frei Ruiz-Tagle, b. 1943 (PDC; sworn in 11 March 1994).

Elections were held on 27 Oct. 1996. Concertación won 56·02% of votes cast; the Union for Chile coalition, 33%.

DEFENCE

Military service is for 1 year in the Army and 2 in the Navy and Air Force. Plans for weapons' modernization amounting to nearly US$2bn., which would benefit both the army and the air force, were announced in April 1998.

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$2,148m. (US$147 per capita).

Army. A modernization plan of 1995 provided for the transformation of the 7 Army divisions into 3 garrisons—North, Centre-South and Austral—independent and adapted to the terrains in which they operate. Equipment includes 100 M4-A3 and 19 AMX-30 main battle tanks. The service operates 17 transport and 15 training aircraft and 7 helicopters. Strength (1997) 51,000 (28,000 conscripts) with 50,000 reserves. There is a 31,000-strong para-military force of Carabineros.

Navy. The principal ships of the Navy are the 4 ex-British 'County'-class guided missile armed destroyers of which 2 have had the missile launcher removed and replaced with an extended helicopter hangar and flight deck to operate 2 Super-Puma helicopters. There are also 2 small modern West German-built diesel submarines, 2 British Oberon class submarines, 1 other British-built destroyer, 4 British Leander class frigates, 4 fast missile craft, 4 torpedo boats, 2 offshore patrol vessels and 8 coastal and 10 fast inshore patrol craft. There are 2 ex-US and 3 French-built landing ships. Major auxiliaries include 2 tankers, 1 submarine support vessel, 1 survey ship, 2 transports, and 1 Antarctic patrol ship. There are 11 service craft and numerous boats.

The Naval Air Service numbering 800 personnel operates 5 squadrons: 16 maritime patrol aircraft, 6 transport utility aircraft, 12 anti-submarine helicopters and 10 training aircraft.

Naval personnel in 1997 totalled 29,800 (3,800 conscripts) including 3,200 marines equipped with 30 light tanks and 60 artillery pieces, and 1,500 Coast Guard who operate 15 patrol craft and 1 helicopter.

Air Force. Strength (1997) is 13,500 personnel (1,000 conscripts), with over 100 first-line and 150 second-line aircraft, divided among 13 groups, each comprising 1 squadron, within 4 combat and support brigades. Group 12 has twin-jet A-37Bs, and Groups 1 and 3 have C-101CC Aviojets, all for strike duties. Group 2 is equipped for photo-reconnaissance with 3 Canberras. Group 4 has 14 Mirage 50 fighters.

Group 5 has 14 Twin Otters for light transport and survey duties. Group 7 has 12 F-5E Tiger II fighter-bombers and 2 F-5F trainers. Group 8 fighter-bomber unit has 25 Mirage 5s. Group 10 is a transport wing, with 4 C-130 Hercules, 4 Aviocars, 4 Boeing 707s, including 1 equipped for airborne early warning, and various helicopters. Group 9 has UH-1 Iroquois transport helicopters and Black Hawks. An aerial survey unit has 2 Learjets and 3 Beech twin-engined aircraft. Training aircraft include piston-engined Piper Dakota and T-35 Pillan basic trainers, and licence-built CASA C-101BB Aviojets.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Chile is a member of the UN, OAS and LAIA, and is an associate member of Mercosur.

ECONOMY

Performance. Real GDP growth averaged 7·7% between 1991 and 1997, leading to Chile being labelled the 'tiger of South America'. Between 1990 and 1996 the average annual real growth in GNP per capita was 6·4%.

Budget. The fiscal year is the calendar year. Revenues in 1997 (1996 in brackets) were 7,366·764bn. pesos (6,633·84bn. pesos) and expenditure 6,695·35bn. pesos (5,982·77bn. pesos). VAT is 16-18%.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Chilean peso (CLP) of 100 centavos. The peso was revalued 3·5% against the US dollar in Nov. 1994. Inflation was 7·4% in 1996. Total money supply in Feb. 1998 was 2,608m. pesos. In Jan. 1998 gold reserves were 1·86m. troy oz. Foreign exchange reserves were US$381m. in Feb. 1998.

Weights and Measures. The metric system has been legally established since 1865, but the old Spanish weights and measures are still in use to some extent.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 5·96m. kW in 1995. Production of electricity was 26,742m. kWh in 1995, of which 18,688m. kWh were hydro-electric. Consumption per capita in 1995 was an estimated 1,662 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Production of crude oil, 1995, was 605,100 cu. metres. Gas production, 1995, was 3,783·2m. cu. metres.

Minerals. The wealth of the country consists chiefly in its minerals. Copper is the most important source of foreign exchange and government revenues. Production, 1995, 2,448,100 tonnes. Coal is low-grade and difficult to mine, and mining is made possible by state subsidies. Production, 1995, 1,330,637 tonnes.

Output of other minerals, 1995 (in tonnes): Iron, 8·1m. (1996); iron pellets, 3,859,700; limestone, 4,834,927; molybdenum, 16,694; zinc, 34,457; manganese, 70,450; gold, 44,233 kg; silver, 1,037,847 kg. Lithium, nitrate, iodine and sodium sulphate are also produced.

Agriculture. Agriculture and forestry contributed 6·9% of GDP in 1995. In 1994, 3·98m. ha of land was arable, 0·27m. ha permanent crops and 13·6m. ha pasture. 1·27m. ha were irrigated in 1994. Some 41,000 tractors were in use in 1994.

Principal crops were as follows:

Crop	Area harvested, 1,000 ha 1995	Production, 1,000 tonnes 1994	Crop	Area harvested, 1,000 ha 1994	Production, 1,000 tonnes 1992

Barley	25	84	Lentils	10	16
Maize	104	899	Sugar-beet	52	2,978
Rice	30	131

Fruit production, 1993 (in 1,000 tonnes): Apples, 870; grapes, 880; pears, 230; peaches and nectarines, 160; plums, 130; oranges, 112; lemons and limes, 100. 0·32m. tonnes of wine were produced in 1992.

Livestock, 1996: Cattle, 3,858,000; horses, 550,000; sheep, 8,039,000; goats, 600,000 (1995); pigs, 1,486,000; poultry (1995), 62m. Livestock products, 1994 (in 1,000 tonnes): Beef, 247; mutton, 13; pork, 158; poultry, 310; milk, 1,222; eggs, 1,856m.

Since 1985 agricultural trade has been consistently in surplus. Wine exports rose from US$50m. in 1990 to US$400m. in 1996.

Forestry. In 1995 nearly 14% of the total land area was under forests. There were 9m. ha of natural forest and woodland (eucalyptus, pine and poplar are important species) and 1·3m. ha of planted forest. Deforestation between 1990 and 1995 had resulted in an average loss of 29,000 ha each year. Timber production in 1995 was 31·36m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. Chile has 4,200 km of coastline and exclusive fishing rights to 1·6m. sq. km. There are 220 species of edible fish. In 1990 the fishing fleet comprised 250 vessels over 100 GRT, totalling 111,140 GRT. Catch in 1995 was 7·59m. tonnes, almost entirely from sea fishing. Only China and Peru had higher annual catches in 1995. Exports of fishery commodities in 1995 were valued at US$1·7bn., against imports of US$45·88m. Fish farms produced 60,728 tonnes of salmon in 1992.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing contributed 16·8% of GDP in 1995.

Output of major products in 1995 (in 1,000 tonnes): Fishmeal, 877; cellulose, 1,219·8; newsprint, 201·5; paper and cardboard, 198·7; motor tyres, 2,329,900 items; cement, 2,885·2; iron or steel plates, 294·1; copper wire, 5·6; beer, 331·7m. litres; motor vehicles, 21,574 items.

Labour. In 1996 the workforce numbered 5,294,100, of whom 240,100 were unemployed. In June 1996, 1,338,500 persons were employed in social or personal services, 770,900 in agriculture, forestry and fisheries, 907,900 in trade, 847,200 in manufacturing, 389,400 in transport and communications, and 401,600 in building. In 1992 there was a monthly minimum wage of 38,600 pesos.

Trade Unions. Trade unions were established in the mid-1880s.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In Sept. 1991 Chile and Mexico signed the free trade Treaty of Santiago envisaging annual tariff reductions of 10% from Jan. 1992. On 1 Oct. 1996 Chile joined the Mercosur free trade zone, but continues to act unilaterally in trade with third countries.

Foreign debt was US$20,877m. on 30 June 1996.

Imports and Exports. Trade in US$1m.:

	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Imports	8,094	10,129	11,125	11,825	15,914	17,828
Exports	8,942	10,007	9,199	11,604	16,137	15,353

In 1995 the principal exports were (in US$1m.): Agricultural products, 1,562; minerals, 7,984 (of which copper, 6,487); manufactures, 6,847. Major export markets (in US$1m.), 1995: Japan, 2,906; USA, 2,375; UK, 1,076; Brazil, 1,056; South Korea, 896; Germany, 837. Major import suppliers: USA, 3,793; Argentina, 1,385; Brazil, 1,195; Japan, 1,013; Germany, 790.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1997 there were about 80,000 km of roads, but only 20% were hard-surfaced. There were 65 km of motorways and 10,255 km of main roads. In 1996 there were 1,017,052 private cars, 538,443 trucks and vans, 34,734 buses and coaches and 32,179 motor cycles and mopeds.

Rail. The total length of state railway (EFE) lines was (1995) 3,447 km, including 1,317 km electrified, of broad- and metre-gauge. EFE is now mainly a passenger carrier, and carried 10·1m. passengers in 1995. Freight operations are in the hands of the semi-private companies Ferronor, which carried 1·5m. tonnes in 1995, and Pacifico, which carried 4·3m. tonnes in 1995. The Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Railway (728 km, metre-gauge) links the port of Antofagasta with Bolivia and Argentina, and carried 1·8m. tonnes in 1995.

There is a metro in Santiago (37·5 km).

Civil Aviation. There are 344 airports, with an international airport at Santiago (Comodoro Arturo Merino Benítez). The largest airline is Línea Aérea Nacional Chile (Lan-Chile), which in 1995 carried 1,427,000 passengers (611,000 on international flights), followed by Línea Aérea de Colore (Ladeco), with 1,397,000 passengers in 1995 (546,000 on international flights). In 1996 Comodoro Arturo Merino Benítez handled 4,215,646 passengers and 200,981 tonnes of freight. In 1998 services were also provided by Aerolíneas Argentinas, Aeromexico, Aeroperú, Air France, Air New Zealand, American Airlines, Avant Airlines, Avianca, British Airways, Canadian Airlines International, Continental Airlines, COPA, Cubana, Ecuatoriana, Iberia, KLM, LACSA, Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano, Lufthansa, Mexicana, National Airlines, Pluna, SAS, Swissair, Tame Linea Aerea del Ecuador, Transbrasil, Transportes Aereos del Mercosur, United Airlines and Varig.

Shipping. The mercantile marine in 1995 totalled 0·98m. GRT, including oil tankers, 71,150 GRT, but most of the fleet operates under flags of convenience. The 6 major ports, the largest being Valparaíso, San Antonio, Antofagasta, Arica and Iquique, are state-owned; there are 11 smaller private ports. In 1990, 28·56m. tonnes of cargo were loaded, and 19·19m. unloaded.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 2·63m. telephone main lines. There were approximately 200,000 Internet users in June 1997. Cellular phone subscribers numbered 197,000 in 1995, there were 540,000 PCs in use and 15,000 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 587 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There are a High Court of Justice in the capital, 12 courts of appeal distributed over the republic, courts of first instance in the departmental capitals, and second-class judges in the sub-delegations.

Religion. In 1990 there were 10·63m. Roman Catholics with 1 cardinal archbishop, 5 archbishops, 22 bishops and 2 vicars apostolic. 15% of the population defined themselves as evangelical. There were 0·13m. Jews in 1991.

Education. In 1995 there were 4,779 pre-primary schools with 9,576 teachers for 283,061 pupils; 8,702 primary schools with 80,155 teachers for 2·1m. pupils; and 51,042 teachers in secondary schools for 679,165 pupils. Adult literacy rate, 95·2%; male 95·4%, female 95·0% (1995).

In 1996 there were 367,094 students in higher education. In the public sector there were 12 universities, 5 Roman Catholic universities, 2 universities of educational science and 1 technological university. In the private sector there were 33 universities, 2 Roman Catholic universities, 1 Adventist university, 2 technical universities, 2 maritime universities, 1 IndoAmerican university, 1 international university and 1 university for each of the following: arts, science and communications; arts and social science; Christian humanism; computer science; science and arts; teaching. There were also 83 other institutes of higher education.

In 1994 total expenditure on education came to 2·9% of GNP and represented 13·4% of total government expenditure.

Health. There were 198 hospitals and 16,000 doctors in 1994, and 5,200 dentists and 5,653 nurses in 1993.

Welfare. The Pension Fund Administration was founded in 1981. Employees are required to save 13% of their pay. In Oct. 1995 it had 5,193,590 members and assets of 9,974,787m. pesos. In 1995 about 25% of adults had private health insurance.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There are 168 radio stations grouped in the Asociación de Radiodifusores de Chile. There are 131 television broadcast stations. The state-controlled Televisión Nacional de Chile transmits from 23 stations (colour by NTSC). 4 universities also transmit programmes. In 1995 there were 4·95m. radio and 3m. TV sets.

Cinema. Cinemas numbered 133 in 1993. Total attendance, 1993, 7,733,407.

Press. In 1995 there were 32 national daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 1·4m.

Tourism. There were 1·5m. foreign visitors in 1996. Tourist receipts were US$918m. in 1996.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Han dynasty (216 BC–220 AD) made Confucianism a state philosophy and instituted the system of civil service recruitment by public competitive examination. Buddhism was introduced from India. The Han dynasty collapsed amid intrigues and was followed by centuries of division and disorder. Unity was restored under the T'angs (618–906), but was lost again until the Sung period (960–1279). Mongol invaders succeeded in imposing a foreign dynasty (Yuan) and were quickly assimilated to the higher cultural and technological level of the Chinese. A peasant rising drove the last Mongol from the throne in 1368 and ushered in the Ming dynasty.

Although unity and tradition were restored, the Ming empire was not as efficient as the T'ang nor as enlightened as the Sung. A new imperial capital was built at Beijing only 40 miles from the Wall and thus vulnerable to attack; preoccupation with the defence of this frontier contributed to a neglect of the defence of the sea, whence came the Portuguese in 1516, the Dutch in 1622, and the English in 1637. A wave of nomad invaders, the Manchus, breached the Wall to capture Beijing in 1644 and founded the Ch'ing dynasty, which lasted until 1912. The Manchus, who used Dutch ships to subdue Taiwan in 1683, were not sea-going and confined foreign trade to Canton after 1757. The court would not enter into diplomatic relations with Europe, and would receive foreigners only if they paid homage. Catholic missionaries were tolerated and even employed in state service, but outside ideas made little impression on the ossified and complacent traditionalism of the court and mandarins. Though gradually assimilated, the Ch'ing did not forget they were a foreign dynasty in an occupied country. A quota of posts was reserved for Manchus and a system of garrison governorships was set up, which degenerated into sinecures doing nothing to modernize the armed forces.

A British expeditionary force sent to overturn a Chinese ban on imports of opium forced the empire to cede Hong Kong and grant Britain economic and diplomatic privileges. Other western nations followed suit. Foreigners established concessions in 'treaty ports' administered by their own officials. In 1851 a neo-Protestant T'ai P'ing rebellion broke out, which was put down with Western help in 1864. The British and French seized Beijing in 1860 and burnt the imperial palace. In 1895 China was defeated by a modernized Japan and forced to cede Korea and Taiwan. The emperor became converted to the necessity for reforms, but these were blocked by court intrigue. An anti-foreigner Boxer rebellion was suppressed by Western forces in 1900.

Sun Yat-sen founded the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party) in 1905. When troops at Hangchow mutinied in Oct. 1911 and proclaimed a republic, the emperor's mediator Yuan went over to them and made himself president; the infant emperor abdicated. Yuan attempted to make himself emperor but was overthrown in 1916 after acceding to Japan's demands which would have made China a virtual protectorate. The Beijing government lost all real authority and the country disintegrated into the hands of squabbling warlords. At Versailles the Allies failed to restore territory seized by Japan. Sun Yat-sen, who had formed a separatist government in Canton, turned to the Soviet regime. The Communist Party (founded in 1921) co-operated with the Kuomintang, led after 1926 by Chiang Kai-shek, in attacking both warlords and foreign concessionaries, but in 1937 Chiang turned on the Communists and suppressed them. Communism was then carried on by Mao Zedong's rural 'Soviet', at first in Kiangsi, and then, after the Long March, in Yenan. Chiang came to terms with the warlords and foreign concessionaries, but his aims to create a modern state were thwarted by Japanese invasions in 1931 and 1937 and by his campaign against the Communists. In 1936 he was forced (after being kidnapped) to declare a joint front with them against Japan, but hostilities continued.

After the Second World War full-scale civil war broke out. Chiang was defeated and took refuge on Taiwan where the Republic of China was set up. Mao proclaimed a People's Republic on 1 Oct. 1949. The Maoist period was marked by innovatory excesses: the agricultural communes (now abolished); the conscription of intellectuals to till the fields; the disastrous 'Great Leap Forward' with its backyard blast furnaces; the Thought (and cult) of Mao; the Cultural Revolution. After Mao's death in 1976 moderates within the Communist Party triumphed, and the radical Gang of Four led by Mao's wife Chang Ch'ing were first publicly denounced and then arrested. China has since emerged as a major international power with a liberalized economy, firstly under Deng Xiaoping and more recently Jiang Zemin.

Denounced in the Cultural Revolution, Deng was formally rehabilitated in 1973 and became one of Mao's vice-premiers for a time in the 1970s. The keynote of his administration was political and economic pragmatism. He sought 'readjustment, restructuring, consolidation and improvement'. In 1979 China and the USA established full diplomatic relations. From that time contacts with the west have grown considerably. Deng Xiaoping resigned from the Politburo in Nov. 1987 and from the chairmanship of the Military Commissions in Nov. 1989.

The funeral of the Communist party General Secretary Hu Yaobang on 15 April 1989 sparked off mass student demonstrations which escalated into a popular 'pro-democracy' movement in Beijing, Shanghai and other provincial centres, demanding reforms. The demonstrations gathered strength during the summit visit of the Soviet President Gorbachev (15–17 May) and culminated in a sit-in in Tiananmen Square, Beijing. This was confronted by army units, at first peacefully. However, on 4 June troops opened fire on the demonstrators and tanks were sent in to disperse them. The official casualty figures were: 'over 200' demonstrators and 'dozens' of soldiers killed, and some 9,000 injured. A hard-line faction assumed control in the Party Politburo which appointed Jiang Zemin as General Secretary. Martial law was imposed from May 1989 to Jan. 1990. Since then, however, China has moved cautiously towards a more open society, with an economy that makes allowance for market principles.

For the background to the handover of Hong Kong in 1997, see p. 455.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

China is bounded in the north by Russia and Mongolia; east by North Korea, the Yellow Sea and the East China Sea, with Hong Kong and Macao as enclaves on the south-east coast; south by Vietnam, Laos, Myanmar, India, Bhutan and Nepal; west by India, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Tajikistan, Kyrgyzstan and Kazakhstan. The total area (including Taiwan) is estimated at 9,572,900 sq. km (3,696,100 sq. miles). A law of Feb. 1992 claimed the Spratly, Paracel and Diaoyutasi Islands. An agreement of 7 Sept. 1993 at prime ministerial level settled Sino-Indian border disputes which had first emerged in the war of 1962.

At the 1991 census the population was 1,130,510,638 (548,690,231 females). Population estimate, 1996: 1,223·89m. (601·89m. female; 359·5m., or 29·3%, urban); density, 128 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 1,276·3m.

China is set to lose its status as the world's most populous country to India by 2050.

1979 regulations restricting married couples to a single child, a policy enforced by compulsory abortions and economic sanctions, have been widely ignored, and it was admitted in 1988 that the population target of 1,200m. by 2000 would have to be revised to 1,270m. Since 1988 peasant couples have been permitted a second child after 4 years if the first born is a girl, a measure to combat infanticide.

43·2m. persons of Chinese origin lived abroad in 1993.

A number of widely divergent varieties of Chinese are spoken. The official 'Modern Standard Chinese' is based on the dialect of North China. The ideographic writing system of 'characters' is uniform throughout the country, and has undergone systematic simplification. In 1958 a phonetic alphabet (Pinyin) was devised to transcribe the characters, and in 1979 this was officially adopted for use in all texts in the Roman alphabet. The previous transcription scheme (Wade) is still used in Taiwan and Hong Kong.

China is administratively divided into 22 provinces, 5 autonomous regions (originally entirely or largely inhabited by ethnic minorities, though in some regions now outnumbered by Han immigrants) and 4 government-controlled municipalities. These are in turn divided into 335 prefectures, 666 cities (of which 218 are at prefecture level and 445 at county level), 2,142 counties and 717 urban districts.

Tibet

After the 1959 revolt was suppressed, the Preparatory Committee for the Autonomous Region of Tibet (set up in 1955) took over the functions of local government, led by its Vice-Chairman, the Banqen Lama, in the absence of its Chairman, the Dalai Lama, who had fled to India in 1959. In Dec. 1964 both the Dalai and Banqen Lamas were removed from their posts and on 9 Sept. 1965 Tibet became an Autonomous Region. 301 delegates were elected to the first People's Congress, of whom 226 were Tibetans. The Chief of Government is Gyaincain Norbu. The senior spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama, is in exile. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1989. The Banqen Lama died in Jan. 1989. The borders were opened for trade with neighbouring countries in 1980. In July 1988 Tibetan was reinstated as a 'major official language', competence in which is required of all administrative officials. Monasteries and shrines have been renovated and reopened. There were some 15,000 monks and nuns in 1987. In 1984 a Buddhist seminary in Lhasa opened with 200 students. A further softening of Beijing's attitude towards Tibet was shown during President Bill Clinton's visit to China in June 1998. Jiang Zemin, China's president, said he was prepared to meet the Dalai Lama providing he acknowledged Chinese sovereignty over Tibet and Taiwan.

In 1996 the population was 2·49m. In 1994 there were 2·22m. Tibetans living in Tibet out of a total population of 2·36m. Birth rate (per 1,000), 1996, 24·7; death rate, 8·5; growth rate, 16·2. Population of the capital, Lhasa, in 1992 was 124,000. Expectation of life was 65 years in 1990. 2m. Tibetans live outside Tibet, in China, and in India and Nepal.

Chinese efforts to modernize Tibet include irrigation, road-building and the establishment of light industry. In 1991 there were 328 township and 123 village enterprises employing 21,168 persons; 12,000 persons worked in heavy industry, 16,000 in state-owned enterprises. 1990 output included 136,300 metres of woollen fabrics, 1,000 tonnes of salt, 1,900 tonnes of vegetable oil, 208,200 cu. metres of timber and 132,300 tonnes of cement.

Electricity production in 1990 was 330m. kWh, of which 323m. kWh were hydro-electric.

In 1996 there were 953,000 rural labourers, including 886,000 in farming, forestry and fisheries. The total sown area was 220,100 ha, including 52,500 ha sown to wheat, 18,300 ha to rapeseed, 18,300 ha to oil-bearing crops and 14,500 ha to soya beans. Output (in 1,000 tonnes), 1996: Wheat, 261; soya beans, 41; oil-bearing crops, 35; rapeseeds, 35. There were 5·10m. cattle, 1·21m. draught animals, 0·36m. horses, 0·22m. pigs, 11·10m. sheep and 5·83m. goats in 1996.

In 1991 there were 21,842 km of roads, of which 6,240 km were paved. There are airports at Lhasa and Bangda providing external links. 30,000 tourists visited Tibet in 1986.

In 1988 there were 2,437 primary schools, 67 secondary schools, 14 technical schools and 3 higher education institutes. The total number of primary school pupils in 1990–91 was 101,000. A university was established in 1985.

In 1990 there were some 9,000 medical personnel and 1,006 medical institutions, with a total of about 5,000 beds.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 1996, 20,780,000 (more than the total population of Australia); deaths, 8,030,000. 1996 birth rate (per 1,000 population), 16·98; death rate, 6·56. There were 9,339,615 marriages and 1,132,215 divorces in 1996. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, was 66·7 years for men and 70·5 years for women. Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 1·1%. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 44 per 1,000 live births. The average number of live births per woman (married or otherwise) in 1996 was 1·42. The lowest and highest averages by region were Beijing with 0·84 and Hainan with 1·78. Only Beijing and Shanghai had averages less than 1. In 1996 the average Chinese woman had 1·39 living children.

CLIMATE

Most of China has a temperate climate but, with such a large country, extending far inland and embracing a wide range of latitude as well as containing large areas at high altitude, many parts experience extremes of climate, especially in winter. Most rain falls during the summer, from May to Sept., though amounts decrease inland. Beijing (Peking), Jan. 24°F (–4·4°C), July 79°F (26°C). Annual rainfall 24·9" (623 mm). Chongqing, Jan. 45°F (7·2°C), July 84°F (28·9°C). Annual rainfall 43·7" (1,092 mm). Shanghai, Jan. 39°F (3·9°C), July 82°F (27·8°C). Annual rainfall 45·4" (1,135 mm). Tianjin, Jan. 24°F (–4·4°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 21·5" (533·4 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 21 Sept. 1949 the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference met in Beijing, convened by the Chinese Communist Party. The Conference adopted a 'Common Programme' of 60 articles and the 'Organic Law of the Central People's Government' (31 articles). Both became the basis of the Constitution adopted on 20 Sept. 1954 by the 1st National People's Congress, the supreme legislative body. The Consultative Conference continued to exist after 1954 as an advisory body. Its 9th session was convened in 1998. It has 2,093 members.

New Constitutions were adopted in 1975, 1978, 1982 and 1993, the latter embodying the principles of a 'Socialist market economy'.

The National People's Congress can amend the Constitution and nominally elects and has power to remove from office the highest officers of state. The Congress elects a Standing Committee (which supervises the State Council) and the President and Vice-President for a 5-year term. Congress has 2,978 deputies and is elected for a 5-year term, and meets once a year for 2 or 3 weeks. When not in session, its business is carried on by its Standing Committee. It is composed of deputies elected on a constituency basis by direct secret ballot. Any voter, and certain organizations, may nominate candidates. Nominations may exceed seats by 50–100%.

The State Council is the supreme executive organ and comprises the Prime Minister, Deputy Prime Ministers and State Councillors.

National Anthem. 'March of the Volunteers'; words by Tien Han, tune by Nieh Erh.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The 9th National People's Congress was elected in March 1998.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Jiang Zemin (b. 1926; elected 27 March 1993 and sworn in April 1993).

Deputy President: Hu Jintao.

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Zhu Rongji.

Deputy Prime Ministers: Li Lanqing, Qian Qichen, Wu Bangguo, Wen Jiabao.

Minister of Agriculture: Chen Yaobang. Civil Affairs: Doje Cering. Communications: Huang Zhendong. Construction: Yu Zhengsheng. Culture: Sun Jiazheng. Education: Chen Zhili. Finance: Xiang Huaicheng. Foreign Affairs: Tang Jiaxuan. Foreign Trade and Economic Co-operation: Shi Guangsheng. Information Industry: Wu Jichuan. Justice: Gao Changli. Labour and Social Security: Zhang Zuoji. Land and Natural Resources: Zhou Yongkang. National Defence: Chi Haotian. Personnel: Song Defu. Public Health: Zhang Wenkang. Public Security: Jia Chunwang. Railways: Fu Zhihuan. Science and Technology: Zhu Lilan. State Security: Xu Yongyue. Supervision: He Yong. Water Resources: Wang Shucheng.

Ministers heading State Commissions: Economics and Trade, Sheng Huaren. Family Planning, Zhang Weiqing. Nationalities Affairs, Li Dezhu. Development Planning, Zeng Peiyan. Science, Technology and Industry for National Defence, Liu Jibin.

De facto power is in the hands of the Communist Party of China, which had 57m. members in 1997. There are 8 other parties, all members of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference.

The members of the Standing Committee of the Politburo in March 1998 were Jiang Zemin (General Secretary), Li Peng, Zhu Rongji, Hu Jintao, Li Ruihuan, Li Lanqing and Wei Jianxing.

Local Government. There are 4 administrative levels: (1) Provinces, Autonomous Regions and the municipalities directly administered by the Government; (2) prefectures and autonomous prefectures (zhou); (3) counties, autonomous counties and municipalities; (4) towns. Local government organs ('congresses') exist at provincial, county and township levels; and in national minority autonomous prefectures, but not in ordinary prefectures which are just agencies of the provincial government. Up to county level congresses are elected directly. Elections take place every 3 years. Any person proposed by 10 electors may stand after political vetting. There are quotas for Party members and women. Multiple candidacies are permitted at local elections.

DEFENCE

President Jiang Zemin is chairman of the State and Party's Military Commissions. China is divided into 7 military regions. The military commander also commands the air, naval and civilian militia forces assigned to each region.

Conscription is compulsory but for organizational reasons selective: only some 10% of potential recruits are called up. Service is 3 years with the Army; and 4 years with the Air Force and Navy. A military academy to train senior officers in modern warfare was established in 1985.

Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$36,551m. (US$30 per capita) and represented 5·7% of GDP, down from 7·9% of GDP in 1985.

Nuclear weapons. Having carried out its first test in 1964, there have been 45 tests in all. The nuclear arsenal consisted of approximately 395 warheads in Jan. 1998 according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. China has been helping Pakistan with its nuclear efforts.

Army. The Army (PLA: 'People's Liberation Army') is divided into main and local forces. Main forces, administered by the 7 military regions in which they are stationed, but commanded by the Ministry of Defence, are available for operation anywhere and are better equipped. Local forces concentrate on the defence of their own regions. There are 24 Integrated Group Armies comprising 78 infantry, 10 armoured and 5 artillery divisions; and 15 engineer regiments. Equipment includes some 700 T-34/85 and T-54, 6,000 T-59 and 200 T-69 main battle tanks. Land-based missile forces consisted of (1995 estimate): 17 intercontinental and 70 intermediate range. Military aviation has 8 Gazelle armed helicopters, 20 S-70 Black Hawk and 24 Mi-17 transport helicopters. Total strength in 1997 was 2·09m. including some 1·07m. conscripts.

There is a para-military People's Armed Police force of 0·6m. under PLA command.

Joffe, E., The Chinese Army after Mao. London, 1987

Navy. The naval arm of the PLA comprises 1 nuclear-powered ballistic missile armed submarine, 5 nuclear-propelled fleet submarines, 1 diesel-powered cruise missile submarine and some 40 patrol submarines. Surface combatant forces include 18 missile-armed destroyers, 36 frigates, some 185 missile craft and 150 torpedo craft. There is a mixed coastal and inshore patrol force of some 500 vessels and 50 riverine craft. The mine warfare force consists of 40 ex-Soviet offshore mine-sweepers, some 12 inshore, and about 60 unmanned drones. There are 55 landing ships of various types and some 150 craft. Major auxiliaries number over 100, including 2 underway replenishment oilers and 1 fleet stores ship, and there are several hundred minor auxiliaries, yard craft and service vessels.

The land-based naval air force of about 620 combat aircraft, primarily for defensive and anti-submarine service, is organized into 3 bomber and 6 fighter divisions. The force includes some 120 H-5 torpedo bombers, about 100 Q-5 fighter/ground attack aircraft and 600 fighters, including J-5 (MiG-17), J-6 (MiG-19), and J-7 (MiG-21) types. Maritime patrol tasks are performed by 15 Be-6 and a small number of PS-5 flying boats, and anti-submarine operations by 40 Z-5 and 15 Super Frelon helicopters from shore and about 10 Z-9 afloat. There are also about 60 communications, training and transport aircraft.

Main naval bases are at Qingdao (North Sea Fleet), Shanghai (East Sea Fleet), and Zhanjiang (South Sea Fleet).

In 1997 personnel numbered some 280,000, including 25,000 in the naval air force, 29,000 coastal defence troops and 5,000 naval infantry.

Air Force. The Air Force has an estimated 3,500 front-line aircraft, organized in 100 regiments of jet-fighters and about 12 regiments of tactical bombers, plus reconnaissance, transport and helicopter units. Each regiment is made up of 3 or 4 squadrons (each 12 aircraft), and 3 regiments form a division.

Equipment includes about 500 J-7 (MiG-21) and 2,000 J-6 (MiG-19) interceptors and fighter-bombers, with about 500 H-5 (Il-28) jetbombers, about 120 H-6 Chinese-built copies of the Soviet Tu-16 twin-jet strategic bomber, plus 500 Q-5 twin-jet fighter-bombers, evolved from the MiG-19, while 50 Su-27 fighters have been supplied by Russia. About 100 of a locally-developed fighter designated J-8 (known in the West as 'Finback') are in service. Transport aircraft include about 500 Y-5 (An-2), Y-8 (An-12), Y-12, An-24/26, Il-76, Challenger and Il-14 fixed-wing types, plus 300 Z-5 (Mi-4) and Z-6 (Mi-8) helicopters, as well as 6 Super Puma VIP transport helicopters. Total strength (1997) 470,000 (160,000 conscripts), including 220,000 in air defence organization.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The People's Republic of China is a member of UN (and its Security Council).

ECONOMY

Policy. A ninth 5-year plan covers 1996–2000; there is also a 15-year strategic plan 'Long-Term Target for 2010'. These plans envisage a continued opening to the outside world, an enhanced development of agriculture, the reduction of tariff barriers and the development of the poorer regions.

A Communist Party statement of Nov. 1993 declared that public ownership should remain the mainstay of the economy, but alongside a modern enterprise system suited to the demands of a market economy in which government control is separated from management.

The new cabinet appointed in March 1998 was composed of technocrats chosen for their ability to solve problems and push through a series of reforms. The new Prime Minister Zhu Rongji stressed the urgency of reforming the debt-ridden state industrial sector consisting of some 370,000 enterprises, and its central bureaucracy. Zhu Rongji stated that the number of civil servants in the central bureaucracy would be halved in 1998.

Performance. In 1997 GDP growth was 8·8%, with a forecast for 1998 of 8%. Between 1990 and 1996 the average annual real growth in GNP per capita was 11%—the second highest in the world after Equatorial Guinea.

Budget. 1996 revenue was 740,799m. yuan; expenditure, 793,755m. yuan. Of this, local government revenue accounted for 374,692m. yuan and local government expenditure, 578,628m. yuan. Total debt incurred, 1996, 196,728m. yuan, of which 119,510m. yuan were foreign debts. The current account surplus was running at US$29,718m. in 1997.

Sources of revenue, 1996 (in 1m. yuan): Taxes, 690,982; industrial and commercial taxes, 527,004. Expenditure: Economic construction, 285,578 (1995); culture and education, 175,672 (1995); national defence, 63,672 (1995); government administration, 99,654 (1995); agriculture, 51,007; pensions and social welfare, 12,803; debt payments, 131,191.

Currency. The currency is called Renminbi (i.e., People's Currency). The unit of currency is the yuan (CNY) which is divided into 10 jiao, the jiao being divided into 10 fen. The yuan was floated to reflect market forces on 1 Jan. 1994 though remaining state-controlled, and the official rate of exchange was abolished. It became convertible for current transactions from 1 Dec. 1996. Total money supply in Dec. 1997 was 3,834bn. yuan. In Feb. 1998 foreign exchange reserves were US$140,333m. (only Japan, with US$209,778m., had more). Gold reserves were 12·7m. troy oz. in Feb. 1998. Annualized inflation was 6·1% in 1996, but was forecast to be around 80% in 1998.

Banking and Finance. The People's Bank of China is the central bank and bank of issue (Director: Dai Xianglong, b. 1945). There are a number of other banks, the largest of which are Agricultural Bank of China, Industrial and Commercial Bank of China, Construction Bank of China, Bank of China, Bank of Communications and Agricultural Development Bank of China. Legislation of 1995 permitted the establishment of commercial banks; credit co-operatives may be transformed into banks, mainly to provide credit to small businesses. Insurance is handled by the People's Insurance Company. There were (1994) 350,813 credit co-operatives. The Bank of China is responsible for foreign banking operations.

Savings bank deposits were 2,151,880m. yuan in 1994.

611,566m. yuan was loaned from State Banks in 1996. It is estimated that up to 20% of outstanding loans are bad debts (about US$145bn. at the end of 1996).

There are stock exchanges in the Shenzhen Special Economic Zone and in Shanghai. A securities trading system linking 6 cities (Securities Automated Quotations System) was inaugurated in 1990 for trading in government bonds.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in general use alongside traditional units of measurement.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity, 1996, 0·2m. MW. 1996 electricity output was 1,081,310m. kWh. Consumption per capita was an estimated 684 kWh in 1995. Sources of energy in 1996 as percentage of total energy production: Coal, 74·8%; crude oil, 17·1%; hydro-electric power, 6·2%; natural gas, 1·9%. Generating is not centralized; local units range between 30 and 60 MW of output.

Oil and Gas. There are on-shore fields at Daqing, Shengli, Dagang and Karamai, and 10 provinces south of the Yangtze River have been opened for exploration in co-operation with foreign companies. Crude oil production was 157·33m. tonnes in 1996.

Natural gas is available from fields near Canton and Shanghai, and in Sichuan province. Production was 20,114m. cu. metres in 1996.

Minerals. Most provinces contain coal, and there are 70 major production centres, of which the largest are in Hebei, Shanxi, Shandong, Jilin and Anhui. Coal reserves were estimated at 1,000,850m. tonnes in 1996. Coal production was 1,397m. tonnes in 1996.

Iron ore reserves were 47,560m. tonnes in 1996. Deposits are abundant in the anthracite field of Shanxi, in Hebei and in Shandong, and are found in conjunction with coal and worked in the north-east. Production in 1996 was 249·6m. tonnes, making China the world's leading iron ore producer.

Tin ore is plentiful in Yunnan, where the tin-mining industry has long existed. Tin production was 40,000 tonnes in 1989.

China is a major producer of wolfram (tungsten ore). Mining of wolfram is carried on in Hunan, Guangdong and Yunnan.

Salt production was 29·96m. tonnes in 1994; gold production was 110 tonnes in 1992; output of other minerals in 1989 (in 1,000 tonnes): Aluminium, 770; copper, 540; nickel, 30; lead, 270; zinc, 430. Other minerals produced: Barite, bismuth, graphite, gypsum, mercury, molybdenum, silver. Reserves (in tonnes) of phosphate ore, 15,766m.; sylvite, 458m.; salt, 402,400m.

Agriculture. Agriculture accounts for approximately 21% of GDP. In 1996 the sown area was 152·4m. ha comprising (in 1m. ha): rice, 31·41; wheat, 29·61; corn, 24·50; beans, 10·54; tubers, 9·8; oil-bearing crops, 12·56m. Intensive agriculture and horticulture have been practised for millennia. Present-day policy aims to avert the traditional threats from floods and droughts by soil conservancy, afforestation, irrigation and drainage projects, and to increase the 'high stable yields' areas by introducing fertilizers, pesticides and improved crops. In spite of this, 18·1m. ha of land were flooded in 1996 and 20·1m. ha were covered by drought. 50·38m. ha were irrigated in 1996. In Aug. 1998 more than 21m. ha, notably in the Yangtze valley, were under water as China experienced its worst flooding in recent times.

'Township and village enterprises' in agriculture comprise enterprises previously run by the communes of the Maoist era, co-operatives run by rural labourers and individual firms of a certain size. There were 24·95m. such enterprises in 1994, employing 120·18m. persons. There were 2,157 state farms in 1994 with 5·18m. employees. In 1996 there were 234·38m. rural households. The rural workforce was 452·88m., of whom 322·6m. were employed in agriculture, fishing or land management. Net per capita annual peasant income, 1996: 1,926 yuan.

In 1992 there were 25,023 agricultural technical stations. There were 670,848 large and medium-sized tractors in 1996.

Agricultural production (in 1m. tonnes), 1996: Rice, 195·10; wheat, 110·57; corn, 127·47; beans, 17·90; tubers, 35·36; tea, 0·59; cotton, 4·20; oil-bearing crops, 22·11; sugar-cane, 66·88; fruit, 46·53. The gross value of agricultural output in 1996 was 2,342,866m. yuan.

Livestock, 1996: Draught animals, 91,920,000; cattle, 139,813,000 (including 4,470,000 milch cows); goats, 170,680,000; pigs, 457,360,000; sheep, 132,690,000; horses,10,038,000; chickens (1995), 2·8bn.; ducks (1995), 463m. China has more goats, pigs, sheep, horses and chickens than any other country, having overtaken Australia in 1996 as the country with the greatest number of sheep. China also has more than half of the world's ducks. Meat production in 1996 was 59·15m. tonnes; milk, 7·36m. tonnes; eggs, 19·54m. tonnes.

Powell, S. G., Agricultural Reform in China: from Communes to Commodity Economy, 1978–1990. Manchester Univ. Press, 1992

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forests was 133·32m. ha, or 14·3% of the total land area (133·76m. ha in 1990). Total roundwood production in 1995 was 300·36m. cu. metres, making China the second largest producer after the USA.

Fisheries. Total catch, 1996: 32·88m. tonnes, of which 12·75m. tonnes were freshwater produce. China's annual catch is the largest in the world, and accounts for more than 20% of the world total every year. In 1986 the annual catch had been just over 8m. tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Cottage industries persist into the 21st century. Modern industrial development began with the manufacture of cotton textiles, and the establishment of silk filatures, steel plants, flour mills and match factories. In 1996 there were 7,986,500 industrial enterprises. 113,800 were state-owned, 1,591,800 were collectives and 6,210,700 were individually owned. A law of 1988 ended direct state control of firms and provided for the possibility of bankruptcy.

Output of major products, 1996 (in tonnes): Cotton yarn, 5·12m.; paper, 26·38m.; sugar, 6·40m.; salt, 29·03m.; steel, 101·24m.; rolled steel, 93·38m.; cement, 491·1m.; chemical fertilizers, 28·09m.; aluminium ware, 159,100; silk, 94,900; woollen fabrics, 459·5m. metres; bicycles, 33·61m. units; TV sets, 35·41m. units; radios, 56·50m. units; cameras, 41·20m. units; refrigerators, 9·79m. units; motor vehicles, 1,470,000 units; locomotives, 1,050 units.

The gross value of industrial output in 1996 was 9,959,500m. yuan.

Labour. The employed population at the 1990 census was 647·2m. (291·1m. female). By 1996 it was estimated to have risen to 688·5m., of whom 490·3m. were in rural areas and 198·2m. in urban areas. There were 329·1m. people working in agriculture, 97·6m. in manufacturing, 45·1m. in commerce, 34·1m. in construction and 20·1m. in communications. 109·4m. worked in state-owned enterprises, 29·5m. in urban collectives, and 50·2m. were self-employed. In 1994 there were 446·54m. working as individual rural labourers or in rural collectives and there were 15·57m. individual urban labourers.

At the 1990 census there was a floating population of 21m. internal migrants who tour the country seeking seasonal employment. There were 5·53m. urban unemployed in 1996 (3% of the urban population). Almost one-third of unemployed people had not worked for a year. Only a quarter of the unemployed in 1996 were registered at employment services and only 1·7% received unemployment relief payments. In early 1998 the official unemployment rate was 3%, but was thought to be much higher.

The average non-agricultural annual wage in 1996 was 6,210 yuan. 4,302 yuan, urban collectives; 6,280 yuan, state-owned enterprises; 8,261 yuan, other enterprises. There is a 6-day 48-hour working week. Minimum working age was fixed at 16 in 1991. There were 19,098 labour disputes in 1994.

Trade Unions. The All-China Federation of Trade Unions is headed by Wei Jianxing. In 1991 there were 614,000 union branches with a total membership of 103·89m. (39·92m. female).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$116,275m. in 1996. Actual foreign investment totalled US$33,800m. in 1994. Direct foreign investment (in US$1m.) in 1995 by major countries of origin: Taiwan, 11,600; USA, 10,900; Japan, 10,500; Singapore, 3,900; South Korea, 2,300; UK, 2,200.

There are 6 Special Economic Zones at Shanghai and in the provinces of Guangdong and Fujian, in which concessions are made to foreign businessmen. The Pudong New Area in Shanghai is designated a special development area. Since 1979 joint ventures with foreign firms have been permitted. A law of April 1991 reduced taxation on joint ventures to 33%. There is no maximum limit on the foreign share of the holdings; the minimum limit is 25%. Contracts between Chinese and foreign firms are only legally valid if in writing and approved by the appropriate higher authority.

In June 1998 the US president extended most-favoured-nation status to China for a further year.

Imports and Exports. 1996: Imports, US$138,944m.; exports, US$151,197m.

Major exports in 1996 (in 1,000 tonnes): Crude oil, 20,330; silk and satin, 147m. metres; coal, 29,030; cotton cloth, 3,043m. metres; cement, 11,800. Imports: Wheat, 8,250; steel products, 15,840; chemical fertilizers, 18,570; iron ore, 43,870.

Exports to (and imports from) major trade partners in 1995: Hong Kong, 24·2% (6·5%); Japan, 19·1% (22·0%); USA, 16·6% (12·2%); Taiwan, 2·1% (11·2%), South Korea, 4·5% (7·8%); Germany, 3·8% (6·1%); Singapore, 2·4% (2·6%). Customs duties with Taiwan were abolished in 1980.

Roads. The total road length was 1,185,800 km in 1996. In 1994, 998,077 km were hard-surfaced. In 1996 there were 5·75m. trucks and 4·8m. passenger vehicles. 2·89m. vehicles were privately owned. The use of bicycles is very widespread. In 1996, 9,838m. tonnes of freight and 11,221m. persons were transported by road.

There were 253,537 traffic accidents in 1994, with 66,362 fatalities.

Rail. In 1996 there were 56,700 km of railway including 10,100 km electrified. Gauge is standard except for some 600 mm track in Yunnan. In 1996 the railways carried 1,668m. tonnes of freight and 941m. passengers.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Beijing and Shanghai (Hongqiao). Altogether there were 142 civil airports in 1996, 106 of which can accommodate Boeing 737s or larger aircraft. The national and major airlines are state-owned, except Shanghai Airlines (75% municipality-owned, 25% private) and Shenzhen Airlines (private). Chinese airlines operating scheduled services in 1998 were China Southern Airlines (10,767,000 passengers carried in 1995), Air China (6,274,000 passengers in 1995), China Eastern Airlines (6,240,000), China Southwest Airlines (5,071,000), China Northern Airlines (4,442,000), China Northwest Airlines (2,488,000), Xiamen Airlines (2,403,000), China Yunnan Airlines (1,854,000), Xinjiang Airlines (1,159,000), Changan Airlines, China National Aviation, Fujian Airlines, Hainan Airlines, Shandong Airlines, Shanghai Airlines, Shanxi Airlines, Shenzhen Airlines, Sichuan Airlines and Xiamen Airlines.

In 1996 airlines carried 55·55m. passengers (4·40m. international) and 1·15m. tonnes of freight. In 1995 the busiest airport was Beijing, with 15,045,000 passengers (11,804,000 on domestic flights), followed by Guangzhou (Baiyun), with 12,575,000 passengers (12,204,000 on domestic flights) and Shanghai (Hongqiao), with 11,076,000 passengers (9,361,000 on domestic flights).

In 1998 services were also provided by Aeroflot, Air France, Air Kazakhstan, Air Koryo, Air Macau, Air Ukraine, Alitalia, All Nippon Airways, Ansett Australia, Asiana, Austrian Airlines, Belavia, British Airways, Canadian Airlines International, Chita Avia, DRAGONAIR, El Al, Ethiopian Airlines, Finnair, Iran Air, JAL, JAT, KLM, Korean Air, LOT, Lufthansa, Malaysia Airlines, Malév, Mongolian Airlines, Pakistan International Airlines, President Airlines, Qantas Airways, Royal Brunei Airlines, Royal Nepal Airlines, SAS, Singapore Airlines, Swissair, Tarom, Thai Airways International, United Airlines and Uzbekiston Airways.

Shipping. In 1995 the ocean-going fleet consisted of 1,826 vessels totalling 34·27m. DWT, representing 5·18% of the world's total fleet tonnage. 308 vessels (35·22% of tonnage) were registered under foreign flags. Total tonnage registered, 15·83m. GRT, including oil-tankers, 2·28m. GRT, and container ships, 1·35m. GRT.

Cargo handled by the major ports in 1996 (in tonnes): Shanghai, 164m.; Qinhuangdao, 83m.; Ningbo, 76m.; Guangzhou (Canton), 75m.; Dalian, 64m.; Tianjin, 62m.; Qingdao, 60m. In 1993, 125·08m. tonnes of freight were carried.

Inland waterways totalled 110,593 km in 1994. 1,070·91m. tonnes of freight and 261·65m. passengers were carried.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 70,310,000 telephone main lines (55·8 per 1,000 persons), and in 1995, 270,000 fax machines. At the end of 1996 there were 6·85m. mobile telephone subscribers (3·62m. at end of 1995). There were approximately 1·5m. Internet users in Dec. 1998, of whom 92·8% were male and 83·2% under 35 years of age. At the beginning of the year there had only been around 500,000 users. In 1996 there were 2·6m. PCs in use (2·1 per 1,000 inhabitants).

Postal Services. There were 72,496 post offices in 1996. The use of Pinyin transcription of place names has been requested for mail to addresses in China (e.g., 'Beijing' not 'Peking').

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. Six new codes of law (including criminal and electoral) came into force in 1980, to regularize the legal unorthodoxy of previous years. There is no provision for habeas corpus. The death penalty has been extended from treason and murder to include rape, embezzlement, smuggling, drug-dealing, bribery and robbery with violence. There were 4,376 reported executions in 1996. 'People's courts' are divided into some 30 higher, 200 intermediate and 2,000 basic-level courts, and headed by the Supreme People's Court. The latter tries cases, hears appeals and supervises the people's courts.

People's courts are composed of a president, vice-presidents, judges and 'people's assessors' who are the equivalent of jurors. 'People's conciliation committees' are charged with settling minor disputes.

There are also special military courts.

Procuratorial powers and functions are exercised by the Supreme People's Procuracy and local procuracies.

Religion. The government accords legality to 5 religions only: Buddhism, Islam, Protestantism, Roman Catholicism and Taoism. Confucianism, Buddhism and Taoism have long been practised. Confucianism has no ecclesiastical organization and appears rather as a philosophy of ethics and government. Taoism—of Chinese origin—copied Buddhist ceremonial soon after the arrival of Buddhism two millennia ago. Buddhism in return adopted many Taoist beliefs and practices. A more tolerant attitude towards religion had emerged by 1979, and the Government's Bureau of Religious Affairs was reactivated.

Ceremonies of reverence to ancestors have been observed by the whole population regardless of philosophical or religious beliefs.

Moslems are found in every province of China, being most numerous in the Ningxia–Hui Autonomous Region, Yunnan, Shaanxi, Gansu, Hebei, Honan, Shandong, Sichuan, Xinjiang and Shanxi. They totalled 18m. in 1997.

Roman Catholicism has had a footing in China for more than 3 centuries. In 1992 there were about 3·5m. Catholics who are members of the Patriotic Catholic Association, which declared its independence from Rome in 1958. In 1979 there were about 1,000 priests. In 1977 there were 78 bishops and 4 apostolic administrators, not all of whom were permitted to undertake religious activity. This figure included 46 'democratically elected' bishops not recognized by the Vatican. A bishop of Beijing was consecrated in 1979 without the consent of the Vatican and 2 auxiliary bishops of Shanghai in 1984. Archbishop Gong Pinmei, arrested in 1955, was freed in 1988. Protestants are members of the All-China Conference of Protestant Churches. 2 Protestant bishops were installed in 1988, the first for 30 years. In 1997 there were an estimated 73,000,000 Christians in total.

In 1997 there were also estimated to be 247,000,000 Chinese folk-religionists, 147,000,000 atheists, 104,000,000 Buddhists, 1,000,000 advocates of traditional beliefs and 637,000,000 non-religious persons.

Legislation of 1994 prohibits foreign nationals from setting up religious organizations.

Education. In 1996, 82·18% of the adult population were literate (89·88% of men and 74·46% of women). In 1994, 98·4% of school-age children attended school. In 1993 maximum school fees were 10 yuan a term, to which other charges might be added. In 1996 there were 187,324 kindergartens with 26·66m. children and 889,000 teachers. An educational reform of 1985 planned to phase in compulsory 9-year education consisting of 6 years of primary schooling and 3 years of secondary schooling, to replace a previous 5-year system. In 1996 there were 645,983 primary schools with 5,736,000 teachers and 136·15m. pupils; 79,967 secondary schools, with 3,465,000 teachers and 57·39m. pupils; and 10,049 vocational schools with 308,000 teachers and 4·73m. students. There were 1,032 institutes of higher education, including universities, with 403,000 teachers and 3·02m. students. One-third of all higher education students study engineering.

There is an Academy of Sciences with provincial branches. An Academy of Social Sciences was established in 1977.

In 1995–96 in the private sector there were 3 general universities and 9 specialized universities (aeronautics and astronautics; agricultural engineering; agriculture; chemical technology; foreign studies; labour; medicine; traditional Chinese medicine; polytechnic). In the public sector there were 60 general universities, 2 for ethnic minorities and the following specialized universities: Agriculture, 12; agriculture and land reclamation, 1; land reclamation, 1; architecture, 2; architecture and technology, 1; chemical technology, 1; coal and chemical technology, 1; electronic science and technology, 1; engineering, 1; fisheries, 1; foreign languages, 1; forestry, 1; hydraulic and electrical engineering, 1; international business and economics, 1; international studies, 1; iron and steel technology, 1; maritime studies, 1; medicine, 11; traditional Chinese medicine, 2; mining and technology, 1; petroleum, 1; pharmacology, 1; political science and law, 1; polytechnic, 8; radio and television, 1; science and technology, 5; surveying and mapping, 1; teaching, 4; technology, 6; textiles, 1.

In 1996 there were also 893 teacher training schools. In 1994, 19,000 students were studying abroad. Fees were introduced for university students in 1996–97.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to 155,611m. yuan (2·3% of GNP), around 11·9% of total government expenditure.

Health. Medical treatment is free only for certain groups of employees, but where costs are incurred they are partly borne by the patient's employing organization. In 1996 there were 1·94m. doctors, of whom 0·35m. practised Chinese medicine, and 1·16m. nurses. About 10% of doctors are in private practice.

In 1996 there were 67,964 hospitals (with 2·87m. beds), 528 sanatoria (with 109,000 beds) and 103,472 clinics. There were 24 beds per 10,000 population in 1996.

Welfare. In 1996 there were 42,821 social welfare institutions with 769,348 inmates. Numbers (in 1,000) of beneficiaries of relief funds: Persons in poor rural households, 30,790; in poor urban households, 2,610; persons in rural households entitled to 'the 5 guarantees' (food, clothing, medical care, housing, education for children or funeral expenses), 2,675; retired, laid-off or disabled workers, 535. The major relief funds (in 1,000 yuan) in 1996 were: Families of deceased or disabled servicemen, 5,187,970; poor households, 712,270; orphaned, disabled, old and young persons, 1,856,680; welfare institutions, 1,551,000.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. In 1994 there were 1,107 radio and 766 TV stations. The Central People's Broadcasting Station provides 2 central programmes, regional services, special services, a Taiwan service and external services. China Central Television (colour by PAL) transmits 3 programmes from Beijing, a programme from Shanghai, and an English-language programme. There are 29 regional programmes transmitted from 361 local stations. By 1995 about 600 cable TV systems had been licensed. In 1995 there were 225·5m. radio receivers (only the USA has more) and 250m. TV receivers (the greatest number in any country in the world). In 1980 there had been just 9m., representing an increase of nearly 241m. between 1980 and 1995, or more TV sets than were in use in the USA (the country with the second highest number of sets) in 1995. In urban areas 96%, and in rural areas 48·5%, of households possessed a TV set in 1994. The use of satellite receiving dishes was prohibited in 1993.

Cinema. There were 4,639 cinemas in 1995. 148 feature films were made in 1994. In 1992 there were some 10,600m. cinema attendances.

Press. In 1994 there were 1,635 newspapers with a combined circulation of 125,200m. and 7,325 periodicals with 2,210m. The Party newspaper is Renmin Ribao (People's Daily), which had a daily circulation of 3m. in 1994. 103,836 book titles were produced in 6,007·75m. copies in 1994. There were 2,596 public libraries in 1993.

Tourism. 51,128,000 tourists visited in 1996, including 44,229,000 from Hong Kong, Taiwan and Macao, and 155,000 other overseas Chinese. The World Tourism Organization predicts that China will overtake France as the world's most visited destination by 2020 and become the world's 4th most important source of tourists to other countries. Income from tourists in 1996 was US$10,200m.

Libraries. In 1993 there were 2,579 public libraries and 5,000 higher education libraries with a combined 720,571,000 volumes and 11,401,724 registered users.

HONG KONG

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Hong Kong island and the southern tip of the Kowloon peninsula were ceded by China to Britain after the first and second Anglo-Chinese Wars by the Treaty of Nanking 1842 and the Convention of Peking 1860. The New Territories were leased to Britain for 99 years by China in 1898. Talks began in Sept. 1982 between Britain and China over the future of Hong Kong after the lease expiry in 1997. On 19 Dec. 1984, the two countries signed the Joint Declaration of the British and Chinese Governments on the Question of Hong Kong which entered into force on 27 May 1985. By the terms of this Hong Kong became, with effect from 1 July 1997, a Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China enjoying a high degree of autonomy, and vested with executive, legislative and independent judicial power, including that of final adjudication. It was agreed that the laws currently in force in Hong Kong would remain basically unchanged. The existing social and economic systems, and the present lifestyle, were to remain unchanged for another 50 years. This 'one country, two systems' principle, embodied in the Basic Law, which was enacted by the National People's Congress of the People's Republic of China in 1990, became the constitution for the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Hong Kong island is situated off the southern coast of the Chinese mainland 32 km east of the mouth of the Pearl River. The area of the island is 79·99 sq. km. It is separated from the mainland by a fine natural harbour. On the opposite side is the peninsula of Kowloon (46·27 sq. km). Total area of the Territory is 1,091 sq. km, a large part of it being steep and unproductive hillside. Country parks and special areas cover over 40% of the land area. Since 1945, the Government has reclaimed over 5,400 ha from the sea, principally from the seafronts of Hong Kong and Kowloon, facing the harbour. The 'New Territories' are on the mainland, north of Kowloon.

The population was 5,674,100 at the 1991 census. Estimate (1998) 6,805,600. Some 43,100 persons emigrated in 1995. The British Nationality Scheme enables persons to acquire citizenship without leaving Hong Kong. There were 45,986 legal immigrants from China in 1995. 60% of the population was born in Hong Kong, 34% in China (1991 census). The population of Vietnamese migrants ('boat people') in Oct. 1996 was 12,710. All remaining 'boat people' were repatriated by Jan. 1997.

The official languages are Chinese and English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Annual growth rate, 1998, 2·8%. Vital statistics, 1998 (provisional): Known births, 53,100; known deaths, 32,200; registered marriages, 31,700. Rates (per 1,000): Birth, 7·9 death, 4·8; marriage, 4·7; infant mortality, 3·2 (per 1,000 live births). Life expectancy, 1998: Males, 76·9 years; females, 82·3. The most popular age for marrying was 30 for males and 27 for females. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 1·9 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is sub-tropical, tending towards temperate for nearly half the year, the winter being cool and dry and the summer hot and humid, May to Sept. being the wettest months. Normal temperatures are Jan. 60°F (15·8°C), July 84°F (28·8°C). Annual rainfall 87" (2,214·3 mm).

THE BRITISH ADMINISTRATION

Hong Kong was administered by the Hong Kong Government. The Governor was the head of Government and presided over the Executive Council, which advised the Governor on all important matters. The last British Governor was Chris Patten. In Oct. 1996 the Executive Council consisted of 3 ex-officio members and 10 appointed members, of whom 1 was an official member. The chief functions of the Legislative Council were to enact laws, control public expenditure and put questions to the administration on matters of public interest. The Legislative Council elected in Sept. 1995 was, for the first time, constituted solely by election. It comprised 60 members, of whom 20 were elected from geographical constituencies, 30 from functional constituencies encompassing all eligible persons in a workforce of 2·9m., and 10 from an election committee formed by members of 18 district boards. A president was elected from and by the members.

At the elections on 17 Sept. 1995 turn-out for the geographical seats was 35·79%, and for the functional seats (21 of which were contested), 40·42%. The Democratic Party and its allies gained 29 seats, the Liberal Party 10 and the pro-Beijing Democratic Alliance, 6. The remaining seats went to independents.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In Dec. 1995 the Standing Committee of China's National People's Congress set up a Preparatory Committee of 150 members (including 94 from Hong Kong) to oversee the retrocession of Hong Kong to China on 1 July 1997. In Nov. 1996 the Preparatory Committee nominated a 400-member Selection Committee to select the Chief Executive of Hong Kong and a provisional legislature to replace the Legislative Council. The Selection Committee was composed of Hong Kong residents, with 60 seats reserved for delegates to the National People's Congress and appointees of the People's Political Consultative Conference. On 11 Dec. 1996 Tung Chee-hwa was elected Chief Executive by 80% of the Selection Committee's votes.

On 21 Dec. 1996 the Selection Committee selected a provisional legislature which began its activities in Jan. 1997 while the Legislative Council was still functioning. In Jan. 1997 the provisional legislature began repealing some civil rights legislation.

Theoretically Hong Kong is a Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China. It is supposed to retain a high degree of autonomy, and the legislative, judicial and administrative systems which were previously in operation are to remain in place. The Special Administrative Region Government is also empowered to decide on Hong Kong's monetary and economic policies independent of China.

In July 1997 the first-past-the-post system of electing the Legislative Council was replaced by proportional representation.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the Legislative Council election held on 25 May 1998 pro-democracy candidates won 63% of the popular vote, compared to 51% in the 1995 election. However, under an electoral system which allows only a third of the seats to be chosen by the entire electorate, the pro-democracy members remained a minority political force. Of the 20 seats elected by universal suffrage, 9 went to the Democratic Party, 3 to Frontier and 1 to Citizens (all pro-democracy), 5 to the Democratic Alliance for the Betterment of HK and 2 to independents. The other 40 seats were elected by committees and professional associations. The make-up of the Legislative Council following the elections was: Democratic Party, 13; DAB (pro-China, populist), 9; Liberals (pro-business), 9; HK Progressive Alliance (pro-China), 5; Frontier, 3; Citizens, 1; Non-affiliates, 20.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Chief Executive: Tung Chee-hwa (b. 1937; elected 11 Dec. 1996).

Chief Secretary: Anson Chan, CBE, JP.

Financial Secretary: Donald Tsang, OBE, JP.

The Chief Executive is aided by the Executive Council consisting of the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and 12 other members.

Local Government. There are 2 municipal councils, the Urban Council and the Regional Council. With all appointed seats abolished in 1995, 59 of 80 seats were open to direct election in the March 1995 elections. Turn-out was 25·8%. Elections to the 18 Consultative District Boards set up in 1982 were held in Sept. 1994; turn-out was 33·1%.

At local council elections on 18 Sept. 1994 for 346 council seats, turn-out was 33·1%. The United Democratic Party gained 77 seats; the Alliance for Democracy, 28; the Democratic Alliance for a Better Hong Kong (pro-Beijing), 37; the Liberal Party, 30; the United Democrats of Hong Kong won 11 out of 27 seats; independents 11; the Liberal Democratic Federation 3; and Communists 2.

ECONOMY

Performance. Hong Kong was second behind Singapore in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Reports, which assesses countries on their potential for economic growth and their income levels, in both 1997 and 1998. Following real GDP growth of 5·7% in 1997, the economy was expected to contract by around 4% in 1998, representing Hong Kong's most severe recession since the 1970s.

Budget. The total Government revenue and expenditure for financial years ending 31 March were as follows (in HK$1m.):

	1996	1997	1998
Revenue	180,045	208,400	275,200
Expenditure	191,338	173,600	194,200

Public expenditure, 1998, was divided as follows (HK$1bn.): Education, 47·0; support, 30·2; health, 28·0; housing, 24·7; security, 23·8; social welfare, 21·7; infrastructure, 21·5; economic, 17·8; community and external affairs, 13·1; environment, 7·0.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Hong Kong dollar (HKD) of 100 cents. Banknotes are issued by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and the Standard Chartered Bank, and, from May 1994, the Bank of China. Total money supply was HK$174m. in Jan. 1998. Fiscal reserves at 31 March 1997 stood at HK$163,000m. In Feb. 1998 gold reserves were 70,000 troy oz. and foreign exchange reserves US$78,617m.

Banking and Finance. As at Dec. 1995 there were 185 banks licensed under the Banking Ordinance, of which 31 were locally incorporated, 63 restricted licence banks and 154 representative offices of foreign banks. Licensed bank deposits were HK$2,601,971m. in June 1997; restricted licence bank deposits were HK$62,033m. There were 132 deposit-taking companies registered under the Banking Ordinance with total deposits of HK$18,419m. as at Nov. 1995.

There is a stock exchange. The summer of 1997 saw record highs on the Hang Seng index (16,365 in July 1997 compared with 10,681 in July 1996). In July 1997 the average daily turnover was HK$19,500m.

Weights and Measures. Metric, British Imperial, Chinese and US units are all in current use in Hong Kong. However, Government departments have now effectively adopted metric units; all new legislation uses metric terminology and existing legislation is being progressively metricated. Metrication is also proceeding in the private sector.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 10·32m. kW in 1994. Production in 1994 was 25·14bn. kWh. Consumption in 1998 was 35·4bn. kWh.

Water. Reservoirs are needed to store the summer rainfall in order to meet supply requirements. There are 17 impounding reservoirs with a total capacity of 586m. cu. metres. Water is also purchased (720m. cu. metres in 1996). Consumption in 1996 was 928m cu. metres.

Agriculture. Agriculture supplies about a quarter of domestic demand. Only 3·4% of the total land area is suitable for crop farming and most produce derives from intensive market gardening: 1,350 ha were under cultivation in 1995. In 1995, 88,000 tonnes of vegetables and 4,820 tonnes of fruit and nuts were produced. Poultry production was 24,921 tonnes; milk, 407 tonnes; eggs, 1,112 tonnes. There were 109,000 pigs in 1996.

Forestry. Timber production in 1995 was 200,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries. The fishing fleet of 4,800 vessels supplies about 62% of fresh marine fish consumed locally. In 1995 the marine fish catch was 203,300 tonnes. Inland freshwater farming and coastal marine farming provided 8,200 tonnes of fish.

INDUSTRY

An economic policy based on free enterprise and free trade, a skilled workforce, an efficient commercial infrastructure, the modern and efficient sea-port (including container shipping terminals) and airport facilities; a geographical position relative to markets in North America and traditional trading links with the UK all contributed to Hong Kong's success as a modern industrial territory. Links with China have been growing increasingly strong in recent years and will remain so.

In 1995 there were 31,114 manufacturing firms employing 386,106 persons. Firms by product type (and persons employed): Textiles and clothing, 7,046 (139,931); plastics, 2,250 (15,997); electronics, 1,109 (44,078); watches and clocks, 1,006 (12,119); electrical appliances, 136 (2,589); shipbuilding, 374 (4,510).

Labour. In 1998 the labour force (economically active population aged 15 and over) totalled 3,434,000 (1,356,000 female). The employed population in 1996 included 1,047,000 people in wholesale, retail, restaurants and hotels, 391,000 in finance, insurance, business and real estate, 327,000 in manufacturing, 184,000 in the civil service and 77,000 manual labourers. In 1990, 3,495,000 working days were lost due to strikes and lockouts. Unemployment in June 1998 was running at a 15-year high of 4·5%.

EXTERNAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS

Imports and Exports. Industry is mainly export-oriented. In 1998, the total value of imports (c.i.f.) was HK$1,429·1bn. and exports (f.o.b.) HK$1,347·6bn. The major markets for domestic exports (in HK$1m.), 1996, were: People's Republic of China, 61,600; USA, 53,900; Germany, 11,400; and Japan, 11,300. Totals for the Asia-Pacific Economic Co-operation Group and the EU as a whole (in HK$1m.) were 162,200 and 37,000 respectively. The leading sources of imports (in HK$1m.) in 1996 were: People's Republic of China, 570,400; Japan, 208,220; Taiwan, 123,200; and USA, 121,100. Totals for the Asia-Pacific Economic Co-operation Group and the EU as a whole (in HK$1m.) were 1,287,000 and 170,600 respectively.

In 1996 domestic exports included (in HK$1m.): Clothing and accessories, 69,400; electrical machinery and parts, 30,400; textiles and fabrics, 13,700; watches and clocks, 12,000. The chief import items were consumer goods (573,000), raw materials (540,900), capital goods (324,000) and foodstuffs (65,200).

Visible trade normally carries an adverse balance which is offset by a favourable balance of invisible trade, in particular transactions in connection with air transportation, shipping, tourism and banking services.

Hong Kong has a free exchange market. Foreign merchants may remit profits or repatriate capital. Import and export controls are kept to the minimum, consistent with strategic requirements.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1998 there were 1,865 km of roads, more than 900 km of which were in the New Territories. There are 8 major road tunnels, including 2 under Victoria Harbour. In 1998 there were 501,000 licensed motor vehicles, including 318,000 private cars, 115,000 goods vehicles and 23,000 motor cycles. There were 14,790 road accidents in 1995, 259 fatal. A total of 14·8m. tonnes of cargo were transported by road in 1996.

Rail. There is an electric tramway with a total track length of 33 km, and a cable tramway connecting the Peak district with the lower levels in Victoria. The electrified Kowloon-Canton Railway runs for 34 km from the terminus at Hung Hom in Kowloon to the border point at Lo Wu. It carried 232m. passengers in 1995. In 1996, 939,000 tonnes of cargo were transported by rail. A light rail system (32 km) is operated by the Kowloon-Canton Railway Corporation in Tuen Mun, Yuen Long and Tin Shui Wai; it carried 123m. passengers in 1995.

A metro, the Mass Transit Railway system, comprises 43·2 km with 38 stations. It carried 812m. passengers in 1995.

In 1996 a total of 3·9m. passenger journeys were made on public transport (including local railways, buses etc.).

Civil Aviation. The new Chek Lap Kok airport, built on reclaimed land off Lantau Island to the west of Hong Kong, opened in July 1998, replacing Hong Kong International Airport (Kai Tak), which was situated on the north shore of Kowloon Bay. After initial problems following its inauguration, 61 airlines now operate services. British Airways operates 14 flights per week to the UK. Cathay Pacific Airways, one of the 3 Hong Kong-based airlines, operates more than 365 passenger and cargo services weekly to Europe (including 16 passenger and 5 cargo services per week to the UK), the Far and Middle East, South Africa, Australasia and North America. Hong Kong Dragon Airlines Ltd operates scheduled and non-scheduled services to a number of cities in Asia and the People's Republic of China. Air Hong Kong, an all-cargo operator, provides a scheduled service 5 times a week to Manchester, UK, and operates non-scheduled services around the region. In 1995–96, 150,118 aircraft arrived and departed. In 1996, 23·48m. passengers and 1·56m. tonnes of freight were carried on aircraft. Hong Kong International Airport handled more international freight in 1996 than any other airport.

Shipping. The port of Hong Kong handled 12·6m. 20-ft equivalent units in 1995. The Kwai Chung Container Port has 31 berths with 6,059 metres of quay backed by 228 ha of cargo handling area. Merchant shipping in 1995 totalled 8,795,000 GRT. In 1995, more than 41,000 ocean-going vessels, 108,000 river trading vessels and 64,000 international passenger vessels called at Hong Kong. In 1996, 125·4m. tonnes of freight were handled.

Telecommunications. In 1998 there were 3,708,000 telephones (554 per 1,000 population), of which 1,549,000 were for business use and 2,159,000 were residential lines. There were also over 284,000 fax lines. Basic local telephone services are provided by Hong Kong Telecom, which also offers fax services and value-added telephone services. The company also provides international voice, data and video transmission services, telex and telegram services, international private leased circuits, and shore-to-ship and ground-to-air communications. International facilities are provided through submarine cables, microwave and satellite radio systems. There were approximately 850,000 Internet users in April 1998. There were 798,000 cellular phone subscribers (129 per 1,000 persons) in 1995 and 720,000 PCs (116 per 1,000 persons).

Postal Services. There were 126 post offices in March 1996. In 1998 the postal services handled 1,264m. letters and 1,112,000 parcels.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The common law of England and the rules of equity were in force so far as they are applicable to the circumstances of Hong Kong. UK Acts of Parliament, however, were only binding if expressly applied to Hong Kong. By 1997 Hong Kong possessed a comprehensive body of law which owed its authority to its own legislature. The Hong Kong Act of 1985 provided for Hong Kong ordinances to replace English laws in specified fields.

The courts of justice comprise the Supreme Court (which includes the Court of Appeal and the High Court), the District Court (which includes the Family Court), the Magistracies, the Coroner's Court, the Juvenile Court and 4 tribunals. The Court of Appeal hears appeals on all matters, civil and criminal, from the lower courts. Pursuant to the Joint Declaration, the powers of final judgement were to be vested in the Court of Final Appeal, inaugurated in the territory in June 1997 to take over the functions of the UK Privy Council. While the High Court has unlimited jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters, the District Court has limited jurisdiction. The maximum term of imprisonment it may impose is 7 years. Magistracies exercise criminal jurisdiction over a wide range of indictable and summary offences, and the powers of punishment are generally restricted to a maximum of 2 years' imprisonment. The Lands Tribunal determines on statutory claims for compensation over land and certain landlord and tenant matters. The Labour Tribunal provides a quick and inexpensive method of settling disputes between employers and employees. The Small Claims Tribunal deals with monetary claims involving amounts not exceeding HK$15,000.

After being in abeyance for 25 years, the death penalty was abolished in 1992.

71,962 crimes were reported in 1998, of which 14,682 were violent crimes. 40,422 people were arrested in 1998, of whom 9,207 were for violent crimes. The prison population was 13,117 in 1995.

Religion. In 1997 there were 4,790,000 Buddhists and Taoists, 280,000 Protestants, 270,000 Roman Catholics and 1,150,000 people of other beliefs.

Education. Adult literacy was 92·2% in 1995 (96% among males and 88·2% among females). Free and compulsory education is available to all children aged from 6 to 15 years. In 1995–96 there were 180,317 pupils in 731 kindergartens (all private), 467,718 in 860 primary schools (some 10·1% in private schools) and 459,845 in 38 government, 337 aided and 91 private secondary schools.

There are 7 technical institutes with (in 1995–96) 13,972 full-time and 34,409 part-time students; 2 technical colleges with 9,300 students, and 5 teacher training colleges of education with 2,863 full-time students.

The University of Hong Kong (founded 1911) had 10,325 full-time and 2,618 part-time students in the academic year of 1995–96, the Chinese University of Hong Kong (founded 1963), 10,388 full-time and 2,536 part-time students, the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology (founded 1991), 5,792 full-time and 503 part-time students, the Hong Kong Polytechnic University (founded 1972 as the Hong Kong Polytechnic), 11,157 full-time and 9,289 part-time students, the City University of Hong Kong (founded 1984 as the City Polytechnic of Hong Kong), 10,061 full-time and 6,881 part-time students, the Hong Kong Baptist University (founded 1956 as the Hong Kong Baptist College), 4,146 full-time and 600 part-time students and the Lingnan College (founded 1967), 2,059 full-time and 2 part-time students.

Total government expenditure on education in 1995 was HK$31,398m.

Health. In 1996 there were 9,196 doctors, 1,654 dentists, 36,395 nurses, 1,067 pharmacists and 20 midwives; in 1995 there were 88 hospitals and 29,328 hospital beds.

Welfare. The Government co-ordinates and implements expanding programmes in social welfare, which include social security, family services, child care, services for the elderly, youth and community work, probation and corrections and rehabilitation. 170 non-governmental organizations are subsidized by public funds.

The Government gives non-contributory cash assistance to needy families, unemployed able-bodied adults, the severely disabled and the elderly. Caseload as at 31 Dec. 1995 totalled 623,029. Victims of natural disasters, crimes of violence and traffic accidents are financially assisted.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is regulated by the Broadcasting Authority, a statutory body comprising 3 government officers and 9 non-official members. There is a government broadcasting station, Radio Television Hong Kong, which broadcasts on 7 channels (4 Chinese, 1 English and 1 bi-lingual service, and 1 dedicated to BBC World Service), 6 of which provide a 24-hour service. Hong Kong Commercial Broadcasting Co. Ltd and Metro Broadcast Co. Ltd transmit commercial sound programmes on 6 channels. Television Broadcasts Ltd and Asia Television Ltd transmit commercial television in English and Chinese on 4 channels, in colour (by PAL). Hutchvision Hong Kong broadcasts by satellite to the entire Asian region on 14 TV and 2 radio channels and also carries the BBC World Service. There is also a cable TV network. In 1994 there were some 3·9m. radio receivers; in 1995 there were over 2·3m. TV receivers.

Cinema. In 1995 there were 184 cinemas; attendance was 27·4m. (57m. in 1990). 315 films were made in 1995.

Press. In 1996 there were 52 daily newspapers, and in 1995, 675 periodicals. Circulation of dailies in 1996 was 5,000,000. At 800 newspapers per 1,000 inhabitants, Hong Kong has one of the highest rates of circulation in the world. A number of news agency bulletins are registered as newspapers.

Tourism. There were about 11·7m. visitor arrivals in 1996 (2,380,000 from Japan, 751,000 from the USA). Receipts totalled US$10·84bn.

Libraries. In 1995 there were 2 public libraries and in 1990 there were 17 higher education libraries. These libraries held 8,336,000 volumes for 2,119,383 registered users.

MACAO

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Macao was visited by Portuguese traders from 1513 and became a Portuguese colony in 1557. It was soon a principal entrepôt for international trade with China and Japan. Initially sovereignty remained vested in China, with the Portuguese paying an annual rent. In 1848-49 the Portuguese declared Macao a free port and established jurisdiction over the territory. A Sino-Portuguese treaty of 1 Dec. 1887 confirmed Portuguese rights to the territory. Diversion of its trade to Hong Kong, and the opening of the treaty ports by China, left Macao handling only local distributive trade, although its entrepôt role was briefly revived during the closure of the Hong Kong/China border in 1939. It was an Overseas Province of Portugal from 1951-74. In 1976 it became a Territory under Portuguese administration. On 6 Jan 1987 Portugal agreed to return Macao to China on 20 Dec. 1999 under a plan in which it would become a special administrative zone of China, with considerable autonomy.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory, which lies at the mouth of the Pearl River, comprises a peninsula (7·84 sq. km) connected by a narrow isthmus to the People's Republic of China, on which is built the city of Santa Nome de Deus de Macao, and the islands of Taipa (5·79 sq. km), linked to Macao by a 2-km bridge, and Colôane (7·82 sq. km) linked to Taipa by a 2-km causeway. The total area of Macao is 21·45 sq. km. Land is being reclaimed from the sea. The population (1991 census) was 339,464 (174,858 females). Population on 31 Dec. 1997, 415,850 (215,700 females); density, 19,387 people per sq, km. An estimated 98·8% of the population lived in urban areas in 1995. The official language is Portuguese, but Cantonese is used by virtually the entire population.

In Dec. 1993, 19,305 foreigners were legally registered including 12,731 from Hong Kong.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997: Births, 5,468 (13·2 per 1,000 population); marriages, 2,106 (5·1); deaths, 1,413 (3·4); divorces, 320 (0·8). Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 4·4%. Infant mortality, 1990–95, 9 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 1·6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Sub-tropical tending towards temperate. The number of rainy days is more than a third of the year. Average annual rainfall varies from 39-79" (1,000-2,000 mm). It is very humid from May to September.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

By agreement with Beijing in 1974, Macao is a Chinese territory under Portuguese administration. An 'organic statute' was published on 17 Feb. 1976. It defined the territory as a collective entity, pessoa colectiva, with internal legislative authority which, while remaining subject to Portuguese constitutional laws, would otherwise enjoy administrative, economic and financial autonomy. The Governor is appointed by the Portuguese President, who also appoints up to 7 Under-Secretaries on the Governor's nomination. The Legislative Assembly of 23 deputies, chosen for a 3-year term, comprises 8 members directly elected by universal suffrage, 8 indirectly elected by economic, cultural and social bodies and 7 appointed by the Governor. In April 1990 the Portuguese parliament unanimously approved laws passed by the Legislative Assembly to widen its powers and those of the governor.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections held on 22 Sept. 1996 there were 62 candidates. The business-orientated pro-integration Associação Promotora para a Economia de Macau (Promoting Association for the Economy of Macao) won 2 seats, with 16·6% of the vote, and the pro-Beijing União Promotora para a Progreso (Promoting Union for Progress) also won 2 seats, with 15·2% of the vote. 4 other parties each gained 1 seat. The next elections are due by Sept. 2000.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Governor: Gen. Vasco Rocha Vieira.

ECONOMY

Performance. Real GDP growth was an estimated 3·85% in 1995 and 3·6% in 1996.

TAIWAN[1]

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Taiwan, christened Ilha Formosa (beautiful island) by the Portuguese, was ceded to Japan by China by the Treaty of Shimonoseki in 1895. After the Second World War the island was surrendered to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek who made it the headquarters for his crumbling Nationalist Government. Chiang Kai-shek used the ideology of eventual Kuomintang victory as an excuse for authoritarian, military backed rule and the maintenance of a large standing army on the island. On Chiang Kai-shek's death in 1978 he was succeeded by his son, Chiang Ching-Kuo. Until 1970 the US fully supported Taiwan's claims to represent all of China. Only in 1971 did the government of the People's Republic of China manage to replace that of Chiang Kai-shek at the UN. In Jan. 1979 the UN established formal diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China, breaking off all formal ties with Taiwan.

[1]See note on transcription of names in CHINA: Territory and Population.

Taiwanese fears that USA recognition of China spelt the end of the island's independence were not realized. The US Congress subsequently authorized continuing economic and social ties with Taiwan. Taiwan itself has continued to reject all attempts at reunification, and although there have been frequent threats from mainland China to precipitate direct action (including military manoeuvres off the Taiwanese coast) the prospect of confrontation with the USA supports the status quo.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Taiwan lies between the East and South China Seas about 100 miles from the coast of Fujian. The territories currently under the control of the Republic of China include Taiwan, Penghu (the Pescadores), Kinmen (Quemoy), and the Matsu Islands, as well as the archipelagos in the South China Sea. Off the Pacific coast of Taiwan are Green Island and Orchid Island. To the north-east of Taiwan are the Tiaoyutai Islets. The total area of Taiwan Island, the Penghu Archipelago and the Kinmen area (including the fortified offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu) is 13,970 sq. miles (36,182 sq. km). Population (1997), 21,740,000. The indigenous Han Chinese are of Fujian origin. Of the population 15% is Hakka and 15% mainland Chinese who came with the Nationalist forces. There are also 389,900 aboriginals of Malay origin. Population density: 601 per sq. km.

Taiwan's administrative units comprise (with 1997 populations): 2 special municipalities: Taipei, the capital (2·60m.) and Kaohsiung (1·44m.); 5 cities outside the county structure: Chiayi (262,822), Hsinchu (351,800), Keelung (379,370), Taichung (901,961), Tainan (717,811); 16 counties (hsien): Changhwa (1,277,744), Chiayi (567,695), Hsinchu (421,721), Hualien (358,007), Ilan (466,603), Kaohsiung (1,227,160), Miaoli (560,344), Nantou (546,707), Penghu (91,169), Pingtung (913,764), Taichung (1,447,761), Tainan (1,096,251), Taipei (3,420,535), Taitung (253,002), Taoyuan (1,614,471), Yunlin (757,913).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 1997 the birth rate was 1·01%; death rate, 1·22%; rate of growth, 0·8% per annum (2000 target: 0·72% per annum). Life expectancy, 1996: Males, 71·89 years; females, 77·77 years. The death rate was 5·71 per 1,000 persons; infant mortality per 1,000 live births, 6·66.

CLIMATE

The climate is subtropical in the north and tropical in the south. The typhoon season extends from July to Sept. The average monthly temperatures of Jan. and July in Taipei are 59·5°F (12·9°C) and 83·3°F (33·8°C) respectively, and average annual rainfall is 83·8" (2,080·4 mm). Kaohsiung's average monthly temperatures of Jan. and July are 65·5°F (15°C) and 83·3°F (31·8°C) respectively, and average annual rainfall is 69" (1,732 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The ROC Constitution is based on the Principles of Nationalism, Democracy and Social Wellbeing formulated by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the founding father of the Republic of China. The ROC government is divided into 3 main levels: central, provincial/municipal and county/city each of which has well-defined powers.

The central government consists of the Office of the President, the National Assembly, with 332 seats, and five governing branches called 'yuan', namely the Executive Yuan, the Legislative Yuan (225 seats, increased from 160 for the 1998 elections), the Judicial Yuan, the Examination Yuan and the Control Yuan.

At the provincial level, the provincial governments exercise administrative responsibility. Since the ROC government administers only Taiwan Province and two counties in Fukien Province, only two provincial governments are currently operational—the Taiwan Provincial Government and the Fukien Provincial Government. Taipei and Kaohsiung are special municipalities which are under the direct jurisdiction of the central government. At the local level, under the Taiwan Provincial Government are five city governments: Keelung, Hsinchu, Taichung, Chiayi and Tainan; and 16 county governments with the governments of their subordinate cities. The Fukien Provincial Government oversees the regional affairs of Kinmen County and Lienchiang County. From 5 May to 23 July 1997 the Additional Articles of the Constitution of the Republic of China underwent yet another amendment. The roles of the provincial government and the Control Yuan have taken on drastic changes. Under the newest revision:

- The provincial government is to be streamlined and the popular elections of the governor and members of the provincial council are suspended.
- A resolution on the impeachment of the President or Vice President is no longer to be instituted by the Control Yuan but rather by the Legislative Yuan.
- The Legislative Yuan has the power to pass a no-confidence vote against the president of the Executive Yuan, while the president of the Republic has the power to dissolve the Legislative Yuan.
- The president of the Executive Yuan is to be directly appointed by the president of the Republic. Hence the consent of the Legislative Yuan is no longer needed.
- Educational, scientific and cultural budgets, especially the compulsory education budget, will be given priority, but no longer restricted by Article 164 of the Constitution to remain at least 15% of the total national budget.

National Anthem. 'San Min Chu I'; words by Dr Sun Yat-sen, tune by Cheng Mao-yun.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections are due in March 2000. Elections to the Legislative Yuan were held on 5 Dec. 1998. The Kuomintang (KMT or Nationalist Party) is in power. It increased its majority in the legislature, winning 124 of the 225 seats. Voter turn-out in the 2 biggest cities, Taipei and Kaohsiung, was over 80%. At the National assembly elections on 23 March 1996 the Kuomintang won 183 of the 332 seats, Min-chu Chin-pu Tang 99, Hsin-Tang 46, Green Party Taiwan 1, and non-partisans and others 3.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Lee Teng-hui (b. 1923; sworn in 20 May 1996).

Vice President: Lien Chan (b. 1936).

The cabinet comprised the following in March 1999:

Prime Minister and President of the Executive Yuan: Vincent C. Siew. There are 8 ministries under the Executive Yuan: Interior; Foreign Affairs; National Defence; Finance; Education; Justice; Economic Affairs; Transport and Communications.

Vice-President, Executive Yuan: Liu Chao-shiuan.

President, Control Yuan: Wang Tso-yung.

President, Examination Yuan: Hsu Shui-teh.

President, Judicial Yuan: Weng Yueh-sheng.

President, Legislative Yuan: Wang Jin-ping.

Minister of Foreign Affairs: Jason Hu. National Defence: Tang Fei. Interior: Huang Chu-wen. Finance: Paul Chiu. Education: Lin Ching-chiang. Economic Affairs: Wang Chih-kang. Justice: Yeh Chin-fong; Transport and Communications: Lin Feng-cheng.

In addition to the Mongolian and Tibetan Affairs Commission and the Overseas Chinese Affairs Commission, a number of commissions and subordinate organizations have been formed with the resolution of the Executive Yuan Council and the Legislature to meet new demands and handle new affairs. Examples include the Environmental Protection Administration, which was set up in 1987 as public awareness of pollution control rose; the Mainland Affairs Council, which was established in 1990 to handle the thawing of relations between Taiwan and the Chinese mainland; the Fair Trade Commission, which was established in 1992 to promote a fair trade system; and the Consumer Protection Commission, which was set up in July 1994 to study and review basic policies on consumer protection. Since 1995 even more commissions have been set up to provide a wider scope of services: the Public Construction Commission was set up in July 1995, the Council of Aboriginal Affairs in Dec. 1996, and the National Sports Council in July 1997.

These commissions and councils are headed by:

Aborigines Commission: Hua Chia-chih. Agricultural Council: Peng Tso-kuei. Atomic Energy Council: Hu Ching-piao. Central Election Commission: Lin Feng-cheng. Consumers Protection Committee: Hsu Li-teh. Cultural Planning and Development Council: Lin Chung-chih. Economic Planning and Development Council: Chiang Pin-kung. Fair Trade Commission: Chao Ching-yang. Labour Affairs Council: Hsu Shieh-kwei. Mainland Affairs Council: Chang King-yuh. Mongolian and Tibetan Affairs Commission: Kao Koong-lian. National Palace Museum: Chin Hsiao-yi. National Research, Development and Evaluation Commission: Huang Ta-chou. National Science Council: Huang Chen-tai. National Youth Commission: Lee Chi-chu. Overseas Chinese Affairs Commission: Chiao Jen-ho. Physical Education and Sports Commission: Nancy Chao Li-yun. Public Construction Commission: Ou Chin-teh. Research, Development and Evaluation Commission: Yang Chou-hsiang. Vocational Assistance for Retired Servicemen Commission: Gen. Yang Ting-yung.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 2 years. Taiwan has more than 4m. soldiers (mostly reserves).

Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$13,657m. (US$634 per capita). In 1997 Taiwan spent US$7·3bn. on defence imports (up from US$1·8bn. in 1996), making it the world's second largest buyer of arms, mainly from the USA and France. Only Saudi Arabia spends more on international arms purchases.

Army. The Army numbered about 230,300 in 1998, including 21,000 military police. In 1997 it consisted of 10 infantry divisions, 2 mechanized infantry divisions, 2 airborne brigades, 6 independent armoured brigades, 1 tank group and 2 surface-to-air missile battalions. The aviation element comprises 6 squadrons with about 100 transport and 65 armed helicopters. The primary weapon systems of the ROC ground forces include M48H and M60A3 tanks; M109 and M110 self-propelled artillery; M113, V150, and CM-21 armoured personnel carriers; UH-1H helicoptors; Kung-feng 6A rocket systems; TOW-type anti-tank guided weapons; chapparal SP, Hawk, Tien-kung (Sky Bow), and Tien-chien (Sky Sword) air defence missile systems; and Hsiung-feng I and Hsiung-feng II anti-ship missile systems.

Navy. Active personnel in 1998 totalled 33,000 in the Navy and 30,000 in the Marine Corps. There are over 67,500 naval and marine reservists. The operational and land-based forces consist of destroyer fleets, a frigate fleet, amphibious landing fleet and amphibious landing vessel fleet, anti-submarine helicopter group etc. The Navy's coastal SAM batteries employ Hsiung-feng missiles which resemble US Harpoon missiles. The Knox-class missile frigates are rented from the US Navy, La Fayette (Kang-ting) frigates are imported from France, and the Cheng-kung frigates are built in Taiwan.

The Naval Air Command operates 31 S-2 Tracker aircraft, 12 small anti-submarine helicopters operated from the destroyers, and 12 SH-2F and 10 S-70 Seahawk helicopters based ashore.

The Customs service operates 12 cutters.

Air Force. Units in the operational system are equipped with aircraft that include locally developed IDF, F-16, Mirage 2000-5 and F-5E fighter-interceptors, C-130H and C-119 transporters, AT-3 trainers, and S-70C helicoptors. The ROC Army will spend over US$385m. to deploy 200 fourth-generation Patriot missiles. Patriot missiles are installed in missile batteries around Taiwan. Total strength in 1996, 68,000 personnel.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

By a treaty of 1 Dec. 1954 the USA was pledged to protect Taiwan, but this treaty lapsed 1 year after the USA established diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China on 1 Jan. 1979. In April 1979 the Taiwan Relations Act was passed by the US Congress to maintain commercial, cultural and other relations between USA and Taiwan through the American Institute on Taiwan and its Taiwan counterpart, the Taipei Economic and Cultural Representative Office in the USA, which were accorded quasi-diplomatic status in 1980.

The People's Republic took over the China seat in the UN from Taiwan on 25 Oct. 1971.

In May 1991 Taiwan ended its formal state of war with the People's Republic.

As of Dec. 1998 the ROC has formal diplomatic ties with 27 countries and maintains substantive relations with over 100 countries and territories around the globe.

In Sept. 1997 at the invitation of the Panamanian government, President Lee participated in the World Congress on the Panama Canal. In the wake of the visit to Panama, President Lee travelled to 3 other nations: Honduras, El Salvador and Paraguay. At a summit meeting with leaders of 6 Latin American nations held in El Salvador, the ROC was invited to join the System of Central American Integration, a regional grouping modelled after the European Union, which is known by its Spanish acronym SICA.

ECONOMY

Policy. As regional economic blocs take shape, Taiwan plans to develop itself into an operations centre for the Asia-Pacific region over the next 10 years. The plan calls for 6 operations centres to handle high value-added manufacturing, air and sea cargo and passenger transportation, and professional services.

Performance. Though Taiwan was less affected by the Asian crisis than many of its neighbours, the forecast for GDP growth in 1999 was just 4·74%, and the government announced that, after the previous year's figure of 4·83%, economic expansion was at its weakest for 16 years. Between 1990 and 1997 growth was around 6% each year.

Budget. There are 2 budgets, the central government's general budget together with some special defence and infrastructure appropriations and the provincial budget for Taiwan proper. For the fiscal year July 1997–June 1998 the central government's general budget was NT$1,253,440m. Expenditure planned: 21·2% on defence; 9·8% on economic development; 12·8% on social security; 15·8% on education, science and culture. Foreign exchange reserves were US$86,558m. in Oct. 1998.

Currency. The unit of currency is the New Taiwan dollar (TWD) of 100 cents. Gold reserves were 13·57m. oz. in Oct. 1998. Inflation was forecast at 1·65% between Jan. and Nov. 1998.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of China (reactivated in 1961) regulates the money supply, manages foreign exchange and issues currency. Governor: Perng Fai-nan. The Bank of Taiwan is the largest commercial bank and the fiscal agent of the government. The number of financial institutions totalled 6,257 in Oct. 1998. Banks in Taiwan have the lowest bad-loan ratios in Asia.

There are 2 stock exchanges in Taipei.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Output of electricity in 1997 was 133bn. kWh; total installed capacity was 25,735 MW, comprising 63·4% thermal, 20% nuclear and 16·7% hydro-electric. There are 3 nuclear power stations (capacities 1·72m., 1·97m. and 1·9m. kW) and a fourth is envisaged. Consumption per capita stood at 3,627 litres of oil equivalent in 1997.

Oil and Gas. Refined oil production in 1997 was 37·9m. kilolitres; natural gas, 901m. cu. metres.

Minerals. In 1997 coal production was 0·1m. tonnes.

Agriculture. The cultivated area was 864,817 ha in 1997, of which 364,000 ha were paddy fields. Rice production totalled 1,660,000 tonnes in 1996.

In 1996 livestock production was valued at more than US$3,200m., accounting for 38·18% of Taiwan's total agricultural production value. However, the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in March 1997 posed a major threat to Taiwan's pork industry. A total of 6,147 hog farms in 20 cities and counties along Taiwan's west coast were stricken by the disease. The government soon exterminated all hogs at contaminated farms and imported 21m. doses of vaccine for healthy ones. Pork exports were banned and the outbound shipment of 105 kinds of products from cloven-hoofed animals were also prohibited. The government compensated pig farmers for their slaughtered animals and provided relief to both farmers and pork exporters in the form of US$1,100m. in low-interest loans. The Executive Yuan also allocated a special budget of US$378m. for relevant government agencies to carry forward remedial measures. Accordingly, the disease was soon brought under control and the wholesale price of pork rebounded to the normal level.

Forestry. Forest area, 1996: 2,102,311 ha. Forest reserves: trees, 358,239,000 cu. metres; bamboo, 1,127m. poles. Timber production, 35,603 cu. metres.

Fisheries. By 1997 Taiwan's fishing fleet totalled 28,164 vessels (of which 13,194 were powered craft); the catch was approximately 900,000 tonnes. In 1997 Taiwan produced US$2,800m. worth of fish. Of this, 50% came from deep-sea fishing, 28% from aquaculture, 17% from offshore fishing and 4% from coastal fishing. More than 33% of the catch was exported, with the biggest items being skipjack and eel.

INDUSTRY

Output (in tonnes) in 1997 (and 1996): Steel bars, 7·3m. (6·8m.); sugar, 0·35m. (0·36m.); cement, 21·5m. (21·5m.); pulp, 0·35m. (0·31m.); cotton fabrics, 836,60 sq. metres; computers, 4·6m. portable (3·4m.) and 9·1m. desktop (5·1m.).

Labour. In the third quarter of 1998, the total labour force was 9·6m., of whom 9·3m. were employed. Of the employed population, 8·93% worked in agriculture, forestry and fisheries; 37·63% in industry (including 27·95% in manufacturing and 9·2% in construction); and 53·44% in the service sector (including 21·97% in commerce and 15·83% in social and personal services). The unemployment rate was 2·98%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Restrictions on the repatriation of investment earnings by foreign nationals were removed in 1994.

Taiwan has the world's third-largest foreign reserves and one of the world's lowest foreign debts.

Imports and Exports. Total trade, in US$1m.:

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Imports	72,007	77,061	85,359	103,551	102,371	114,425
Exports	81,470	84,917	93,056	111,659	115,951	122,081

In 1997 the main export markets were the USA (24·2%), Hong Kong (23·5%), Japan (9·6%) and Singapore (4·0%). The main import suppliers were Japan (25·4%), the USA (20·9%), Germany (4·7%) and South Korea (4·4%).

Principal exports in 1997, in US$1bn.: Textiles, 16·66; basic metals and articles, 11·53; machinery, 58·99; plastic and rubber products, 7·71; vehicles and transport equipment, 5·59; footwear, headwear and umbrellas, 1·40; toys, games, sports equipment, 2·38.

Principal imports in 1997, in US$1bn.: Basic metals and articles, 11·67; chemicals, 11·44; machinery, 41·12; minerals, 10·30; vehicles and transport equipment, 5·36; textile products, 3·65; precision instruments, clocks and watches, musical instruments, 6·38.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1997 there were 20,144 km of roads. 15·3m. motor vehicles were registered including 4·4m. passenger cars, 22,522 buses, 811,023 trucks and 10m. motor cycles. 1,163m. passengers and 277m. tonnes of freight were transported (including urban buses).

Rail. In Dec. 1997 total route length was 2,363 km. Freight traffic amounted to 16·9m. tonnes and passenger traffic to 165m. in 1997.

Civil Aviation. There are 2 international airports: Chiang Kai-shek at Taoyuan near Taipei, and Kaohsiung in the south. In addition there are several domestic airports: Taipei, Hualien, Taitung, Taichung, Tainan, Chiayi, Pingtung, Makung, Chimei, Orchid Island, Green Island, Wangan, Kinmen and Peikan. In Oct. 1997 there were 17 domestic airlines, of which 4 are international carriers: China Airlines (CAL), EVE Airways Corp. (EVA AIR), Mandarin Airlines (MDA; CAL's subsidiary) and Trans Asia Airways (TNA) operate international services to 42 destinations in 27 countries. 35 foreign airlines also operate services. In 1996, 52m. passengers and 1·2m. tonnes of freight were flown. To accommodate this heavier air passenger and cargo traffic a US$800m. expansion project at Chiang Kai-shek International Airport began in 1989. The project includes a second passenger terminal, aircraft bays, airport connection roads, car parks and the expansion of air freight facilities. It was scheduled for completion in June 1999. The planned facilities are designed to allow the airport to handle an additional 14m. passengers annually by the year 2010.

Shipping. Maritime transportation is vital to the trade-oriented economy of Taiwan. As of Dec. 1996 the ROC's shipping industry had a fleet of 255 vessels over 100 gross tons, for a total of 9·14m. dead weight tons. There are 6 international ports: Kaohsiung, Keelung, Hualien, Taichung, Anping and Suao. The first 2 are container centres. Suao port is an auxiliary port to Keelung.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 11m. telephones, 1,253,987 mobile phones and 2,496,090 radio pager subscribers. There were approximately 2·8m. Internet users in Sept. 1998. PCs numbered 1,773,000 in 1995 (83 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. There were 4·51m. Taoists in 1997 with 8,557 temples and 33,200 priests; 4·86m. Buddhists with 3,938 temples and 9,200 priests; 0·42m. Protestants; and 0·3m. Catholics.

Education. Since 1968 there has been compulsory education for 6–15 year olds with free tuition. The illiteracy rate dropped to 5·99% in 1995 and is still falling. In 1997–98 there were 2,540 elementary schools with 92,104 teachers and 1,905,690 pupils; 1,151 secondary schools with 99,411 teachers and 1,874,747 students; 139 schools of higher education, including 38 universities, 40 colleges and 61 junior colleges, with 38,806 teachers and 856,186 students. More than one-quarter of the total population attended an educational institution.

Health. In 1997 there was 1 physician serving every 844 persons, 1 doctor of Chinese medicine per 6,903 persons and 1 dentist per 2,866 persons. Some 126,162 beds were provided by the 97 public and 653 private hospitals, averaging nearly 56 beds per 10,000 persons. In addition to the 497 public and 19,113 private clinics, there were 368 health stations and 502 health rooms serving residents in the sparsely populated areas. Acute infectious diseases were no longer the number one killer. Malignant neoplasms, cerebrovascular diseases, accidents and adverse effects, and heart diseases were the first 4 leading causes of death.

Welfare. A universal health insurance scheme came into force in March 1995 as an extension to the incorporation of 13 social insurance plans which only cover 59% of Taiwan's population. Premium shares among the government, employer and insured are varied according to the insured statuses. By the end of 1997 about 20·49m. people or 96·27% of the population were covered by the National Health Insurance programme. The 7·99m. new beneficiaries are mainly the elderly, children, students and housewives.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. At Dec. 1998 there were 91 radio stations, 4 commercial TV services and 102 cable systems. June 1997 saw the inauguration of a fourth over-the-air television station—The Kaohsiung-based Formosa Television—which is affiliated with the opposition Democratic Progressive Party and telecasts on VHF low-band. A Public Television Law was promulgated on 18 June 1997.

Cinema. In 1998 cinemas numbered 232. In 1997, 29 full-length films were made.

Press. There were 241 domestic news agencies, 354 newspapers and 5,898 periodicals in 1998.

Tourism. In 1997, 2,372,232 tourists visited Taiwan, and 6,161,932 Taiwanese made visits abroad.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Columbus sighted what became Colombia in 1499. The conquest of the territory began in 1509; and 30 years later the Spaniards were well established. In 1564 the Spanish Crown appointed a President of New Granada, which included the territories of Colombia, Panama and Venezuela. In 1718 a viceroyalty of New Granada was created. This viceroyalty gained its independence from Spain in 1819, and together with the present territories of Panama, Venezuela and Ecuador was officially constituted on 17 Dec. 1819 as the state of 'Greater Colombia'. This new state lasted only until 1830 when it split up into Venezuela, Ecuador and the republic of New Granada. The constitution of 22 May 1858 changed New Granada into a confederation of eight states, under the name of Confederación Granadina. Under the constitution of 8 May 1863 the country was renamed Estados Unidos de Colombia, which were nine in number. The revolution of 1885 led the National Council of Bogotá, composed of two delegates from each state, to promulgate the constitution of 5 Aug. 1886, forming the Republic of Colombia. The constitution abolished the sovereignty of the states, converting them into departments with governors appointed by the President of the Republic. The department of Panama, however, became an independent country in 1903.

Conservatives and Liberals have alternated in power. Both have faced unrest, rioting and civil war. Liberal governments were in power 1860–84, Conservatives 1884–1930, Liberals 1930–46 and Conservatives 1946–53. In 1953 Gen. Gustavo Rojas Pinilla established a dictatorship, but he was deposed in 1957. The Conservatives and Liberals fought a civil war from 1948 to 1957 (La Violencia) during which some 300,000 people were killed. In a plebiscite in 1957 the two political parties agreed to support a single presidential candidate and to divide government posts equally. This arrangement was modified in 1974 and the growing strength of a third party, ANAPO (the Allianza Nacional Popular), led to it being abandoned in 1978. The Liberal, Virgilio Barco Vargas, was elected president in 1986 and although the transfer of power from the Conservatives was successful, powerful drugs lords have made violence endemic. Two Marxist guerrilla forces are active, the Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces (FARC), and the smaller National Liberation Army (ELN). They are opposed by a well-armed paramilitary organization which emerged after the setting up of rural self-defence groups. The paramilitaries operate independently but are thought to have close links with the state security process. Killings and other abuses by paramilitary squads, guerrillas and the military in 1996 made it the most infamous year in the nation's history for human rights violations, according to a report by the Colombian Commission of Jurists. On average, 10 Colombians were killed every day for political or ideological reasons, while one person disappeared every two days.

There were hopes of a fresh start in 1998 when Andrés Pastrana was elected president, ending 12 years of liberal rule. Offers to talk peace were taken up by the rebels and by their paramilitary enemies. But political differences are wide, with FARC demanding sweeping agrarian reform and a redistribution of wealth. FARC controls around 40% of the country including areas which produce the bulk of illegal drugs. Approximately 80% of the cocaine and 60% of the heroin sold in the USA originates in Colombia.

In Jan. 1999 Colombia suffered its worst earthquake this century.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Colombia is bounded in the north by the Caribbean Sea, north-west by Panama, west by the Pacific Ocean, south-west by Ecuador and Peru, north-east by Venezuela and south-east by Brazil. The estimated area is 1,141,748 sq. km (440,829 sq. miles). Population census (1993), 37,127,293; density, 40·2 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 38·9m.

In 1995, 72·6% lived in urban areas. Bogotá, the capital (estimate 1997): 6,004,782.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Simultaneously with the presidential elections of May 1990, a referendum was held in which 7m. votes were cast for the establishment of a special assembly to draft a new constitution. Elections were held on 9 Dec. 1990 for this 74-member 'Constitutional Assembly' which operated from Feb. to July 1991. The electorate was 14·2m.; turn-out was 3·7m. The Liberals gained 24 seats, M19 (a former guerrilla organization), 19. The Assembly produced a new constitution which came into force on 5 July 1991. It stresses the state's obligation to protect human rights, and establishes constitutional rights to healthcare, social security and leisure. Indians are allotted 2 Senate seats. Congress may dismiss ministers, and representatives may be recalled by their electors.

The President is elected by direct vote for a term of 4 years, and is not eligible for re-election until 4 years afterwards. A vice-presidency was instituted in July 1991.

The legislative power rests with a Congress of 2 houses, the Senate, of 102 members, and the House of Representatives, of 165 members, both elected for 4 years by proportional representation. Congress meets annually at Bogotá on 20 July.

National Anthem. 'O! Gloria inmarcesible' ('Oh Glory unfading!'); words by R. Núñez, tune by O. Síndici.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the first round of the presidential election on 31 May 1998, the Liberal Party candidate, Horacio Serpa, won by a mere 25,000 votes from a total of 10·8m, but in the second round on 21 June the Conservative Party candidate, Andrés Pastrana, received approximately 50·5% against 46·5% for Serpa. Congressional elections were held on 8 March 1998, President Samper's Liberal Party beating the Social Conservatives into second place amidst indications of large-scale vote burying. Hundreds of people were arrested with forged identity cards or other evidence of attempted fraud.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS
The 3 islands forming the present state became French protectorates at the end of the 19th century and were proclaimed colonies in 1912. With neighbouring Mayotte they were administratively attached to Madagascar from 1914 until 1947 when the 4 islands became a French Overseas Territory, achieving internal self-government in Dec. 1961. In referendums held on each island on 22 Dec. 1974, the 3 western islands voted overwhelmingly for independence, while Mayotte voted to remain French. The Comorian Chamber of Deputies unilaterally declared the islands' independence on 6 July 1975, but Mayotte remained a French dependency. During a coup by the French mercenary Bob Denard in Sept. 1995, President Djohar was held prisoner by the insurrectionists. The coup was suppressed by French forces, and the President was released but not reinstated. Recent years have been marked by political disruption. In 1997 the islands of Anjouan and Mohéli attempted to secede from the federation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION
The Comoros consist of 3 islands in the Indian Ocean between the African mainland and Madagascar with a total area of 1,862 sq. km (719 sq. miles). The population at the 1991 census was 446,817; estimate, 1996, 569,200; density, 306 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 714,000.

In 1995, 30·5% of the population were urban.

	Area (sq. km)	Population (1991 census)	Chief town
Njazídja (Grande Comore)	1,148	233,533	Moroni
Nzwani (Anjouan)	424	188,953	Mutsamudu
Mwali (Mohéli)	290	24,331	Fomboni

Estimated population of the chief towns in 1988: Moroni, 22,000; Mutsamudu, 14,000; Fomboni, 7,000.

The indigenous population are a mixture of Malagasy, African, Malay and Arab peoples; the vast majority speak Comorian, an Arabised dialect of Swahili, but a small proportion speak Makua (a Bantu language) or one of the official languages, French and Arabic.

SOCIAL STATISTICS
1996 births, 26,100; deaths, 5,900. Birth rate per 1,000 population, 1996, 45·8; death, 10·3; infant mortality, 75·3 per 1,000 live births; population growth rate, 3·55%. Expectation of life was 58·7 years in 1996. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 6·0 children per woman.

CLIMATE
There is a tropical climate, affected by Indian monsoon winds from the north, which gives a wet season from Nov. to April. Moroni, Jan. 81°F (27·2°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall, 113" (2,825 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT
Under the Constitution approved by referendum on 1 Oct. 1978 (amended 1983), the Comoros were a Federal Islamic Republic. Mayotte had the right to join when it so chose. At a referendum on 7 June 1992, 74·25% of votes cast were in favour of a new constitution. The electorate was 213,000; turn-out was 63·51%.

Under the 1992 constitution the President is Head of State, directly elected for a 5-year term (renewable once). He appoints Ministers to form the Council of Government, on which each island's Governor has a non-voting seat. The 42-member Legislative Council is directly elected for 4 years in 2 rounds. There is a 15-member Senate (5 members for each island) which is nominated for 6 years by an electoral college.

National Anthem. 'Udzima wa ya Masiwa' ('The union of the islands'); words by S. H. Abderamane, tune by K. Abdallah and S. H. Abderamane.

RECENT ELECTIONS

A first round of Presidential elections took place on 6 March 1996; turn-out was 64%. There were 15 candidates. Mohamed Taki Abdoulkarim gained 21·28% of votes cast, Abbas Djoussouf, 15·71%. A run-off round was held on 16 March, turn-out was 62%. Abdoulkarim was elected President by 64·29% of votes cast.

Elections for the Legislative Council were held in Jan. 1998. The Rally for Democracy and Renewal (RDR) won 15 seats; the Comoran Union for Progress (UDZIMA), 8; the Union for Democracy and Decentralization (UNDC), 5; Dialogue Proposition Action (DPA/MWANGAZA), 2; other smaller parties, 10. Two seats remained unfilled.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President (Acting): Tadjiddine Ben Said Massounde (since 6 Nov. 1998).

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Abbas Djoussouf.

Minister of Finance, Budget, Economy, Commerce and Investments: Said Said Hamadi. Foreign Affairs and Co-operation: Salim Hadj Himidi. Francophony, Culture, Industry and Information: Issamidine Adaine. Justice, Public Function, Employment, Professional Training, Administrative Decentralization and Constitutional Reforms: Mohamed Abdou Mmadi. National Education, Public Health, Youth and Sports: Sultan Chouzour. Production, Fisheries, Environment and Craft: Mahamoud Ahmed Abdallah. Regional Planning, Urbanism, Lodging, Transportation, Tourism, Posts and Telecommunications, and Government Spokesman: Ali Toihir Mohamed. State Secretary at the Presidency Responsible for Relations with the Arabic and Muslim Countries: Souef Mohamed El Amine.

DEFENCE

Army. The Army was reorganized after the failed coup of Sept. 1995.

Navy. 1 landing craft with ramps was purchased in 1981. 2 small patrol boats were supplied by Japan in 1982. Personnel in 1996 numbered about 200.

Air Arm. 1 Cessna 402B communications aircraft and 1 Ecureuil helicopter were reported to be in operation.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Comoros is a member of the UN and Arab League, and an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Performance. Real GDP growth was –2·3% in 1995 (–2·2% in 1994).

Budget. Revenues were an estimated US$55m. and expenditure an estimated US$71m. in 1995.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Comorian franc (KMF) of 100 centimes. It is within France's Franc Zone (see FRANCE: Currency) and was devalued 25% in Jan. 1994. Foreign exchange reserves were US$44m. in Sept. 1997. Total money supply in Sept. 1997 was 11,413m. Comorian francs. The average annual inflation rate during the period 1990–96 was 4·4%.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank is the bank of issue. The chief commercial banks are the Banque Internationale des Comores and the Banque de Développement des Comores.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. In 1991 installed capacity was 16,000 kW. Production was 17m. kWh in 1994; consumption per capita was 27 kWh in 1994.

Agriculture. 80% of the economically active population depends upon agriculture, which (including fishing, hunting and forestry) contributes 40% to GDP. The chief product was formerly sugar-cane, but now vanilla, copra, maize and other food crops, cloves and essential oils (citronella, ylang-ylang, lemon grass) are the most important products. Production (1991 in 1,000 tonnes): Cassava, 46; coconuts, 50; bananas, 52; sweet potatoes, 18; rice, 15; maize, 4; and copra, 4.

Livestock (1996): Cattle, 50,000; sheep, 15,000; goats (1995), 128,000; asses, 5,000.

Forestry. In 1995 the area under forest was 9,000 ha, or 4% of the total land area (12,000 ha and 5·4% in 1990). The forested area has been severely reduced because of the shortage of cultivable land and ylang-ylang production.

Fisheries. Fishing is on an individual basis, without modern equipment. The catch was estimated to be 13,200 tonnes in 1995.

INDUSTRY

Branches include perfume distillation, textiles, furniture, jewellery, soft drinks and the processing of vanilla and copra.

Labour. The workforce in 1996 was 286,000 (58% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total foreign debt was US$206m. in 1996.

Imports and Exports. In 1995 imports amounted to 25,411m. Comorian francs.; exports to 4,236m. Comorian francs. Main export markets, 1995: France, 36·5%; USA, 28·4%; Germany, 8·0%. Main import suppliers, 1995: France, 32·0%; India, 17·3%; Saudi Arabia, 9·4%. The main exports are vanilla, cloves, ylang-ylang, essences, cocoa, copra and coffee. Rice accounts for 90% of imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were estimated to be 900 km of classified roads (440 km highways and main roads, 230 km secondary and 230 km other roads). The number of cars in use has increased dramatically in recent years, from 2,910 in 1992 to 9,100 in 1996.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Moroni (International Prince Said Ibrahim). In 1998 services were provided by Air Austral, Air Madagascar, Air Mauritius, Emirates and Yemenia Yemen Airways. In 1996 International Prince Said Ibrahim handled 92,000 passengers (75,000 on international flights).

Shipping. In 1995 the merchant marine totalled 2,959 GRT.

Telecommunications. There were 5,500 telephone main lines in 1997 (8·4 per 1,000 persons). In 1995 there were 100 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 1993 there were 36 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. French and Moslem law is in a new consolidated code. The Supreme Court comprises 7 members, 2 each appointed by the President and the Federal Assembly, and 1 by each island's Legislative Council. The death penalty is authorized for murder. The last execution was in 1996.

Religion. Islam is the official religion: 86% of the population are Sunni Moslems; 14% are Roman Catholics.

Education. After 2 pre-primary years at Koran school, which 50% of children attend, there are 6 years of primary schooling for 7- to 13-year-olds followed by a 4-year secondary stage attended by 25% of children. Some 5% of 17- to 20-year-olds conclude schooling at lycées. In 1995–96 there were 327 primary schools with 78,527 pupils. 17,637 pupils attended secondary schools in 1993–94. There were 348 students in higher education in 1995–96.

The adult literacy rate in 1995 was 57·3% (64·2% among males and 50·4% among females).

Health. In 1993 there were 77 doctors; in 1990, 6 dentists, 6 pharmacists, 86 midwives and 155 nursing personnel. In 1980 there were 17 hospitals and clinics with 763 beds.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. The state-controlled Radio Comoro broadcasts in French and Comorian. Number of radios (1995), 84,000; television receivers, 400.

Press. There was (1997) 1 weekly newspaper.

Tourism. In 1996 there were 25,000 foreign tourists (around a third from France), bringing revenue of US$9m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was visited by the Portuguese as early as the 14th century but King Leopold II of the Belgians took the lead in exploring and exploiting the Congo Basin and the Berlin Conference of 1884–85 recognized him as the sovereign head of the Congo Free State. In 1908 the country was annexed to Belgium as the Belgian Congo. After gaining independence in June 1960, the country's name was changed to Zaïre in 1971. Mobutu Sésé Séko came to power in a coup in 1965. At first he was seen as a strongman who could hold together a huge, unstable country comprising hundreds of tribes and language groups. In the 1970s he was feted by the USA which used Zaïre as a springboard for operations into neighbouring Angola where western-backed Unita rebels were locked in civil war with a Cuban- and Soviet-backed government. Because Mobutu was useful in the fight against Communism the brutality and repressiveness of his regime was ignored.

After armed insurrection by Tutsi rebels in the province of Kivu, the government alleged pro-Tutsi intervention by the armies of Burundi and Rwanda and on 25 Oct. 1996 declared a state of emergency. Following attacks on camps for Rwandan refugees, several hundred thousand of the occupants sought safety in flight. By the beginning of Nov. the eastern Zaïrean town of Goma was in the hands of Rwandan and rebel forces. By Dec. the secessionist forces of Laurent-Désiré Kabila, the Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Congo-Zaïre (ADFL), had begun to drive the regular Zaïrean army out of Kivu and an attempt was made to establish a rebel administration, 'Democratic Congo'. By the middle of Feb. 1997 large parts of eastern Zaïre were under rebel control, and the government began to mount air attacks. In the face of continuing rebel military successes and the disaffection of the army, the Government accepted a UN resolution demanding the immediate cessation of hostilities. The Security Council asked the rebels also to make a public declaration of their acceptance. However, the latter continued in their victorious advance westwards, capturing Kisangani on 15 March 1997, then Kasai and Shaba, giving Kabila control of eastern Zaïre, and crucially the country's mineral wealth. Mobutu's attempts to cling to power looked hopeless. After another medical visit to France, and a futile attempt to deploy Serbian mercenaries, he succumbed to pressure—particularly from the USA and South Africa—and agreed to meet Kabila in the presence of President Mandela on the South African ship, the SAS Outeniqua, offshore from the Republic of the Congo. Little happened but the meeting had all the trappings of a symbolic surrender. Mobutu still hoped for compromise but the final victory of Kabila's troops, east of Kinshasa at Kenge, dashed any remaining illusions and the generals of Mobutu's own shell of an army told him that the situation was lost. In a state of indecision he fled without warning or conditions on the night of 15–16 May 1997. He died of cancer 4 months later. Described as one of the most destructive tyrants of the African independence era, it is said that his personal fortune, if ever recovered, could wipe out his country's national debt. On coming to power Kabila changed the name of the country to the Democratic Republic of the Congo. Hopes for democratic and economic renewal were soon disappointed. The Kabila regime relied too closely on his military backup, mainly Rwandans and eastern Congolese from the Tutsi minority. Those supporters seemed more interested in eliminating tribal enemies in eastern border areas than in establishing democracy. As a result, Rwanda and Uganda switched support to rebel forces. When Zimbabwe and Angola sent in troops to help President Kabila, full-scale civil war threatened. A ceasefire was negotiated at a Franco-African summit in Nov. 1998 but the military build-up continued into the new year and violence intensified.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Democratic Republic of the Congo is bounded in the north by the Central African Republic, north-east by Sudan, east by Uganda, Rwanda, Burundi and Lake Tanganyika, south by Zambia, south-west by Angola and north-west by the Republic of the Congo. There is a 37-km stretch of coastline which gives access to the Atlantic Ocean, with the Angolan exclave of Cabinda to the immediate north, and Angola itself to the south. Area, 2,344,885 sq. km (905,365 sq. miles). At the 1988 census the population was 34·7m. Estimate (1997) 47,440,000 (29% urban); density, 20 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 51·75m.

More than 200,000 refugees who escaped the fighting between Hutus and Tutsis in Rwanda and Burundi in 1994 are still in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (out of 1m. who came originally), and there are also 100,000 Angolan and 100,000 Sudanese refugees in the country.

Area, populations (1994 estimate) and chief towns of the regions in 1994:

Region	Area (sq. km)	Population (in 1,000)	Chief town	Population
Bandundu	295,658	4,907	Bandundu	. . .

Sud-Kivu[1]	65,130	—	Bukavu	201,569
Shaba	496,965	5,602	Lubumbashi	851,381

[1]Combined population of Maniema, Nord-Kivu and Sud-Kivu, 7,687,000.

Other large cities (with estimated 1994 population): Kolwezi (417,810), Likasi (299,118), Kikwit (182,142), Tshikapa (180,860).

The population is Bantu, with minorities of Sudanese (in the north), Nilotes (north-east), Pygmies and Hamites (in the east). French is the official language, but of more than 200 languages spoken, 4 are recognized as national languages: Kiswahili, Tshiluba, Kikongo and Lingala. Lingala has become the lingua franca after French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 2,263,000; deaths, 788,000. Rates (1997 estimates, per 1,000 population); Birth, 47·7; death, 16·6; growth rate, 2·3%. Infant mortality was 106 per 1,000 live births; expectation of life was 47·0 years (males, 45·2; females, 49·0). Fertility rate, 1990–95, 6·7 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is varied, the central region having an equatorial climate, with year-long high temperatures and rain at all seasons. Elsewhere, depending on position north or south of the Equator, there are well-marked wet and dry seasons. The mountains of the east and south have a temperate mountain climate, with the highest summits having considerable snowfall. Kinshasa, Jan. 79°F (26·1°C), July 73°F (22·8°C). Annual rainfall 45" (1,125 mm). Kananga, Jan. 76°F (24·4°C), July 74°F (23·3°C). Annual rainfall 62" (1,584 mm). Kisangani, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 75°F (23·9°C). Annual rainfall 68" (1,704 mm). Lubumbashi, Jan. 72°F (22·2°C), July 61°F (16·1°C). Annual rainfall 50" (1,237 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Gen. Laurent-Désiré Kabila seized power on 17 May 1997 after the military defeat of Marshal Mobutu Sésé Séko and his government, and is both chief of state and head of government. Although parties other than the ADFL have been dissolved, a constitutional referendum was due to be held in Dec. 1998, and presidential and parliamentary elections in April 1999.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Laurent Kabila appointed 13 new government ministers in June 1998 after purging his inner circle of 5 cabinet ministers and placing them under arrest. In Aug. 1998, 2 ministers went into exile in South Africa.

In March 1999 the government comprised:

President, Minister of Defence: Gen. Laurent-Désiré Kabila.

Minister of State Attached to the Presidency: Pierre Victor Mpoyo. Minister of State for Interior: Gaëtan Kakudji. Minsiter of State for Planning: Badimayi Bilembo Mulumba.

Minister of Agriculture and Livestock, Finance and Budget: Mawampanga Mwana Nanga. Civil Service: Paul Kapita Shabangi. Commerce: Paul Bandoma. Culture and Arts: Juliana Lumumba. Economy: Henri Nyembo Kabemba. Education: Augustin Kamara Rwakaikara. Energy: Christian Eleko Botuma. Environment: Eddy Angulu Mabengi. Human Rights: Leonard Cheik Okitundu. Industry and Small and Medium-Sized Enterprises: Richard Babi Mbaye. Information and Press: Didier Mumengi. International Co-operation: Célestin Lwangi. Justice: Mwenze Kongolo. Labour and Social Affairs: Thomas Kanza. Land Affairs: Anatole Bishikwabo Chubaka. Mines: Fréderic Kibassa Maliba. Development and Strategic Zones: Gabriel Umba Kyamitala. Post and Telecommunications: Jean-Moreno Kinkela Vi Kan'sy. Public Enterprises: Prosper Kibwe Molambo. Public Works: Bruno Luawulo. Transport and Communications: Henri Mova Sakanyi. Tourism: Pascaline Birindo Toyi. Youth and Sports: Dumba Kimaya.

Local Government. The Democratic Republic of the Congo is composed of Kinshasa (administered by a Governor) and 10 regions, each under a Regional Commissioner and 6 Councillors; all are appointed by the President. The regions are divided into 41 sub-regions.

DEFENCE

Following the overthrow of the Mobutu regime in May 1997, the former Zaïrean armed forces were in disarray. The insurgent Congo Liberation Army has between 20,000 and 40,000 fighters, equipped with small arms and some SA-7 SAMs. Much of this equipment is believed to be non-operational.

Defence expenditure totalled US$308m. in 1997 (US$7 per capita).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The Democratic Republic of the Congo is a member of the UN, OAU and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

In Sept. 1998 President Kabila decreed that all purchases of gold and diamonds must be in new Congolese francs and go through a state purchasing company.

Performance. GDP fell 0·7% in 1995 and was reported in Feb. 1998 to be 65% lower than it was in 1960, when the country gained independence.

Budget. Revenues in 1996 were an estimated US$269m. and expenditure US$244m. International economic aid has been made dependent on a coherent plan to revive the economy and progress on democracy and human rights.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Congo franc which replaced the former zaïre in July 1998. The value of the new currency fell by two-thirds in the six months following its launch. Foreign exchange reserves were US$83m. in Dec. 1996. Inflation was around 14% in Nov. 1997.

Banking and Finance. The central bank is Banque Centrale du Congo. A development bank with state backing is the Société Financière de Développement (SOFIDE). Commercial banks operating in the Democratic Republic of the Congo include Banque de Paris et des Pays-Bas, Banque de Kinshasa, National & Grindlays Bank, Barclays Bank SZPRL, First National City Bank, Banque du Peuple and Caisse Nationale d'Epargne et de Crédit Immobilier.

Since Aug. 1991 commercial banks have been able to trade foreign exchange freely at their own rates.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Production (1994), 5,480m. kWh. A dam at Inga, on the River Congo near Matadi, has a potential capacity of 39,600 MW. Installed capacity was 2·83m. kW in 1994. Consumption per capita was estimated to be 87 kWh in 1995.

Oil and Gas. Offshore oil production began in Nov. 1975; estimated crude production (1992) was 1·35m. tonnes. There is an oil refinery at Kinlao-Muanda.

Minerals. Production in 1993 (in 1,000 tonnes): Copper, 48; zinc, 30; cobalt, 2·4; gold, 1,400 kg; diamonds, 15·6m. carats. Coal, tin and silver are also found. The most important mining area is in the region of Shaba (formerly Katanga).

Agriculture. Agriculture accounts for approximately 64% of GDP (the highest proportion anywhere in the world). There were, in 1994, 7·28m. ha of arable land and 15·0m. ha of permanent pasture. The main food crops (1993 production in 1,000 tonnes) are: Cassava, 20,835; plantains, 2,224; sugar-cane, 1,400; maize, 1,201; groundnuts, 604; bananas, 406; yams, 315; rice, 458. Cash crops (1993) include palm oil, 181; coffee, 78; palm kernels, 72; rubber, 5; seed cotton, 77. There are also pineapples, 145; mangoes, 212; oranges, 156; papayas, 210.

Livestock (1996): Cattle, 1,480,000; sheep, 1,043,000; goats, 4,220,000 (1995); pigs, 1,157,000; poultry, 36m. (1995).

Forestry. Equatorial rainforests covered 1,092,000 sq. km in 1995, or 48·2% of the land area, down from 1,129,000 sq. km and 49·8% in 1990. The reduction of 37,000 sq. km in the area under forests between 1990 and 1995 was the biggest in any African country over the same period, and was only exceeded worldwide in Brazil and Indonesia. Timber production in 1995 was 47·19m. cu. metres.

Fisheries. The catch for 1995 was 158,627 tonnes, almost entirely from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

The main manufactures are foodstuffs, beverages, tobacco, textiles, rubber, leather, wood products, cement and building materials, metallurgy and metal extraction, metal items, transport vehicles, electrical equipment and bicycles.

Labour. In 1996 the workforce was 19·62m. (56% males). Agriculture employs around 65% of the total economically active population.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

With Burundi and Rwanda, the Democratic Republic of the Congo forms part of the Economic Community of the Great Lakes. External debt was more than US$14,000m. in 1997.

Imports and Exports. Exports in 1996 totalled US$592m., imports, US$424m. Main commodities for export are diamonds, copper, coffee, cobalt and crude oil; and for import: consumer goods, foodstuffs, mining and other machinery, transport equipment and fuels. Principal export markets are Belgium, USA, France, Germany, Italy, UK, Japan and South Africa. Principal import suppliers are Belgium, South Africa, USA, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and UK.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were approximately 33,000 km of motorways and main roads, and 40,000 km of secondary roads and 83,000 km of other roads. There were an estimated 787,000 passenger cars in use in 1996 (17 per 1,000 inhabitants) plus 538,000 trucks and vans.

Rail. There was 5,138 km of track on 3 gauges in 1995, of which 858 km was electrified. However, the length of track in use was severely reduced by the civil strife in late 1996 and the early part of 1997.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Kinshasa (Ndjili). Other major airports are at Lubumbashi (Luano), Bukavu, Goma and Kisangani. The national carrier is Congo Airlines. In 1998 services were also provided by Aero-Service, Air Tanzania Corporation, Cameroon Airlines, Compagnie Africaine d'Aviation, Ethiopian Airlines, Nigeria Airways, SABENA, South African Airways, Swissair, TAAG, TAP and Uganda Airlines. In 1996 Kinshasa handled 344,000 passengers (192,000 on domestic flights) and 96,300 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The River Congo and its tributaries are navigable to 300-tonne vessels for about 14,500 km. Regular traffic has been established between Kinshasa and Kisangani as well as Ilebo, on the Lualaba (i.e., the river above Kisangani), on some tributaries and on the lakes. The Democratic Republic of the Congo has only 37 km of sea coast. In 1995 merchant shipping totalled 15,000 GRT. Matadi, Kinshasa and Kalemie are the main seaports; in 1993 Matadi handled 0·6m. tonnes of freight.

Telecommunications. Telephone main lines numbered 21,000 in 1997, or 0·4 per 1,000 inhabitants—the lowest penetration rate of any country in the world. There is a ground satellite communications station outside Kinshasa. In 1995 there were 10,000 cellular phone subscribers and 5,000 fax machines, and in Jan. 1998 approximately 100 Internet users.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 304 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court at Kinshasa, 11 courts of appeal, 36 courts of first instance and 24 'peace tribunals'.

CONGO, REPUBLIC OF THE

République du Congo

Capital: Brazzaville
Population estimate, 2000: 2·98m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 1,410
HDI/world rank: 0·519/128

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Portuguese first reached the mouth of the Congo in the 15th century. Loango, in the Kouilou region, was one of the largest ports connected with slavery in the 18th century. Late in the 19th century Sir Henry Stanley and Savorgnan de Brazza (after whom the capital was named) multiplied the number of explorations and investigations. First occupied by France in 1882, the Congo became a territory of French Equatorial Africa from 1910–58, and then a member state of the French Community. Between 1940 and 1944, thanks to Equatorial Africa's allegiance to General de Gaulle, he named Brazzaville the capital of the Empire and Liberated France. Independence was granted in 1960.

The first President, Fulbert Youlou, was deposed on 15 Aug. 1963 by a coup led by Alphonse Massemba-Débat who became President on 19 Dec. Following a second coup in Aug. 1968, the Army took power under the leadership of Major Marien Ngouabi whose colleague, Major Alfred Raoul, was appointed President from 3 Sept. until 1 Jan. 1969 when Ngouabi himself became President. A Marxist-Leninist state was introduced in 1970. Ngouabi was assassinated on 18 March 1977 and succeeded by Col. Joachim Yhombi-Opango who, in turn, was replaced on 5 Feb. 1979 by Col. Denis Sassou-Nguesso. Free elections were restored in 1992 when the now Gen. Sassou-Nguesso was defeated by Pascal Lissouba but violence erupted when in June 1997 President Lissouba tried to disarm the General's militia ahead of a fresh election. There followed 4 months of civil war with fighting concentrated on Brazzaville which became a ghost town. In Oct. Gen. Sassou-Nguesso proclaimed victory, having relied upon military support from Angola. President Lissouba went into hiding in Burkina Faso.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Republic of the Congo is bounded by Cameroon and the Central African Republic in the north, the Democratic Republic of the Congo to the east and south, Angola and the Atlantic Ocean to the south-west and Gabon to the west, and covers 341,821 sq. km. At the census of 1984 the population was 1,909,248.

Estimated population in 1997, 2,583,000; density, 7·6 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 2·98m.

In 1995 it was estimated that 58·4% of the population were urban. Estimated population of major cities in 1995 were: Brazzaville, the capital, 937,579; Pointe-Noire, 576,206; Loubomo, 83,605; N'Kayi, 42,465; Mossendjo, 16,405; Ouesso, 16,171.

Area, estimated population and county towns of the regions in 1992 were:

Region	Sq. km	Population	County town
Kouilou	13,694	665,502	Pointe-Noire
Niari	25,940	220,087	Loubomo
Lékoumou	20,950	74,420	Sibiti
Bouenza	12,266	219,822	Madingou
Pool	33,955	182,671	Kinkala
Capital District	100	937,579	Brazzaville
Plateaux	38,400	119,722	Djambala
Cuvette	74,850	151,839	Owando
Sangha	55,800	52,132	Ouesso
Likouala	66,044	70,675	Impfondo

Main ethnic groups are: Kongo (48%), Sangha (20%), Teke (17%) and M'Bochi (12%).

French is the official language. Kongo languages are widely spoken. Monokutuba and Lingala serve as lingua francas.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 100,000; deaths, 45,000. Rates, 1997 estimates (per 1,000 population): Births, 38·8; deaths, 17·3. Infant mortality (per 1,000 live births), 106·1. Expectation of life in 1997 was 45·7 years (44·25 for males and 47·3 for females). Growth rate, 2·15% per annum. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 6·3 children per woman.

CLIMATE

An equatorial climate, with moderate rainfall and a small range of temperature. There is a long dry season from May to Oct. in the south-west plateaux, but the Congo Basin in the north-east is more humid, with rainfall approaching 100" (2,500 mm). Brazzaville, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 73°F (22·8°C). Annual rainfall 59" (1,473 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

From Feb. to June 1991 a national conference was held consisting of representatives of 67 political parties, 134 associations and 30 specialists. This abolished the constitution of July 1979, dissolved the National Assembly, Constitutional Council and Economic Council, and adopted a basic law to regulate a period of transition. It established a presidency of the republic with newly defined powers, a 153-member Supreme Council of the Republic and a prime ministership. At a referendum in March 1992 proposing multi-party democracy 96·32% of votes were in favour. Turn-out was 70·93%.

National Anthem. 'La Congolaise; words and tune by Jean Royer and others.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 24 June and 19 July 1992 for the new 125-member National Assembly, the Pan-African Union for Social Democracy (UPADS) gained 39 seats, the Congolese Movement for Democracy and Integral Development (MCDDI) 29, the Congolese Labour Party 19, the Democratic Rally for Social Progress 9 and the Rally for Democracy and Development 5.

In the 60-member Senate, UPADS gained 23 seats, MCDDI 13.

In Nov. 1992 the President dismissed the government of Stéphane Bongho-Nouarra and dissolved the National Assembly. At the first round of elections in May–June 1993 for 114 seats in the National Assembly, the Presidential Movement (PM; a coalition of some 60 parties) gained 62 seats, the Congolese Labour Party–Union for Democratic Renewal Coalition 49 and minor parties 3. At the second round in Oct. for the remaining 11 seats, the PM gained 4 and CLP-UDR 7.

At the 1992 presidential elections, Pascal Lissouba was elected President, defeating Gen. Sassou-Nguesso. In Oct. 1997, following a military-led coup under Gen. Sassou-Nguesso, and 4 months of civil war, Pascal Lissouba went into hiding and Gen. Sassou-Nguesso was sworn in as President.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Denis Sassou-Nguesso (sworn in Oct. 1997).

Gen. Sassou-Nguesso subsequently formed a transition government, which in March 1999 comprised:

Navy. The combatant flotilla includes 3 modern Spanish-built and 3 ex-Soviet inshore patrol craft. There is also 1 French-built tug and some river patrol boats. Personnel in 1996 totalled about 600.

Air Force. The Air Force had (1997) about 1,200 personnel, 5 Antonov An-24/26 turboprop transports, 1 Noratlas piston-engined transport and 2 Mi-8 helicopters. Most of these aircraft are in store.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The Republic of the Congo is a member of the UN, OAU and is an ACP member state of the ACP-EU relationship.

ECONOMY

Policy. An economic and social recovery plan (Paséco) was launched in 1994.

Performance. Real GDP growth was −0·4% in 1995 (−1·5% in 1994).

Budget. Estimated figures for 1997 are: Revenue, US$870m.; expenditure, US$970m. (including capital expenditures).

Currency. The unit of currency is the franc CFA with a parity of 100 francs CFA to 1 French franc. Total money supply in Jan. 1998 was 171bn. francs CFA. Foreign exchange reserves were US$53m. in Jan. 1998. Inflation was down to 70% in 1998 with a new currency, the Congolese franc, introduced on 30 June.

Banking and Finance. The Banque des États de l'Afrique Centrale (BEAC) is the bank of issue. There are 3 commercial banks and a development bank, in all of which the government has majority stakes.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 165,000 kW in 1995. Total production in 1994 was 440m. kWh. Consumption per capita was an estimated 223 kWh in 1994.

Oil and Gas. Oil was discovered in the mid-1960s when Elf Aquitaine was given exclusive rights to production. Elf still has the lion's share but Agip Congo is also involved in oil exploitation. In 1997 production was averaging 230,000 bbls. a day. Reserves are estimated at 500–1,000m. tonnes, including major off-shore deposits. Oil provides about 90% of government revenue and exports. There is a refinery at Pointe-Noire, the second largest city. Gas reserves are estimated at 71,000m. cu. metres.

Minerals. A government mine produces several metals; gold and diamonds are extracted by individuals. There are reserves of potash (4·5m. tonnes), iron ore (1,000m. tonnes), and also clay, bituminous sand, phosphates, zinc and lead.

Agriculture. In 1996 agriculture produced 10% of GDP. In 1994 there were 145,000 ha of arable land, 25,000 ha of permanent crops and 10m. ha of permanent pasture. Production (1991, in thousand tonnes): Cassava, 780; bananas, 40; plantains, 80; yams, 12; maize, 25; groundnuts, 27; coffee, 1; cocoa, 2; rice, 1.

Livestock (1996): Cattle, 70,000; pigs, 59,000; sheep, 114,000; goats, 305; poultry, 2m. There were some 700 tractors in use in 1994.

Forestry. In 1995 equatorial forests covered 19·54m. ha in (57·2% of the total land area), down from 19·74m. ha in 1990. 3·83m. cu. metres of timber were produced in 1995, mainly okoumé from the south and sapele from the north. Timber companies are required to replant, and to process at least 60% of their production locally. Before the development of the oil industry, forestry was the mainstay of the economy.

Fisheries. The catch for 1995 was 36,824 tonnes, of which 19,824 tonnes were from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

There is a growing manufacturing sector, located mainly in the 4 major towns, producing processed foods, textiles, cement, metal goods and chemicals. Industry produced 37·4% of GDP in 1991, including 7·6% from manufacturing. Production: Printed cloth (1990), 8·79m. metres; cement (1989), 121,000 tonnes; shoes (1989), 14,670 pairs; corrugated iron sheets (1990), 1·68m. tonnes; household goods (1990), 186 tonnes; nails (1990), 377 tonnes.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 1,105,000 (57% males). More than 50% of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture.

Trade Unions. In 1964 the existing unions merged into one national body, the Confédération Syndicale Congolaise. The 40,000-strong Confédération Syndicale des Travailleurs Congolais split off from the latter in 1993.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$5,300m. in 1996.

Imports and Exports. Imports in 1995 totalled US$671m. and exports US$1,176m. Apart from crude oil, other significant commodities for export are lumber, plywood, sugar, cocoa, coffee and diamonds. Principal imported commodities are intermediate manufactures, capital equipment, construction materials, foodstuffs and petroleum products. Main export markets in 1995 were Belgium/Luxembourg, 24·3%, followed by Taiwan, the USA and Italy. Main import suppliers: France, 31·2%, followed by the Netherlands, Italy and the USA.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 12,800 km of roads, of which 1,240 km were surfaced. Vehicles in use in 1996 numbered 53,000 including approximately 37,000 passenger cars (14 per 1,000 inhabitants).

Rail. A railway (510 km, 1,067 mm gauge) connects Brazzaville with Pointe-Noire via Loubomo and Bilinga, and a 285 km branch links Mont-Belo with Mbinda on the Gabon border. Total length is 795 km. In 1994 railways carried 285m. passenger-km and 223m. tonne-km of freight.

Civil Aviation. The principal airports are at Brazzaville (Maya Maya) and Pointe-Noire. The Republic of the Congo is a member of the multinational Air Afrique, which absorbed the former national carrier Lina-Congo in 1992. Services were also provided in 1998 by Aero-Service, Air France and Cameroon Airlines. In 1996 Brazzaville handled 416,344 passengers (246,000 on domestic flights) and 10,371 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The only seaport is Pointe-Noire, which handled 2·59m. tonnes of freight in 1990. The merchant marine totalled 11,010 GRT in 1995. There are some 5,000 km of navigable rivers, and river transport is an important service for timber and other freight as well as passengers. There are hydrofoil connections from Brazzaville to Kinshasa.

Telecommunications. There were 22,000 telephone main lines in 1997 (8 per 1,000 persons). In 1995 there were 100 fax machines.

Postal Services. There were 114 post offices in 1995.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court, Court of Appeal and a criminal court are situated in Brazzaville, with a network of tribunaux de grande instance and tribunaux d'instance in the regions.

Religion. In 1990 there were 1·25m. Roman Catholics and 0·5m. Protestants. There are also Moslems, and traditional animist beliefs are still practised.

Education. In 1995–96 there were 1,162 primary schools with 7,060 teachers for 497,305 pupils, 7,173 secondary school teachers for 214,650 pupils; and there were 13,806 students at university level in 1992–93. Adult literacy rate (1995) 74·9% (male, 83·1%; female, 67·2%).

Health. In 1990 there were 613 doctors, 35 dentists, 1,624 nurses and 498 midwives.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is under the aegis of the government-controlled Radiodiffusion-Télévision Congolaise, which transmits a national and a regional radio programme and a programme in French. In 1993 there were 6 hours of TV broadcasting daily (colour by SECAM). There were 300,000 radio and about 20,000 TV receivers in 1995.

Press. In 1995 there were 6 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 20,000.

Tourism. There were 27,000 foreign tourists in 1996, bringing revenue of US$4m.

COSTA RICA

República de Costa Rica

Capital: San José
Population estimate, 2000: 3·8m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 6,470
HDI/world rank: 0·889/34

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered by Columbus in 1502 on his last voyage, Costa Rica (Rich Coast) was part of the Spanish viceroyalty of New Spain from 1540 and was thought to be rich in gold. Costa Rica became independent of Spain in 1821. From 1822 to 1823 it was part of Mexico and then part of the Central American Federation until 1838 when it left this confederation and achieved full independence. The first constitution was promulgated on 7 Dec. 1871. Coffee was introduced in 1808 and became a mainstay of the economy, helping to create a peasant land-owning class. Bananas, another important crop, were introduced in 1878. In 1917 Federico Tinoco overthrew the elected president but the USA intervened and Tinoco was deposed in 1919. In 1948 accusations of election fraud led to a 6-week civil war, at the conclusion of which José Figueres Ferrer won power at the head of a revolutionary junta. A new constitution was promulgated with, amongst other changes, the abolition of the army. Ferrer, the founder and leader of the Partido de Liberación Nacional (PLN), became the elected president from 1953 to 1958 and again in 1970-74. More conservative governments held office between Ferrer's 2 presidencies and again after Ferrer's PLN successor's single 4-year term. In 1982 the PLN candidate, Luis Alberto Monge, was elected president. In 1986 Oscar Arias Sánchez was elected to succeed Monge. He promised to prevent Nicaraguan anti-Sandinista (contra) forces using Costa Rica as a base. In 1987 he received the Nobel Peace Prize as recognition of his Central American peace plan, agreed to by the other Central American states. Costa Rica was beset with economic problems in the early 1990s when several politicians, including President Calderón, were accused of profiting from drug trafficking.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Costa Rica is bounded in the north by Nicaragua, east by the Caribbean, south-east by Panama, and south and west by the Pacific. The area is estimated at 51,100 sq. km (19,730 sq. miles). The population at the census of 1 June 1984 was 2,416,809. Estimate (1995) 3,367,400 (49·3% urban); density, 66·2 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 3·8m.

There are 7 provinces (with 1995 population): Alajuela (607,674); Cartago (378,188); Guanacaste (266,198); Heredia (270,096); Limón (255,248); Puntarenas (375,639); San José (1,220,412).

The population is mainly of Spanish (85%) and mixed (8%) descent. About 3% are Afro-Caribbean (including some 70,000 speakers of an English Creole along the Caribbean coast). There is a residual Amerindian population of about 10,000.

Spanish is the official language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was promulgated in Nov. 1949. The legislative power is vested in a single-chamber Legislative Assembly of 57 deputies elected for 4 years. The President and 2 Vice-Presidents are elected for 4 years; the candidate receiving the largest vote, provided it is over 40% of the total, is declared elected, but a second ballot is required if no candidate gets 40% of the total. Elections are normally held on the first Sunday in February.

The President may appoint and remove members of the cabinet.

National Anthem. 'Noble patria, tu hermosa bandera' ('Noble fatherland, thy beautiful banner'); words by J. M. Zeledón Brenes, tune by M. M. Gutiérrez.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections took place on 1 Feb. 1998. Miguel Angel Rodriguez of the Social Christian Unity Party (PUSC) was elected by 46·9% of votes cast, defeating José Miguel Corrales, of the National Liberation Party (PLN), who obtained 44·4% of the votes, and 4 other candidates.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Portuguese discovered Côte d'Ivoire (or the Ivory Coast as it was formerly known) in the 15th century but there was little initial interest in the area. The dense forests which covered the southern half of the area that was to become Côte d'Ivoire formed barriers to large-scale socio-political organizations and in the north dissimilar populations did not have the incentive to overcome ethnic differences and so forge a larger state. Even with the development in the 17th and 18th centuries of the Guinea coast gold and slave trades, Côte d'Ivoire generally lay too far to the west to be of significance.

France obtained rights on the coast in 1842 but did not actively and continuously occupy the territory until 1882. In the early 1870s the French ministry responsible for colonies even offered to exchange Côte d'Ivoire with the British for the Gambia, which bisected the French colony of Senegal, but the British refused. Rumours of gold later rekindled French interest and on 10 Jan. 1889 Côte d'Ivoire was declared a French protectorate becoming a colony on 10 March 1893. Over the next 20 years French administrators used the military to subdue African populations which openly resisted French intrusions. In 1904 Côte d'Ivoire became a territory of French West Africa. The French administered Côte d'Ivoire in a direct style, and would routinely dismiss locally selected chiefs. Governors appointed from France administered the colony using a system of centralized rule that allowed little room for participation among the Ivorians. In 1946 Côte d'Ivoire's first political party, the Democratic Party of Côte d'Ivoire, was created under the leadership of Félix Houphouët-Boigny and after confrontations which nearly led to the ruin of the party, he eventually adopted a policy of practical co-operation with the French authorities. By the mid-1950s the country had become the wealthiest in French West Africa and on 4 Dec. 1958 Côte d'Ivoire became an autonomous republic within the French Community.

Côte d'Ivoire achieved full independence on 7 Aug. 1960, with Félix Houphouët-Boigny as its first president. He was authoritarian yet his policies brought two decades of economic growth and political stability. Not until 1990 were opposition parties legalized, 3 years before his death. He was succeeded by Henri Konan Bédié, also of the Democratic Party of Côte d'Ivoire.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Côte d'Ivoire is bounded in the west by Liberia and Guinea, north by Mali and Burkina Faso, east by Ghana, and south by the Gulf of Guinea. It has an area of 320,783 sq. km and a population at the 1988 census of 10,812,782 (40% urban; in 1995, 43%). Estimate (1996) 14·76m.; density, 46·0 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 15·14m.

Since 1991, the country has been divided into 10 regions (North-West, North, North-East, West, Centre-West, Centre-North, Centre, Centre-East, South-West, South) comprising 50 departments. Departments are named after their chief towns.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The original Croats migrated to their present territory in the 6th century and were converted to Roman Catholicism. Croatia was united with Hungary in 1091 and remained under Hungarian administration until the end of the First World War. On 1 Dec. 1918 Croatia became a part of the new Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, which was renamed Yugoslavia in 1929. During the Second World War an independent fascist (Ustaša) state was set up under the aegis of the German occupiers. During the Communist period Croatia became one of the 6 'Socialist Republics' constituting the Yugoslav federation led by Marshal Tito. With the collapse of Communism, an independence movement gained momentum.

In a referendum on 19 May 1991, 94·17% of votes cast were in favour of Croatia becoming an independent sovereign state with the option of joining a future Yugoslav confederation as opposed to remaining in the existing Yugoslav federation. The Krajina and other predominantly Serbian areas of Croatia, wanted union with Serbia and seized power by force of arms. Croatian forces and Serb insurgents backed by federal forces became embroiled in a conflict throughout 1991 until the arrival of a UN peace-keeping mission at the beginning of 1992 and the establishment of 4 UN ('pink zones') peace-keeping zones. Croatia obtained a reduction in the UN peace-keeping forces after 1 April 1995.

In early May 1995 Croatian forces re-took Western Slavonia from the Serbs and opened the Zagreb-Belgrade highway. Serb rockets fell on Zagreb during the campaign and civilians were killed. In a 60-hour operation mounted on 4 Aug. 1995 the former self-declared Serb Republic of Krajina was occupied, provoking an exodus of 0·18m. Serb refugees. Croats who had left the area in 1991 began to return. On 12 Nov. 1995 the Croatian government and Bosnian Serbs reached an agreement to place Eastern Slavonia, the last Croatian territory still under Bosnian Serb control, under UN administration until 15 July 1998.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Croatia is bounded in the north by Slovenia and Hungary and in the east by Yugoslavia and Bosnia-Hercegovina. It includes the areas of Dalmatia, Istria and Slavonia which no longer have administrative status. Its area is 56,538 sq. km. Population at the 1991 census was 4,784,265, of whom the predominating ethnic groups were Croats (3,736,356) and Serbs (581,663). Estimate, 1997, 4,664,700; density, 85·5 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 4·48m.

In 1995 an estimated 55·8% of the population lived in urban areas. Principal towns (with 1991 census population): Zagreb (726,770), Split (189,388), Rijeka (167,964), Osijek (104,761).

At the beginning of 1991 there were some 0·6m. resident Serbs. A law of Dec. 1991 guaranteed the autonomy of Serbs in areas where they are in a majority after the establishment of a permanent peace.

The official language is the western variant of Serbo-Croat (in Croatia called Croato-Serb or, familiarly, Croatian).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 50,182; deaths, 50,536; marriages, 24,385; divorces, 4,236. 1995 rates: Birth, 10·5 per 1,000 population; death, 10·6; marriage, 5·1; divorce, 0·89; infant mortality, 10·2 per 1,000 live births. Population growth, 1997, 0·17%. In 1995 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for males and 20–24 for females. Life expectancy at birth, 1990–95, was 67·1 years for males and 75·7 years for females. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 1·7 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Inland Croatia has a Central European type of climate, with cold winters and hot summers, but the Adriatic coastal region experiences a Mediterranean climate with mild, moist winters and hot, brilliantly sunny summers with less than average rainfall. Normal Jan./July temperature and annual rainfall: Dubrovnik, 9·2°C/24·7°C and 1,006 mm. Zadar, 7·2°C/23·5°C and 688 mm. Rijeka, 6·2°C/23°C and 1,251 mm. Zagreb, 0°C/23·5°C and 652 mm. Osijek, 0·6°C/20·8°C and 541 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was adopted on 21 Dec. 1990. The President is elected for renewable 5-year terms. Parliament (Sabor) consists of the 127-member House of Representatives, in which 12 seats are reserved for the Croat diaspora and 3 for the Serb minority. It is elected by a combination of proportional representation and first-past-the-post methods. There is also an upper house, the 68-member Chamber of Counties, composed of representatives of counties elected by proportional representation, and 5 members nominated by the President. The role of the Chamber of Counties is primarily consultative.

National Anthem. 'Lijepa nasva domovino' ('Beautiful our homeland'); words by A. Mihanović, tune by J. Runjanin.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Franjo Tudjman was elected President in May 1990, and re-elected on 3 Aug. 1992 against 7 opponents by 56·7% of votes cast. Presidential elections were last held 15 June 1997. There were 3 candidates. Turn-out was 56·2%. President Tudjman was re-elected with 61·41% of votes cast.

At elections to the Sabor on 29 Oct. 1995 the electorate was 3·6m.; turn-out was 66%. The Croatian Democratic Union (HDZ) won 75 seats with 44·82% of votes cast, the Peasant Party coalition 16 with 18·44%, the Croatian Social Liberal Party 12 with 11·62%, the Social Democratic Party 10, the Croat Right-Wing Party 4, the Istrian Democratic Diet 2, and the Independent Democrats 1. At elections to the Chamber of Counties on 17 Apr. 1997 the HDZ gained 41 seats, the Croatian Peasant Party 9, Social Liberals 7 and others 6.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Franjo Tudjman, b. 1922 (HDZ; since 1990; re-elected in 1992 and 1997).

The government comprised in March 1999:

Prime Minister: Zlatko Matesa.

Deputy Prime Ministers: Jure Radić (Development and Reconstruction); Mate Granić (Refugee Issues, Foreign Affairs); Ivica Kostović (Humanitarian Affairs); Borislav Skegro (Economics and Finance); Ljerka Mintas-Hodak (Social Affairs). Defence: Pavao Milijavać. Interior: Ivan Penić. Tourism: Sergej Morsan. Agriculture and Forestry: Ivan Djurkić. Urban Planning, Construction and Housing: Marko Sirać. Education and Sport: Bozidar Pugelnik. Health: Zeljko Reiner. Justice: Milan Ramljak. Administration: Marijan Ramuscak. Labour and Social Welfare: Joso Škara. Maritime Affairs, Transport and Communications: Zeljko Lužavec. Economy: Nenad Porges. Privatization and State Property Management: Milan Kovać. Culture: Božo Biskupić. Immigration: Marijan Petrović. European Integration: Ljerka Mintas-Hodak. Homeland War Defenders and War Veterans: Jurag Njavro. Science and Technology: Milena Zic-Fuchs.

The Speaker is Nedjeljko Mihanović.

Local Government. The country is divided into 21 counties (zvupanija), 2 districts (Knin and Glina, at present under local Serbian control), 68 towns and 383 municipalities, all administered by elected councils. County councils elect as leader a prefect approved by the President. County councils have broad responsibilities in the spheres of economic development, health and education; town and municipal councils (the latter for areas with fewer than 10,00 population) are concerned with detailed administration. Elections were held in April 1997.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 10 months. Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$1,147m. (US$244 per capita), representing 5·7% of GDP.

Army. The country is divided into 6 operations zones. The Army consists of 10 infantry, 4 air defence, 3 special forces, 1 artillery-multiple rocket launcher, 3 anti-tank, 1 engineer and 1 mechanized brigade, 7 mixed and artillery divisions. Equipment includes 250 T-34, T-55 and M-84 main battle tanks. Personnel, 1997, 50,000 (33,500 conscripts). Paramilitary forces include an armed police of 40,000. There are also 10,000 reserves in 27 Home Defence regiments and 150,000 regular Army reservists.

Navy. In 1996 the fleet comprised 2 inshore submarines for special operations, 1 missile-armed corvette, 4 missile craft, 1 torpedo craft, 3 patrol craft, 2 minelayers and 2 small mine countermeasures vessels. There are 11 small amphibious craft and some 5 support vessels. A Marine service fields 7 independent infantry companies, and the coast defence force mans artillery batteries. Total personnel in 1997 numbered about 3,000 including marines.

Air Force. The Air Force has 7 squadrons, 2 with MiG-21 fighters, 1 with Mi-24 armed helicopters, 1 with Mi-8/17 transport helicopters, 1 with An-2, An-26 and An-32 fixed-wing transports, 1 fixed-wing training squadron with light aircraft and PC-9s and 1 with JetRanger helicopter trainer aircraft. Personnel, 1997, 5,000 (including Air Defence).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In Jan. 1994 relations with Yugoslavia were established with the opening of mutual representative offices. In late 1997 and early 1998 Croatia signed highway construction agreements with German, Italian and French companies worth US$800m.

Croatia is a member of the UN, the Council of Europe and the Central European Initiative.

CUBA

República de Cuba

Capital: Havana
Population estimate, 2000: 11·2m.
Estimated GDP: $16·2bn.
HDI/world rank: 0·729/85

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Cuba was discovered by Columbus in 1492 and, except for the brief British occupancy in 1762-63, remained a Spanish possession until 10 Dec. 1898. Sovereignty was then relinquished under the terms of the Treaty of Paris at the end of the Spanish-American War. Cuba became an independent republic in 1901, although the USA continued to influence Cuban internal affairs and foreign policy until 1934.

In 1933 Fulgencio Batista Zladivar led a successful military revolution. He ruled the country until 1944, as elected president from 1940, and again, after seizing power in a coup, from 1952 until 1959. A revolutionary movement against the corrupt Batista dictatorship, led by Dr Fidel Castro from 26 July 1953, was eventually successful and Batista fled the country on 1 Jan. 1959. Under Castro, Cuba's relationship with the USA deteriorated while relations with the USSR became closer. In Jan. 1961 the USA severed diplomatic relations after US business interests in Cuba had been expropriated without compensation for refusing to co-operate with the government's economic plans. On 17 April an invasion force of émigrés and adventurers, encouraged by the USA, landed in Cuba but was defeated at the Bay of Pigs. At the end of 1961 Castro declared Cuba to be a Communist state.

The US Navy imposed a blockade of Cuba from 22 Oct. until 22 Nov. 1962 to force the USSR to withdraw Soviet missile bases. Cuba continued to receive financial aid and technical advice from the USSR until the early 1990s when subsidies of around US$4bn. a year were suspended. This led to a 40% drop in GDP between 1989 and 1993. The USA has maintained an economic embargo against the island, and relations between Cuba and the USA have remained embittered. But in the wake of the Pope's visit to Cuba in Jan. 1998, President Clinton announced a package of measures to alleviate poverty including permission to allow Cuban Americans to send up to US$1,200 per family to relatives on the island.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The island of Cuba forms the largest and most westerly of the Greater Antilles group and lies 135 miles south of the tip of Florida, USA. The area is 110,860 sq. km, and comprises the island of Cuba, (104,945 sq. km.); the Isle of Youth (Isla de la Juventud, formerly the Isle of Pines; 2,200 sq. km.); and some 1,600 small isles ('cays'; 3,715 sq. km). Population, census (1981), 9,723,605; estimate, 1996, 10,951,300; density, 99 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 11·2m.

An estimated 75·8% of the population were urban in 1995.

The area, population and density of population of the 14 provinces and the special Municipality of the Isle of Youth (Isla de la Juventud) were as follows (1989 estimate):

	Area sq. km	Population		Area sq. km.	Population
Pinar del Río	10,860	681,500	Camagüey	14,134	727,700
La Habana	5,671	633,400	Las Tunas	6,373	481,500
Ciudad de La Habana	727	2,068,600	Holguín	9,105	927,700
Matanzas	11,669	599,500	Granma	8,452	777,300
Cienfuegos	4,149	356,700	Santiago de Cuba	6,343	974,100
Villa Clara	8,069	788,800	Guantánamo	6,366	487,900
Sancti Spíritus	6,737	422,300
Ciego de Avila	6,485	355,500	Isla de la Juventud	2,199	70,900

Chief cities (1991 population estimate in 1,000): Havana, the capital (2,124), Santiago de Cuba (418), Camagüey (289), Holguín (206), Guantánamo (206), Santa Clara (200); 1990, Bayamo (125,021), Cienfuegos (123,600), Pinar del Río (121,774), Las Tunas (119,400), Matanzas (113,724) and Manzanillo (107,650).

The official language is Spanish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 147,000; deaths, 81,000. Rates, 1996 (estimates): Birth, 13·4 per 1,000 population; death, 7·4; infant mortality rate, 9 per 1,000 live births; life expectancy, 75 years (males 73, females 77). Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 0·8%. The fertility rate in 1990–95 was 1·6 births per woman, the lowest in the Americas.

CLIMATE

Situated in the sub-tropical zone, Cuba has a generally rainy climate, affected by the Gulf Stream and the N.E. Trades, though winters are comparatively dry after the heaviest rains in Sept. and Oct. Hurricanes are liable to occur between June and Nov. Havana, Jan. 72°F (22·2°C), July 82°F (27·8°C). Annual rainfall 48" (1,224 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A Communist Constitution came into force on 24 Feb. 1976. It was amended in July 1992 to permit direct parliamentary elections.

Legislative power is vested in the National Assembly of People's Power, which meets twice a year and consists of 601 deputies elected for a 5-year term by universal suffrage. Lists of candidates are drawn up by mass organizations (trade unions, etc.). The National Assembly elects a 31-member Council of State as its permanent organ. The Council of State's President, who is head of state and of government, nominates and leads a Council of Ministers approved by the National Assembly.

National Anthem. 'Al combate corred bayameses' ('Run, Bayamans, to the combat'); words and tune by P. Figueredo.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the National Assembly were held on 11 Jan. 1998. The electorate was 8m.; turn-out was 98·35%. All 601 candidates received the requisite 50% of votes for election.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Dr Fidel Castro Ruz (b. 1927) became President of the Council of State on 3 Dec. 1976; re-elected for 5 years on 24 Feb. 1998. He is also First Secretary of the Cuban Communist Party and C.-in-C. of the National Defence Council.

In March 1999 the government comprised:

First Vice-President of the Council of State and of the Council of Ministers, Minister of the Revolutionary Armed Forces: Gen. Raúl Castro Ruz. Vice-Presidents of the Council of Ministers: Osmani Cienfuegos Gorriarán, José Ramon Fernández Álvárez, Jaime Crombet Hernández-Baquero, Adolfo Díaz Suárez, Pedro Miret Prieto. Minister of Agriculture: Alfredo Jordán Morales. Basic Industries: Marcos Portal León. Communications: Gen. Silvano Colás Sánchez. Construction: Juan Junco del Pino. Construction Materials Industry: José Cañete Alvárez. Culture: Abel Prieto Jiménez. Domestic Trade: Barbara Castillo Cuesta. Economy and Planning: José Luis Rodríguez García. Education: Luís Gómez Gutiérrez. Finance and Prices: Manuel Millares Rodríguez. Fishing Industry: Orlando Rodríguez Romay. Food Industry: Alejandro Roca Iglesias. Foreign Investment and Economic Co-operation: Ibrahim Ferradez. Foreign Relations: Roberto Robaina Gonzalez. Foreign Trade: Ricardo Cabrisas Ruíz. Higher Education: Fernando Vecino Alegret. Interior: Gen. Abelardo Colomé Ibarra. Metallurgy and Electronics Industry: Ignacio González Planas. Justice: Roberto Diaz Sotolongo. Labour and Social Security: Salvador Valdes Mesa. Light Industry: Jesús Pérez Othon. Public Health: Carlos Dotres Martínez. Science, Technology and Environment: Rosa Simeón Negrín. Sugar Industry: Div. Gen. Ulises Rosales del Toro. Tourism: Osmany Cienfuegos Gorriarán. Transport: Alvaro Perez Morales. Minister without Portfolio: Wilfredo López Rodríguez.

The Speaker of the National Assembly is Ricardo Alarcón de Quesada.

Various left-wing parties and movements have amalgamated as the Communist Party of Cuba (PCC).

The Congress of the PCC elects a Central Committee of 225 members, which in turn appoints a Political Bureau comprising 26 members.

Local Government. The country is divided into 14 provinces, a special municipality (the Isle of Youth) and 169 municipalities. Elections are held for delegates to the Municipal Assemblies by universal suffrage for 2½ year terms; the municipal assemblies then elect the provincial assemblies for similar terms. Elections for 1,192 representatives to the 14 provincial assemblies were held on 11 Jan. 1998.

DEFENCE

The National Defence Council is headed by the President of the republic. Conscription is for 2 years.

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$720m. (US$65 per capita). Defence expenditure in 1985 was US$2,275m.

Army. The strength was 38,000 (including conscripts and Ready Reservists) in 1997. There are 3 regional commands. The Army is organized in 5 armoured, 9 mechanized infantry, 1 airborne, 1 frontier guard, 1 surface-to-air missile and 14 reserve brigades; and 1 air defence regiment. Equipment includes 75 T-34, 1,100 T-54/55 and 400 T-62 main battle tanks. Border Guard and State Security forces total 19,000, and the Territorial Militia, 1·3m. (reservists), all armed.

Navy. Naval combatants, all ex-Soviet, include 2 'Foxtrot' class diesel submarines, 2 'Koni' class frigates, 1 'Pauk' class corvette, 14 fast missile craft, 3 coastal minehunters and 12 inshore minesweepers. There is 1 medium landing ship and 6 craft. The major auxiliaries include 1 tanker and 1 electronic intelligence gatherer. Some 24 minor auxiliaries and service craft complete the total.

Personnel in 1997 totalled about 5,000 conscripts including about 550 marines. Main bases are at Cienfuegos, Havana and Mariel. The USA still occupies the Guantánamo naval base.

There is a coastal defence force equipped with artillery and some anti-ship missiles. A separate coastguard division of the Frontier Guards numbering 4,000 operates about 30 inshore patrol craft.

Air Force. The Air Force has been extensively re-equipped with aircraft supplied by USSR and in 1997 had a strength of some 10,000 and about 130 combat aircraft. About 10 interceptor and 3 ground-attack squadrons fly MiG-29, MiG-23 and MiG-21 jet fighters. There is a squadron of An-26 and An-32 twin-turboprop transports, some An-24 twin-turboprop transports, and about 20 Mi-24 armed helicopters, Mi-8 (some armed), Mi-17 and Mi-2 helicopters, Zlin 326 piston-engined trainers and L-39, MiG-21U, MiG-23U and MiG-29U jet trainers. 10 An-2M biplanes are operated by the Air Force, mainly on agricultural and liaison duties. Soviet-built surface-to-air ('Guideline', 'Goa' and 'Gainful') and coastal defence ('Samlet') missiles are in service.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Cuba is a member of the UN and SELA (Latin American Economic System).

ECONOMY

Policy. Prices were increased by at least 50% on 1 June 1994. The Central Planning Board was abolished in Jan. 1995. After the economic crisis of the early 1990s, growth has picked up through the legalization of the use of the US dollar, the promotion of dollar-based tourism and of a parallel dollar economy around it. Over 50% of the population now have access to dollars, but there remains 50% who have to survive in the more limited pesos economy.

Performance. A combination of poor commodity export prices and a poor sugar harvest slowed down Cuba's economic growth in 1998 to 1·2%, below the government's original target of 2·5–3·5%.

Budget. The 1995 budget envisaged revenue of 11,680m. pesos and expenditure of 12,680m. pesos. Hard-currency earners and the self-employed became liable to a 10–50% income tax in Nov. 1995.

Currency. The unit of currency is the Cuban peso (CUP) of 100 centavos, which is not convertible, although an official exchange rate is announced daily reflecting any changes in the strength of the US dollar. The US dollar has been legal tender since 1993. 11,750m. pesos were in circulation in 1994. Inflation is expected to be 3·6% in 1999.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Cuba (Governor, Francisco Soberón Valdés) replaced the National Bank of Cuba as the central bank in June 1997. On 14 Oct. 1960 all banks were nationalized. Changes to the banking structure beginning in 1996 divested the National Bank of its commercial functions, and created new commercial and investment institutions. There were 7 commercial banks in March 1999 and 9 local non-banking financial institutions. In addition, 17 foreign financial institutions, including 14 foreign banks, had representative offices in 1999; foreign branches are not permitted.

All insurance business was nationalized in Jan. 1964. A National Savings Bank was established in 1983.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is legally compulsory, but the American and old Spanish systems are much used. The sugar industry uses the Spanish long ton (1·03 tonnes) and short ton (0·92 tonne). Cuba sugar sack = 329·59 lb. or 149·49 kg. Land is measured in caballerías (of 13·4 ha or 33 acres).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 4·08m. kW in 1995. Production was 11·19bn. kWh in 1995; consumption per capita in 1995 was estimated to be 822 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Crude oil production (1998), 1,678,000 tonnes. Raw gas production (1998), 120m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Iron ore abounds, with deposits estimated at 3,500m. tonnes. Output of copper concentrate (1989) was 2,800 tonnes; refractory chrome (1987), 52,400 tonnes. Other minerals are nickel (1995, 42,900 tonnes) and cobalt (1989, 46,500 tonnes), silica and barytes. Gold and silver are also worked. Salt output from the solar evaporation of sea water in 1989 was 114,900 tonnes. Sulphuric acid production (1989), 381,500 tonnes.

Agriculture. In 1959 all land over 30 caballerías was nationalized and eventually turned into state farms. Under legislation of 1993, state farms are being re-organized as 'units of basic co-operative production'. These units have the use of the land in perpetuity from the state. Unit workers select their own managers, and are paid an advance on earnings. 294,700 persons were employed in these units in 1995. In 1963 private holdings were reduced to a maximum of 5 caballerías. In Sept. 1984 there were 1,472 co-operatives comprising 70,000 caballerías of land. In 1994 farmers were permitted to trade on free market principles after state delivery quotas had been met.

The most important product is sugar and its by-product, but in 1998 the harvest suffered a series of weather disasters reducing production to 3·2m. tonnes (3·4m. tonnes in 1995–96), the smallest crop for 50 years. Production of other important crops in 1994 was (in 1,000 tonnes): Tobacco (leaves), 44; rice (paddy), 186; coffee, 21; maize, 90.

1994 fruit and vegetable production (in 1,000 tonnes): Oranges, 433; mangoes, 84; bananas, 180; grapefruit and pomelos, 317; and potatoes, 216.

In 1996 livestock included 1·5m. pigs; 580,000 horses; 310,000 sheep; 95,000 goats; 4·5m. cattle; 22m. chickens (1995).

Forestry. Cuba had 1·84m. ha of forests in 1995, representing 16·8% of the land area (1·96m. ha and 17·8% in 1990). These forests contain valuable cabinet woods, such as mahogany and cedar, besides dye-woods, fibres, gums, resins and oils. Cedar is used locally for cigar boxes, and mahogany is exported. In 1995, 3·15m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries. Fishing is the third most important export industry, after sugar and nickel. The total catch was 94,211 tonnes in 1995, of which 71,678 tonnes were from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

In 1996 manufacturing accounted for 27% of GDP. All industrial enterprises had been state-controlled, but in 1995 the economy was officially stated to comprise state property, commercial property based on activity by state enterprises, joint co-operative and private property. Production in 1989 was: Textiles, 218·6m. sq. metres (cotton fabrics 182·6m. sq. metres); cement, 3,800m. tonnes; wheat flour, 398,000 tonnes; fuel oil, 4,152,800 tonnes; diesel oil, 1,178,500 tonnes; processed crude oil, 7,916,000 tonnes; steel, 314,200 tonnes; steel bars, 367,100 tonnes; nickel and cobalt, 46,500 tonnes; copper, 2,759,100 tonnes; 314,700 tyres; 231,200 inner tubes; leather shoes, 11·0m. pairs; paint, 121,000 hectolitres; soft drinks, 2,396,500 hectolitres; 308m. cigars; 16,519m. cigarettes; fertilizers, 898,600 tonnes; 2,345 buses; 172,700 radios; 70,500 TVs; 9,100 refrigerators.

Labour. In 1996 the labour force was 5,323,000 (62% males). Self-employment was legalized in 1993; there were 0·21m. self-employed persons in 1996. Under legislation of Sept. 1994 employees made redundant must be assigned to other jobs or to strategic social or economic tasks; failing this, they are paid 60% of former salary.

Trade Unions. The Workers' Central Union of Cuba groups 23 unions.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt to non-communist countries was US$10,400m. in 1997. Since July 1992 foreign investment has been permitted in selected state enterprises, and Cuban companies have been able to import and export without seeking government permission. Foreign ownership is recognized in joint ventures. A free-trade zone opened at Havana in 1993. 3 more were envisaged in legislation of 1996. In 1994 the productive, real estate and service sectors were opened to foreign investment. Legislation of 1995 opened all sectors of the economy to foreign investment except defence, education and health services. 100% foreign-owned investments and investments in property are now permitted.

The Helms-Burton Law of March 1996 gives US nationals the right to sue foreign companies investing in Cuban estate expropriated by the Cuban government.

Imports and Exports. In 1997, exports fell by 11% while imports grew by 6%. In 1998 exports totalled US$1,616m., and imports US$4,084m. The principal exports are sugar, minerals, tobacco, citrus fruit and fish. In 1994-95 sugar exports totalled 2·76m. tonnes (3·19m. tonnes in 1993-94).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were some 26,500 km of roads, of which 14,575 km were paved. Vehicles in use in 1996 included 20,000 passenger cars (2 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 33,000 trucks and vans.

Rail. There were (1992) 4,807 km of public railway (1,435 mm gauge), of which 147 km was electrified. In 1994 it carried 30·5m. passengers and 4·4m. tonnes of freight. In addition, the large sugar estates have 7,773 km of lines on 1,435, 914 and 760 mm gauges.

Civil Aviation. There is an international airport at Havana (Jose Martí). The state airline Cubana operates all services internally, and in 1998 had international flights from Havana to Barcelona, Berlin, Bogotá, Brussels, Buenos Aires, Cancún, Caracas, Cologne, Copenhagen, Curaçao, Fort de France, Frankfurt, Guayaquil, Istanbul, Kingston, Las Palmas, Lima, Lisbon, London, Madrid, Manchester, Maracaibo, Mendoza, Mexico City, Montego Bay, Montreal, Moscow, Paris, Pointe-à-Pitre, Quito, Rio de Janeiro, Rome, St Maarten, San José (Costa Rica), Santa Cruz, Santiago, Santiago de Compostela, Santo Domingo, São Paulo, Toronto and Vitoria. In 1998 scheduled services were also provided by Aeroflot, Aerolíneas Argentinas, Aeropostal Alas de Venezuela, Air Europa, Air Europe, Air France, Air Jamaica, AOM, Aviateca, COPA, Condor Flugdienst, Iberia, LACSA, Mexicana, SAM, Spanair, TAAG and Tame Linea Aerea del Ecuador. In 1996 Havana Jose Martí International handled 1,598,800 passengers (1,077,200 on international flights) and 18,964 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. There are 11 ports, the largest being Havana, Cienfuegos and Mariel. The merchant marine in 1995 totalled 0·54m. GRT, of which 0·1m. GRT were oil tankers.

Telecommunications. There were 370,800 telephone main lines in 1997 (33·6 for every 1,000 persons). In 1995 cellular phone subscribers numbered 1,900 and there were 400 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 1993 there were 1,545 post offices, or 1 for every 7,150 persons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. There is a Supreme Court in Havana and 7 regional courts of appeal. The provinces are divided into judicial districts, with courts for civil and criminal actions, and municipal courts for minor offences. The civil code guarantees aliens the same property and personal rights as are enjoyed by nationals.

The 1959 Agrarian Reform Law and the Urban Reform Law passed on 14 Oct. 1960 have placed certain restrictions on both. Revolutionary Summary Tribunals have wide powers.

Stealing from state companies by employees has become an increasing problem during the 1990s.

Religion. Religious liberty was constitutionally guaranteed in July 1992. 60% of the population were estimated to be Roman Catholics in 1996. In 1994 Cardinal Jaime Ortega (b. 1936) was nominated Primate by the Pope. In 1996 there were 260 Roman Catholic priests and monks, nearly half of them foreign nationals. There is a seminary in Havana which had 61 students in 1996. There is a bishop of the American Episcopal Church in Havana; there are congregations of Methodists in Havana and in the provinces as well as Baptists and other denominations. Cults of African origin still persist.

Education. Education is compulsory (between the ages of 6 and 14), free and universal. In 1995 there were 160,283 pre-primary pupils with 6,512 teachers; 9,864 primary schools with 90,565 teachers for 1·07m. pupils; and 704,601 secondary level pupils with 74,139 teachers. There were 122,346 students at university level.

There are 4 universities, and 10 teacher training, 2 agricultural, 4 medical and 10 other higher educational institutions.

The adult literacy rate was 95·7% in 1995 (96·2% among males and 95·3% among females).

Health. In 1992 there were 46,860 doctors, 8,057 dentists, 73,943 nurses and (1993) 244 hospitals. There were 65 beds per 10,000 population in 1993.

Free medical services are provided by the state polyclinics, though a few doctors still have private practices.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is the responsibility of the state-controlled Instituto Cubano de Radio y Televisión. There are 5 national radio networks, provincial and local stations and an external service, Radio Habana (Spanish, Arabic, Creole, English, Esperanto, French, Guaraní, Portuguese and Quechua). There are 2 TV channels (colour by NTSC). In 1995 there were 3·85m. radio and 2·5m. TV sets.

Cinema. In 1993 there were 461 cinemas with an attendance of 17·6m.

Press. There were (1998) 17 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 1·3m.

Tourism. Tourism is Cuba's largest foreign exchange earner, and has been growing by nearly 20% per year. There were 1·4m. foreign tourists in 1998 with a projected figure of 1·7m. for 1999, mainly from Canada and Europe. Total gross earnings from tourism in 1998 amounted to US$1·7bn. The age at which Cubans may obtain exit visas was lowered to 20 years in Aug. 1991.

National Theatre and Opera. There were 49 theatres with an attendance of 1,387,700 in 1989.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

About the middle of the second millennium BC, Greek colonies were established in Cyprus and later it formed part of the Persian, Roman and Byzantine empires. In 1193 the island became a Frankish kingdom, in 1489 a Venetian dependency, and in 1751 was conquered by the Turks. The Turks retained possession of it until its cession to Britain for administrative purposes under a convention concluded with the Sultan of Constantinople in 1878. In 1914 the island was annexed by Great Britain and on 1 May 1925 it was given the status of a Crown Colony.

In the 1930s the Greek Cypriots began to agitate for ENOSIS (Union with Greece). In 1955 they started a guerrilla movement (EOKA) against the British, with Archbishop Makarios, the head of the Greek Orthodox Church in Cyprus, as leader, and Gen. Grivas in charge of military operations. As the British suspected Makarios of advocating violence he was banished from the island. However, in 1959 the Greek and Turkish Cypriots agreed on a constitution for an independent Cyprus and Makarios returned to be elected President. On 16 June 1960 Cyprus became an independent state. In Dec. 1963 the Turkish Cypriots withdrew from the government. Fighting between Turkish and Greek Cypriots led to a UN peace-keeping force being sent in. On 15 July 1974 a military coup drove out Makarios and appointed as president Nicos Sampson, an EOKA supporter. The coup was short-lived as Sampson resigned on 23 July and Makarios was recalled as President.

Turkey invaded the island on 20 July 1974, eventually occupying the northern part. 0·2m. Greek Cypriots fled to live as refugees in the south. The UN General Assembly unanimously adopted resolutions calling for the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Cyprus and the return of refugees to their homes, but without result. On 13 Feb. 1975 a Turkish Cypriot Federated State was proclaimed. Rauf Denktaş was appointed President. On 15 Nov. 1983 the Turkish state unilaterally proclaimed itself the 'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus' (TRNC). In Nov. 1983 and May 1984 the UN Security Council declared all secessionist actions illegal. Several UN-inspired talks were held in 1985–91 without success. In March 1991 the UN Security Council adopted unanimously a resolution rejecting new TRNC demands. In Sept. discussions were held between the UN Secretary-General's representatives, the Greek Cypriot president and Rauf Denktaş. In Oct. the UN Secretary-General rejected Rauf Denktaş' demands for the recognition of separate sovereignty for the TRNC, including a right to secession.

Further talks were held without results in May–Aug. 1992. On 26 Aug. the UN Security Council adopted a resolution endorsing the Secretary-General's ideas and territorial adjustments as the basis for reaching an agreement. Talks were held in Oct. 1992 and in 1993 after the election of President Clerides, without result. Cyprus had accepted confidence-building measures suggested by the UN but these were opposed by the TRNC. In July 1994 the UN Security Council adopted a resolution reaffirming that a settlement must be based on a single sovereignty and exclude any form of partition or succession. In 1998 a proposal by Rauf Denktaş that the Greek and Turkish communities should join in a federation that recognizes 'the equal and sovereign status of Cyprus' Greek and Turkish parts' was rejected by the Greek and Cypriot governments.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The island lies in the Mediterranean, about 60 km off the south coast of Turkey and 90 km off the coast of Syria. Area, 3,572 sq. miles (9,251 sq. km). The Turkish-occupied area is 3,335 sq. km. Population by ethnic group:

Ethnic group	1960	1973	1992	1997
Greek Cypriot	447,901	498,511	599,000	654,900
Turkish Cypriot	103,822	116,000	95,000[1]	88,200
Others	20,984	17,267	20,000	23,000
Total	572,707	631,778	714,000	746,100

[1]Revised to take into account Turkish Cypriots who have emigrated from the Turkish-occupied area since 1974 (estimated at over 41,000).

Estimated population, 1995, 742,000; density, 80 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 793,000.

An estimated 68·9% of the population lived in urban areas in 1997. Principal towns with populations (1997 estimate): Nicosia (the capital), 194,100; Limassol, 152,900; Larnaca, 68,000; Paphos, 38,000.

As a result of the Turkish occupation of the northern part of Cyprus, 0·2m. Greek Cypriots were displaced and forced to find refuge in the south. The urban centres of Famagusta, Kyrenia and Morphou were completely evacuated. See below for details of the 'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus'.

Greek and Turkish are official languages. English is widely spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1997 births, 12,500; deaths, 5,500. Rates, 1997 (per 1,000 population): Births, 14·2; deaths, 7·9. Life expectancy at birth, 1996–97, was 75·0 years for males and 80·0 years for females. Infant mortality, 1997, 8 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2·4 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is Mediterranean, with very hot, dry summers and variable winters. Maximum temperatures may reach 112°F (44·5°C) in July and Aug., but minimum figures may fall to 22°F (–5·5°C) in the mountains in winter, when snow is experienced. Rainfall is generally between 10" and 27" (250 and 675 mm) and occurs mainly in the winter months, but it may reach 48" (1,200 mm) in the Troodos mountains. Nicosia, Jan. 50°F (10·0°C), July 83°F (28·3°C). Annual rainfall 15" (371 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the 1960 Constitution executive power is vested in a President elected for a 5-year term by universal suffrage, and exercised through a Council of Ministers appointed by him or her. The House of Representatives exercises legislative power. It is elected by universal suffrage for 5-year terms, and consists of 80 members, of whom 56 are elected by the Greek Cypriot and 24 by the Turkish Cypriot community. Voting is compulsory, and is by preferential vote in a proportional representation system with reallocation of votes at national level. As from Dec. 1963 the Turkish Cypriot members have ceased to attend.

National Anthem. 'Segnoriso apo tin kopsi' ('Always shall I know you'); words by D. Solomos, tune by N. Mantzaros.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 26 May 1996. The Democratic Rally won 20 seats with 34·48% of votes cast, the Communist Progressive Party of the Working People (Akel) 19 with 33·03%, the Democratic Party 10 and the EDEK Party (Socialists) 5.

Presidential elections were held on 8 and 15 Feb. 1998. In the first round Glafcos Clerides won 40·1% of the vote as against 40·6% for his rival George Iakovou, a former foreign minister. The Socialist leader, Vassos Lyssarides, won 10·6%. In the run-off, Glafcos Clerides won 50·8% to 49·2% for George Iakovou. The turn-out was over 90%.

In Jan. 1999, the Socialists withdrew from the governing coalition following the administration's decision to cancel plans to deploy Russian anti-aircraft missiles on the island.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Glafcos Clerides, b. 1919 (Democratic Rally; elected 1998).

The Council of Ministers in March 1999 consisted of:

Foreign Affairs: Ioannis Kasoulides. Interior: Christodoulos Christodoulou. Defence: Yiannakis Chrysostomis. Agriculture, Natural Resources and Environment: Costas Themistocleous. Commerce, Industry and Tourism: Nicos Rolandis. Health: Christos Solomis. Communications, Public Works and Transport: Leondios Ierodiaconou. Finance: Takis Clerides. Education and Culture: Ouranios Ioannides. Labour: Andreas Moushouttas. Justice and Public Order: Nicos Koshis.

The Speaker is Spyros Kypriauou.

Local Government. There are 3 types of local authorities: Municipalities, Improvement Boards and Village Authorities. Municipalities account for about 60% of the population while 85 Improvement Boards and 352 Village authorities cover the rest of the population. The functions of Municipalities are determined by the Municipalities Law of 1985, and their finances derive from municipal taxes, fees and duties as well as state subsidies.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 26 months. Defence expenditure in 1997 totalled US$505m. (US$594 per capita), representing 5·8% of GDP. At the end of 1998 the President cancelled a US$450m. contract with Russia for the deployment of S-300 anti-aircraft missiles on the island and negotiated to place them on Crete instead.

National Guard. Total strength (1997) 10,000 (8,700 conscripts) organized in 2 light infantry divisions, 2 light infantry and 1 armoured brigade. Equipment includes 62 AMX-30 B-2 main battle tanks, 41 T8OU tanks and 4 Gazelle helicopters with HOT missiles. In Jan. 1997 S-300 ground-to-air missiles were purchased from Russia and the Cypriot government eventually decided that they be installed and deployed on the Greek island of Crete. There is also a para-military force of 3,700 armed police.

There are 2 British bases (Army and Royal Air Force) and some 3,900 personnel. Greek (950) and UN peacekeeping (1,138; UNFICY) forces are also stationed on the island. Plans to install Russian-made air defence missiles have brought Turkish threats of retaliation.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Cyprus is a member of the UN, Commonwealth and Council of Europe. Since March 1998 Cyprus has entered into accession negotiations with the EU, which are expected to be completed by 2003.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1997 the total length of roads in the government-controlled area was 10,654 km, of which 6,209 km were bituminous and 4,445 km were earth or gravel roads. The asphalted roads maintained by the Ministry of Communications and Works (Public Works Department) by the end of 1997 totalled 2,272 km, of which 264 km were within the municipal areas. Construction of new asphalted roads in 1997 totalled 260 km. In 1997 there were 472,132 motor vehicles including 3,177 buses, 120,000 goods vehicles, 63,264 motor cycles and 12,460 tractors.

The area controlled by the Government of the Republic and that occupied by the TRNC are now served by separate transport systems, and there are no services linking the two areas.

Civil Aviation. Nicosia airport has been closed since Aug. 1974. There are international airports at Larnaca (the main airport) and Paphos. In 1997, 4,799,179 passengers and 63,600 tonnes of commercial freight went through these airports. The national carrier is Cyprus Airways, which is 80·46% state-owned. In 1998 services were also provided by Aeroflot, Aerosweet Airlines, Air 2000, Air Malta, Air Moldova, Air Slovakia, Air Zimbabwe, Alitalia, Austrian Airlines, Balkan, Belavia, British Airways, Czech Airlines, Donavia, Egyptair, El Al, Emirates, Finnair, Gulf Air, Hapag Lloyd, Iberia, Iran Air, JAT, KLM, Korsar, Kuwait Airways, Latvian Airlines, Libyan Airlines, Lithuanian Airlines, LOT, Lufthansa, Malév, Middle East Airlines, Olympic Airways, Royal Jordanian, SAS, Swissair, Syrian Arab Airlines, Tarom and Transaero Airlines. Cyprus Airways flew 20·3m. km in 1995, carrying 1,218,900 passengers (all on international flights). In 1996 Larnaca handled 3,491,153 passengers and 27,418 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. The 2 main ports are Limassol and Larnaca. In 1997, 4,158 ships of 14,243,000 net registered tonnes entered Cyprus ports carrying 5,031,000 tonnes of cargo from, to and via Cyprus. Ships on the Cyprus open registry in 1996 totalled 33,049,967 DWT. Famagusta has been closed to international traffic since Aug. 1974.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 385,000 main telephone lines (569·7 for every 1,000 inhabitants). There were 45,000 cellular phone subscribers, 30,000 PCs and 7,000 fax machines in 1995. The Cyprus Telecommunications Authority provides telephone and data transmission services nationally, and to 253 countries automatically.

Postal Services. In 1997 there were 56 post offices and 729 postal agencies.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The administration of justice is exercised by a separate and independent judiciary. There is a Supreme Court, Assize Courts and District Courts.

The Supreme Court is composed of 13 judges, one of whom is the President of the Court. There is a continuing Assize Court that holds sessions in every district according to the cases committed for trial before it. The Assize Courts have unlimited criminal jurisdiction, and may order the payment of compensation up to £C3,000. The District Courts exercise original civil and criminal jurisdiction, the extent of which varies with the composition of the Bench.

There is a Supreme Council of Judicature, consisting of the President and Judges of the Supreme Court, entrusted with the appointment, promotion, transfers, termination of appointment and disciplinary control over all judicial officers, other than the Judges of the Supreme Court.

The Attorney-General (Alecos Markides) is head of the independent Law Office and legal advisor to the President and his Ministers.

Religion. The Greek Cypriots are Greek Orthodox Christians, and the Turkish Cypriots are Moslems (mostly Sunnis of the Hanafi sect). There are also small groups of the Armenian Apostolic Church, Roman Catholics (Maronites and Latin Rite) and Protestants (mainly Anglicans). See also CYPRUS: Territory and Population.

Education. Greek-Cypriot Education. Elementary education is compulsory and is provided free in 6 grades to children between 5 years 8 months and 11 years 8 months. There are also schools for the deaf and blind, and 10 schools for handicapped children. In 1996–97 the Ministry ran 225 kindergartens for children in the age group 2½–5; there were also 152 communal and 271 private kindergartens. There were 376 primary schools with 64,761 pupils and 4,159 teachers in 1996–97.

Secondary education is also free and attendance for the first cycle is compulsory. The secondary school is 6 years, 3 years at the gymnasium followed by 3 years at the lykeion (lyceum) or 3 years at one of the technical schools which provide technical and vocational education for industry. In 1996–97 there were 125 secondary schools with 5,757 teachers and 61,266 pupils.

Post-secondary education is provided at 6 public institutions: The University of Cyprus, which admitted its first students in Sept. 1992 and had 2,097 students by 1996–97; The Higher Technical Institute, which provides 3–4-year courses for technicians in civil, electrical, mechanical and marine engineering; a 2-year Forestry College (administered by the Ministry of Agriculture, Natural Resources and Environment); The Higher Hotel Institute (Ministry of Labour and Social Insurance); the Mediterranean Institute of Management (Ministry of Labour and Social Insurance); the School of Nursing (Ministry of Health) which runs 2–3 year courses; the Cyprus Academy of Public Administration set up to help civil servants improve their management skills.

There are also various public and private institutions which provide courses at various levels. These include the Apprenticeship Training Scheme and Evening Technical Classes, and other vocational and technical courses organized by the Industrial Training Authority.

In 1992 the adult literacy rate was 94·4% (97·8% among males, 90·1% among females).

Health. In 1993 there were 1,455 doctors, 498 dentists, 2,536 nurses, 423 pharmacists and 120 midwives. There were 110 hospitals (excluding psychiatric hospitals) in 1993.

Welfare. The administration of the social security services is in the hands of the Ministry of Labour and Social Insurance, with the Ministry of Health providing medical services through public clinics and hospitals on a means test, except for medical treatment for employment accidents, which is given free to all insured employees and financed by the Social Insurance Scheme.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Cyprus Broadcasting Corporation has 3 radio channels and broadcasts mainly in Greek, but also in Turkish, English and Armenian. The Corporation also broadcasts on 2 TV channels (colour by PAL). A law of June 1990 permits the operation of commercial radio and TV stations. In 1994 there were 2 independent radio stations broadcasting nationwide and numerous radio stations broadcasting locally. There were also 2 private TV stations operating and 1 private Pay-TV. There are also 2 foreign broadcasting stations. In 1995 there were 230,000 radio and 240,000 TV sets.

Cinema. In the government-controlled area, there were 16 cinemas and 17 screens in 1997.

Press. In 1996 there were 9 daily newspapers with a circulation of 84,000; and 31 other newspapers with a circulation of 185,000.

Tourism. There were 2,069,000 long-stay foreign tourists in 1997, spending £C800m.

Libraries. In 1995 there were 117 public libraries, 1 National library and 1 non-specialized library, holding a combined 454,000 volumes for 30,051 registered users.

Museums and Galleries. In 1993 there were 24 museums which received 515,000 visitors.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Although the name Bohemia is Celtic, Slav settlers were well established in the area by the 6th century. The Czech tribe rose to dominance in the 8th century. After the death of Charlemagne a Greater Moravian State emerged before being engulfed by Magyars around 905, though part was recovered by one of the Přemysl ruling family (895-1306).

Dynastic squabbles, exacerbated by German interference, weakened the power of the dukes, but in 1212 Otakar I (1197-1230) received a hereditary kingship from the Holy Roman Emperor. A period of prosperity developed, aided by the immigration of German miners and merchants who were encouraged with special privileges. Bohemia expanded under the last Přemysl kings: Wenceslas I (1230-53) seized Austria in 1251, though it passed to the Hapsburgs when Otakar II was killed at the battle of Marchfeld in 1278; Wenceslas II was elected king of Poland in 1300. Wenceslas was assassinated in 1306 and was succeeded in 1310 by John of Luxemburg. His son, Charles (1346-78), became Holy Roman Emperor as Charles IV in 1355. Bohemia attained a high degree of prosperity and civilization at this time.

The clerical reform movement with which the name of Jan Hus is associated began as a protest against the corruption and venality of the church, but it had undertones of anti-German Czech nationalism and found support amongst the urban middle classes and lesser rural gentry as well as the urban poor and peasantry. Hus was burned at the stake in 1415, but the Hussite movement continued and repelled efforts to enthrone the Hungarian king Sigismund until 1436. There was some post-war recovery under the enlightened Hussite king, George of Poděbrad (1457-71). After his death the Jagiellonian dynasty succeeded, from 1490 ruling Hungary jointly, until the death of Louis against the Turks at Mohács in 1526. During this period the provincial diet of 3 estates (nobility, gentry, burgesses) acted to enhance the power of the nobility and diminish that of the burgesses.

In 1527 the diet elected the Hapsburg Ferdinand as king. The Hapsburgs gradually encroached upon Czech rights and religious freedom. In 1618 Protestants threw 2 Czech Catholic governors out of a window in Prague Castle. This incident sparked off the Thirty Years War. The estates deposed Emperor Ferdinand II in favour of the Calvinist Frederick V but the latter's forces were defeated at the battle of the White Mountain on 8 Nov. 1620, and a period of Hapsburg hegemony ensued: The Czech nobility were replaced by German-speaking adventurers; the burgesses lost their rights; burdens were piled on to the peasantry; and Catholicism was enforced. Risings were savagely repressed. Some relief came with the ideas of the Enlightenment: Amongst other reforms Emperor Joseph II granted the peasantry freedom of movement in 1781, a precondition for the burgeoning industrial revolution of the next century. At first Czech nationalism could find an outlet only in cultural activities. Uprisings in the revolutionary episode of 1848 were ineffective. The increasingly political aspirations of Czech nationalists were not for the resuscitation of the old Bohemia but for the formation of a new Czechoslovakia, an idea fostered by Thomas Masaryk. Manhood suffrage was granted in 1906 but the chamber of deputies was constantly bypassed by the emperor. The First World War brought a complete estrangement between the Czechs and the Germans, the latter supporting the war effort. Masaryk and other leaders went into exile and in 1916 a Czechoslovak National Council was set up under his chairmanship. In 1918 he secured the support of US president Woodrow Wilson for Czech and Slovak unity (see Slovakia). On 18 Oct. 1918 the National Council transformed itself into a provisional government and was recognized by the Allies.

Austria accepted President Wilson's terms on 27 Oct. 1918 and the next day a republic was proclaimed with Masaryk as president and Edvard Beneš as foreign minister. On 29 Oct. the Slovak leaders declared Slovakia part of the Czechoslovak nation. In drawing up the frontiers of the new state it was impossible to apply strictly the principles of Wilsonian self-determination because of the ethnic mix; other criteria employed were the partial restoration of the historic provinces and the need to establish an economically viable and defensible state. Amongst the minorities were 3·25m. Sudeten Germans.

The constitution of 1920 provided for a 2-chamber parliament elected by adult suffrage. The electoral system worked so that all governments were coalitions. Slovakia was granted an assembly in 1927 but the state was basically centralist and the Slovaks maintained their own parties. Czechoslovakia developed into a prosperous democracy but was hard hit by the economic depression of the 1930s. Nationalist agitation amongst the Sudeten Germans was fomented by Hitler. Czechoslovakia relied for her defence against the threat of German aggression on her treaty with France of 1925 but France sided with Britain in the Munich agreement of 29 Sept. 1938 which stipulated that all districts with a German population of more than 50% should be ceded to Germany. Beneš resigned the presidency and went into exile. On 14 March 1939 Slovakia declared itself independent under German hegemony, and the next day the German army occupied the rest of the country and proclaimed the 'Protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia'. Czechoslovaks who managed to escape joined Beneš to form a government in exile. In Dec. 1943 Beneš signed a 20-year treaty of alliance with the USSR. In March 1945 he went to Moscow to talk to communists who had spent the war there about the nature of the post-war government which was established in April at Košice in the wake of the Soviet Army. Liberation by the Soviet Army and US Forces was completed by May 1945 and territories taken by Germans, Poles and Hungarians were restored to Czechoslovak sovereignty. Subcarpathian Ruthenia was transferred to the USSR.

Elections were held in May 1946, at which the Communist Party obtained about 38% of the votes. A coalition government under a Communist Prime Minister, Klement Gottwald, remained in power until 20 Feb. 1948, when 12 of the non-Communist ministers resigned in protest against infiltration of Communists into the police. In Feb. a predominantly Communist government was formed by Gottwald. In May elections resulted in an 89% majority for the government, and President Beneš resigned.

In 1968 pressure for liberalization culminated in the overthrow of the Stalinist leader, Antonín Novotný, and his associates. Under Alexander Dubček's leadership the so-called 'Prague Spring' began to take shape, and the outlines of a new political system described as 'socialism with a human face' began to appear as the Communist Party introduced an 'Action Programme' of far-reaching reforms. Soviet pressure to abandon this programme was exerted between May and Aug. 1968, when Warsaw Pact forces occupied Czechoslovakia. The Czechoslovak government was compelled to accept a policy of 'normalization' (i.e., abandonment of most reforms) and the stationing of Soviet forces.

Mass demonstrations demanding political reform began in Nov. 1989. After the authorities' use of violence to break up a demonstration on 17 Nov., the Communist leader resigned. On 30 Nov. the Federal Assembly abolished the Communist Party's sole right to govern and a new Government was formed on 3 Dec. The protest movement continued to grow and on 10 Dec. another government was formed. Gustáv Husák resigned as President and was replaced by Václav Havel on the unanimous vote of 323 members of the Federal Assembly on 29 Dec.

On 25 Nov. 1992 the Federal Assembly voted the dissolution of the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic. This came into effect at midnight on 31 Dec. 1992. Economic property was divided in accordance with a federal law of 13 Nov. 1992. Real estate became the property of the republic in which it was located. Other property was divided by specially constituted commissions in the proportion of 2 (Czech Republic) to 1 (Slovakia) on the basis of population size. Military materiel was divided on the 2:1 principle. Regular military personnel were invited to choose which armed force they would serve in.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Czech Republic is bounded in the west by Germany, north by Poland, east by Slovakia and south by Austria. Minor exchanges of territory to straighten their mutual border were agreed between the Czech Republic and Slovakia on 4 Jan. 1996, but the Czech parliament refused to ratify them on 24 April 1996. Its area is 78,864 sq. km. At the 1991 census the population was 10,302,215. 1996 estimate, 10,331,206 (51·4% female); density, 131 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 10·19m.

In 1995 an estimated 65·4% of the population lived in urban areas.

There are 8 administrative regions (Kraj), one of which is the capital, Prague (Praha).

Region	Chief city	Area in sq. km	Population 1991 census
Prague	—	496	1,212,010
Středočeský	Prague (Praha)	11,038	1,112,374
Jihočeský	České Budějovice	11,345	697,334
Západočeský	Plzeň (Pilsen)	10,873	860,311
Severočeský	Ústí nad Labem	7,777	1,173,681
Východočeský	Hradec Králové	11,240	1,232,646
Jihomoravský	Brno	15,027	2,048,867
Severomoravský	Ostrava	11,068	1,961,508

The estimated population of the principal towns in 1997 (in 1,000):

Prague (Praha)	1,205	Liberec	100	Havířov	88
Brno	388	Hradec Králové	100	Zlín	83
Ostrava	324	České Budějovice	100	Most	71
Plzeň	170	Ústí nad Labem	97	Karlovy Vary	55
Olomouc	104	Pardubice	93	Jihlava	53

At the 1991 census 81·2% of the population was Czech, 13·2% Moravian and 3·1% Slovak. There were also (in 1,000): Poles, 59; Germans, 48; Silesians, 44; Roma (Gypsies), 34; Hungarians, 21.

The official language is Czech.

CLIMATE

A humid continental climate, with warm summers and cold winters. Precipitation is generally greater in summer, with thunderstorms. Autumn, with dry clear weather, and spring, which is damp, are each of short duration. Prague, Jan. 29·5°F (–1·5°C), July 67°F (19·4°C). Annual rainfall 19·3" (483 mm). Brno, Jan. 31°F (–0·6°C), July 67°F (19·4°C). Annual rainfall 21" (525 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of 1 Jan. 1993 provides for a parliament comprising a 200-member Chamber of Deputies, elected for 4-year terms by proportional representation, and an 81-member Senate elected for 6-year terms in single-member districts, 27 senators being elected every 2 years. The main function of the Senate is to scrutinize proposed legislation. Senators must be at least 40 years of age, and are elected on a first-past-the-post basis, with a run-off in constituencies where no candidate wins more than half the votes cast. For the House of Representatives there is a 5% threshold; votes for parties failing to surmount this are redistributed on the basis of results in each of the 8 electoral districts.

There is a Constitutional Court at Brno, whose 15 members are nominated by the President and approved by the Senate for 10-year terms.

The President of the Republic is elected for a 5-year term by both chambers of parliament. He or she must be at least 40 years of age. The President names the Prime Minister at the suggestion of the Speaker.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The President of the Republic is Václav Havel, elected by parliament on 26 Jan. 1993 against 2 opponents and sworn in on 2 Feb., re-elected 20 Jan. 1998.

Elections for the House of Representatives were held on 21 June 1998. The Social Democratic Party (ČSSD) won 74 seats (61 in 1996) with 32%, ahead of the Civic Democratic Party (63 seats; 38 in 1996) with 28%, the Communists (24 seats; 22 in 1996), Christian Democrats 20 seats (18 in 1996), and the Freedom Union 19 seats (0 in 1996, as only formed in 1998 by rebels from the Civic Democrats and Civic Alliance).

Elections for the Senate were held on 13–14 Nov. and 20–21 Nov. 1998. As a result ODS had 26 seats in the Senate; ČSSD, 23; KDU/ČSL, 17; US/ODA, 11; KSČM, 4.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In 1974 the German Federal Republic and the then Czechoslovakia annulled the Munich agreement of 1938. On 14 Feb. 1997 the Czech parliament ratified a declaration of German-Czech reconciliation, with particular reference to the Sudeten German problems.

The Czech Republic is a member of the UN, the OECD, CEFTA, the Central European Initiative, NATO, and is an associate member of the EU and an associate partner of the WEU. The Czech Republic became a member of NATO on 12 March 1999. An application to join the EU was made in Jan. 1996.

ECONOMY

Policy. By the end of 1992 assets valued at Kč. 470,000m. had been privatized. 21,400 small businesses were auctioned off in 1992, and some 900 enterprises privatized through the sale of vouchers. A second stage of privatization, affecting 770 enterprises, took place by vouchers on sale to all citizens in Oct.–Nov. 1993. This stage came to an end in Dec. 1994, by which time 80% of the Czech Republic's assets were in private hands. The privatization of shares in 53 large companies was announced in 1995, the state to retain some of these shares. The privatization of the remaining minor state companies was scheduled for completion in 1997.

Performance. In 1997 real GDP growth was 1·0%, compared to 4·5% in 1996. Growth is expected to be negative in 1999, at –2%.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure in Kč. 1m.:

	1994	1995	1996	1997
Revenue	370,503	414,330	460,950	479,209
Expenditure	362,015	410,669	450,938	481,609

Expenditure by category, 1996: Defence, 30,604; education, 64,964; health, 95,416; social security and welfare, 139,433.

The current account deficit was US$–3,271m. in 1997.

Currency. The unit of currency is the koruna (CEK) or crown of 100 haler, introduced on 8 Feb. 1993 at parity with the former Czechoslovakian koruna. Gold reserves were 2·08m. troy oz. in Feb. 1998. Exchange reserves were US$15,000m. in Dec. 1996. Inflation in Jan. 1999 was 10·7%. The koruna became convertible on 1 Oct. 1995. In May 1997 the koruna was devalued 10% and allowed to float. Total money supply was Kč. 371m. in Feb. 1998.

Banking and Finance. The central bank and bank of issue is the Czech National Bank (Governor, Josef Tošovský), which also acts as banking supervisor and regulator. Decentralization of the banking system began in 1991, and private banks began to operate. The Commercial Bank and Investment Bank are privatized nationwide networks with a significant government holding. Specialized banks include the Czech Savings Bank and the Czech Commercial Bank (for foreign trade payments). Private banks tend to be on a regional basis, many of them agricultural banks. There are also subsidiaries of foreign banks, joint ventures with foreign participation, and branches and representative offices of foreign banks. There were 59 banks in 1995. In Nov. 1997 the cabinet agreed to sell off large stakes in 3 of the largest state-held banks to individual foreign investors through tenders, in preparation for European Union entry.

Savings deposits were Kč. 289,163m. in 1993.

A stock exchange was founded in Prague in 1992.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is in force.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 13·85m. kW in 1994. Production in 1994 was 55·38bn. kWh. In 1993, 76% of electricity was produced by thermal power stations using brown coal, 21% was nuclear (1 station) and the rest was hydro-electric. 29·2% of output was nuclear-generated in 1993. Consumption per capita in 1995 was estimated to be 4,712 kWh.

Minerals. There are hard coal and lignite reserves (chief fields: Most, Chomutov, Kladno, Ostrava and Sokolov). Gold deposits were found near Prague in 1985.

Agriculture. In 1993 there were 4,282,000 ha of agricultural land (3,173,000 ha arable). Approximately 24,000 ha were irrigated in 1994. 31·1% of agricultural land was state-owned, 61% co-operative, 4·4% private and 2·2% public.

A law of May 1991 returned land seized by the Communist regime to its original owners, to a maximum of 150 ha of arable to a single owner.

Selected agricultural production figures, 1995 (1,000 tonnes): Vegetables (including melons), 550; fruits (excluding melons), 443; tree-nuts, 8. The principal crops are wheat and spelt, sugar beet, barley and potatoes

Main export markets, 1995: Germany, 31·8%; Slovakia, 16·2%; Austria, 6·5%; Poland, 5·4%; Italy, 4%. Main import suppliers: Germany, 25·8%; Slovakia, 13·1%; Russia, 8·9%; Austria, 6·9%; Italy 5·8%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 423 km of motorways, 6,410 km of highways and main roads, 14,334 secondary roads and 34,322 other roads, forming a total of network of 55,489 km. Passenger cars in use in 1996 numbered 3,349,008 (324 per 1,000 inhabitants), and there were also 235,114 trucks and vans, 161,120 road tractors and 21,460 buses and coaches. Motor cycles and mopeds numbered 1,105,450. In 1995 passenger transport totalled 16,777m. passenger-km and freight 8,713m. tonne-km.

Rail. In 1994 Czech State Railways had a route length of 9,316 km (1,435 mm gauge), of which 2,640 km were electrified. Passenger-kilometres travelled in 1995 came to 8·02bn. and freight tonne-kilometres to 25·46bn. There is a metro (44 km) and tram/light rail system (496 km) in Prague, and tram/light rail networks in Brno, Liberec, Most, Olomouc, Ostrava, Plzeň and Teplice-Trecianské.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Prague (Ruzyné), Ostrava (Mosnov) and Brno (Turany). The national carrier is Czech Airlines, which is 68·1% state-owned. In 1998 services were also provided by Aeroflot, Air Algérie, Air France, Air Lithuania, Air Ostrava, Air Ukraine, Alitalia, Austrian Airlines, Balkan, Belavia, British Airways, British Midland, Canadian Airlines International, Continental Airlines, Croatia Airlines, Crossair, Delta Air Lines, El Al, Finnair, Georgian Airlines, JAT, KLM, LOT, Lufthansa, Malév, Moldavian Airlines, SABENA, SAS, SK Air, Swissair, Tarom, Tatra Air, Thai Airways International, Tunis Air and United Airlines. In 1996 Prague handled 3,700,620 passengers (3,638,047 on international flights) and 19,815 tonnes of freight; Ostrava handled 119,632 passengers, and Brno 110,451 passengers.

Shipping. 4·9m. tonnes of freight were carried by inland waterways in 1993. Merchant shipping totalled 140,000 GRT in 1995.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 3,279,800 telephone main lines in use, or 318·4 for every 1,000 inhabitants. Cellular phone subscribers numbered 49,000 in 1995, and there were 550,000 PCs in use (7·1 per 1,000 persons) and 74,000 fax machines. There were approximately 200,000 Internet users in Sept. 1997.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 3,511 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The post-Communist judicial system was established by a law of July 1991. This provides for a unified system of 4 types of court: civil, criminal, commercial and administrative. Commercial courts arbitrate in disputes arising from business activities. Administrative courts examine the legality of the decisions of state institutions when appealed by citizens. In addition, there are military courts which operate under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Defence. There is a Supreme Court, and a hierarchy of courts under the Ministry of Justice at republic, region and district level. District courts are courts of first instance. Cases are usually decided by senates comprising a judge and 2 associate judges, though occasionally by a single judge. (Associate judges are citizens in good standing over the age of 25 who are elected for 4-year terms). Regional courts are courts of first instance in more serious cases and also courts of appeal for district courts. Cases are usually decided by a senate of 2 judges and 3 associate judges, although again occasionally by a single judge. There is also a Supreme Administrative Court. The Supreme Court interprets law as a guide to other courts and functions also as a court of appeal. Decisions are made by senates of 3 judges. Judges are appointed for life by the National Council.

There is no death penalty. In 1993, 398,505 crimes were reported, of which 31·7% were solved.

Religion. In 1991, 18 churches were registered. In 1997 church membership was estimated to be: Roman Catholic, 4,020,000; Evangelical Church of the Czech Brethren, 200,000; Hussites, 180,000; Silesian Evangelicals, 30,000; Eastern Orthodox, 20,000. 4,120,000 persons were classified as atheist or non-religious, and there were 1,740,000 adherents of other religions.

Miloslav Vlk (b. 1932) was installed as Archbishop of Prague and Primate of Czechoslovakia in 1991. The national Czech church, created in 1918, took the name 'Hussite' in 1972. In 1991 it had a patriarch, 5 bishops and 300 pastors (40% women). In 1991 there were also around a dozen other Protestant churches, the largest being the Evangelical which unites Calvinists and Lutherans, and numbered about 200,000.

Education. Elementary education up to age 15 is compulsory. 52% of children continue their education in vocational schools and 48% move on to secondary schools.

In 1995-96 there were 9 universities, 4 technical universities, 1 university for economics, 1 for agriculture, 1 for agriculture and forestry, 1 for veterinary and pharmaceutical sciences and 1 for chemical technology. There were also 4 academies (for performing arts, music and dramatic arts, fine arts and arts, architecture and industrial design) and a higher school of teacher training. Together, these 23 higher education institutions had 139,774 students in 1995-96 and 12,890 teaching staff in 1995.

In 1996 total expenditure on education came to Kč. 80,079m., or 5·4% of GNP.

Health. In 1995 there were 32,195 doctors (1 per 321 persons), 6,267 dentists and 4,032 pharmacists. There were 299 hospitals in 1995, with a provision of 89 beds per 10,000 population.

CULTURE

Prague is one of nine European Cities of Culture in the year 2000, along with Avignon (France), Bergen (Norway), Bologna (Italy), Brussels (Belgium), Helsinki (Finland), Kraków (Poland), Reykjavík (Iceland) and Santiago de Compostela (Spain). The title attracts large European Union grants.

Broadcasting. Broadcasting is the responsibility of the independent Board for Radio and Television. Czech Television (CTV, colour by SECAM) and Czech Radio are public corporations. The former Czechoslovakian broadcasting stations in the Czech Republic have become a second service. There is also a nationwide private TV company and 2 radio companies as well as local private stations. There were 4,950,000 TV receivers and 6,550,000 radio receivers in 1995.

Cinema. In 1995 there were 930 cinemas; attendance for the year was 9·3m. 22 full-length films were made in 1995.

Press. There were 21 daily newspapers in 1996 with a total readership of 2,620,000 (256 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were also 181 non-dailies with total readership 4,200,000 (410 per 1,000 inhabitants).

Tourism. There were 10·9m. foreign tourists in 1996. Foreign currency income from tourism in 1996 was US$4,100m. (6·5% of GDP).

Libraries. In 1995 there were 10 National Libraries and 7,729 public libraries with a combined 54,533,000 volumes and 1,428,317 registered users.

Museums and Galleries. In 1993 there were 254 museums hosting a combined 9,029,000 visitors.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Denmark was first organized as a unified state in the 10th century with a Christian monarchy. King Canute was also King of England and King of Norway in the 11th century, but the union of the three countries was soon dissolved. In 1363 a royal marriage united Denmark and Norway and these two countries joined with Sweden in 1397. Sweden separated herself in 1523 and thereafter was in conflict with Denmark until the Peace with Copenhagen in 1660. Denmark acquired approximately its present boundaries in 1815 at the end of the Napoleonic Wars. Having supported Napoleon, it was forced to cede Norway to Sweden by the Treaty of Kiel (1814); it lost its north-German territory to Prussia 1864-66 and only in 1920 was North Schleswig returned to Denmark.

After 1815 there was much pressure for a more liberal form of government in preference to the traditional absolute monarchy, and on 5 June 1849 the royal assent was given a new constitution. A parliament, the Rigsdag, was created, divided into an upper house, the Landsting, and a lower house, the Folketing. The franchise was granted to men over 30 years old.

During the First World War (1914-18) Denmark remained neutral and in 1939, at the commencement of the Second World War it again declared its neutrality. On this occasion, however, it was soon overwhelmed by the German forces which invaded on 9 April 1940. Throughout the war there was a considerable Danish resistance movement to which the Germans responded by imposing direct rule. Immediately after the Second World War, Denmark recognized the independence of Iceland. Home rule was granted to the Faroes in 1948 and to Greenland in 1979. The constitution was amended in 1953, to allow for a female succession to the throne, the abolition of the Landsting (the upper house) and the extension of the franchise to all men and women over 18 years of age. Denmark joined NATO in 1949, took the lead in the formation of the consultative Nordic Council in 1953 and joined the EEC after a referendum held in 1972.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Denmark is bounded in the west by the North Sea, north-west and north by the Skagerrak and Kattegat straits (separating it from Norway and Sweden), and south by Germany. A fixed link with Sweden will be created in 2000 when the Öresund motorway and railway bridge between Copenhagen and Malmö is completed.

In 1995 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for both males and females. Infant mortality, 1995, 5·3 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 1997, 1·8 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is much modified by marine influences and the effect of the Gulf Stream, to give winters that may be both cold or mild and often cloudy. Summers may be warm and sunny or chilly and rainy. In general, the east is drier than the west. Long periods of calm weather are exceptional and windy conditions are common. Copenhagen, Jan. 33°F (0·5°C), July 63°F (17°C). Annual rainfall 650 mm. Esbjerg, Jan. 33°F (0·5°C), July 61°F (16°C). Annual rainfall 800 mm. 10% of rainfall precipitates as snow.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution is founded upon the Basic Law of 5 June 1953. The legislative power lies with the Queen and the Folketing (parliament) jointly. The executive power is vested in the monarch, who exercises authority through the ministers.

The reigning Queen is Margrethe II, b. 16 April 1940; married 10 June 1967 to Prince Henrik, b. Count de Monpezat. She succeeded to the throne on the death of her father, King Frederik IX, on 14 Jan. 1972. Offspring: Crown Prince Frederik, b. 26 May 1968; Prince Joachim, b. 7 June 1969; married 18 Nov. 1995 Alexandra Manley (b. 30 June 1964).

Mother of the Queen; Queen Ingrid, b. Princess of Sweden, 28 March 1910.

Sisters of the Queen; Princess Benedikte, b. 29 April 1944; married 3 Feb. 1968 to Prince Richard of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg; Princess Anne-Marie, b. 30 Aug. 1946; married 18 Sept. 1964 to King Constantine of Greece.

The crown was elective from the earliest times but became hereditary by right in 1660. The direct male line of the house of Oldenburg became extinct with King Frederik VII on 15 Nov. 1863. In view of the death of the king, without direct heirs, the Great Powers signed a treaty at London on 8 May 1852, by the terms of which the succession to the crown was made over to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, and to the direct male descendants of his union with the Princess Louise of Hesse-Cassel. This became law on 31 July 1853. Linked to the constitution of 5 June 1953, a new law of succession, dated 27 March 1953, has come into force, which restricts the right of succession to the descendants of King Christian X and Queen Alexandrine, and admits the sovereign's daughters to the line of succession, ranking after the sovereign's sons.

The Queen receives a tax-free annual sum of 44·7m. kroner from the state (1998).

The judicial power is with the courts. The monarch must be a member of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church, the official Church of the State, and may not assume major international obligations without the consent of the Folketing. The Folketing consists of one chamber. All men and women of Danish nationality of more than 18 years of age and permanently resident in Denmark possess the franchise, and are eligible for election to the Folketing, which is at present composed of 179 members; 135 members are elected by the method of proportional representation in 17 constituencies. In order to attain an equal representation of the different parties, 40 additional seats are divided among such parties which have not obtained sufficient returns at the constituency elections. 2 members are elected for the Faroe Islands and 2 for Greenland. The term of the legislature is 4 years, but a general election may be called at any time. The Folketing convenes every year on the first Tuesday in October. Besides its legislative functions, every 6 years it appoints judges who, together with the ordinary members of the Supreme Court, form the Rigsret, a tribunal which can alone try parliamentary impeachments.

National Anthem. 'Kong Kristian stod ved højen mast' ('King Christian stood by the lofty mast'); words by J. Ewald, tune by J. E. Hartmann.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 11 March 1998. The Social Democratic Party won 63 seats, with 35·9% of the votes cast (62 seats with 34·6% in 1994); the Liberal Party 42 with 24% (42 with 23·3%); the Conservative Party 16 with 8·9% (27 with 15%); the Socialist People's Party 13 with 7·6% (13 with 7·3%); and the Danish People's Party 13 with 7·4% (not in 1994 election). The 28 remaining seats went to the Social Liberal Party (7); the Centre Democratic Party (8); the Christian People's Party (4); the Progress Party (4); the Unity List (5). The coalition government led by Poul Nyrup Rasmussen of the Social Democratic Party remained in office.

European Parliament. Denmark has 16 representatives. At the June 1994 elections turn-out was 52·9%. The Liberal Party won 4 seats with 19% of votes cast (group in European Parliament: Liberal, Democratic and Reformist Group); the Conservative Party, 3 with 17·7% (Popular European Party); the SD, 3 with 15·8% (European Socialist Party); the June Movement, 2 with 15·2% (Europe of Nations); the People's Anti-EU Movement, 2 with 10·3% (Europe of Nations); the Socialist People's Party, 1 with 8·6% (Greens); the Radical Liberal Party, 1 with 8·5% (Liberal, Democratic and Reformist Group).

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Following the 1998 elections a coalition government of the Social Democratic (S) and Social Liberal (RV) Parties took office in March 1998. In March 1999 the government comprised:

Prime Minister: Poul Nyrup Rasmussen, b. 1943; (S; elected 11 March 1998).

Minister of Economic Affairs and Minister for Nordic Co-operation: Marianne Jelved (RV). Trade and Industry: Pia Gjellerup (S). Finance: Mogens Lykketoft (S). Foreign Affairs: Niels Helveg Petersen (RV). Justice: Frank Jensen (S). Environment and Energy: Svend Auken (S). Education and Ecclesiastical Affairs: Margrethe Vestager (RV). Developmental Aid: Poul Nielson (S). Interior: Thorkild Simonsen (S). Health: Carsten Koch (S). Labour: Ove Hygum (S). Taxation: Ole Stavad (S). Defence: Hans Haekkerup (S). Culture: Elsebeth Gerner Nielsen (RV). Transport: Sonja Mikkelsen (S). Social Affairs: Karen Jespersen (S). Housing and Building: Jytte Andersen (S). Research: Jan Trojborg (S). Food, Agriculture and Fisheries: Henrik Dam Kristensen (S).

Local Government. For administrative purposes Denmark is divided into 275 communes; each of them has a district council of between 7 and 31 members, headed by an elected mayor. The city of Copenhagen forms a district by itself and is governed by a city council of 55 members, elected every 4 years, and an executive, consisting of the chief burgomaster and 6 burgomasters, appointed by the city council for 4 years. There are 14 counties, each of which is administered by a county council of between 13 and 31 members, headed by an elected mayor. All councils are elected directly by universal suffrage and proportional representation for 4-year terms. There are also about 2,100 parishes. Government at this level is administered by parish councils elected for 4 years.

The counties and Copenhagen are superintended by the Ministry of Interior Affairs. The municipalities are superintended by 14 local supervision committees, headed by a state county prefect, who is a civil servant appointed by the Queen.

County and municipal elections were held on 16 Nov. 1993. The Social Democrats won 34·9% of votes cast, the Liberals 28·8% (county elections).

DEFENCE

The military defence is organized in accordance with the Defence Act of Dec. 1993. The overall organization of the Danish Armed Forces comprises the Headquarter's Chief of Defence, the Army, the Navy, the Air Force and inter-service authorities and institutions; to this should be added the Home Guard, which is an indispensable part of Danish military defence. The Home Guard is based on the Home Guard Act of May 1982 as amended in Dec. 1993.

In accordance with the Defence Act, the Chief of Defence is in full command of the three services: The Army, the Navy and the Air Force. The Chief of Defence and the Defence Staff constitute the Headquarters' Chief of Defence.

The Constitution of 1849 states that it is the duty of every fit man to contribute to the national defence. This provision is still in force. Selection of conscripts takes place at the age of 18–19 years, and the conscripts are normally called up for service ½–1½ years later. Conscripts may subsequently be recalled for refresher training or musters. The initial training period for conscripts is between 4 and 12 months.

In 1997 defence expenditure totalled US$2,816m. (US$538 per capita), representing 1·7% of GDP.

Army. The army is comprised of field army formations and the local defence forces. In 1998 the peacetime strength of the army numbered 19,200 (including about 3,700 civilians and about 6,900 conscripts). The wartime strength was about 58,000. The Army is organized in 1 division; and in brigades and regimental combat groups, headquarter units and support units. There are 4 mechanized infantry brigades including the Danish Reaction Brigade. The field army is equipped with approximately 350 battle tanks, about 530 armoured personnel carriers and 160 specialized light-armoured vehicles as well as artillery including 76 self-propelled howitzers and 1 battery Multiple Launch Rocket System (MRLS). The Army has 12 AS-550 Fennec anti-armour helicopters and 12 Hughes 500 helicopters for observation and liaison. The local defence units are organized in infantry battalions and artillery units as well as a number of support units.

Navy. The Navy was some 6,000-strong (including 1,700 civilians and 500 conscripts) in 1998. The wartime strength was 9,800. The fleet comprises 5 coastal submarines, 3 corvettes, 5 ocean patrol vessels with Lynx helicopters, 14 Standard Flex 300 multi-role ships, 10 fast-missile patrol ships, 3 patrol cutters, 9 patrol boats, 4 coastal minelayers, 2 inshore minelayers and 1 coastal minesweeper. Furthermore, the fleet comprises 2 light auxiliary oilers, the Royal Yacht, and a number of smaller auxiliaries. The Naval Air Arm comprises 8 Lynx helicopters, and the Naval Home Guard operates 35 inshore patrol craft.

Coastal Defence forces comprise 1 permanent fortress armed with 150-mm guns and 2 mobile coastal batteries with Harpoon missiles.

Additionally, the Navy man and control 4 icebreakers, 6 environment control vessels and 6 survey vessels.

The 2 main naval bases are at Frederikshavn and Korsoer.

Air Force. The Air Force comprised some 7,800 in 1998 (including 2,300 civilians and 500 conscripts). The wartime strength force was about 16,800.

The flying squadrons comprise 4 all-weather air-defence squadrons with a total of 69 F-16s. All squadrons have an air-defence and a fighter-bomber role. One squadron has an additional photo-reconnaissance role. The operational units also comprise 8 HAWK surface-to-air missile squadrons.

In addition, the Air Force has a number of supplementary units, including 1 transport squadron (3 C-130 Hercules, 2 Gulfstream IIIs and 1 Challenger 604), 1 helicopter search and rescue squadron (8 S-61As), and a control and warning system. T-17 Supporter aircraft are used for initial pilot training, and pilots continue training at EURO-NATO Joint Jet Pilot Training in the USA.

Home Guard. The overall Home Guard organization comprises the Home Guard Command, the Army Home Guard, the Navy Home Guard, the Air Force Home Guard, the Service Corps and the Corporation-related Home Guard.

The personnel of the Home Guard is recruited on a voluntary basis. The personnel establishment of the Home Guard was in 1998 about 64,000 persons (48,300 in the Army Home Guard, 4,400 in the Navy Home Guard, 7,800 in the Air Force Home Guard, 1,500 in the Service Corps and 1,800 in the Corporation-related Home Guard).

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In a referendum in June 1992 the electorate voted against ratifying the Maastricht Treaty for closer political union within the EU. Turn-out was 82%. 50·7% of votes were against ratification, 49·3% in favour. However, a second referendum on 18 May 1993 reversed this result, with 56·8% of votes cast in favour of ratification and 43·2% against. Turn-out was 86·2%.

Denmark gave US$1·7bn. in international aid in 1997, which at 0·97% of GDP made it the world's most generous country as a percentage of its gross domestic product.

Denmark is a member of the UN, NATO, OECD, the EU, Council of Europe and the Nordic Council. On 19 Dec. 1996 Denmark acceded to the Schengen Accord of June 1990 which abolishes border controls between Denmark and Austria, Belgium, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

ECONOMY

Policy. The government announced tax reform proposals in June 1998, with the corporate income tax rate being lowered from 34 to 26%. This, plus other changes, would help to trim back GDP growth from 2·7% to 2·5% in 1998, and from a projected 2·9% to 1·7% in 1999.

Performance. Real GDP growth averaged 3% each year between 1992 and 1997 with inflation at less than 2%. The current account has moved into deficit and is unlikely to return to surplus before 2000. As stated in the OECD's Economic Survey of Denmark (1998–99), assessing recent economic performance as a whole, it is evident that fiscal consolidation, monetary policy credibility and the structural reform programme have together been highly successful in creating the conditions for long-term growth.

Budget. The following shows the actual revenue and expenditure as shown in central government accounts for the calendar years 1996 and 1997, the approved budget figures for 1998 and the budget for 1999 (in 1,000 kroner):

	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue[1]	363,334,500	394,013,800	411,156,900	394,207,000
Expenditure[1]	379,709,500	380,107,800	383,322,000	388,588,500

[1]Receipts and expenditures of special government funds and expenditures on public works are included.

The 1999 budget envisaged revenue of 122,821m. kroner from income and property taxes and 190,694m. from consumer taxes. The central government debt on 31 Dec. 1997 amounted to 654,130m. kroner.

VAT is 25%.

Currency. The monetary unit is the Danish krone (DKK) of 100 øre. Inflation was 2·1% in 1996, 2·2% in 1997 and was forecast to drop to 1·8% in 1998. In Feb. 1998 foreign exchange reserves were US$19,085m. and gold reserves were 1·69m. troy oz. In Feb. 1998 the money supply was 332bn. kroner.

While not participating directly in EMU, the Danish krone is pegged to the new currency in ERM-2, the successor to the exchange rate mechanism.

Banking and Finance. On 31 Dec. 1997 the accounts of the National Bank (Governor, Bodil Nyboe) balanced at 209,817m. kroner. The assets included official net foreign reserves of 129,700m. kroner. The liabilities included notes and coins totalling 38,710m. kroner. On 31 Dec. 1997 there were 92 commercial banks and savings banks, with deposits of 670,476m. kroner.

The 2 largest commercial banks are Den Danske Bank and Unibank.

There is a stock exchange in Copenhagen.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity is 11·8m. kW. Production (1997), 41,775m. kWh. Consumption per capita in 1997 was 5,541 kWh. In 1997 some 4,784 wind turbines produced 4·6% of output.

Oil and Gas. Oil production was (1997) 11·2m. tonnes. Production of natural gas was (1997) 7·5m. cu. metres.

Agriculture. Agriculture accounts for 2·6% of GDP, 28·1% of exports and 15·8% of imports. Land ownership is widely distributed. In May 1997 there were 63,151 holdings with at least 5 ha of agricultural area (or at least a production equivalent to that from 5 ha of barley). There were 12,549 small holdings (with less than 10 ha), 33,050 medium-sized holdings (10–50 ha) and 17,532 holdings with more than 50 ha. There were 23,257 agricultural workers in 1996.

In 1997 the cultivated area was (in 1,000 ha): Grain, 1,555; pulses, 95; root crops, 146; other crops, 179; green fodder and grass, 554; set aside, 158; total cultivated area, 2,688.

Livestock, 1997 (in 1,000): Horses, 39; cattle, 2,004; pigs, 11,383; poultry, 18,994.

Production (in 1,000 tonnes) in 1997: Milk, 4,432; butter, 50; cheese, 291; beef, 195; pork and bacon, 1,639; eggs, 85.

In 1997 tractors numbered 141,293 and combine harvesters 25,418.

Forestry. The area under forests in 1995 was 417,000 ha, or 9·8% of the total land area. 2·29m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced in 1995.

Fisheries. The total value of the fish caught was (in 1m. kroner): 1950, 156; 1955, 252; 1960, 376; 1965, 650; 1970, 854; 1975, 1,442; 1980, 2,888; 1985, 3,542; 1990, 3,439; 1995, 2,939; 1996, 2,960; 1997, 3,344 (provisional figures).

In 1995 total catches were 2,041,133 tonnes (1,916,359 tonnes in 1994), of which 2,005,464 tonnes were from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The following table is of gross value added (in 1m. kroner):

	1995[1]	1996[1]	1997[1]

Roads. Denmark proper had (1 Jan. 1998) 843 km of motorways, 3,780 km of other state roads, 9,953 km of provincial roads and 59,861 km of commercial roads. Motor vehicles registered at 1 Jan. 1998 comprised 1,782,594 passenger cars, 37,850 trucks, 298,108 vans, 14,375 taxi cabs (including 8,487 for private hire), 13,776 buses and 59,864 cycles.

Rail. In 1997 there were 2,248 km of State railways of 1,435 mm gauge (600 km electrified), which carried 144m. passengers and 8·3m. tonnes of freight. There were also 495 km of private railways.

Civil Aviation. The main international airport is at Copenhagen (Kastrup), and there are also international flights from Aalborg, Århus, Billund and Esbjerg. The Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS) resulted from the 1950 merger of the 3 former Scandinavian airlines. Services were also provided in 1998 by Adria, Aer Lingus, Aeroflot, Air Baltic, Air Canada, Air China, Air France, Air India, Air Lithuania, Air Malta, Alitalia, Atlantic Airways (Faroe Islands), Austrian Airlines, Balkan, Braathens, British Airways, British Midland, Cimber Air, Continental Airlines, Croatia Airlines, Crossair, Czech Airlines, Delta Air Lines, Egyptair, El Al, Estonian Air, Finnair, Go, Greenlandair, Helikopterservice, Iberia, Icelandair, Interimpex-Avioimpex, Iran Air, JAT, KLM, Kenya Airways, Kuwait Airways, Lithuanian Airlines, LOT, Lufthansa, Luxair, Maersk Air, Malév, Muk Air, Olympic Airways, Pakistan International Airlines, Regional Airlines, Royal Air Maroc, SABENA, Singapore Airlines, Skyways, South African Airways, Spanair, Swissair, TAP, Tarom, Thai Airways International, Transeast Airlines, Tunis Air, Turkish Airlines, United Airlines, Varig, Virgin Express and Wideroe's Flyveselskap.

On 1 Jan. 1998 Denmark had 1,091 aircraft with a capacity of 20,535 seats. In 1997 there were 285,020 take-offs and landings to and from abroad, and 406,385 to and from Danish airports, including local flights. Copenhagen (Kastrup) handled 15,591,000 passengers in 1996 (12,696,000 on international flights).

Shipping. On 1 Jan. 1997 the merchant fleet consisted of 794 vessels (above 20 GRT) totalling 5,559,560 GRT. In 1996, 51m. tonnes of cargo were unloaded and 33m. tonnes were loaded in Danish ports; traffic by passenger ships and ferries is not included.

Telecommunications. At 31 Dec. 1996 there were 3·34m. telephone subscribers; 1·44m. mobile telephones were in use. There were 1·1m. Internet users in Nov. 1998. In 1995, 1·42m. PCs were in use (270 per 1,000 persons) and 250,000 fax machines.

Postal Services. In 1997 there were 1,256 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The lowest courts of justice are organized in 82 tribunals (byretter), where minor cases are dealt with by a single judge. The tribunal at Copenhagen has one president and 44 other judges; and Århus one president and 15 other judges; the other tribunals have 1 to 11 judges. Cases of greater consequence are dealt with by the 2 High Courts (Landsretterne); these courts are also courts of appeal for the above-named minor cases. The Eastern High Court in Copenhagen has one president and 61 other judges; and the Western in Viborg one president and 38 other judges. From these an appeal lies to the Supreme Court in Copenhagen, composed of a president and at present 17 other judges. Judges under 65 years of age can be removed only by judicial sentence.

In 1997, 14,754 men and 1,804 women were convicted of violations of the criminal code, fines not included. In 1997 the daily average population in penal institutions was 3,397, of whom 862 men and 55 women were on remand.

Religion. There is complete religious liberty. The state church is the Evangelical-Lutheran to which about 90% of the population belong. It is divided into 10 dioceses each with a Bishop. The Bishop together with the Chief Administrative Officer of the county make up the diocesan-governing body, responsible for all matters of ecclesiastical local finance and general administration. Bishops are appointed by the Crown after an election by the clergy and parish council members. Each diocese is divided into a number of deaneries (107 in the whole country), each with its Dean and Deanery Committee, who have certain financial powers.

Education. Education has been compulsory since 1814. The folkeskole (public primary and lower secondary school) comprises a pre-school class (børne-haveklasse), a 9-year basic school corresponding to the period of compulsory education and a 1-year voluntary tenth form. Compulsory education may be fulfilled either through attending the folkeskole or private schools or through home instruction, on the condition that the instruction given is comparable to that given in the folkeskole. The folkeskole is mainly a municipal school and no fees are paid. In the year 1996–97, 2,301 primary and lower secondary schools had 590,792 pupils; they employed 56,323 teachers in 1992–93. 19·6% of the total number of schools were private schools and were attended by 11·6% of the total number of pupils. The 9-year basic school is in practice not streamed. However, a certain differentiation may take place in the eighth and ninth forms.

On completion of the eighth and ninth forms the pupils may sit for the leaving examination of the folkeskole (folkeskolens afgangsprøve). On completion of the tenth form the pupils may sit for either the leaving examination of the folkeskole (folkeskolens afgangsprøve) or the advanced leaving examination of the folkeskole (folkeskolens udvidede afgangsprøve).

For 14–18 year olds there is an alternative of completing compulsory education at continuation schools, with the same leaving examinations as in the folkeskole. In the year 1996–97 there were 231 continuation schools with 19,749 pupils. Under certain conditions the pupils may continue school either in the 3-year gymnasium (upper secondary school) or 2-year studenterkursus (adult upper secondary school), ending with studentereksamen (upper secondary school leaving examination); or in the 2-year or 3-year higher preparatory examination course, ending with the højere forberedelseseksamen. There were (1996–97) 150 of these upper secondary schools with 73,850 pupils.

Another way of continuing school is to attend HHX (Højere handelseksamen) which are diploma courses within the field of trade and commerce (27,000 pupils were enrolled in 1996–97), or HTX (Højere tekniskeksamen) which are technical diploma courses (6,304 pupils in 1996–97). Vocational education and training consists of a ½-year or 1-year basic course, followed by a second part of 2–4 years. Vocational education and training cover courses in commerce and trade, iron and metal industry, chemical industry, construction industry, graphic industry, service trades, food industry, agriculture, horticulture, forestry and fishery, transport and communication, and health-related auxiliary programmes. In 1996–97, 40,470 students were enrolled within trade and commerce. 78,890 students were enrolled within technical education.

Tertiary education comprises all education after the 12th year of education, regardless of whether the 3 years after the 9th form of the folkeskole have been spent on a course preparing for continued studies (studentereksamen, højere forberedelseseksamen or HHX/HTX), or a course preparing for a vocation (EUD). Tertiary education can be divided into 2 main groups; short courses of further education and long courses of higher education. There were a total of 17,872 students at short courses of further education in 1996–97. There were 18 teacher-training colleges with 12,745 students in 1996–97 and 34 colleges for training of personnel for kindergartens, leisure-time and social care institutions with 17,535 students.

Degree courses in engineering: The Technical University of Denmark had 6,199 students in 1996–97. 9 engineering colleges had 6,000 students. Universities, 1996–97: The University of Copenhagen (founded 1479), 27,653 students; the University of Århus (founded in 1928), 17,176 students; the University of Odense (founded in 1964), 9,020 students; the University of Aalborg (founded in 1974), 9,046 students; Roskilde University Centre (founded in 1972), 5,546 students.

Other types of post-secondary education (1996–97): The Royal Veterinary and Agricultural University has 3,006 students; The Danish School of Pharmacy, 1,046 students; 8 colleges of economics, business administration and modern languages, 24,377 students; 2 schools of architecture, 2,066 students; 7 academies of music, 1,219 students; 2 schools of librarianship, 821 students; The Royal Danish School of Educational Studies, 2,787 students; 5 schools of social work, 1,781 students; The Danish School of Journalism, 980 students; 10 colleges of physical therapy, 2,566 students; 2 schools of Midwifery Education, 246 students; 2 colleges of home economics, 488 students; The School of Visual Arts, 192 students; 27 schools of nursing, 9,606 students; 3 military academies, 590 students.

Of adult education institutions, the best-known are Folkeskolehøjskoler, folk high schools (with 49,017 students). Adult education includes: single subjects (since 1978, with 94,481 students); labour market training courses for semi-skilled workers and for skilled workers (188,468 students); and courses in single subject education at vocational schools (112,232 students).

In 1995 total expenditure on education came to 8·2% of GNP and represented 13·1% of total government expenditure.

Health. In 1994 there were 14,497 doctors (1 per 358 persons), 5,088 dentists, 63,841 nurses and 1,038 midwives. There were 163 hospitals in 1992, with a provision of 35 beds per 10,000 population.

Welfare. The main body of Danish social welfare legislation is consolidated in 7 acts concerning: (1) public health security, (2) sick-day benefits, (3) social pensions (for early retirement and old age), (4) employment injuries insurance, (5) employment services, unemployment insurance and activation measures, (6) social assistance including assistance to handicapped, rehabilitation, child and juvenile guidance, daycare institutions, care of the aged and sick, and (7) family allowances.

Public health security, covering the entire population, provides free medical care, substantial subsidies for certain essential medicines together with some dental care, and a funeral allowance. Hospitals are primarily municipal and treatment is normally free. All employed workers are granted daily sickness allowances; others can have limited daily sickness allowances. Daily cash benefits are granted in the case of temporary incapacity because of illness, injury or childbirth to all persons in paid employment. The benefit is paid up to the rate of 100% of the average weekly earnings. There is, however, a maximum rate of 2,688 kroner a week.

Social pensions cover the entire population. Entitlement to the old-age pension at the full rate is subject to the condition that the beneficiary has been ordinarily resident in Denmark for 40 years. For a shorter period of residence, the benefits are reduced proportionally. The basic amount of the old-age pension in July 1998 was 134,760 kroner a year to married couples and 93,216 to single persons. Various supplementary allowances, depending on age and income, may be payable with the basic amount. Depending on health and income, persons aged 60–66 may apply for an early retirement pension. Persons over 67 years of age are entitled to the basic amount. The pensions to a married couple are calculated and paid to the husband and the wife separately. Early retirement pension to a disabled person is payable at ages 18–66 years, having regard to the degree of disability (physical as well as otherwise), at a rate of up to 147,420 kroner to a single person. Early retirement pensions may be subject to income regulation. The same applies to the basic amount of the old-age pension to persons aged 67–69.

Employment injuries insurance provides for disability or survivors' pensions and compensations. The scheme covers practically all employees.

Employment services are provided by regional public employment agencies. Insurance against unemployment provides daily allowances and covers about 85% of the unemployed. The unemployment insurance system is based on state subsidized insurance funds linked to the trade unions. The unemployment insurance funds had a membership of 2,199,018 in Aug. 1998.

The Social Assistance Act applies to individual benefits in contrast to the other fields of social legislation which apply to fixed benefits. Total social expenditure, including hospital and health services, statutory pensions etc. amounted in the financial year 1997 to 330,125·7m. kroner.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Danmarks Radio is the government broadcasting station and is financed by household licence fees. Television is broadcast by Danmarks Radio and TV2 with colour programmes by PAL system. Number of licences (1997): TV, 2·12m., including 2·07m. colour sets. There were an estimated 6m. radio receivers in 1996.

Cinema. In 1997 there were 320 auditoria. Total attendance in 1995 was 8·8m.

Press. In 1997 there were 37 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 1·62m.

Tourism. In 1996, 1,794,000 foreign tourists visited Denmark. In 1997 foreign tourists spent some 21,021m. kroner. Foreigners spent 6,225,000 nights in hotels and 4,246,500 nights at camping sites in 1997.

THE FAROE ISLANDS

Føroyar/Færøerne

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A Norwegian province till the peace treaty of 14 January 1814, the islands have been represented by 2 members in the Danish parliament since 1851. In 1852 they obtained an elected parliament of their own which in 1948 secured a certain degree of home-rule. The islands are not included in the EU but left EFTA together with Denmark on 31 Dec. 1972. Recently, negotiations for independence were given a push by the prospect of exploiting offshore oil and gas.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The archipelago is situated due north of Scotland, 300 km from the Shetland Islands, 675 km from Norway and 450 km from Iceland, with a total land area of 1,399 sq. km (540 sq. miles). There are 17 inhabited islands (the main ones being Streymoy, Eysturoy, Vágoy, Suðuroy, Sandoy and Borðoy) and numerous islets, all mountainous and of volcanic origin. Population in 1995 was 43,678; density, 31 per sq. km. In 1995 an estimated 67·9% of the population lived in rural areas. The capital is Tórshavn (15,272) on Streymoy.

The official languages are Faroese and Danish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Birth rate per 1,000 inhabitants (1996 est.), 13·91; death rate, 8·69. Life expectancy at birth for total population (1996 est.), 77·83.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The parliament comprises 32 members elected by proportional representation by universal suffrage at age 18. Parliament elects a government of at least 3 members which administers home rule. Denmark is represented in parliament by the chief administrator.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In parliamentary elections held on 30 April 1998 the People's Party (FF) and the Party for People's Government (TF) each won 8 seats, the Equality Party (JF) 7 seats, the Union Party (SF) 6 seats, the Self-Government Party (SSF) 2 seats, and the Centre Party (MF) 1 seat.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

Prime Minister: Anfinn Kallsberg (FF).

Following the 1998 elections, a coalition government was formed comprising FF, TF and SSF members.

Local Government. Local government is vested in the 50 kommunur, of 29 or more inhabitants, which raise their own income taxes.

ECONOMY

Budget. The 1995 budget balanced at 2,805m. kr. As a result of an economic crash in the early 1990s, Denmark restructured the banks and lent money to the government to meet its international obligations. Since then the economy has improved, but 5·5bn. Danish krone (£480m.) is still owed to the Danish state. Meanwhile, subsidies from Copenhagen are worth at least 1bn. Danish kreone a year.

Currency. Since 1940 the currency has been the Faroese króna (kr.) which remains freely interchangeable with the Danish krone.

Banking and Finance. The largest bank is the state-owned Føroya Banki.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity is 91,000 kW. Total production in 1995 was 174m. kWh, of which hydro-electric 76m. kWh. There are 5 hydro-electric stations at Vestmanna on Streymoy and one at Eiði on Eysturoy. Consumption per capita was 4,043 kWh in 1995.

Agriculture. Only 2% of the surface is cultivated; it is chiefly used for sheep and cattle grazing. Potatoes are grown for home consumption. Livestock (1996): Sheep, 68,000; cattle, 2,000.

Fisheries. Deep-sea fishing now forms the most important sector (90%) of the economy, primarily in the 200-mile exclusive zone, but also off Greenland, Iceland, Svalbard and Newfoundland and in the Barents Sea. Total catch (1995) 284,971 tonnes, primarily cod, coalfish, redfish, mackerel, blue whiting, capelin, prawns and herring.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports. Exports, mainly fresh, frozen, filleted and salted fish, amounted to 2,026m. kr. in 1995; imports to 1,776m. kr. In 1995 Denmark supplied 35% of imports, Norway 16% and UK 8%; exports were mainly to UK (26%), Denmark (22%), Germany (10%), France (8%) and Spain (5%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1995 there were 458 km of highways, 11,528 passenger cars and 2,901 commercial vehicles.

Civil Aviation. The airport is on Vágoy, from which there are regular services to Aberdeen, Billund, Copenhagen, Reykjavík and Glasgow (in summer), with Atlantic Airways (Faroe Islands) and Maersk Air.

Shipping. The chief port is Tórshavn, with smaller ports at Klaksvik, Vestmanna, Skálafjørður, Tvøroyri, Vágur and Fuglafjørður. In 1995 merchant shipping totalled 104,000 GRT, including oil tankers, 230,000 GRT.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 23,600 telephone main lines in use (538 for every 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Religion. About 80% are Evangelical Lutherans and 20% are Plymouth Brethren, or belong to small communities of Roman Catholics, Pentecostal, Adventists, Jehovah Witnesses and Bahai.

Education. In 1994–95 there were 4,898 primary and 3,041 secondary school pupils with 554 teachers.

Health. In 1994 there were 90 doctors, 38 dentists, 10 pharmacists, 17 midwives and 355 nursing personnel. In 1994 there were 3 hospitals with 297 beds.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. Radio and TV broadcasting (colour by PAL) are provided by Utvarp Føroya and Sjónvarp Føroya respectively. In 1994 there were 24,000 radio and 14,000 TV receivers registered.

GREENLAND

Grønland/Kalaallit Nunaat

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A Danish possession since 1380, Greenland became an integral part of the Danish kingdom on 5 June 1953. Following a referendum in Jan. 1979, home rule was introduced from 1 May 1979.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Area, 2,166,086 sq. km (840,000 sq. miles), made up of 1,755,437 sq. km of ice cap and 410,449 sq. km of ice-free land. The population, 1 Jan. 1998, numbered 56,076. In 1998, 45,489 persons were urban (81%); 49,117 were born in Greenland and 6,959 were born outside Greenland. 1998 population of West Greenland, 51,047; East Greenland, 3,499; North Greenland (Thule/Qaanaaq), 875; and 655 not belonging to any specific municipality. The capital is Nuuk (Godthåb), with a population in 1998 of 13,024.

The predominant language is Greenlandic. Danish is widely used in matters relating to teaching, administration and business.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Registered live births (1996), 1,006. Number of abortions (1997): 865. Death rate per 1,000 population (1996), 7·5. Annual growth rate (1997), 0·2%. Density, 0·03 sq. km.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

There is a 31-member Home Rule Parliament, which is elected for 4-year terms and meets 2 to 3 times a year. The 7-member cabinet is elected by parliament. Ministers need not be members of parliament. In accordance with the Home Rule Act, the Greenland Home Rule Government is constituted by an elected parliament, Landstinget (The Greenland Parliament), and an administration headed by a local government, Landsstyret (The Cabinet).

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 16 Feb. 1999 Siumut gained 11 seats and 35·2% of votes cast, Atássut 8 with 25·2%, Inuit Ataqatigiit 7 with 22·1%, Katusseqatigiit 4 with 12·3%, and Per Rosing-Petersen 1 with 5·0%.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

In Dec. 1998 the cabinet comprised 5 SDP and 2 LP ministers. Greenland elects 2 representatives to the Danish parliament (Folketing). Denmark is represented by an appointed High Commissioner.

The Prime Minister is Jonathan Motzfeldt (Siumut).

Local Government. Administratively, Greenland is divided into 3 regions (North, East and West Greenland), and subdivided into 18 municipalities (1 in North, 2 in East and 15 in West Greenland). Town councils are elected for 4-year terms. The last elections were in April 1997.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Greenland has 2 representatives, appointed by the Greenland Parliament, in the Council for European Politics.

ECONOMY

Policy. (The statistical data is too fragmentary to draw up detailed national accounts showing the flow of money between the individual sectors of Greenland's economy. However, by using the assessment material from the Greenland tax authority, it is possible to compute some crude totals for certain central national account figures.) All figures are in m. kroner.

	1993	1994	1995	1996
GNP at factor cost	5,908	6,270	6,752	6,883
GNP at market prices	6,208	6,563	6,992	7,182
Transfers from the Danish state	2,930	2,920	2,975	3,023
(of which block grants[1])	2,329	2,375	2,393	2,441
Gross National Disposable Income at market prices	8,738	9,133	9,692	10,006
Real GNP growth	−3·8	5·2	4·4	1·7
Real GNDI growth	−3·6	4·0	4·0	2·2

[1]Other transfers include (amongst others): defence, fisheries inspection, the judicial system (including the police), which are financed directly by the Danish state.

The figures show that the transfers from the Danish state were 30·2% of gross national disposable income in 1997. There is an ongoing debate regarding the size of the secondary effect of the transfers from the Danish state. According to one estimate, these effects amount to 55% of GNP at market prices.

Performance. Real GNP has been stagnant since 1990.

Budget. The budget (finanslovsforslag) for the following year must be approved by the Home Rule Parliament (Landstinget) no later than 31 Oct.

The following table shows the actual revenue and expenditure as shown in Home Rule Government accounts for the calendar years 1995-97, and the approved budget figures for 1998. Figures are in 1,000 kroner:

	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Revenue[1]	3,953	4,063	4,178	4,204	4,359
Expenditure[1]	3,905	3,562	4,089	4,350	4,359

[1]Receipts and expenditures of special Government funds and expenditures on public works are included.

Currency. The Danish krone is the legal currency.

Banking and Finance. There is 1 private bank, Grønlandsbanken.

Weights and Measures. The metric system in use.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity is 92,500 kW. Production in 1997 was 273·5m. GWh. Consumption was 157·7 GWh in 1996-97.

Oil and Gas. Imports of fuel and fuel oil (1997), 192,130 tonnes worth 264m. kroner.

Water. Production of water in tonnes (1997), 5·5m. cu. metres, of which 2·8m. cu. metres was for industry.

Minerals. Exploitation of minerals (1997): number of licences, 59; area, 53,000 sq. km.

Agriculture. Livestock, 1997: Sheep, 21,025; reindeer, 2,800. There are approximately 60 sheep-breeding farms in south-west Greenland. A quota hunt for 2,000 caribous per year has been introduced.

Fisheries. Fishing and product-processing are the principal industry. Total catches in 1995 were 129,018 tonnes. In 1997 shrimps accounted for 64·8% of the country's economic output. Greenland Halibut and other fish made up 20%. In 1997, 169 whales were caught (subject to the International Whaling Commission's regulations) and in 1996, 167,751 seals. Around 76,000 of these were traded, the rest used in domestic households.

INDUSTRY

DJIBOUTI

Jumhouriyya Djibouti
(Republic of Djibouti)

Capital: Djibouti
Population estimate, 2000: 687,000
Estimated GDP: $500m.
HDI/world rank: 0·324/162

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

At a referendum held on 19 March 1967, 60% of the electorate voted for continued association with France rather than independence and the new statute for the territory came into being on 5 July 1967. France affirmed that the Territory of the Afars and the Issas was destined for independence but no date was fixed. Legislative elections were held on 8 May and independence as the Republic of Djibouti was achieved on 27 June 1977.

Afar rebels in the north, belonging to the Front for the Restoration of Unity and Democracy (FRUD), signed a 'Peace and National Reconciliation Agreement' with the government on 26 Dec. 1994, envisaging the formation of a national coalition government, the redrafting of the electoral roll and the integration of FRUD militants into the armed forces and civil service.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Djibouti is in effect a city-state surrounded by a semi-desert hinterland. It is bounded in the north-west by Eritrea, north-east by the Gulf of Aden, south-east by Somalia and south-west by Ethiopia. The area is 23,200 sq. km (8,958 sq. miles). The population was estimated in 1995 at 601,000 (82% urban), of whom about half were Somali (Issa, Gadaboursi and Issaq), 35% Afar, and some Europeans (mainly French) and Arabs. 1995 density, 26 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 687,000.

There are 5 administrative districts (areas in sq. km): Ali-Sabieh (2,600); Dikhil (7,800); Djibouti (600); Obock (5,700); Tadjoura (7,300). The capital is Djibouti (1995 population, 383,000).

French and Arabic are official languages; Somali and Afar are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1995 births, 23,500; deaths, 9,500. Birth rate in 1995, 38·8 per 1,000 population; death rate, 15·6; infant mortality, 1996, 108 per 1,000 live births. Growth rate, 1996, 1·5% (estimate). Expectation of life, 1996, 48·2 years or men, 52·1 for women. Fertility rate, 5·8 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Conditions are hot throughout the year, with very little rain. Djibouti, Jan. 78°F (25·6°C), July 96°F (35·6°C). Annual rainfall 5" (130 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

After a referendum at which turn-out was 70%, a new constitution was approved on 4 Sept. 1992 by 96·63% of votes cast, which permits the existence of up to 4 political parties. Parties are required to maintain an ethnic balance in their membership. The President is directly elected for a renewable 6-year term. Parliament is a 65-member Chamber of Deputies elected for 5-year terms.

DOMINICA

Commonwealth of Dominica

Capital: Roseau
Population estimate, 2000: 77,000
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 4,390
HDI/world rank: 0·879/41

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The earliest-known inhabitants of this island in the Caribbean were two Amerindian tribes: the Arawaks who migrated from South America, and the Caribs who later drove them out. Dominica was discovered by Columbus on Sunday (hence the island's name), 3 Nov. 1493. Neither the Spanish nor the Earl of Carlisle, who was granted the island in 1672 by Charles I, established settlements, and instead it was French settlers who began to create plantations on the island. The island's strategic position, however, later caused it to become the centre of a threefold conflict between the Carib Indians, the British and French. Control of the island was contested between the British and French until it was ultimately awarded to the British in 1783.

Dominica became part of a federation on four occasions: in 1833 with the Leeward Islands, in 1871 in an extended Leeward Islands Colony, in 1940 as part of the Windward Islands group, and in 1958-62 as a member of the Federation of the West Indies.

In March 1967 Dominica became an Associated State of the UK, allowed internal self-government, and became an independent republic as the Commonwealth of Dominica on 3 Nov. 1978.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Dominica is an island in the Windward group of the West Indies situated between Martinique and Guadeloupe. It has an area of 748·5 sq. km (289·5 sq. miles) and a population at the 1991 census of 71,794. 1996 estimate, 74,000.

In 2000 the population is projected to be 77,000.

An estimated 69·3% of the population were urban in 1995. The chief town, Roseau, had 15,853 inhabitants in 1991.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

República Dominicana

Capital: Santo Domingo
Population estimate, 2000: 8·49m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 4,390
HDI/world rank: 0·720/88

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Columbus discovered the island of Santo Domingo, which he called La Isla Española, and which for a time was also known as Hispaniola. The city of Santo Domingo, founded by his brother, Bartholomew, in 1496, is the oldest city in the Americas. The western third of the island—now the Republic of Haiti—was later occupied and colonized by the French, to whom the Spanish colony of Santo Domingo was also ceded in 1795. In 1808 the Dominican population, under the command of Gen. Juan Sánchez Ramirez, routed an important French military force commanded by Gen. Ferrand at the battle of Palo Hincado. This battle was the beginning of the end for French rule in Santo Domingo and culminated in the successful siege of the capital. Eventually, with the aid of a British naval squadron, the French were forced to capitulate and the colony returned again to Spanish rule, from which it declared its independence in 1821. It was invaded and held by the Haitians from 1822 to 1844, when they were expelled, and the Dominican Republic was founded and a constitution adopted. In 1850 Great Britain was the first country to recognize the Dominican Republic.

Thereafter the rule was dictatorship interspersed with brief democratic interludes. Between 1916 and 1924 the country was under US military occupation. From 1930 until his assassination in 1961, Rafael Trujillo was one of Latin America's legendary dictators. The rise of radicalism following the election of Juan Bosch to the presidency in 1963 led, in 1965, to a further US invasion. The conservative pro-American Joaquin Balaguer was president from 1966 to 1978 when an opposition candidate, Antonio Guzuén, was elected. Resistance to repression of popular movements led to the election of the moderate leftist Salvador Jorge Blanco in 1982. In 1986 Balaguer returned to power at the head of the Socialist Christian Reform Party, leading the way to economic reforms. But there was violent opposition to spending cuts and general austerity. Balaguer was returned to power in 1994 by a narrow margin after accusations of electoral irregularity. The 1996 elections brought in a reforming government pledged to act against corruption.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Dominican Republic occupies the eastern portion (about two-thirds) of the island of Hispaniola, the western division forming the Republic of Haiti. The frontier with Haiti is closed. The area is 48,442 sq. km (18,700 sq. miles). The 1990 area and population of the 29 provinces and National District (Santo Domingo area) was:

	Area (in sq. km)	Population		Area (in sq. km)	Population

Census population (1981), 5,647,977. Estimate (1996), 8,088,900 (61·9% urban in 1995).

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 8·49m.

Population of the main towns (1991 estimate, in 1,000): Santo Domingo, the capital, 2,055; Santiago de los Caballeros, 375; La Vega, 189; San Francisco de Macorís, 162; San Pedro de Macorís, 137; La Romana, 136.

The population is mainly composed of a mixed race of European (Spanish) and African blood. The official language is Spanish; about 0·15m. persons speak a Haitian-French Creole.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

1996 births, 190,000; deaths, 46,000. Rates, 1996: Birth, 23·5 (per 1,000 population); death, 5·7; infant mortality, 47·7 (per 1,000 live births). Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 2·0%. Life expectancy, 1996, 69 years. Fertility rate, 1990–95, 3·1 children per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical maritime climate with most rain falling in the summer months. The rainy season extends from May to Nov. and amounts are greatest in the north and east. Hurricanes may occur from June to Nov. Santo Domingo, Jan. 75°F (23·9°C), July 81°F (27·2°C). Annual rainfall 56" (1,400 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution dates from 28 Nov. 1966. The President is elected for 4 years, by direct vote, and has executive power. A constitutional amendment of Aug. 1994 prohibits the President from serving consecutive terms. In 1994 the constitution was amended to allow for a second round of voting in a presidential election, when no candidate secures an absolute majority in the first ballot. There is a bicameral legislature, the Congress, comprising a 30-member Senate (one member for each province and one for the National District of Santo Domingo) and a 149-member Chamber of Deputies, both elected for 4-year terms. Citizens are entitled to vote at the age of 18, or less when married.

National Anthem. 'Quisqueyanos valientes, alcemos' ('Valiant Quisqueyans, Let us raise our voices'); words by E. Prud'homme, tune by J. Reyes.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 16 May 1996 with a run-off on 30 June 1996. Leonel Fernández Reyna was elected at the run-off by 51·25% of votes cast.

Parliamentary elections were held on 16 May 1998. In the election to the Chamber of Deputies, the Dominican Revolutionary Party (PRD) won 83 seats, the Dominican Liberation Party (PLD) 49 and the Social Christian Reformist Party (PRSC) 17. In the Senate elections on the same day, PRD gained 24 seats, PLD 4 and PRSC 2.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Leonel Fernández Reyna (b. 1954; Dominican Liberation Party; sworn in 16 Aug. 1996).

Vice-President: Jaime Fernández Mirabal.

In March 1999 the government comprised:

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court of Justice, the courts of appeal, the courts of first instance, the communal courts and other tribunals created by special laws, such as the land courts. The Supreme Court consists of a president and 8 judges chosen by the Senate, and the procurator-general, appointed by the executive; it supervises the lower courts. Each province forms a judicial district, as does the National District, and each has its own procurator fiscal and court of first instance; these districts are subdivided, in all, into 97 municipalities, each with one or more local justices. The death penalty was abolished in 1924.

Religion. The religion of the state is Roman Catholic; there were 6·78m. adherents in 1992.

Education. Primary instruction is free and compulsory for children between 7 and 14 years of age; there are also secondary, normal, vocational and special schools, all of which are either wholly maintained by the State or state-aided. In 1995–96 there were 4,001 primary schools with 42,135 teachers for 1·4m. pupils, and 263,236 pupils at secondary level with 12,054 teachers. There are 4 universities, 3 Roman Catholic universities, 1 Adventist university, 3 technological universities and 1 Roman Catholic university college, and 5 other higher education institutions. Adult literacy was 82·1% in 1995 (male, 82%; female, 82·2%).

In 1994 total expenditure on education came to 1·9% of GNP and represented 12·2% of total government expenditure.

Health. In 1992 there were 11,130 doctors, 1,898 dentists and 6,035 nurses. There were 723 government hospitals in 1992.

CULTURE

Broadcasting. There were (1994) more than 170 broadcasting stations in Santo Domingo and other towns; this includes the 2 government stations. There were 7 television stations (colour by NTSC). In 1995 there were 1·38m. radio and 728,000 television receivers.

Press. In 1995 there were 11 dailies with a combined circulation of 264,000.

Tourism. There were 1,926,000 foreign tourists in 1996, spending US$1·75bn.

ECUADOR

República del Ecuador

Capital: Quito
Population estimate, 2000: 12·65m.
GNP per capita: (PPP$) 4,730
HDI/world rank: 0·767/73

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Incas of Peru conquered this territory in the 15th century but in 1532 the Spaniards, under Francisco Pizarro, founded a colony in Ecuador, then called Quito. This colony was in turn part of the viceroyalty of Peru and then of New Granada. Spanish rule was first challenged by the rising of Aug. 1809. In 1821 a revolt under Marshal Sucre led to the defeat of the Spaniards at Pichincha in 1821, and thus the winning of independence from Spain. In 1822 Bolivar persuaded the new republic to join the federation of Gran Colombia. However, in 1830 Ecuador left this federation and on 13 March 1830 became the Republic of Ecuador instead of the Presidency of Quito. For 100 years thereafter, considerable difficulty was found in creating a stable régime as presidents and dictators followed one another. Since 1948 first President Galo Plazo Lasso (1948-52) and then President José Maria Velasco Ibarra (1934-35, 1944-47, 1952-56, 1960-61, 1968-72) gave more continuity to the presidential régimes, although the last named was deposed by military coups from four of his five presidencies.

From 1963 to 1966 and from 1976 to 1979 military juntas ruled the country. The second of these juntas produced a new constitution which was accepted by a national referendum in Jan. 1978 and came into force on 10 Aug. 1979. A new Congress was elected, and Jaime Roldós Aguilera was elected president. Since then presidencies have been more stable, although President Roldós Aguilera (1979-81) died in an air crash. A state of emergency was declared in March 1986 when Gen. Frank Vargas Pazos led an anti-government revolt at Quito airbase but this ended quickly.

Civil unrest continued in the wake of economic reforms and attempts to combat political corruption. A serious crisis developed in 1995 when Vice President Alberto Dahik was accused of bribing opposition deputies and was forced to leave the country.

Following his election in July 1996, Congress deposed President Bucarám on 6 Feb. 1997 on the grounds of mental incompetence and elected the Speaker, Fabián Alarcón, as President. The deposition of former President Bucarám and the incumbency of President Alarcón were ratified by referendum on 25 May 1997.

In July 1998 Jamil Mahuad of the centre-right Popular Democracy party won the presidential election amidst allegations of vote rigging and fraud.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ecuador is bounded in the north by Colombia, in the east and south by Peru and in the west by the Pacific ocean. The frontier with Peru has long been a source of dispute. The latest delimitation of it was in the treaty of Rio, 29 Jan. 1942, when, after being invaded by Peru, Ecuador lost over half her Amazonian territories. Ecuador unilaterally denounced this treaty in Sept. 1961. Fighting between Peru and Ecuador began again in Jan. 1981 over this border issue but a ceasefire was agreed in early Feb. Following a confrontation of soldiers in Aug. 1991 the foreign ministers of both countries signed a pact creating a security zone, and took their cases to the UN in Oct. 1991. On 26 Jan. 1995 further armed clashes broke out with Peruvian forces in the undemarcated mutual border area ('Cordillera del Cóndor'). On 2 Feb. talks were held under the auspices of the guarantor nations of the 1942 Protocol of Rio de Janeiro (Argentina, Brazil, Chile and the USA), but fighting continued. Ceasefires were agreed on 17 Feb. which were broken, and on 28 Feb. On 25 July 1995 an agreement between Ecuador and Peru established a demilitarized zone along their joint frontier. The frontier was re-opened on 4 Sept. 1995. Since 23 Feb. 1996 Ecuador and Peru have signed 3 further agreements to regulate the dispute. The dispute was settled in Oct. 1998. Confirming the Peruvian claim that the border lies along the high peaks of the Cóndor, Ecuador gained navigation rights on the Amazon within Peru.

No definite figure of the area of the country can yet be given. One estimate of the area of Ecuador is 275,830·0 sq. km, excluding the litigation zone between Peru and Ecuador, which is 190,807 sq. km, but including the Galápagos Archipelago (8,010 sq. km), situated in the Pacific ocean about 960 km west of Ecuador, and comprising 13 islands and 19 islets. These were discovered in 1535 by Fray Tomás de Berlanga and had a population of 10,207 in 1996. They constitute a national park, and had about 80,000 visitors in 1995.

The population is an amalgam of European, Amerindian and African origins. Some 40% of the population is Amerindian: Quechua, Swiwiar, Achuar and Zaparo. In May 1992 they were granted title to the 1m. ha of land they occupy in Pastaza.

The official language is Spanish. Quechua and other languages are also spoken.

Census population in 1990, 9,648,189. Estimate, 1996, 11,698,400; density, 42 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 12·65m.

In 1995, 58·9% lived in urban areas.

The population was distributed by provinces as follows in 1996:

Province	Sq. km	Population	Capital	Population[1]

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new Constitution came into force on 10 Aug. 1979. It provides for an executive President and a Vice-President to be directly elected for a non-renewable 4-year term by universal suffrage, with a further 'run-off' ballot being held between the two leading candidates where no-one has secured an absolute majority of the votes cast. The President appoints and leads a Council of Ministers. A referendum on constitutional reform was held in Nov. 1995. and in the election of Nov. 1997 Ecuador voted in favour of constitutional reform to strengthen the presidency and to limit the participation of the state in the economy.

Legislative power is vested in a 125-member National Congress, 105 members in 2- or multi-seat constituencies and 20 members elected at large by proportional representation. Voting is obligatory for all literate citizens of 18–65 years.

National Anthem. 'Salve, Oh Patria, mil veces, Oh Patria' ('Hail, Oh Fatherland, a thousand times, Oh Fatherland'); words by J. L. Mera, music by A. Neumane.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Dissatisfaction with President Fabián Alarcón led to presidential elections in 1998. Jamil Mahuad, candidate of the centre-right Popular Democracy party (DP), won in the second round of the presidential election on 12 July 1998, with 51·3% of the votes, against 48·7% for Alvaro Noboa, a populist businessman. In the first round on 31 May he had defeated 5 other candidates to win 35·3% of the vote.

In National Congress elections on 31 May 1998 the People's Democracy–Christian Democrat Union (DP-UDC) won 35 seats, the Social Christian Party (PSC) 26, Ecuadorian Roldosist Party (PRE) 25, the Party of the Democratic Left (ID) 17 and Pluri-National Pachakutik Movement–New Country (MUPP-NP) 6. No other party won more than 3 seats.

Elections to the 70-member Constitutional Assembly (members of the National Congress) were held on 30 Nov. 1997. The Social Christian Party won 20 seats and the People's Democracy–Christian Democrat Union 10 seats, with the remaining 40 seats going to 15 other parties.

CURRENT ADMINISTRATION

President: Jamil Mahuad, b. 1949 (Popular Democracy Party; elected 12 July 1998).

Vice President: Gustavo Noboa.

In March 1999 the government comprised:

Minister of Agriculture and Livestock: Emilio Gallardo. Education and Culture: Rosangela Adoum. Energy and Mines: Patricio Rivadeneira. Environment: Yolanda Cacabasse. Finance and Credit: Ana Lucia Armijos. Foreign Relations: José Ayala Lasso. Government, Police and Municipality: Vladimiro Alvarez Grau. Industry and Trade: Hector Plaza. Tourism: Rocio Vasquez. National Defence: José Gallardo. Public Health: Edgar Rodas. Public Works: Raul Samaniego. Urban Development and Housing: Teodoro Pena. Labour: Angel Chavez. Social Welfare: Guillermo Celi.

Local Government. The country is divided administratively into 21 provinces. The provinces are administered by governors, appointed by the Government; their sub-divisions, or cantons, by political chiefs and elected cantonal councillors; and the parishes by political lieutenants. The 21 provinces are made up of 193 cantons, 322 urban parishes and 757 rural parishes. Elections for 54 provincial and 608 municipal councillors were held in June 1994. Elections for all provincial governorships were last held on 19 May 1996.

DEFENCE

Military service is selective, with a 1-year period of conscription. The country is divided into 4 military zones, with headquarters at Quito, Guayaquil, Cuenca and Pastaza.

Defence expenditure totalled US$692m. in 1997 (US$57 per capita).

Army. The Army consists of 1 infantry division, 1 armoured, 2 infantry, 1 special forces and 3 'jungle' brigades, 1 aviation group, 1 air defence artillery group and 3 engineer battalions. Equipment includes 45 American M-3 and 108 French AMX-13 light tanks. The aviation element has about 30 transport and communications aircraft, including 12 helicopters. Strength (1997) 50,000, with about 100,000 reservists.

Navy. Navy combatant forces include 2 German-built diesel submarines, 2 ex-UK missile-armed Leander class frigates, 6 Italian-built missile corvettes (with helicopter deck) and 6 fast-missile craft. Amphibious capability is 1 landing ship and 6 small craft. Auxiliaries consist of 1 ex-German depot ship, 1 small tanker, 1 survey ship, 1 armament carrier, 2 tugs and 1 training ship as well as some 8 harbour and service vessels. The Maritime Air Force has 11 aircraft, including 1 CN-235 transport, 3 Cessna light aircraft, 3 T-34C trainers, and 4 Jet Ranger helicopters. Naval personnel in 1997 totalled 4,100 including some 1,500 marines.

There are 6 inshore Coast Guard cutters and some 20 boats.

Air Force. The Air Force had a 1997 strength of about 3,000 personnel and 60 combat aircraft, and includes a strike squadron equipped with 8 single-seat and 2 two-seat Jaguars; an interceptor squadron of 12 single-seat and 1 two-seat Mirage F.1; an interceptor squadron with 15 Kfirs; 3 counter-insurgency units equipped with 10 Cessna A-37B and 10 Strikemaster light jet attack and training aircraft, 1 squadron with 2 C-130, 1 Buffalo, 1 Twin Otter and 3 HS 748 turboprop transports; Alouette III, Bell 212, UH-1 Iroquois and SA 315B Lama helicopters; and Cessna 150, T-34C-1 and T-41A/D trainers. 1 F.28, 1 Boeing 737 and 3 Boeing 727 transports are operated by the military airline TAME.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

There is a long-standing dispute with Peru over the Cordillera del Cóndor, which was awarded to Peru in 1942. After armed clashes throughout the 1990s, negotiations were under way to find a permanent solution to the border issue. A settlement was reached in Oct. 1998.

Ecuador is a member of the UN, OAS, the Andean Group and LAIA.

ECONOMY

Policy. A reform programme was announced in 1992, including the privatization of 20 state-owned enterprises. Further privatization legislation followed in 1993. A new economic plan was promulgated in Nov. 1996, envisaging privatization of the oil and electricity sectors, but in 1998 privatization was put on hold as the sale of 35% of state telecommunications companies was suspended in April 1998 owing to a lack of serious bidders.

Performance. Real GDP growth was 3·4% in 1997 with a forecast of −1·0% for 1998.

Budget. Total revenue and total expenditure from 1991 to 1995 (in 1bn. sucres) was as follows:

	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995
Revenue	1,907	3,096	4,371	5,374	8,030
Expenditure	1,739	3,145	4,166	5,717	8,451

The budget deficit in 1998 was nearly 6% of GDP.

Currency. The monetary unit is the sucre (ECS), of 100 centavos. The sucre was devalued by 8% in Aug. 1996. Inflation was 24% in 1996 and had risen to 43% by Dec. 1998. Economic reforms of Nov. 1996 envisaged the convertibility of the currency as from 1 July 1997, with the sucre pegged to the US dollar at US$1 = 4 sucres. Under the reform programme foreign exchange reserves must at least match currency in circulation. In Feb. 1998 foreign exchange reserves were US$1,957m. and gold reserves were 410,000 troy oz. Total money supply was 6,956m. sucres in Dec. 1997.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Ecuador (Governor, Fidel Jaramillo), the bank of issue, with a capital and reserves of US$1,557m. at 31 Dec. 1995, is modelled after the Federal Reserve Banks of the USA; through branches opened in 16 towns, it now deals in mortgage bonds. All commercial banks must be affiliated to the Central Bank. Legislation of May 1994 liberalized the financial sector.

There are stock exchanges in Quito and Guayaquil.

Weights and Measures. The metric system is the legal standard but English and old Spanish measures are still in use. A case (caja) of bananas = 18·14 kg.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 2·75m. kW in 1996. Production was 9·27bn. kWh in 1996 and consumption per capita in 1996 was 600 kWh.

Oil and Gas. Production of crude oil in 1995 was 141,151,000 bbls. Estimated reserves, 1997, 2,115m. bbls. In 1995 natural gas production was 102m. cu. metres.

Minerals. Main products are silver, gold, copper and zinc. The country also has some iron, uranium, lead, coal, cobalt, manganese and titanium.

Agriculture. In 1996 agriculture contributed 12% of GDP. In 1995, 28·8% of the economically active population worked in agriculture.

50,000 ha of rich virgin land in the Santo Domingo de los Colorados area has been set aside for settlement by medium and large landowners. A law of 1994 restricts the redistribution of land to small farmers to land which has lain fallow for more than 3 years.

The staple export products are bananas, cacao and coffee. Main crops, in 1,000 tonnes, in 1995: Rice, 1,291; potatoes, 477; maize, 613; barley (1994), 32; cocoa beans, 81; bananas, 5,086; coffee, 187; sugar-cane, 3,635.

Livestock, 1996: Cattle, 5·1m.; sheep, 1·71m.; pigs, 2·6m.; goats, 295,000 (1995); chickens, 62m. (1995).

Forestry. Excepting the agricultural zones and a few arid spots on the Pacific coast, Ecuador is a vast forest. 11·13m. ha, or 40·2% of the land area, was forested in 1995, but much of the forest is not commercially accessible. In 1990, 12·08m. ha and 43·6% of the land area had been under forests. In 1995, 10·36m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries. In 1993 primary sea export products were valued at US$498·9m. Total catches in 1995 were 591,560 tonnes (about 97% from sea fishing).

INDUSTRY

Production in 1994 included: Residual fuel oils, 3·0m. tonnes; cement, 2·1m. tonnes.

Labour. Out of 2,697,000 people in employment in 1994, 815,000 were in trade, restaurants and hotels, 811,000 in community, social and personal services, and 415,000 in manufacturing industries.

Trade Unions. The main trade union federation is the United Workers' Front.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Most restrictions on foreign investment were removed in 1992 and the repatriation of profits was permitted. Foreign debt was US$14,491m. in 1996.

Imports and Exports. Imports and exports for calendar years, in US$1m.:

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
Imports	2,562	3,690	4,193	3,935	4,944
Exports	2,904	3,820	4,307	4,900	5,190

Ecuador is a major exporter of shrimps (US$673m. in 1995). Other major exports (1995, in US$1m.): Bananas, 845; coffee beans, 244; cocoa beans and products, 133; cut flowers, 79. Main export markets, 1995 (in US$1m.): USA, 1,847 (42%); Colombia, 246; Chile, 193; Germany, 166; Spain, 149. Main import suppliers: USA, 1,290 (32%); Colombia, 396; Japan, 328; Germany, 192; Brazil, 187.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were estimated to be 43,249 km of roads (5,752 km surfaced). A trunk highway through the coastal plain will link Machala in the extreme south-west with Esmeraldas in the north-west, and with Quito and the northern section of the Pan-American Highway; in 1994, 1,214 km had been built and 273 km were under construction. In 1996 there were 485,000 passenger cars (41 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 44,550 commercial vehicles.

In 1998 storms and floods on the coast, caused by El Niño, resulted in 2,000 km of roads being damaged or destroyed.

Rail. The railway was closed in 1995.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Quito (Mariscal Sucre) and Guayaquil (Simon Bolivar). The national carriers are Ecuatoriana, SAETA, SAN and Tame Linea Aerea del Ecuador. In 1998 services were also provided by ACES, Aeroperú, Air France, American Airlines, Avianca, Continental Airlines, COPA, Cubana, Iberia, KLM, LACSA, Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano, SAM, Servivensa and VASP. In 1995 Quito handled 2,039,000 passengers (1,386,000 on domestic flights) and 59,200 tonnes of freight, and Guayaquil handled 1,305,000 passengers (927,000 on domestic flights) and 44,200 tonnes of freight.

Shipping. Ecuador has 3 major seaports, of which Guayaquil is the most important, and 6 minor ones. In 1995 the merchant navy totalled 0·36m. GRT of ocean-going vessels, including oil tankers, 0·13m. In 1994 vessels totalling 28,976,000 net registered tons entered ports.

Telecommunications. In 1997 there were 898,600 main telephone lines, or 75·3 for every 1,000 persons. Cellular phone subscribers numbered 50,000 in 1995, there were 45,000 PCs in use and 30,000 fax machines. There were approximately 5,000 Internet users in Oct. 1997.

Postal Services. In 1995 there were 267 post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The Supreme Court in Quito, consisting of a President and 30 Justices, comprises 6 chambers each of 5 Justices. It is also a Court of Appeal. There is a Superior Court in each province, comprising chambers (as appointed by the Supreme Court) of 3 magistrates each. The Superior Courts are at the apex of a hierarchy of various tribunals. There is no death penalty.

Religion. The state recognizes no religion and grants freedom of worship to all. In 1993 there were 10·21m. Roman Catholics.

Education. In 1995–96 there were 158,679 pre-primary pupils with 9,278 teachers. Primary education is free and compulsory. Private schools, both primary and secondary, are under some state supervision. In 1995 there were 16,868 primary schools and 2,965 secondary schools. In 1995–96 there were 1,793,882 pupils and 70,001 teachers in primary schools. In the public sector in 1995–96 there were: 9 universities, 3 Roman Catholic, 12 technical, 1 agricultural and 2 polytechnical universities, 2 institutes of technology and 1 military polytechnic; and in the private sector: 2 universities, 1 Roman Catholic and 1 technological university. Adult literacy was 90·1% in 1995 (male, 92%; female, 88·2%).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Egypt was part of the Ottoman Empire from 1517 until 1922 when it achieved independence, albeit qualified, from Britain, which had exercised direct control over Egyptian affairs since occupying the country in 1882. Muhammad Ali (1805–40) succeeded in establishing a hereditary dynasty of Khedives but with the opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 and Britain's purchase of the Khedives' shares, Egypt's strategic importance paved the way for foreign intervention and domination. In 1914 the country became a British protectorate and the Khedive was deposed. On 28 Feb. 1922 Egypt was declared an independent constitutional monarchy.

In the Second World War (1939–45) Egypt supported the Allies. Following a revolution in July 1952 led by Gen. Neguib, King Farouk abdicated in favour of his son but in 1953 the monarchy was abolished. Neguib became president but encountered opposition from the military when he attempted to move towards a parliamentary republic. Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser seized power and Neguib resigned. Nasser became head of state on 14 June 1954 (president from 1956), and remained in office until he died on 28 Sept. 1970. In 1956 Egypt nationalized the Suez Canal, a move which led Britain, France and Israel to mount military attacks against Egypt until forced by the UN and the USA to withdraw.

In 1958 Egypt and Syria united to form the United Arab Republic (UAR), but Syria withdrew in 1961. For ten years Egypt retained the name UAR but a new constitution, approved by a referendum on 11 Sept. 1971, renamed the country the Arab Republic of Egypt.

The 1960s and 1970s saw constant conflict with Israel until President Muhammad Anwar Sadat, who succeeded Nasser, made a dramatic peace treaty with Israel in March 1979. Sadat was assassinated on 6 Oct. 1981, and was succeeded by the vice-president, Lieut.-Gen. Muhammad Hosni Mubarak.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Egypt is bounded in the east by Israel and Palestine, the Gulf of Aqaba and the Red Sea, south by Sudan, west by Libya and north by the Mediterranean. The total area is 997,739 sq. km, but the cultivated and settled area, that is, the Nile Valley, Delta and oases, covers only 35,189 sq. km. Population density in this latter, 1992, 1,557·9 per sq. km. In 1995 an estimated 55·4% of the population were rural. In 1997 the population was 61,404,000 (of whom 98% live in the Nile Valley and Delta).

The UN gives a projected population for 2000 of 68·12m.

2·3m. Egyptians were living abroad in 1997.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was approved by referendum on 11 Sept. 1970. It defines Egypt as 'an Arab Republic with a democratic, socialist system' and the Egyptian people as 'part of the Arab nation'. The President is nominated by the People's Assembly and confirmed by plebiscite for a 6-year term. The President may appoint 1 or more Vice-Presidents. The People's Assembly is a unicameral legislature consisting of 444 members directly elected from 222 constituencies for a 5-year term, and 10 members appointed by the President. There is a Constitutional Court.

The President appoints the Prime Minister and a Council of Ministers. It is traditional for 2 ministers to be Coptic Christians.

A 210-member consultative body, the Shura Council, was established in 1980. Two-thirds of its members are elected and one-third appointed by the President.

National Anthem. 'Biladi' ('My homeland'); words and tune by S. Darwish.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections for the People's Assembly were held in 2 rounds on 29 Nov. and 6 Dec. 1995. The electorate was 21m.; turn-out was 50%. 3,980 candidates representing 14 parties stood. The National Democratic Party (NDP) gained 317 seats; ind (mainly NDP sympathizers), 113; Wafd, 6; Al-Tagamu, 5; Nasserites, 1; Liberal Socialists, 1, Labour Party, 1.

109 results were challenged by the Constitutional Court.

Local Government. The 26 governorates are divided into districts (mudiriya) and communes. Provincial governors are nominated by the President. Municipal elections were held on 3 Nov. 1992.

DEFENCE

Conscription is selective, and for 3 years. Military expenditure totalled US$2,743m. in 1997 (US$45 per capita), representing 4·3% of GDP.

Army. There are 4 military districts and 2 Army headquarters. The Army comprises 1 infantry, 4 armoured and 7 mechanized infantry divisions; 1 Republican Guard, 4 independent armoured, 2 independent infantry, 4 independent mechanized, 1 air mobile, 1 parachute, 15 independent artillery and 2 surface-to-surface missile brigades; and 6 commando groups. Equipment includes 840 T-54/-55, 500 T-62, 1,700 M-60 and 260 Ramses II (modified T-54/55) main battle tanks. Strength (1997) 320,000 (250,000 conscripts).

Navy. 2 of the current submarine force of 6 old ex-Soviet and ex-Chinese 'Romeo' class submarines have been modernized in the USA. Major surface combatants include 1 very old destroyer, 2 Spanish-built, 2 Chinese-built missile-armed frigates and 2 ex-US Knox class. There are also 25 missile craft of mixed British, Soviet and Chinese origin and 18 coastal and inshore patrol craft. A small shore-based naval aviation branch operates 5 Sea King and 9 Gazelle helicopters. Mine warfare forces include 7 coastal minesweepers and 3 inshore minehunters. 3 ex-Soviet medium landing ships provide amphibious lift supported by 11 minor landing craft. There are 6 major auxiliaries and some 14 minor service vessels. There are naval bases at Alexandria, Port Said, Mersa Matruh, Port Tewfik, Hurghada and Safaqa. Naval personnel in 1997 totalled 20,000. An associated para-military coastguard about 2,000 strong operates 33 inshore cutters and numerous boats.

Air Force. Until 1979 the Air Force was equipped largely with aircraft of USSR design, but subsequent re-equipment involves aircraft bought in the West, as well as some supplied by China. Strength (1997) is about 80,000 personnel (50,000 conscripts), over 100 attack helicopters and 420 combat aircraft, of which the interceptors are operated by an independent Air Defence Command, in conjunction with many 'Guideline', 'Goa', 'Gainful', Hawk and Crotale missile batteries. The interceptor/ground attack fighter divisions are equipped with 150 F-16 Fighting Falcons, 50 Mirage 5s, 32 F-4E Phantoms, 19 Mirage 2000s, 70 F-6s (Chinese-built MiG-19s), 14 Alpha Jets and 60 F-7s (Chinese-built MiG-21s). Airborne early warning capability is provided by 5 E-2C Hawkeyes. Transport units have 22 C-130H Hercules turboprop heavy freighters, 5 An-12s, 9 twin-turboprop Buffaloes, 4 Beech 1900s, and over 175 Gazelle, AH-64 Apache, Mi-8, Commando and Agusta-built CH-47C helicopters; some Commando helicopters, Beech 1900s and 2 EC-130H Hercules are equipped for electronic warfare duties. Training units are equipped with Embraer Tucanos, Czech-built L-39 Albatros and French-designed Alpha Jet jet trainers, two-seat FT-6s, Mirage 5s and UH-12E helicopters. Main aircrew training centre is the Air Force Academy at Bilbeis.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Egypt is a member of the UN, OAU, Arab League and OAPEC (Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries).

ECONOMY

Policy. A privatization programme which began in 1993 envisaged the sale of 85 out of the 314 public-sector companies by 1998. Foreign investment (US$900m. in 1996) has financed a huge development project in the Sinai Peninsula and Upper Egypt which aims to increase the inhabited area of the country from 6% to 20% in 20 years.

Performance. Real GDP growth was estimated at 5·7% in 1996–97 (2·2% in 1995), with a budget deficit of 0·8% of GDP.

Budget. The financial year runs from 1 July. Revenues in 1995 were £E53,889m. (£E50,483m. in 1994) and expenditure £E49,828m. (£E48,652m. in 1994). Sources of revenue in 1993–94 (in £E1m.) included: Tax, 31,164; customs duties, 6,070; oil industry, 4,610; Suez Canal, 2,610. Items of expenditure included: Salaries, 11,026; pensions, 3,864; subsidies, 3,170; debt service, 16,426; defence, 5,892; public health (1992–93), 6,620.

Currency. The monetary unit is the Egyptian pound (EGP) of 100 piastres. In Feb. 1991 the official exchange rate was abolished, leaving a free rate and a rate set by a panel of bankers. Annualized inflation was 5·4% in 1997.

Foreign exchange reserves were US$18,541m. in Jan. 1998 and gold reserves were 2·43m. troy oz. Total money supply in Jan. 1998 was £E49,361m.

Banking and Finance. The Central Bank of Egypt (founded 1960) is the central bank and bank of issue. The Governor is Ismail Hassan.

In 1994, 4 major public-sector commercial banks accounted for some 70% of all banking assets: the National Bank of Egypt, the Banque Misr, the Bank of Alexandria and the Banque du Caïre. There were 40 other domestic commercial banks, 15 investment banks and 30 regional development banks, as well as foreign banks, branches and joint ventures. Savings and term deposits in 1992 totalled £E83,034m.

There are stock exchanges in Cairo and Alexandria.

Weights and Measures. In 1951 the metric system was made official with the exception of the feddan and its subdivisions. However, other traditional measures are still in use: Kadah = 1/96th ardeb = 3·36 pints. Rob = 4 kadahs = 1·815 gallons. Keila = 8 kadahs = 3·63 gallons. Ardeb = 96 kadahs = 43·555 gallons, or 5·44439 bu., or 198 cu. decimetres. Rotl = 144 dirhems = 0·9905 lb. Oke = 400 dirhems = 2·75137 lb. Qantar or 100 rotls or 36 okes = 99·0493 lb. 1 Qantar of unginned cotton = 315 lb. 1 Qantar of ginned cotton = 99·05 lb.

The approximate weight of the ardeb is as follows: Wheat, 150 kg; beans, 155 kg; barley, 120 kg; maize, 140 kg; cotton seed, 121 kg. Feddan, the unit of measure for land = 4,200·8 sq. metres = 7,468·148 sq. pics = 1·03805 acres. 1 sq. pic = 6·0547 sq. ft = 0·5625 sq. metre.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity. Installed capacity was 13·04m. kW in 1994. Electricity generated in 1996 was 54·4bn. kWh. Power used for domestic and commercial purposes in 1996 was 17·41m. kWh per hour. Consumption per capita was estimated to be 1,500 kWh in 1997. Electricity sector investments reached aproximately £E25bn. (1996–97). The use of solar energy is expanding.

Oil and Gas. Oil was discovered in 1909. Oil policy is controlled by the state-owned Egyptian General Petroleum Corporation, whole or part-owner of the production and refining companies. Production of crude oil (1997–98), 41·5m. tonnes. Gas reserves are estimated to be as high as 21,000,000m. cu. ft. Output was 9·1m. tonnes in 1993–94. By 1995, 75% of power was gas-generated.

Water. The Aswan High Dam, completed in 1970, allows for a perennial irrigation system.

The world's biggest pumping station is being constructed in Egypt in the Nile Basin. When completed it will pump 5·5bn. cu. metres of water a year into a 67 km canal to irrigate up to 500,000 acres of desert land.

Minerals. Production (1993–94, in tonnes): Phosphate, 0·86m.; iron ore, 2·7m.; salt, 1·12m.; kaolin, 0·2m.; quartz, 84,000; asbestos and fermacolite, 916. Mining for uranium ore began near Aswan in May 1991.

Agriculture. Agriculture accounted for 17% of GDP in 1996. The cultivated area in 1996 was 7·6m. feddans, of which 1·4m. feddans were reclaimed desert. Irrigation is vital to agriculture and is being developed by government programmes; it now reaches most cultivated areas. 6·5% of the land area is arable. The Nile provides 85% of the water used in irrigation, some 55,000m. cu. metres annually.

In 1994 there were 5,214 agricultural co-operatives. 0·71m. feddan of land had been distributed by 1991 to 0·35m. families under an agrarian reform programme. In 1995, 33·1% of the workforce were engaged in agriculture. Cotton, sugar-cane and rice are subject to government price controls and procurement quotas.

Output (in 1,000 tonnes), 1994: Barley, 130; broad beans, 357; chickpeas, 11; cotton seed (1993), 652; seed cotton (1993), 1,114; garlic, 150; lentils, 9; flax fibre and tow (1992), 11; maize, 5,550; dry onions, 481; peanuts, 194; potatoes, 1,032; rice, 4,583; sesame, 29; soya beans, 68; sugar-cane, 12,412; sugar-beet, 825; strawberries, 28; wheat, 4,437; sorghum (1992), 736.

Livestock, 1996: Cattle, 2·7m.; sheep, 3·49m. 1995: buffaloes, 3·25m.; goats, 3·25m.; camels, 1·68m.; chickens, 39m.. Egg production 2,214m., in 1994. 9,000 tonnes of honey were produced in 1994.

Forestry. In 1995, 2·7m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries. The catch in 1995 was 309,576 tonnes, of which 226,193 tonnes were freshwater fish.

INDUSTRY

Almost all large-scale enterprises are in the public sector, and these account for about two-thirds of total output. The private sector, dominated by food processing and textiles, consists of about 150,000 small and medium businesses, most employing fewer than 50 workers. Industrial production in 1997–98 showed a growth rate of 9% compared to 1996–97. Production during 1995–96 totalled £E74·1bn., compared to £E69·98bn. in 1994–95.

Production in 1997–98 (in 1,000 tonnes) included: Refined sugar, 1,352·5; tobacco, 595; cotton yarn, 275; paper, 1,399; fertilizers, 4,634. Cars, 36,713 units; refrigerators, 495,000; washing machines, 316,100.

Labour. In 1996–97 the workforce was 17·4m. (from 16·9m. in 1995–96). In 1992, 32·7% of the workforce were employed in agriculture, forestry and fisheries, 29·7% in services, 21·4% in manufacturing, 15·5% in mining, 10·6% in business, 4·5% in transport and communications, and 1·1% in tourism. 2,220 working days were lost through strikes in 1990. Unemployment was 11·8% in 1997.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt totalled US$33bn. in 1997. Foreign investment in 1996 was £E2·6bn.

Imports and Exports. In 1997 exports were valued at £E13bn. compared to £E16·7bn. in 1995–96. Imports were valued at £E46·6bn. in 1995–96.

Export of principal commodities (in £E1m.) in 1994: Crude oil, 2,684·98; raw cotton, 791·08; cotton yarn, 1,279·54; cotton fabrics, 409·03; clothing, 780; refined petroleum, 742·08; aluminium bars, etc., 405; oranges, 278·4; potatoes, 98·2. Imports (in £E1m.): Wheat, 2,501·17; maize, 892·46; dairy products, 509·4; chemicals, 1,107·3; iron bars, 90·78; motor car parts, 762·05; motor cars, 746·46.

Main export markets, 1996: (percentage share of total trade): Italy, 20·1%; USA, 12·4%; UK, 7·7%; Germany, 5·0%; France, 4·0%. Main import suppliers in 1996: USA, 17·7%; Germany, 9·6%; Italy, 8·1%; France, 8·0%; Japan, 4·5%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads. In 1996 there were 26,000 km of highways and main roads, 25,000 km of secondary roads and 13,000 km of other roads. The road link between Sinai and the mainland across the Suez Canal was opened in 1996. Vehicles (in 1,000), 1996: Passenger cars, 1,354 (22 per 1,000 inhabitants); trucks and vans, 397; motor cycles, 418; buses, 38.

Rail. In 1994 there were 5,024 km of state railways (1,435 mm gauge), of which 42 km were electrified. In 1994, 1,030m. passengers and 12·3m. tonnes of freight were carried.

There are tramway networks in Cairo and Alexandria, and a metro (11 km) opened in Cairo in 1996.

Civil Aviation. There are international airports at Cairo, Luxor and Alexandria. The national carrier is Egyptair. In 1998 services were also provided by Aero Lloyd, Aeroflot, Air Algérie, Air Djibouti, Air France, Air Malta, Air Sinai, Air Ukraine, Alitalia, Austrian Airlines, Balkan, British Airways, Cyprus Airways, Czech Airlines, Delta Air Lines, El Al, Emirates, Ethiopian Airlines, Gulf Air, Iberia, JAT, Kenya Airways, KLM, Kuwait Airways, Lufthansa, Malaysia Airlines, Malév, Middle East Airlines, Northwest Airlines, Olympic Airways, Oman Air, Philippine Airlines, Qatar Airways, Royal Air Maroc, Royal Jordanian, SAS, Saudia, Singapore Airlines, Sudan Airways, Swissair, Syrian Arab Airlines, Tarom, Tunis Air, Turkish Airlines, TWA, United Airlines and Yemenia Yemen Airways. In 1996 Cairo handled 7,797,133 passengers (5,828,050 on international flights) and 130,112 tonnes of freight Shipping. In 1995 the merchant marine totalled 1·9m. GRT, including oil tankers, 0·45m. GRT. Vessels arriving and leaving at major ports in 1995–96: 8,800; tonnes of freight: 427,333m.

Dockyards for containerized shipping were constructed in Alexandria, Dekheila, Damietta and Port Said in 1995–96, with 2 more planned for Adabeya and the Suez Canal.

Suez Canal. The Suez Canal was opened for navigation on 17 Nov. 1869 and nationalized in June 1956. By the convention of Constantinople of 29 Oct. 1888, the canal is open to vessels of all nations and is free from blockade, except in time of war. It is 173 km long (excluding 11 km of approach channels to the harbours), connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. It is being deepened from 16 to 17 metres and widened from 365 to 415 metres to permit the passage of vessels of 180,000 DWT.

In 1994, 16,370 vessels (net tonnage, 364m.; cargo, 290m. tonnes; passengers, 15,800) went through the canal. Toll revenue in 1994 was US$1,897m. Tolls for tankers were reduced by 20% after Jan. 1996.

Telecommunications. Number of telephones main lines in 1997: 3,452,700 (55·7 per 1,000 persons). The internal telecommunications system is owned and operated by the Telecommunications Organization. Cellular phone subscribers numbered 14,000 in 1995, and there were 235,000 PCs in use and 3,500 fax machines. In Jan. 1998 there were approximately 61,000 Internet users.

Postal Services. There were, in 1993–94, 2,035 postal agencies, 1,972 mobile offices, 2,655 government and 2,472 private post offices.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice. The court system comprises: A Court of Cassation with a bench of 5 judges which constitutes the highest court of appeal in both criminal and civil cases; 5 Courts of Appeal with 3 judges; Assize Courts with 3 judges which deal with all cases of serious crime; Central Tribunals with 3 judges which deal with ordinary civil and commercial cases; Summary Tribunals presided over by a single judge which hear minor civil disputes and criminal offences.

The death penalty is in force.

Religion. Islam is constitutionally the state religion. In 1992 there were 50·4m. Moslems, mostly of the Sunni sect. Some 7% of the population are Coptic Christians, the remainder being Roman Catholics, Protestants or Greek Orthodox, with a small number of Jews. A Patriarch heads the Coptic Church, and there are 25 metropolitans and bishops in Egypt; 4 metropolitans for Ethiopia, Jerusalem, Khartoum and Omdurman, and 12 bishops in Ethiopia. The Copts use the Diocletian (or Martyrs') calendar, which begins in AD 284.

Education. The adult literacy rate in 1995 was 51·4% (63·6% among males and 38·8% among females). Free compulsory education is provided in primary schools (8 years). Secondary and technical education is also free. There are no private fee-paying schools except remedial classes, but private coaching is widespread. In 1995–96 there were 2,060 pre-primary schools with 266,502 pupils and 10,913 teachers; 16,188 primary schools with 7,470,437 pupils and 302,916 teachers; 2,753 secondary schools with 6,142,651 pupils and 369,107 teachers

Al Azhar institutes educate students who intend enrolling at Al Azhar University. In 1993–94 in the Al Azhar system there were 1,912 primary schools with 704,446 pupils, 1,030 preparatory schools with 147,762 pupils and 587 secondary schools with 165,829 pupils.

In 1993–94 there were 49,703 students in commerce institutes (24,906 women) and 31,259 in technical institutes (9,401 women). In 1995–96 there were 13 state universities, 1 American university and 1 academy of science and technology. There were 612,844 students (231,065 women) and 33,100 academic staff in 1993–94. 4 private universities opened in 1996.

Education expenditure in 1998 was between 6% and 7% of GDP.
